FOIA Control No.: 17-FI-HQ-01560

Dear Mr. Evers:

This letter is an interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated and received July 14, 2017. You asked for Department of Housing and Urban Development records relating to the FOIA since March 2, 2017, to include:

1. All emails sent or received by any political appointee or Senior Executive Service (SES) staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, or the Office of Field Policy and Management including the phrase "Freedom of Information Act" or the word "FOIA;" and

2. All other communications involving any political appointee or SES staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, the Office of the General Counsel, or the Office of Field Policy and Management regarding HUD's policies or practices for processing FOIA requests or producing documents in response to FOIA requests. This includes communications regarding review of existing policies or practices as well as communications regarding adoption of new policies or practices or of changes to existing policies or practices affecting HUD's response to FOIA requests.

Your request is granted in part. Enclosed are five documents responsive to item 2 of your request. The enclosed records include two letters from the United States House of Representatives to the Department, one letter from the United States Senate to the Department, and two letters from the Department to the United States House of Representatives.

Please be advised that a search of electronic records responsive to item 1 of your request is ongoing. A final response letter, containing any additional responsive records and all applicable appeal language, will be sent to you at the completion of that search.

For your information, your FOIA request, including your identity and any information made available, is releasable to the public under subsequent FOIA requests. In responding to these requests, the Department does not release personal information, such as home address, telephone number, or Social Security number, all of which are protected from disclosure under FOIA Exemption 6. Please also be advised that all appeal rights related to your request will be provided to you in a final response letter.

If you have questions regarding your request, please contact Mr. Ethan Bodell at (202) 402-3450. Thank you for your interest in the Department's programs and policies.

Sincerely,

Deborah R. Snowden

Ms. Linda Cruciani
Acting General Counsel
Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Ms. Cruciani:

I write to inquire about your Agency's regulations, guidance, processes, and standards for implementing the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). As you know, FOIA provides vital transparency and access to information for the American people.

The FOIA Improvement Act of 2016 requires agencies to adopt a presumption of openness, withholding information "only if . . . disclosure would harm an interest protected by an exemption" or "disclosure is prohibited by law."[1] I would appreciate your assistance in confirming that your Agency is in full compliance with the FOIA, including the new requirements of the 2016 Act.

I would appreciate if you could please identify and explain what changes your Agency has made to the way it implements FOIA, including any updated or new regulations, guidance, processes, procedures, standard operating procedures, bulletins, or notices. In particular, please also identify and explain any changes your Agency has made to comply with the recent changes to the FOIA. For these materials, please identify the date on which changes were made and the manner in which they differ from prior implementation materials. Please also provide training materials for Agency employees on complying with the FOIA, as well as any written instructions provided to individuals who are involved in searches for responsive records to FOIA requests.

In addition, I wish to inquire about what effect proposed budget cuts may have on your Agency's FOIA responses. Please provide information on your Agency's funding and staffing for FOIA operations for each of the past five fiscal years, and any projection available on how proposed budget cuts would affect funding and staffing in FY2018. Please also provide statistics on the number of FOIA requests your Agency received and processed in FY2016, as well as its FOIA backlog, for each of the past five fiscal years.

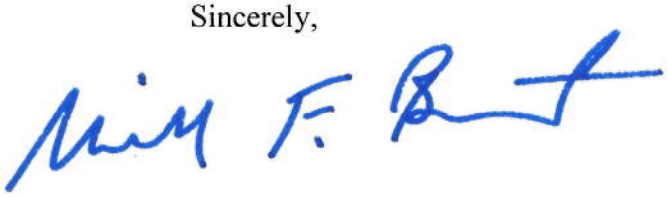
PRINTED ON RECYCLED PAPER

Finally, moving forward, I would appreciate that you notify my office any time you make changes to your FOIA guidance, processes, or standards.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,



Michael F. Bennet

The Honorable Benjamin S. Carson
Secretary
Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Federal recordkeeping and government transparency laws such as the Federal Records Act and the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) ensure the official business of the government is properly preserved and accessible to the American public.[1] As the Committee with legislative jurisdiction over these laws, we have a longstanding interest in ensuring compliance with their provisions.[2] Over the past decade, our oversight has included monitoring trends in federal employees' use of technology in order to ensure the statutory requirements of these laws keeps pace with their original purpose. The Committee has authored several updates to these laws, such as the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[3] We plan to pursue additional efforts to update these laws.

Federal Records Act challenges have spanned across administrations. A 2013 report by the Inspector General for the Commodities Futures Trading Commission found that former Chairman Gary Gensler used his personal email consistently.[4] Documents produced as part of the Committee's investigation into the Department of Energy's disbursement of funds under the Recovery Act showed that the former Executive Director of the Loan Program Office Jonathan Silver often used his personal email account to conduct official business.[5]

Where a federal employee conducts any business related to the work of the government from a non-governmental email account, such as a personal email account, the Federal Records Act requires that the employee copy their official account or forward the record to their government email account within 20 days.[6] Official business must be conducted in such a way as to preserve the official record of actions taken by the federal government and its employees.

Recent news reports suggest federal employees may increasingly be turning to new forms of electronic communication, including encrypted messaging applications like Signal, Confide, and WhatsApp, that could result in the creation of federal records that would be unlikely or impossible to preserve.[7] The security of such applications is unclear.[8] Generally, strong encryption is the best defense against cyber breaches by outside actors, and can preserve the integrity of decision-making communications. The need for data security, however, does not justify circumventing requirements established by federal recordkeeping and transparency laws.

To assist the Committee in better understanding your agency's policies on these issues, please provide the following information as soon as possible, but by no later than March 22, 2017:

1. Identify any senior agency officials who have used an alias email account to conduct official business since January 1, 2016. Include the name of the official, the alias account, and other email accounts used by the official to conduct official business.

2. Identify all agency policies referring or relating to the use of non-official electronic messaging accounts, including email, text message, messaging applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures.

3. Identify all agency policies referring or relating to the use of official text message or other messaging or communications applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures.

4. Identify agency policies and procedures currently in place to ensure all communications related to the creation or transmission of federal records on official electronic messaging accounts other than email, including social networking platforms, internal agency instant messaging systems and other communications applications, are properly captured and preserved as federal records.

Responding to Committee Document Requests

1. In complying with this request, you are required to produce all responsive documents that are in your possession, custody, or control, whether held by you or your past or present agents, employees, and representatives acting on your behalf. You should also produce documents that you have a legal right to obtain, that you have a right to copy or to which you have access, as well as documents that you have placed in the temporary possession, custody, or control of any third party. Requested records, documents, data or information should not be destroyed, modified, removed, transferred or otherwise made inaccessible to the Committee.

2. In the event that any entity, organization or individual denoted in this request has been, or is also known by any other name than that herein denoted, the request shall be read also to include that alternative identification.

3. The Committee's preference is to receive documents in electronic form (i.e., CD, memory stick, or thumb drive) in lieu of paper productions.

4. Documents produced in electronic format should also be organized, identified, and indexed electronically.

5. Electronic document productions should be prepared according to the following standards:

   (c) If the production is completed through a series of multiple partial productions, field names and file order in all load files should match.

   (d) All electronic documents produced to the Committee should include the following fields of metadata specific to each document;

   BEGDOC, ENDDOC, TEXT, BEGATTACH, ENDATTACH, PAGECOUNT,CUSTODIAN, RECORDTYPE, DATE, TIME, SENTDATE, SENTTIME, BEGINDATE, BEGINTIME, ENDDATE, ENDTIME, AUTHOR, FROM, CC, TO, BCC, SUBJECT, TITLE, FILENAME, FILEEXT, FILESIZE, DATECREATED, TIMECREATED, DATELASTMOD, TIMELASTMOD, INTMSGID, INTMSGHEADER, NATIVELINK, INTFILPATH, EXCEPTION, BEGATTACH.

6. Documents produced to the Committee should include an index describing the contents of the production. To the extent more than one CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder is produced, each CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder should contain an index describing its contents.

7. Documents produced in response to this request shall be produced together with copies of file labels, dividers or identifying markers with which they were associated when the request was served.

8. When you produce documents, you should identify the paragraph in the Committee's schedule to which the documents respond.

9. It shall not be a basis for refusal to produce documents that any other person or entity also possesses non-identical or identical copies of the same documents.

10. If any of the requested information is only reasonably available in machine-readable form (such as on a computer server, hard drive, or computer backup tape), you should consult with the Committee staff to determine the appropriate format in which to produce the information.

11. If compliance with the request cannot be made in full by the specified return date, compliance shall be made to the extent possible by that date. An explanation of why full compliance is not possible shall be provided along with any partial production.

12. In the event that a document is withheld on the basis of privilege, provide a privilege log containing the following information concerning any such document: (a) the privilege asserted; (b) the type of document; (c) the general subject matter; (d) the date, author and addressee; and (e) the relationship of the author and addressee to each other.

13. If any document responsive to this request was, but no longer is, in your possession, custody, or control, identify the document (stating its date, author, subject and recipients) and explain the circumstances under which the document ceased to be in your possession, custody, or control.

14. If a date or other descriptive detail set forth in this request referring to a document is inaccurate, but the actual date or other descriptive detail is known to you or is otherwise apparent from the context of the request, you are required to produce all documents which would be responsive as if the date or other descriptive detail were correct.

15. Unless otherwise specified, the time period covered by this request is from January 1, 2009 to the present.

16. This request is continuing in nature and applies to any newly-discovered information. Any record, document, compilation of data or information, not produced because it has not been located or discovered by the return date, shall be produced immediately upon subsequent location or discovery.

17. All documents shall be Bates-stamped sequentially and produced sequentially.

18. Two sets of documents shall be delivered, one set to the Majority Staff and one set to the Minority Staff. When documents are produced to the Committee, production sets shall be delivered to the Majority Staff in Room 2157 of the Rayburn House Office Building and the Minority Staff in Room 2471 of the Rayburn House Office Building.

19. Upon completion of the document production, you should submit a written certification, signed by you or your counsel, stating that: (1) a diligent search has been completed of all documents in your possession, custody, or control which reasonably could contain responsive documents; and (2) all documents located during the search that are responsive have been produced to the Committee.

Definitions

1. The term "document" means any written, recorded, or graphic matter of any nature whatsoever, regardless of how recorded, and whether original or copy, including, but not limited to, the following: memoranda, reports, expense reports, books, manuals, instructions, financial reports, working papers, records, notes, letters, notices, confirmations, telegrams, receipts, appraisals, pamphlets, magazines, newspapers, prospectuses, inter-office and intra-office communications, electronic mail (e-mail), contracts, cables, notations of any type of conversation, telephone call, meeting or other communication, bulletins, printed matter, computer printouts, teletypes, invoices, transcripts, diaries, analyses, returns, summaries, minutes, bills, accounts, estimates, projections, comparisons, messages, correspondence, press releases, circulars, financial statements, reviews, opinions, offers, studies and investigations, questionnaires and surveys, and work sheets (and all drafts, preliminary versions, alterations, modifications, revisions, changes, and amendments of any of the foregoing, as well as any attachments or appendices thereto), and graphic or oral records or representations of any kind (including without limitation, photographs, charts, graphs, microfiche, microfilm, videotape, recordings and motion pictures), and electronic, mechanical, and electric records or representations of any kind (including, without limitation, tapes, cassettes, disks, and recordings) and other written, printed, typed, or other graphic or recorded matter of any kind or nature, however produced or reproduced, and whether preserved in writing, film, tape, disk, videotape or otherwise. A document bearing any notation not a part of the original text is to be considered a separate document. A draft or non-identical copy is a separate document within the meaning of this term.

2. The term "communication" means each manner or means of disclosure or exchange of information, regardless of means utilized, whether oral, electronic, by document or otherwise, and whether in a meeting, by telephone, facsimile, email (desktop or mobile device), text message, instant message, MMS or SMS message, regular mail, telexes, releases, or otherwise.

3. The terms "and" and "or" shall be construed broadly and either conjunctively or disjunctively to bring within the scope of this request any information which might otherwise be construed to be outside its scope. The singular includes plural number, and vice versa. The masculine includes the feminine and neuter genders.

4. The terms "person" or "persons" mean natural persons, firms, partnerships, associations, corporations, subsidiaries, divisions, departments, joint ventures, proprietorships, syndicates, or other legal, business or government entities, and all subsidiaries, affiliates, divisions, departments, branches, or other units thereof.

5. The term "identify," when used in a question about individuals, means to provide the following information: (a) the individual's complete name and title; and (b) the individual's business address and phone number.

6. The term "referring or relating," with respect to any given subject, means anything that constitutes, contains, embodies, reflects, identifies, states, refers to, deals with or is pertinent to that subject in any manner whatsoever.

7. The term "employee" means agent, borrowed employee, casual employee, consultant, contractor, de facto employee, independent contractor, joint adventurer, loaned employee, part-time employee, permanent employee, provisional employee, subcontractor, or any other type of service provider.

The Honorable Jason Chaffetz
Chairman
Committee on Oversight and Government Reform
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515-6143

Dear Chairman Chaffetz:

On behalf of Secretary Benjamin S. Carson, thank you for your letter requesting information about the Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) policies and procedures on federal recordkeeping and transparency law compliance.

HUD takes seriously its obligations under the Federal Records Act and the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) to ensure that the official business of the department is properly preserved and accessible to the American public. The Department is committed to making continuous improvements and continuously assessing its procedures to ensure compliance to these and other relevant statutes. To that end, HUD employs a multi-faceted approach to its information management activities—employing employee training, technology tools, and agency-wide policy and procedures to empower HUD employees to meet HUD's recordkeeping obligations.

New employees, including appointees, are instructed to not use personal email accounts to conduct HUD business. See HUD Office of Administration Orientation Guide at 14-15; and Sting-Free Guide to Information Management, enclosed. HUD's senior officials receive an information management compliance briefing by HUD's Chief Administrative Officer and Executive Secretary, who serves as the Senior Agency Official for Records Management (SAORM). Similarly, departing senior officials receive an exit briefing from SAORM. Departing executives also are required to certify that they have saved all agency records in appropriate HUD-administered systems, including transfer of any emails or messages contained on non-official accounts into HUD-administered systems. See HUD Office of Administration Records Management Exit Certification, attached. HUD also distributes guidance on records management and FOIA produced by other federal agencies, such as the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) publication, Documenting Your Public Service, enclosed.

Use of social media platforms is permitted for HUD official business and use is administered through the Office of Public Affairs. Messages promulgated through such media are collected and retained as HUD records, in consultation with HUD's Office of the Executive Secretariat, Records Management Branch.

HUD does not permit the use of "alias" email accounts. HUD-issued email accounts identify employees by name or official title. The Secretary is assigned two email accounts: one identified as Secretary, [Last name]@hud.gov, which is used for public correspondence; and another identified by his title and first name or initials, which is for internal use. Both of these accounts, as well as all accounts relating to other HUD appointees and employees, are managed and retained in accordance with HUD records management requirements, and are accessible for search in response to FOIA, litigation, oversight, and Congressional inquiries.

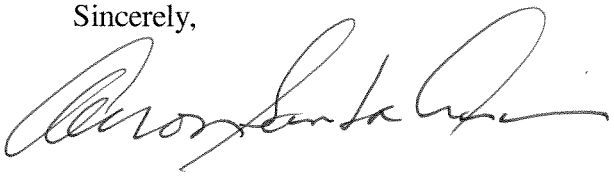
HUD also has invested in technology tools to ensure proper maintenance and access for all types of electronically stored information (ESI) records. HUD maintains ESI in electronic format in the Office 365 Federal Risk and Authorization Management Program (FedRAMP) compliant Government Community Cloud (GCC) environment. Here data is captured and stored in centralized servers and retained for future use, including search. Emails and instant messages are captured using Exchange Online Archiving and can be accessed via user's email application, Outlook. HUD also utilizes an eDiscovery tool that enables keyword searches across email accounts and other large repositories of ESI, to support document productions for FOIA, litigation, and Congressional inquiries. In responding to requests for information under the FOIA, the Office of the Executive Secretariat, FOIA Branch, works with records custodians, subject matter experts, and the Office of the General Counsel to conduct efficient searches of HUD records repositories using these tools.

HUD is committed to continuing to develop the necessary policies and procedures to transition into a fully digital working environment, consistent with OMB Memorandum 12-18. In late Fiscal Year 2016, HUD recruited a nationally-recognized FOIA and information management expert as Executive Secretary, Chief FOIA Officer, and SAORM. She is a career member of the Senior Executive Service with more than 20 years public and private sector experience in information management and compliance. HUD recently completed its annual Records Management Self-Assessment (RMSA) and identified permanent records older than 30 years, as well as all unscheduled records. HUD also has completed a review and consolidation plan for all of its records schedules, and is in the process of finalizing a new email policy, as well as an update to its general records management directive to conform to M-12-18 requirements. HUD also is working in conjunction with NARA to implement General Records Schedule (GRS) 6.1: Email Managed under a Capstone Approach, which will complete HUD's compliance with M-12-18.

Thank you for interest in HUD's efforts to ensure compliance with the Federal Records Act and the Freedom of Information Act's records preservation requirements. Please let me know if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,



Aaron Santa Anna

Dear Secretary Carson:

Re: Committee Intent to Control Congressional Records

I write on behalf of the Committee on Financial Services of the U.S. House of Representatives ("Committee") to inform you and the Department of the Housing and Urban Development ("Agency") of the Committee's practices and procedures during the 115th Congress.

As you may be aware, the Committee has legislative and oversight jurisdiction over the Agency, pursuant to U.S. House of Representatives Rule X.1(h). Accordingly, the Committee's Members and staff may communicate with you and your Agency in connection with various legislative, oversight, and investigative matters. Because of the often sensitive and confidential nature of such communications, and in order to ensure the unfettered flow of information necessary to assist the Committee in performing its important legislative and oversight functions, the Committee intends to retain control of all such communications, and will be entrusting them to your agency only for use in handling those matters. Likewise, any documents created or compiled by your agency in connection with any responses to such Committee communications, including but not limited to any replies to the Committee, are also records of the Committee and remain subject to the Committee's control.

All such documents and communications constitute congressional records, not "agency records," for purposes of the Freedom of Information Act, and remain subject to congressional control even when in the physical possession of the Agency. As such, they should be segregated from agency records, and access to them should be limited to Agency personnel who need such access for purposes of providing information or assistance to the Committee. Additionally, such congressional records are subject to the absolute protections of the Speech or Debate Clause of the Constitution, U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1.

Accordingly, the Committee expects that the Agency will decline to produce any such congressional records in response to a request under the Freedom of Information Act or any other provision of law or agreement, on the grounds that such documents (i) are not the Agency's documents to produce, and (ii) are constitutionally privileged, in addition to any other grounds the Agency may assert.

It is the Committee's policy to include a legend on its legislative, oversight, and investigative correspondence to the Agency reflecting its intent to retain control of all such communications and responsive documents. The legend is included as a matter of best practice, but accidental failure to include the legend on a particular legislative, oversight, or investigative communication is immaterial, because the Committee intends to retain control over all such communications and any documents created or compiled in response thereto.

To ensure that the Agency and the Committee efficiently communicate in the future regarding the maintenance, confidentiality, and disposition of the Committee's congressional records, by no later than May 1, 2017, please respond to the Committee in writing to confirm that your Agency will decline to produce any congressional records in response to a request under the Freedom of Information Act or any other provision of law or agreement, that your Agency will discuss said request with the Committee, that your Agency has policies and procedures in place to address this issue, and that these policies and procedures have been shared with appropriate Agency personnel. If you have any questions regarding this request, please have your staff contact Brett Sisto of the Committee staff at (202) 225-7502. We look forward to working with them in the future.

Sincerely,

JEB HENSARLING
Chairman

FOIA Control No.: 17-FI-HQ-01560

Dear Mr. Evers:

This letter is the second interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated and received on July 14, 2017. You asked for Department of Housing and Urban Development records related the FOIA since March 2, 2017, to include:

1. All emails sent or received by any political appointee or Senior Executive Service (SES) staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, or the Office of Field Policy and Management including the phrase "Freedom of Information Act" or the word "FOIA;" and

2. All other communications involving any political appointee or SES staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, the Office of the General Counsel, or the Office of Field Policy and Management regarding HUD's policies or practices for processing FOIA requests or producing documents in response to FOIA requests. This includes communications regarding review of existing policies or practices as well as communications regarding adoption of new policies or practices or of changes to existing policies or practices affecting HUD's response to FOIA requests.

Your request is granted in part. Enclosed are emails, responsive to item 1 of your request, of the following HUD employees:

- Deana Bass - Deputy Chief of Staff; and
- Seth Appleton - General Deputy Assistant Secretary for the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations

I am withholding portions of emails containing deliberative communications, portions of the Secretary's daily calendar reflecting prospective matters, and draft memoranda under Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Exemption 5 protects documents that are inter-agency or intra-agency, which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with HUD. The release of this internal information would reflect HUD's predecisional, deliberative process, and would discourage open and candid advice, recommendations, and exchanges of views within the Department, which could bring about public scrutiny of the individuals and the need to justify in public their tentative opinions. I am also withholding call-in passcodes, personal cell phone numbers, names and addresses of private citizens, drivers license numbers, vehicle identification numbers, and YouTube and imgur links containing information about private citizens under Exemption 6 of the FOIA, because release of such information would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. The interest of the general public in reviewing these portions of government documents does not outweigh the individuals' right to privacy.

Please be advised that the review of records responsive to item 1 of your request is ongoing. Further interim responses may be provided to you as this process continues. At the completion of this review, a final response letter will be provided. The final response letter will detail all applicable appeal rights.

For your information, your FOIA request, including your identity and any information made available, is releasable to the public under subsequent FOIA requests. In responding to these requests, the Department does not release personal information, such as home address, telephone number, or Social Security number, all of which are protected from disclosure under FOIA Exemption 6. Please also be advised that all appeal rights related to your request will be provided to you in a final response letter.

If you have questions regarding your request, please contact Mr. Ethan Bodell at (202) 402-3450. Thank you for your interest in the Department's programs and policies.

Sincerely,

for Deborah R. Snowden Deputy Chief FOIA Officer

Hi Deana,

Brian asked that I send the attached documents to possibly help develop the Secretary Brown Bag Lunch series. The attachments outline past Coffee with the Secretary events. Included are the standard operating procedures (employees were randomly selected to attend unless the coffee was with an affinity group), event email text, an HQ coffee briefing memo and a field coffee briefing memo.

If you have any questions about Coffee with the Secretary, let me know. I organized the final two with former Secretary Shaun Donovan.

All the best!

Email to Coffee with the Secretary Participants:

To: All selected Coffee with the Secretary Participants
From: OPA
When: Week to Two Weeks Before Coffee
Subject: Coffee with the Secretary

Subject: Coffee with the Secretary

Congratulations! You were randomly selected to participate in the January installment of the Coffee with the Secretary program. Coffee with the Secretary will take place from 2 – 3 p.m. on Wednesday, January 19th in the Secretary's Conference Room (Room 10000). You should meet me in the conference room fifteen minutes in advance at 1:45 p.m.

Additionally, by COB Friday, January 14th, please send me a two to three sentence blurb that includes a) how long you've been at HUD; b) the main initiative you've been working on over the last year; and c) the topic you'd like to discuss with Secretary Donovan during the hour-long coffee. Depending on your brevity, this may be included in the Secretary's briefing book. Finally, please also send me the name and contact information of your supervisor so I can alert them of your attendance at the event. If you cannot make it on January 19th, please let me know ASAP.

Finally, I want to stress that this is as much an opportunity for the Secretary to hear directly from employees about the general state of HUD as it is for you to interact with him. This forum is intended to give all participants a chance to take part in the conversation – so if there is an issue or concern that pertains only to you, please raise it privately via email beforehand, and save time during the Coffee for more general group discussion.

Thanks and I look forward to meeting you! Please let me know if you have any questions.

BRIEFING MEMORANDUM

Date: August 28, 2013
To: Secretary of HUD
From: OPA
Cc: Deputy Chief of Staff
Re: Coffee with the Secretary (August 29, 2013)

Summary: In an effort to strengthen employee morale and increase your accessibility to more agency employees, and in direct response to the Employee ViewPoint Survey results requesting better communication, YOU will host the fourteenth installment in a monthly series of "Coffee with the Secretary" in YOUR conference room on Thursday, August 29th from 2:00 p.m. – 3:00 p.m. for 13 selected employees. The majority of the employees are affiliated with the Under 5 affinity group. All have less than seven years of tenure with the agency.

Date: Thursday, August 29th
Time: 2:00 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.
Location: YOUR conference room
Staff: Angela Barranco, Jovette Gadson, Brent (Last Name) Run of Show:
1:45 p.m.: The employees will enter the conference room and help themselves to coffee.

1:50 p.m.: The employees will be briefed on the run of show by HUD staff.

1:58 p.m.: The employees will be positioned to take a group photo.

2:00 p.m.: YOU will enter the conference room.

2:01 p.m.: YOU will take a group photo with the employees.

2:06 p.m.: YOU will deliver brief opening remarks (2-3 minutes)

2:09 p.m.: Deputy Chief of Staff will then ask each employee to introduce themselves, say what office they work in and how long they have been at HUD.

2:15 p.m.: YOU will then open it up conversation – and Angela will moderate.

2:55 p.m.: Deputy Chief of Staff prompts YOU to take a final question and conclude the coffee with a minute of closing remarks.

HUD Employees Participating:

After being selected, chosen employees were asked to send in a few sentences about themselves and what they hoped to discuss with YOU.

1. Hilary Atkin, JD, Environmental Clearance Officer, Office of Housing
   Hilary has worked at HUD since July 5, 2011. She is the Environmental Clearance Officer for the Office of Housing advising the various Housing program offices about compliance with the various environmental authorities and reviewing Housing directives as part of the clearance process. Hilary serves as a liaison between Under 5 and the local Union. She wants to discuss with you the future of the agency's Student Loan Repayment Program.

2. Jay Austin, Office of Strategic Planning and Management
   Jay Austin began his HUD tenure in 2010 as a Presidential Management Fellow. During his three years of service he has helped create and develop the Under 5 affinity group, HUD Ideas in Action, and Switchboard. This year, Jay is leading a merger of Ideas in Action and Switchboard, and building out the site's support functions to create a single customer care point-of-contact within HUD, with robust metrics and analytics tools to track timeliness, effectiveness, and satisfaction with all of HUD's customer care communications. Jay would like to discuss how the Secretary's Office could better leverage HUD Ideas in Action to support open, transparent, democratic decision-making.

3. John Bell, Housing Program Manager, Office of Housing

4. Brooke Bohnet, Presidential Management Fellow, Office of the Secretary
   Brooke has worked at HUD for the past 14 months, supporting the Chief of Staff and Deputy Chief of Staff primarily on the second term policy priorities and coordinating the Rental Policy Working Group. Recently, her portfolio has expanded to include standing up the Promise Zones initiative. Brooke serves as the Capital Bikeshare lead for the agency, an initiative to add bikesharing as a transportation option for employees. She wants to discuss YOUR vision for HUD and how YOU think Under 5 members can best change HUD culture to be more innovative and results-driven.

5. April Brown, Office of Public Affairs

6. Laura Kunkel, Special Assistant, Office of Community Planning & Development
   Laura Kunkel has served as Special Assistant to Mark Johnston for 3 years, primarily focused on homelessness policy and communications within CPD and external to HUD. In addition to this role, she is heavily involved in Under 5 initiatives. Most recently, she lead the pilot of Innovation Time, which allows participants to spend up to 10 percent of their workweek not on their day jobs, but on collaborating to improve the agency and its internal and external relationships. Laura wants to discuss the YOUR vision for the Weaver building physically after the current renovations are complete.

7. Michael Lawyer, Special Assistant, Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (On Detail)
   Michael has been with the agency for over four years including time in the Minneapolis Field Office, Office of Strategic Planning & Management and the Office of Healthy Homes and Lead Hazard Control. He is on detail to the Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer to work on strategic planning and employee retention. His role in Under5 and Switchboard, Michael has been instrumental in connecting members to projects and initiatives of interest to them. I know He would like to thank YOU for YOUR support of Under 5 during the discussion.

8. Dustin Parks, Presidential Management Fellow, Office of Fair Housing & Equal Opportunity
   Dusting is a Presidential Management Fellow in the Office of Fair Housing & Equal Opportunity's Office of Policy and Legislative Initiatives. He is currently on a 7-month rotation with Congressman Capuano (D-MA). In the last year, Dustin has been afforded the opportunity to work on an array of projects including disability rights, GSE/FHA reform, and Switchboard's Standing Workstation Project. He would like to discuss with YOU the agency's strategy for attracting and maintaining new employees as a large number of staff will be retirement eligible in the near future.

9. Samuel Pearson-Moore, Attorney-Advisor, Office of General Counsel
   Samuel has been with HUD for two years (celebrating his tenure anniversary August 26, 2013). He works as an attorney in the Office of Legislation & Regulations. In the Under 5/Switchboard group Samuel has been working on updating HUD's parental leave policy. In addition to his Under 5 work, he is a co-coordinator of HUD GLOBE and an active member of HUD VAG. Samuel would like to discuss the importance of the parental leave policy initiative and its status.

10. Anthony Soriano, Office of Housing
    Anthony currently works as a Management Analyst in the Office of Housing's Office of Management. Anthony works on the Housing process and continue improvement initiative. He is supporting the procurement division in doing root cause analyst, and using Lean methodologies to improve the division's work. He is currently working on implementing a manager feedback survey, knowledge management, and redesigning a new and improved on-boarding/orientation process through Under 5.

11. Yennie Tse, Office of Policy Development & Research

12. Ali Wardle, Budget Analyst, Office of Housing
    Ali has been with HUD for over a year in the Office of Housing's Budget Office. Prior to her current assignment, she worked at the Federal Housing Finance Agency (FHFA) for two years researching the housing bubble. Her portfolio at FHFA included General Insurance/Special Risk Insurance and Project Based Rental Assistance. Ali would like to discuss with YOU on providing some of the rotational and promotion benefits currently provided to Presidential Management Fellows to equally experienced, qualified and interested employees who are not in that program. She would also like to discuss the preferred balance of both funding and administration of housing policy between the federal and state levels of government if time permits.

13. Tanya Whippie, Librarian, Office of Policy Development & Research
    Tanya has worked at HUD for the past three years as the librarian. Her primary initiative has been to strengthen HUD's management of institutional knowledge, both within the library and more broadly throughout the agency. As HUD is approaching its 50th anniversary, she would like to see the agency take a more proactive role in preserving and sharing the invaluable information the agency has gathered. Tanya would like to discuss this idea with YOU.

14. Pam Zai, Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity

Pam has been at HUD just under five years and is a former Presidential Management Fellow. She has worked in FHA, the Office of Strategic Planning and Management, and FHEO. Pam would like to discuss succession planning and how the agency will manage the possible large number of retirements in the near future.

8:55 a.m.: Field Office Director prompts YOU to take a final question and conclude the coffee with a minute of closing remarks.

HUD Employees Participating:
After being randomly selected, selected employees were asked to send in a few sentences about themselves and what their work has focused on in the last year.

1. Sandra Bowling, CPD Representative
   Sandra started very recently with HUD on December 20th, transferring to HUD from DHS/FEMA. Although newly employed, she has experience working with HUD and HUD-funded programs. She initially started working as a grant administrator of HOME and CDBG grants, as well as disaster funding. Most recently, Sandra is working with FEMA on ESF-14 Long Term Community Recovery.

2. Suzanne Brown, Program Assistant, PIH
   Suzanne works in the Public Housing Division and has been employed with HUD for 3 years and 3 months.

3. Larry Campbell, Public Housing Revitalization Specialist, PIH
   Larry is a Public Housing Revitalization Specialist who has been with HUD for 22 years. He has been with the Public Housing Division since 1992. Most recently, Larry has worked on Recovery Act implementation.

4. Karen Garrett, Operations Analyst, FPM
   Karen is an Operations Analyst in FMP who has served at HUD for 21 years. She says that she has a few ideas to share with you that will enhance the customer service we already provide to HUD clients.

5. Bam Gressett, Attorney Advisor, FHA
   Bam has worked at HUD for almost 20 years in various capacities, including Chief Counsel for the Oklahoma City Office following the April 19th bombing in 1995. For the past year, Bam has primarily handed FHA closings for multifamily and for the Big 4 public housing developments in their various phases of rebuilding. Bam also works on post-Katrina hospital developments.

6. Miller Guice, Senior Real Estate Appraiser
   Miller is the senior real estate appraiser in the New Orleans Field Office and has been with HUD for 8 years. Miller has worked continuously on Hurricane Katrina-related matters for the past 5 years – including his own flooded home, HUD's damaged portfolio properties, as well as new applications in impacted areas. Miller missed the opportunity to meet YOU during your last stop in New Orleans for the Dorsey family dedication.

7. Wayne Janevein, IT Specialist
   Wayne has been working in HUD's IT Department in New Orleans for 23 years. He earned his Bachelor's degree from Tulane University in Computer Information Systems, and as a member of the New Orleans Personal Computer Club, has kept up with current trends in the automation industry. Wayne works within the framework of the HITS contract, and also holds an inactive real estate license in Louisiana.

8. Crystal Jones-Taylor, FPM Operations Specialist
   Crystal is an FPM Operations Specialist who has been employed by HUD at the New Orleans Field Office for 12 years. She is responsible for facilitating and promoting cross-program activities. She wears many hats and currently serves as the Field Office's Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnership Liaison, is one of nineteen grant writing trainers for HUD's Center for Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnerships, and is also a FOIA Liaison. As the Management Action Plan Coordinator for the New Orleans Field Office, Crystal coordinated a half-day all-staff meeting to solicit recommendations from staff and engage them in the MAP process.

9. Sean LeBlanc, Division Director, PIH
   Sean started with HUD on January 18th, 2011 after a 23 year career with USDA, Rural Development. Sean is currently receiving initial PIH training from various staff members within the division.

10. Desirre Octave, Facilities Management Specialist, New Orleans HUB
    Desirre's birthday is the day of the Coffee (Friday, February 4th). She is coming in on her vacation day/ birthday just to meet YOU.

    Desirre is a Facilities Management Specialist and is responsible for Capital Fund Program monitoring for a select portfolio consisting of 34 public housing agencies and 19 Section 8 agencies.

11. Daryel Pruitt, Quality Assurance Analyst, PIH
    Daryel has been with HUD for 8 years and is currently outstationed in the New Orleans Field Office. He has been involved with the QAD RIM teams over the last year, and is currently working on the DHAP-IKE file review team.

12. Earl Randall, CPD Disaster Specialist
    Earl has been with the Department for 11 years, and he currently serves as the CPD Specialist for the State of Louisiana. His primary responsibility is to provide technical assistance, monitoring, and oversight of Louisiana's Disaster Supplemental funding for Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Gustav, and Ike.

13. Mary (Martha) Rhodes, Project Manager, Multifamily Housing
    Martha's employment with HUD began in 1986 in the Denver office as a GS-4 temporary clerk in Single Family. She has since risen through the ranks and is now a GS-12 Multifamily Project Manager. Before her husband retired from the Colorado U.S. Attorney's Office in 2009, Martha decided to move her family to her home state of Louisiana to assist in the rebuilding and revitalization effort of New Orleans. She would like to see YOU promote cross training for motivated and effective HUD employees, not only new hires. And she believes that HUD should do a better job of promoting high achievers instead of keeping efficient personnel in place.

14. Gwen Tucker, Paralegal Specialist, OGC

Gwen has been with the Department for twelve years on two separate tours of duty. During her first tour, she was a temporary-turned-term employee who worked in various areas of Housing. After her first tour, she was inspired by the work being done at HUD and waited and watched for a second chance to return as a permanent employee. She is now a paralegal specialist in OGC and she works mainly on Insured Multifamily/ Healthcare Closings and FOIAs.

15. Cynthia Weatherspoon, CPD Representative

Cynthia has nearly twenty years of housing experience, both from the implementation and the management and oversight sides. Currently, she works on Supportive Housing Program budget amendments, Annual Performance Review closeouts, follow-up on monitoring findings, and on-going technical assistance to grantees.

Biography of Danberry (Dan) Carmon, New Orleans Field Office Director:

Dan Carmon has served as Field Office Director for the New Orleans Office since August 2010. He previously served as the Field Office Director for the Department's Wyoming State Office from December 2008 until his current appointment. He formerly served as Supervisory Housing Program Specialist in Fort Worth, Texas, Region 6, representing the Denver Homeownership Center. From the Housing Authority of the City of Jackson, Mississippi as the Vice-President, Dan began his career at HUD in the Fort Worth, Texas Regional Office in March 2004 in Multifamily Production as a Multifamily Construction Analyst.

Dan's training and experience include 4 years heavy construction management in southern Louisiana, 14 years of municipal government engineering services in southeast Louisiana, 10 years of public housing consulting, 4 years of public housing executive management in Louisiana and Mississippi, 4 years of housing and community development in Mississippi, and 2 years of adult vocational education instruction in New Orleans.

Background on the New Orleans Field Office:

There are 68 HUD employees in the New Orleans Field Office, excluding 28 I.G. employees. Issues that are of concern to employees include promotion opportunities, fairness between management and staff, and a variety of issues with the local AFGE. The local president of the AFGE is Dorothy Pleasant, who is a retired HUD employee. During the Deputy Secretary's visit to New Orleans in the fall, he met with her individually to discuss- start fresh.

Nto not been responsive, Dorothy has been a problem for the last 20 years. Deputy Secsretary addressed it and met her one-on-one

Aware- listening

If he is caught, it's just listening and agreeing to follow up. We will certainly look into whatever it is.

Consultant group, they did the survey, climate assessment. Went in and interviewed individual employees and there was a concern that many of the employees were still dealing with post-katrina issues and their own personal problems. Counseling and certainly some of them were making necessary repairs for their homes. The consultant got that, and a group of consultants went in to address those. Never really made public- union didn't get a copy of the report. The Deputy has a copy of the report, and it's not public but certainly

Ongoing deal that they are in and out of there all the time. Way of addressing

We have not ignored it, we are still addressing it, have to be careful of the privacy.

Over a year ago, Dr. Motley and Crystal. Workshops

A lot of attention given to post-Katrina victims. Led by ODOC and the Deputy Secretary.

The mayor even came and addressed the sessions, employee sessions- met individually with each employee

Has been special attention given to individual employees- be proud of the work we've done to address those issues.

Their well-being is our utmost

After the storm, Forth Worth took responsibility for the day-to-day operations. Had employees all over the country and arrangements were made to work out of other local offices, had access and could go in and work. They never did miss a pay day, whether they were in an office or were taking care of family or whatever. Gave them an option of staying where they would like to be, or coming back to New Orleans. They accommodated that. The NOLA office was re-opened in early 2006. Not a full contingent, but we took it and there was no damage to the office, got it up and going.

Continued to support staff- daily calls with Washington. Identified the whereabouts of each individual employee, calls for 6 months. Regular check in calls with all of the program staff in Washington.

Marvel Robinson was FOD at the time of the storm, lost a daughter during Katrina, murdered right after the storm. Ultimately, Marvel is now in Alexandria, VA working on an IPA as a result of again accommodating her to get out into a different location. Dan came in as new FOD to bring in new energy and he's been there since August 2010.

Trying to connect the local office more with what's going on in the day-to-day, reconnecting- place-based initiative. NOLA will be a city in transition.

Criticism was that local office was bypassed as it related to a lot of the post-Katrina. Reconnecting the local office with the day to day happenings of the state.

Dorothy has violated that, still going beyond reasonableness. Access to her union office. Management has failed to take care of it and put her chair back into it. Pettiness. Dorothy is retired, LR person that is dedicated her time to dealing with Dorothy so it's not split among other people. Dorothy will copy the universe on her email.

Dorothy has been a nutcase, she has a continuous concern about

Climate assessment

Situation with the union Dorothy Pleasant is the local AFGE President. SOHUD and DSOHUD have received emails from her. The last visit by DSOHUD he met with her one-on-one for a time. Contentious in the past.

Andrea Hodge, designated to work with the union here

PREFACE

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD, Department, Agency) Standard Operating Protocols (Protocols) provide guidance on how leadership in Regional and Field Offices work together and with Headquarters to deliver on responsibilities to our mission, support for our people and work with our stakeholders. The Protocols provide common guidance on how we want to work together, as set forth in a variety of laws, regulations, authorities and policies. Under the leadership and direction of the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, HUD is committed to shared outcomes across the agency, with the knowledge that we can make more progress toward our overlapping goals by working together than by working in isolation.

The formal Delegation of Authority and related Protocols were last issued in 2007, and are being re-issued to reflect changes in organizational structure and to the way we work that have occurred since that time. As a matter of standard practice, the Protocols should be reviewed annually to reflect improvements to our programs, processes and procedures.

These Protocols and Delegations convey substantial field office management and operational authority to the Regional Administrators (RAs), who serve as HUD's senior management official in each region. These Protocols provide overall leadership and accountability for all programs and staff across each region. Authorities include:

- Authority to coordinate the implementation of the Department's policies and programs in the Field;
- Authority to manage the work environment and key operational and administrative functions, and to take a leadership role to convey and meet agency priorities in the Field;
- Authority to respond to urgent operational needs and opportunities; and
- Authority to advise the Secretary on policy and management of the Field.

Regional Administrators work in close cooperation with program and support office leadership serving the Field to manage office operations as well as certain Secretarial initiatives. Secretarial initiatives, agency priorities and policy directions are conveyed by the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, and implemented by staff throughout the agency, in both Headquarters and Field. The Protocols enable the RAs to provide leadership to operationalize such Headquarters direction and tackle multidimensional challenges in both Headquarters and Field, supporting integrated approaches to them.

This document can be viewed as a framework from which decisions are made while providing decision-makers with the latitude to use their judgment to respond to and resolve a variety of situations in accordance with their authority, and recognizes that:

- Decisions on program staff work priorities and assignments, as well as program and policy determinations, reside with the respective Assistant Secretary, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary or designee;
- The Protocols work in conjunction with applicable collective bargaining agreements. No provision should be executed in a manner conflicting with any applicable collective bargaining agreement provision, as interpreted by the HUD Employee and Labor Relations Division; and
- Staff across all program, field and administrative offices share information relevant to common work issues and products.

The challenges of being a manager in the federal government today call for a coordinated enterprise-wide approach that provides the agility and capacity to respond to the demands of our current and future challenges and consistently delivers high quality results. This document articulates a management vision guided by the Secretary and Deputy Secretary and based on teamwork and interaction between HUD's program and support areas. Working as a team, treating each other with fairness and respect, and approaching our mission with integrity are essential to ensure we succeed in delivering initiatives and priorities designed to create strong, sustainable, inclusive communities and quality affordable homes for all.

DEFINITIONS

Several terms and abbreviations are used throughout this document for purposes of brevity and clarity. They are listed below to offer context where the terms are used.

Regional Administrator (RA): The RA is the senior HUD management official in each region. Authority for management and oversight of the Department's Field operations are delegated by the Secretary to the Assistant Deputy Secretary of Field Policy and Management who re-delegates certain operational management authority to the RA. The RA is a senior non-career SES (Senior Executive Service) position, appointed by the President and Secretary of HUD.

Deputy Regional Administrator (DRA): The DRA serves as the chief operating officer principally charged with supervisory and managerial day-to-day oversight of field operations in the Region. The DRA shall perform the functions and duties of the RA in his/her absence.

Field Office Director (FOD): The FOD is the senior management official located in each Field Office. The FOD reports to the RA/DRA.

Program Director (PD): For purposes of this document, a PD is the ranking program management person on-site in a Regional or Field Office. These Protocols do not change existing program office delegations. In this document, PD includes but is not limited to:

Community Planning and Development (CPD) Program Directors
Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity (FHEO) Regional, Center and Office Directors
Multifamily Regional Directors and Asset Management Division Directors/Satellite Office Coordinators
Office of Native American Program (ONAP) Administrators
Office of Healthcare and Division Directors
Office of Healthy Homes and Lead Hazard Control Directors
Office of Public Housing Regional Directors and Directors
Office of General Counsel Regional and Chief Counsel
Office of Administration Regional Support Manager (RSM)
Office of Employee and Labor Relations Directors and Specialists
Homeownership Center Directors and Deputy Directors
Regional Internet Technology Directors
Deputy Assistant Secretary for the Office of Housing Counseling in HQ
Other ranking program and operational employees

Out-stationed Employees: Employees working in an office who do not have an on-site program supervisor.

Remote Program Delivery: Program delivered from an office other than implementing Field or Regional Office, e.g., services delivered by a program from a Regional Office rather than by on-site personnel in a Field Office.

HUD-17-0235-B-000020

Grievance Deciding Official: A management designee with the authority to resolve a grievance under the Department's negotiated and/or administrative grievance procedures.

HUD-17-0235-B-000021

I. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR MISSION

EXECUTING SECRETARIAL INITIATIVES AND AGENCY PRIORITIES

Purpose/Goal: All HUD employees have a primary purpose to achieve HUD's mission to promote homeownership, support community development and increase access to affordable housing free from discrimination. This work can be described as our book of business, making sure our programs are run effectively with care and concern for our people and our stakeholders. Other initiatives and priorities require proactive and effective collaboration across all program units to be successfully accomplished. This section discusses how cross-programmatic priorities in HUD's Strategic Plan, or as determined by the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, are implemented using Regional or Local Operating Plans.

Application: The Operating Plan for each Region and Field Office articulates cross-cutting priorities, goals and milestones that the office and its remote program partners will pursue to deliver HUD programs in ways that connect Secretarial initiatives, agency priorities and the Department's Strategic Plan and Annual Performance Plan with local community needs and opportunities.

Operating Plan: Guidance for annual Regional Operating Plans will be communicated under the direction of the Deputy Secretary, based on input from the Office of Strategic Planning and Management (OSPM) and the Assistant Deputy Secretary for Field Policy and Management. Based on the guidance, the RA, in collaboration with the DRA/FOD and local PDs, will work together to develop, approve, track and oversee the Regional Operating Plan priority projects and initiatives that cross program office lines. These projects will represent Agency Strategic goals and objectives, Presidential and Secretarial priorities and initiatives, and place-based activities. The RA/DRA/FODs and PDs are jointly accountable for completing Regional Operating Plan goals (as identified for a specific Regional or Field Office). The full portfolio or book of business for which program offices are responsible will not be included in the Operating Plan goals unless they overlap with cross-cutting initiatives. As such, program offices may also work within their program chain to complete program-specific goals.

Resources: The RA/DRA/ FOD have the authority, in consultation with PDs, to determine resource priorities that ensure the completion of all Operating Plan goals, Presidential and Secretarial priorities and initiatives.

On occasion, the RA/DRA/FOD may request assistance from program staff, members of a Field Working Group or program subject-matter experts to attend place-based, cross-program meetings and others related to agency priorities. Program offices are responsible for funding such activities in accordance with applicable HUD guidance and should explore whether non-personnel funds can be made available or realigned for travel purposes if adequate funding is not available at the field office level. Unfunded travel requests may be elevated to the RA and other authorizing officials for consideration and support. Additional guidance on the use of funds for travel is available in the Answers to Questions Most Commonly Asked by Travelers. To ensure strategic and consistent relationships with community stakeholders, PDs will share information about upcoming or pending local or regional decisions in a timely manner with the RA/DRA/FOD.

Cross-Programmatic Issue Resolution: PDs will work with the RA/DRA/FOD to resolve issues at the Field level as established by the Secretary and Deputy Secretary. In instances where agreement between program areas cannot be reached on significant issues, the RA has the authority to initiate a Headquarters Internal Dispute Resolution (IDR) review of significant cross-program decisions, excluding personnel actions. Refer to the Guide to Cross-Program Collaboration.

For unresolved programmatic disputes, the matter may be elevated to the Assistant Deputy Secretary for Field Policy and Management, who will coordinate with the relevant Assistant Secretary or equivalent. The relevant Assistant Secretary or equivalent makes the final determination, subject to review by the Deputy Secretary, as necessary. A response coordination function is available to assist employees in obtaining timely responses to inquiries that have been submitted.

Remote Program Delivery: Same as above. Coordination between PDs and the RA/DRA/FODs remains a priority for operating plans, resource coordination or issue resolution, regardless of whether programs are located in the delivery office or are located in other field offices or Headquarters.

I. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR MISSION

SUBMITTALS: REPORTS, PRIORITY ISSUES DOCUMENTS, SUMMARIES OF SECRETARIAL ISSUES

Purpose/Goal: Briefing papers and hot issues reports related to Secretarial priorities and local program and cross-program initiatives are necessary to support the Secretary, Deputy Secretary, other Principal Staff and RAs during visits in the Field and are a collaborative effort managed collectively by Headquarters and Field.

Application: The RA will oversee preparation of hot issues and local briefing papers to support visits from Headquarters officials for special events. Such briefing papers may also be prepared for visits by the RA/DRA/FOD of a general or specific nature to elected or other officials in the jurisdiction. The RA/DRA/FOD will coordinate the preparation of such reports and briefing papers in collaboration with the Headquarters Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations (CIR), the Office of Public Affairs (OPA), Regional Public Affairs Officers (PAOs), and PDs. Overseen by the RA, PAOs will provide Field-based information to designated lead personnel in Headquarters, who will prepare a final report. Submissions will be shared between Headquarters and the RA, and with PDs, to the extent practicable.

The RA/DRA/FOD or PAO will establish deadlines and work with PDs to ensure all staff meet the deadlines established. While sensitive to the priorities of program activities in the Field, it is understood that such requests may have short turnaround times and requirements that may conflict with program work. Final consolidated submissions prepared by Headquarters will be shared with the RA/DRA/FOD. A template with the required key information may be provided by Headquarters for use by field offices. Jurisdictions that receive frequent visits may choose to prepare standing briefing papers that can be updated as needed. In addition to standard demographic data and funding status, information requested may include:

- Program-specific updates,
- Changes to service delivery,
- Key programmatic decisions and outstanding HQ decisions,
- Information about local elected officials, and
- Significant media or public issues.

I. RESPONSIBILITY TO THE MISSION

DISASTER PREPARATION, RESPONSE AND RECOVERY EFFORTS

Purpose/Goal: Coordination and leadership of the Department's efforts related to local disasters and incidents are critical to the ongoing operation of the Department and continuing its mission to build inclusive, resilient communities. The RA is the Department's regional lead and senior point of contact for continuity of operations activities and local disaster preparation and relief efforts. RA/DRA/FOD leadership in times of crisis or disaster is helpful to coordinated Headquarters and Field engagement and response.

Application: The RA is the Department's principal management lead in the Field for Continuity of Operations (COOP), emergency/disaster incident reporting, and interagency disaster preparedness, response and recovery initiatives. Interagency initiatives include, but are not limited to, Federal Continuity Directives (FCD), the National Response Framework (NRF), and the National Disaster Recovery Framework (NDRF). FPM Regional Disaster Recovery Coordinators, in collaboration with the Office of Disaster Management and National Security (ODMNS) and the Office of Administration (OA), support field office objectives and provide guidance, technical assistance, training and oversight across COOP, emergency/disaster incident reporting, and interagency preparedness, response and recovery initiatives.

Under the leadership of the RA, the DRA/FOD is responsible as follows:

- Significant Event, Emergency and Disaster Incident Reports: Coordinate reporting across program divisions when significant events, emergencies or disasters impact HUD operations, including safety of staff and impacts to grantees and inventories. Submit a consolidated report from the Field Office to FPM Disaster Recovery Coordinators, who will coordinate distribution to HQ leadership. If the HQ Disaster Management Group (DMG) is convened for larger disasters, program damage reports are submitted directly to this body. Duplicate reporting through multiple chains of command will be avoided.

- Continuity of Operations (COOP): Maintain, test and activate COOP Plans for each Field Office in partnership with PDs and support divisions that comply with FCDs and HQ COOP Plan. Document orders of succession and devolution locations across divisions. Coordinate COOP activities with OA staff in the Field that lead building occupancy plans.

- National Response Framework (NRF): Coordinate with Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and states on disaster response preparedness activities and maintain partnerships with FEMA and state emergency response staff. Promote preparedness across HUD divisions including evacuation plans for vulnerable populations and HUD clients. Maintain a roster of HUD personnel in each region to staff NRF Mission Assignments (MA) from FEMA, including work at FEMA Joint Field Offices (JFO) and Disaster Recovery Centers (DRC). Coordinate and implement HUD disaster operations in the Field under NRF MAs.

- National Disaster Recovery Framework (NDRF): Serve as Field coordinator for the HUD-led Housing Recovery Support Function (RSF) in collaboration with the National Housing RSF Coordinator in ODMNS/OA. Coordinate with FEMA and states on disaster recovery preparedness activities and maintain partnerships with Housing RSF primary and support agencies, state disaster recovery staff, and state-led disaster housing task forces. Maintain a roster of HUD personnel in each region to staff Housing RSF MAs from FEMA, including working at FEMA JFOs. Coordinate and implement HUD disaster operations in the Field under the Housing RSF, including production of a Mission Scoping Assessment (MSA) and Recovery Support Strategy (RSS) in collaboration with the Office of Policy Development and Research. If Community Development Block Grant-Disaster Recovery (CDBG-DR) funds are appropriated, collaborate and align activities with disaster recovery staff or other departmental units and/or program offices as necessary for response and recovery operations.

II. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR PEOPLE

CUSTOMER SERVICE AND OFFICE COVERAGE

Purpose/Goal: It is a Departmental priority to provide HUD's customers with competent, efficient and responsive service in a timely and professional manner. FPM is the primary point of contact for HUD's customers in the Field. All employees across the Department have a responsibility to work together as a team to provide client service and support as needed.

Application: Under the leadership of the RA, all employees are responsible for ensuring HUD's customers in the Field receive the highest level of service reflecting Departmental priority. The RA/DRA/FOD is responsible for assuring that HUD's customers, partners, and clients are greeted and receive responses with courtesy, respect and promptness and are provided the information they need. The RA is further responsible for monitoring and evaluating local customer service. The RA/DRA/FOD will establish customer service plans for each office, in consultation with PDs to reflect local staffing configuration and needs.

Support from program areas may be required for customer service coverage (e.g., answering telephones, greeting guests) during lunch periods, leave and unexpected emergencies, etc., to ensure HUD's customers receive the highest level of service. Local customer service plans further define the nature of FPM and program interaction. Designation as an official detail is not required for such limited assignments; the Details, Interagency Agreement Assignments and Intergovernmental Personnel Act Assignments should be consulted and followed for any support beyond such coverage. In addition, Regional and Field Offices may require implementation of Order of Succession coverage for the RA/FOD.

Customer service plans will also provide guidance for routing incoming non-time sensitive inquiries to the appropriate program office. These procedures will be developed in consideration of local office alignments, official hours of operation, applicable bargaining agreements, departmental policies and procedures, and Office of Management and Budget (OMB) guidelines (e.g., Paperwork Reduction Act; surveys of customers).

The RA/DRA/FOD, with support from PDs, is responsible for evaluating customer feedback to identify trends, service gaps, and opportunities, ultimately leading to the development and implementation of strategies to further improve customer services.

II. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR PEOPLE

OFFICE ADMINISTRATION AND RESOURCES

Purpose/Goal: Coordinated office management is essential for effective and efficient Field operations, helping to create a positive and empowering work environment. The RA/DRA/FOD works closely with other programs and offices to coordinate office management, including managing Field operations, developing an administrative budget to support local goals and needs in regional and field offices, creating a positive work environment, promoting and accounting for the safety and security of all staff, and providing on-site administrative supervision for out-stationed employees. Regional Support Managers (RSM) serve as the liaison between the RA and the Office of Administration.

Application: The RA is responsible for managing administrative Field operations, applicable to all employees at a duty location, including out-stationed personnel. To accomplish this goal, the RA coordinates with PDs, administrative offices and supervisors of out-stationed personnel. Administrative Field operations include, but are not limited to:

- determining official local office hours of operation,
- determining emergency office closings due to weather, disaster or local events,
- providing effective customer service,
- working with PDs and all employees to foster a positive working environment,
- coordinating with the Office of Administration (and its RSM) to develop and manage an administrative budget that meets the needs of programs and staff in each office, and
- managing internal office communications of a general nature.

Safety and security: The RA/DRA/FOD, in partnership with the Office of Administration/RSM, is responsible for managing the overall safety and security of all staff in the office, as well as that of any guests or visitors present. The Office of Administration manages and coordinates occupancy emergency evacuation and shelter-in-place plans as well as security procedures for office space and employee credentials, and coordinates with the RA/DRA/FOD for on-site implementation. In emergency and urgent situations, implementation of the plans and procedures are organized by the RA/DRA/FOD and implemented under his/her leadership.

Office operations and closures: The RA/DRA/FOD, in cooperation with PDs, will set procedures for general office operations. All procedures will be in compliance with established departmental guidelines, and will be communicated to all local HUD staff for effective and full implementation.

The RA/DRA/FOD has administrative authority over all on-site staff to enforce field office operation decisions, e.g., delaying the opening or closing of the office in the event of an emergency. The RA/DRA/FOD will notify the Assistant Deputy Secretary for FPM of all emergency regional or field office delays or closures as soon as possible prior to action. The Office of the Assistant Deputy Secretary for FPM will notify all Headquarters program offices of regional and field office closures. The RA/DRA/FOD will coordinate with the Office of Administration regarding all office delays or closures for updates to office-wide notifications, and work together to widely communicate with staff.

The RA/DRA/FOD will make decisions regarding temporary office closings for non-emergencies in accordance with OPM guidance and in close consultation with the Assistant Deputy Secretary for FPM. Decisions regarding office closings across the enterprise, such as in conjunction with holidays, are made by the Deputy Secretary and communicated through FPM to the Field.

Status of management officials: It is the responsibility of the RA/DRA/FOD to ensure the office is managed efficiently and effectively and to oversee both general coordination efforts and those related to an emergency or disaster. In order to accomplish this, the RA/DRA/FOD must be aware of the status of key management officials in the office and may require their attendance at certain times or events. PDs will keep the RA/DRA/FOD informed of any travel or leave from the office, and the designation of any acting on-site supervisor.

Out-stationed personnel: Accounting for the safety of each employee each day and in emergency or disaster situations is critical. All staff in a field office will have on-site administrative supervision. The RA/DRA/FOD, or their designee, will provide on-site supervision of out-stationed staff when there is no on-site program supervisor in the same program hierarchy. Having an administrative on-site supervisor ensures that the RA/DRA/FOD is able to account for the safety of all staff working in their offices during emergency or disaster situations. For out-stationed employees, the primary supervisor or appropriate administrative office will advise the RA/DRA/FOD, on-site administrative staff, and on-site supervisor of the employee's position title, work requirements, approved telework agreement and designated work schedule in advance of the employee's arrival to the duty station. The employee will provide notification of travel and planned or emergency leave to both on-site and primary supervisors.

Guests, visiting HUD personnel: The RA/DRA/FOD should be notified by PDs, in advance to the extent possible, of any visitors to the regional or field office outside the normal course of day-to-day operations. Such occasions might include a program-sponsored gathering of stakeholders or HUD staff, or other large meetings. PDs or Headquarters representatives should also share information about visits of leadership to a regional or field office or to the jurisdiction, including for purposes of meetings with stakeholders or attending events.

Disruptive behavior: Providing for the safety and welfare of employees is a primary concern of HUD management. The RA/DRA/FOD or on-site supervisor will take appropriate and immediate action involving employees involved in disruptive or threatening behavior. The RA/DRA/FOD or on-site supervisor will coordinate with the program office chain of command during or following such action.

Office budgets and funding: Funding to support all administrative support services in the Field is allocated to the Office of Administration, which maintains authority to prepare and manage related budgets. PDs will work in consultation with the RA/DRA/FOD to establish office priorities for the fiscal year budget proposal. The Office of Administration and RSM will provide technical assistance and support for the offices. The RA/DRA/FOD, and PDs, shall submit requests prior to submission of the fiscal year budget proposal to assure local goals and needs are taken into consideration in the development of the administrative budget for each office and region including funding needs for meetings and travel. The RA/DRA/FOD shall also include requests related to cross-program implementation of responsibilities to our mission, including Secretarial initiatives and priorities. The Office of Administration/RSM will share the final budget allocated to the region with the RA/DRA/FOD, and share, on at least a quarterly basis, a budget status report of respective regional and field offices throughout the fiscal year.

Space management: The Office of Administration has the delegated authority and responsibility for space management in the Department, and is allocated related funding. Office of Administration representatives shall engage in early consultation and coordination with the RA/DRA/FOD regarding planning for, decisions and funding for space management, including leasing status and options, office moves and related activities during the decision-making process. Final authority regarding decisions on space and funding are with the Office of Administration since that office is accountable for meeting the goals and requirements established for compliance in these areas.

Travel: Travel to field locations to support agency priorities, including cross-program priorities as referenced in local operating plans, is the responsibility of each program and shall be funded in accordance with HUD travel guidance. If funding is not available, such travel may be elevated to the RA and other authorizing officials.

II. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR PEOPLE

CROSS-PROGRAM SELECTION AND PERFORMANCE RATING OF MANAGERS

Purpose/Goal: To enhance and strengthen cross-program collaboration performance of the Field management team, the RA will be afforded the opportunity to participate in selection of Program Directors and offer input on the assessment of cross-program collaboration performance.

Application: While final decisions regarding hiring of Program Directors will be made by the Program Selecting Official, the RA will be given advance notification of PD announcements. The RA should participate in the interviewing and recommendation process and provide the Program Selecting Official with input in accordance with Departmental protocols. For PDs that serve multiple jurisdictions (more than one field or regional office), a single FPM representative will coordinate with the Program Selecting Official.

For selections of supervisors below the Program Director in any office, the Selecting Official will notify the RA/DRA/FOD prior to announcing the selection.

Accomplishment of departmental goals is contingent upon cooperation between all program offices. Initiated by either the RA or the Program Rating Official, the RA may provide performance input for critical elements associated with cross-program collaboration in the mid-year assessments and final progress reviews of PDs to the Program Rating Official prior to departmental deadlines. The RA may delegate performance input for Program Directors to the DRA/FOD. The Program Rating Official may incorporate the input received on the cross-program collaboration element.

PDs, with the exception of Regional Counsel and Chief Counsel, may provide input to the RA on the critical elements associated with cross-program collaboration for DRA/FODs. The RA may consider the input in the final rating of record for the critical element.

II. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR PEOPLE

LABOR/MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

Purpose/Goal: Working together, the RA, the Office of the Chief Human Capital Office Employee and Labor Relation Division (OCHCO/ELRD) for labor/management relations in the Region and Headquarters, and other Field management officials strive to engage with employees directly and through union representation. This Protocol describes the relationships in matters of labor/management negotiations and personnel actions.

Application: The RA is responsible for overseeing labor/management relations in the Region in coordination with the assigned Employee and Labor Relations representative. The RA or his/her FPM designee, and representatives of OCHCO/ELRD and Regional OGC work as a team to consider issues related to labor/management contracts and conditions in each office. The team should regularly review internal open and active labor/management cases that are in process within each respective jurisdiction (e.g., complaints, grievances, unfair labor practice suits). Based on information provided by OCHCO/ELRD and with input by OGC, the RA will provide the Assistant Deputy Secretary for Field Policy and Management with regular reports on all open and active labor/management cases that are in process within the respective region.

In coordination with OCHCO/ELRD, the RA will take the lead on regional issues regarding labor-management matters. Grievance deciding officials may designate their responsibilities consistent with the Department's collective bargaining agreements. Grievance deciding officials have broad authority to identify a designee, including individuals located in other offices or programs. ELRD is the primary advisor to grievance deciding officials throughout the grievance process. In recognition of the need to fully consider the needs of employees and Department-wide interests, grievance deciding officials, in coordination with ELRD, should consult with all impacted offices, including but not limited to, the employee's program office, OGC, OCHCO or other offices.

The existing union contracts outline the requirements when formal actions are to be taken between management and the Union. The Chief Human Capital Officer or designee is responsible for national contract negotiations. In matters of labor/management negotiations, OCHCO/ELRD will serve as chief negotiator on all labor/management negotiations. The RA or his/her designee will serve as a team member on local negotiations, as appropriate given the nature of the specific issue being considered.

Other personnel matters: Recognizing that personnel issues present a broad array of support needs, RAs (and DRAs, FODs) should be skilled in recognizing and elevating issues related to merit system principles, prohibited personnel practices, Equal Employment Opportunity, reasonable accommodation needs of our employees, and others.

III. RESPONSIBILITY TO OUR STAKEHOLDERS

RELATIONSHIPS WITH ELECTED AND GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS

Purpose/Goal: Together, representatives of Headquarters offices and RAs work to ensure that federal, state, local and tribal elected officials within a jurisdiction receive responsive and coordinated customer service. The RA/DRA/FOD serves as the principal point of contact for elected officials within the field jurisdiction. Program offices represent the primary point of contact for grantee and authority staff for program issues. Together, the HUD team will promote a positive working relationship between offices including the unique government-to-government relationship between HUD and tribal leaders. Interaction between Field staff and other government officials may range from official inquiries and responses, to coordination between agencies as HUD executes Secretarial initiatives and agency priorities, and relationships between HUD and its grantees, agencies and other authorities.

Application: The RA and representatives of the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations (CIR) and its Offices of Intergovernmental Relations (IGR) and of Public Engagement (OPE), and the Office of Public Affairs (OPA) work closely together to communicate with and respond to issues raised by congressional offices located in the District of Columbia, as well as with local offices of federal representatives and state, local and tribal officials in the jurisdiction. Headquarters representatives generally serve as principal point of contact for DC-based offices, while the RA (and DRA/FOD) serves as principal point of contact in Field jurisdictions. Headquarters representatives and RA/DRA/FODs keep each other fully informed of significant issues and communications, and work together to manage issues requiring coordination, including public affairs-related activities.

Field-based issues and communications by government officials that are accepted by program offices, including both on-site and remote engagement, should be shared with the RA or his/her designee so that the RA may have up-to-date awareness of significant issues. The RA will share such issues with Headquarters offices. Similarly, the RA/DRA/FOD will share information obtained through contact with government representatives with PDs.

As the principle point of contact for federal, state, local and tribal officials within the jurisdiction, the RA will also serve as the signatory for congressional and Headquarters-controlled correspondence. In accordance with the policies and procedures of CIR and OPA, the RA/DRA/FOD serves as the signatory for regional/field office written communications and notifies these offices of any topical issues that may result from verbal or written contact. Notification of other offices, as appropriate, may also be required depending upon the nature of the communications.

To ensure that CIR and OPA are fully informed in a timely manner of topical contacts/issues with federal, state, local and tribal elected officials, the PDs will keep the RA/DRA/FOD fully informed of hot topics, contentious issues, waiver requests initiated by state and local elected officials, and other issues of interest. Written correspondence from remote program offices to these officials will be forwarded to the local FOD for signature, unless other procedures are agreed upon within the related authorities by the RA and PDs or related program leadership. (Such special procedures may be in place with regard to the special relationship between HUD and tribal representatives, for example.) The FOD will advise the RA of any topical issues, who, in turn, will notify CIR and OPA.

Exceptions: When the Office of the Inspector General (OIG), Office of the Regional Counsel, Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity (FHEO) or Office of Lead Hazard Control and Healthy Homes (OLHCHH) makes contact with local and elected officials as part of an investigation or litigation, these offices will let the RA know that a connection has been made and share communications, but will not share any sensitive or confidential information regarding the interaction.

RELATIONSHIPS WITH INDUSTRY AND STAKEHOLDER REPRESENTATIVES

Purpose/Goal: Recognizing HUD's relationship with professional and industry groups that represent HUD's clients and implement HUD's mission on the ground, it is important to maintain and foster positive relationships. Relationships with national industry and stakeholder representatives are coordinated through the Office of Public Engagement, often coordinating with leadership in the Field. Field leadership, represented by the RA/DRA/FOD and PDs, work together in a spirit of teamwork to engage with stakeholders. Interaction with stakeholders, including government agencies, includes coordination as HUD executes Secretarial initiatives and agency priorities.

Application: As part of the role of regional spokesperson, the RA is the primary contact for HUD's relationships with local and regional industry groups throughout jurisdiction, including those that are multi-state and multi-regional in nature. These relationships will be managed by the RA, in conjunction with the Office of Public Engagement within CIR, and the appropriate Assistant Secretary, or his/her designee, to facilitate communication and transparency on behalf of the Department. The RA may delegate this authority to the DRA/FOD for local and regional industry groups.

The RA/DRA/FOD will work in conjunction with the appropriate PDs in managing HUD's relationship with local and regional industry groups, keeping each other informed of contacts and requests for engagement and participation at public forums, meetings, conferences and interagency initiatives. The RA/DRA/FOD and PD will notify each other in advance of plans to meet local/regional industry group representatives in a specific Field Office jurisdiction.

Similarly, the RA/DRA/FOD and PD should be notified of visits to industry groups and stakeholders by Headquarters principals in Field jurisdictions.

Co-Sponsorship Agreements: RAs, with concurrence of Regional Counsel, have the authority to enter into local co-sponsorship agreements, when it is determined co-sponsorship in an event with a non-Federal entity is related to and substantially advances the mission of the Department. This authority may not be re-delegated. Additional guidance related to HUD-sponsored conferences is available in Conference, Travel and Training Guidance.

Requests and assignments of HUD employees to actively participate in an event as speakers or panel participants, without HUD's substantive participation in the development of the event, will not be considered co-sponsorship with the Department.

INQUIRIES AND CORRESPONDENCE

Purpose/Goal: Communications between the Department and the public, whether with elected and public officials, customers, beneficiaries of HUD programs, or the public at large, happen regularly and occur at Headquarters and Field locations, and with every program area and office. Our goal is to provide customers with the highest quality responses to inquiries and correspondence in a timely and professional manner, and to be a responsive and accessible agency.

Application: The nature of inquiries and correspondence to the Department include inquiries of an official nature, including inquiries to the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, from congressional offices and elected officials, and public interest groups as well as referrals from other agencies including the White House. Such inquiries require a formal response, following prescribed procedures and formats. Inquiries include those requests made through traditional correspondence, faxes and email. Many inquiries are more informal in nature, or categorized as "book of business." These are likely to include phone calls and email inquiries, and can be handled during the normal course of business. In all instances, regardless of point of entry, type of inquiry, and nature of response, the HUD team works together to respond in a timely and professional manner.

All inquiries and correspondence directed to the Department, whether to Headquarters or field offices, should be reviewed at the point of entry to determine whether a formal response is required or whether it can be handled more informally, and whether it should be handled by Headquarters or directed to the Field. Early consideration of the best place to handle the inquiry will help provide a timely response.

Inquiries requiring an official response will be referred to the Office of the Executive Secretariat or the RA, as determined by whether Field or Headquarters response is required.

All inquiries and correspondence directed to the Department and requiring a formal response should be tracked through the Correspondence Tracking System (CTS) or, in the case of Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests, through the FOIA Management System (FMS2). Entry through CTS or FMS2 provides a common tracking system that allows tracking across program areas participating in response preparation, responsible staff to manage responses in a timely way, coordination and helps prevent duplication.

The format for responses to controlled correspondence will follow Departmental policy, as outlined by the Director of the Executive Secretariat, and the Assistant Secretaries for Public Affairs and Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations in their published standard operating procedures. Refer to the Office of the Executive Secretariat Standard Operating Procedures for Freedom of Information Act requests and departmental correspondence.

The Office of Administration will coordinate with FPM for issues related to federal Privacy Act requirements.

For all inquiries and correspondence directed to the Field, or referred to the Field by the Executive Secretariat or other Headquarters office, the RA and his/her designees will work with PDs to ensure that there is a complete and timely response. Such activities include FOIA requests, as well as congressional and intergovernmental communications. The RA/DRA/FOD is the signature authority for Headquarters controlled congressional correspondence, including congressional correspondence referred to the Field for response, as well as congressional and other elected officials' correspondence managed in the Field. Any change from this procedure shall be coordinated with the Deputy Assistant Secretary for FPM.

PDs, as subject matter experts, will assist the RA/DRA/FOD in preparing responses to inquiries and correspondence in accordance with departmental policies and procedures. PDs will work with the RA/DRA/FOD to ensure correspondence deadlines are met.

The appropriate offices in Headquarters will be copied on any responses to inquiries received in the Field addressed to the Secretary or Deputy Secretary.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS AND RELATED COMMUNICATIONS

Purpose/Goal: In order to support HUD's mission and strategic objectives, the Department must effectively interact with the public and news media to communicate information about HUD's programs and accomplishments, issues and needs using public affairs resources, and with a standard of accuracy and transparency. Media and public affairs issues require close coordination between Headquarters and Field staff, both to offer information to the public about HUD activities as well as to respond to media inquiries with national and local implications.

Application: The RA/DRA/FOD and Public Affairs Officers (PAO) work with OPA to ensure there is a response to all media inquiries and to ensure that responses to requests and issues are completed in accordance with Headquarters Public Affairs policy.

The RA/DRA and PAOs will work with Headquarters OPA to keep each other informed of all related media/public affairs issues, events and opportunities that are in progress, pending, or anticipated. The Regional PAO will coordinate with the RA/DRA to ensure that public affairs activities comply with OPA guidance. The RA/DRA and PAOs will support Headquarters public affairs functions, as well as serve as the regional spokesperson, as appropriate, in conformance with Headquarters Public Affairs Guidance.

The RA and PAOs are the designated on-the-record, spokespeople for the Department in the Field. All media inquiries and public affairs issues directed to PDs, FODs, or other Field staff shall be forwarded to the RA or PAOs. PAOs work with PDs and other Field staff to gather information and provide an appropriate response to inquiries. PDs and their staff, as subject matter experts, will support public affairs-related activities.

On a case-by-case basis, the RA can designate the DRA/FOD or other staff person to represent the Department as spokesperson at public events or related to media inquiries. The RA and PAOs can authorize FODs and key program area specialists to be quoted on-the-record. OPA should be pre-briefed, or back-briefed if time does not permit, about all on-the-record media statements/interviews made by HUD officials in the Field.

The RA will also, working closely with OPA, coordinate the content of the local web pages and internet sources. The RA/DRA/FOD will work with PDs and Field staff to ensure that reviews to certify the accuracy of local web page content takes place, and that updated local web page information is available. Where applicable,

Headquarters or Regional Web Managers will be notified of inaccuracies and provided with updated information.

OPA will provide guidance on social media policy and other media, to be implemented in the Field through RAs and their designees through the normal course of business.

OPA is responsible for producing internal communications, and works with Headquarters and Field staff, including RA/DRA/FODs, PAOs, and PDs, to provide content.

Supplement 2016-03 Between the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Federation of Federal Employees Local 1450

National Supplement Between U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and American Federation of Government Employees National Council of HUD Locals 222

Supplement 2016-03
Between
The United States Department of Housing and Urban Development
And
The National Federation of Federal Employees Local 1450

SUBJECT: 2016 Operating Protocols

SCOPE: The scope of this Supplement applies to the implementation of the 2016 Operating Protocols for HUD NFFE 1450 Bargaining Unit Employees.

1. Space Moves: Space realignments for outstationed employees will be handled in accordance with Article 24.14 of the Labor Management Agreement.

2. Front Desk Coverage: Front desk coverage procedures will be handled in accordance with Article 47.01 of the Labor Management Agreement.

3. Discipline: All disciplinary actions will be applied in accordance with Article 16 and 17 of the Labor Management Agreement.

4. Grievances: In the event the Regional Administrator or Field Office Director are being grieved, the Step 1 deciding official will be determined as per Article 9.11 of the Labor Management Agreement. The Step 2 deciding official will be the Assistant Deputy Secretary for Field Policy and Management or designee.

5. Immediate Threats: The Regional Administrator or Field Office Director may take appropriate action concerning an employee who poses a valid immediate threat to others or the agency. The employee shall retain all contractual, statutory, or regulatory rights including the right to representation.

6. Notification and Training: Management will notify employees of the new Departmental operating protocols within five (5) days after the date of this signed agreement. Management agrees to include the Operating Protocols supplement as part of the LMA Training rollout, schedule to be determined.

7. Upward Mobility/Career Ladder: Employees in Upward Mobility/Career Ladder positions will not be adversely affected by the implementation of this supplement.

8. Bargaining Unit Employee Status: There will be no changes to the bargaining unit status as a result of the implementation of this supplement.

9. Reports to the Union: Upon submission of a particularized need, the NFFE Local 1450 President will be provided a copy of all open and active labor management cases that are in process in Region IX, if such a report exists. For cases in which NFFE 1450 is not the representative, management will redact the employee name and subject of the grievance, but will indicate that a grievance has been filed, that the employee is self-represented, and the location of the grievance (to protect anonymity, the small offices of Las Vegas, Reno and Albuquerque will be combined and listed as one location). It is understood that the internal Management notes will be removed from the report prior to forwarding to the Union. If Management decides to stop production of the report, it will provide a courtesy notice to the Union of their decision.

NATIONAL SUPPLEMENT
Between
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVEOPMENT
And
AMERICAN FEDERAL OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES
NATIONAL COUNCIL OF HUD LOCALS 222

SUBJECT: 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols

SCOPE: The scope of this supplement encompasses the impact and implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

1) This Supplement shall not diminish or waive any rights that bargaining unit employees have under the AFGE Agreement, law, rule or regulation. The Protocols shall work in conjunction with and be administered in accordance with the Agreement. The Parties agree that no Operating Protocol shall be executed in any manner conflicting with the provisions of the Agreement.

2) No bargaining unit employee will be involuntarily separated or downgraded as result of the implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

3) No position will be removed from the bargaining unit as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

4) No bargaining unit employee will be involuntarily relocated as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

5) Annual leave and/or sick leave previously approved will not be rescinded as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

6) The implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not affect employees' existing alternate work schedules.

7) The implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not affect employees' existing telework agreements.

8) The implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not affect employees' existing or pending reasonable accommodations. The decision maker of a reasonable accommodation will not change as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols. The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols shall not interfere with the required 30-day processing of a reasonable accommodation request.

9) The implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not adversely affect approved or pending employees' hardship reassignment requests.

10) For out-stationed employees, the remote immediate supervisor shall be the approving official for telework requests. For on-site employees, the on-site immediate supervisor shall be the approving official for telework requests.

11) For an out-stationed employee, the employee's remote immediate supervisor shall be the approving official for sick and annual leave requests. For on-site employees, the employee's on-site immediate supervisor shall be the approving official for sick and annual leave requests.

12) There shall be no adverse impact on existing upward mobility and/or career ladder promotions and step increases as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

13) The Department will continue to abide by all current settlement agreements (EEO) and grievance awards as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols.

14) Out-stationed employees shall continue to receive program work assignments from the employee's remote immediate supervisor.

15) An out-stationed employee's rating official shall be the remote immediate supervisor in accordance with the Agreement.

16) Performance Ratings will be made in accordance with Article 30 of the Agreement.

17) Nothing shall affect management's right to assign work and nothing shall preclude the union from negotiating appropriate arrangements for employees affected by the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols. The parties agree, to the extent possible, that Book of Business, Work Assignments, and/or priorities will be communicated to the employee by the employee's immediate supervisor or remote immediate supervisor.

18) An on-site employee's rating official shall be in accordance with Article 30 of the Agreement.

PROTOCOLS

RESPONSIBILITIES TO OUR MISSION, OUR PEOPLE, OUR STAKEHOLDERS

19) The 2016 HUD Operating Protocols will not adversely affect performance appraisals and discipline for problems with carrying out duties that require a professional degree or higher education to perform if the employees do not hold such degrees or have the higher education required.

20) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not adversely affect performance appraisals, discipline and/or adverse actions if they are denied security clearance and access to any HUD systems to perform duties.

21) The disciplinary process shall continue to be applied in accordance with Article 12 of the Agreement.

22) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will comply with Article 30 of the Agreement.

23) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not adversely affect the designated lead personnel who are not classified as a supervisor (i.e. team leaders, lead specialists etc.) and will not perform supervisory duties or carry out supervisory administrative and/or personnel procedures and functions that are not consistent with OPM regulations/guidelines.

24) Grievance procedures shall be in accordance with Article 51 of the Agreement.

25) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will not adversely affect proposed national, regional and/or local changes in personnel policies, practices, working conditions or general conditions of employment not already covered in the Agreement resulting from any Operating Protocol activity. Opportunity to engage in pre-decisional discussions and engage in national, regional and /or local bargaining will be in accordance with Article 49 of the Agreement and statutory provisions.

26) Mid-term bargaining shall be in accordance with Article 49 and space management shall be in accordance with Article 57 of the Agreement.

27) Evaluation of customer service feedback shall be used to identify trends, service gaps and opportunities ultimately leading to the development and implementation of strategies to further improve customer services. Evaluation of customer service feedback shall be administered in accordance with the Collective Bargaining Agreement. It is not management's intent to utilize customer service feedback to discipline an individual employee.

28) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols shall not adversely affect bargaining unit employees. To the extent possible, work will be distributed fairly and equitably among bargaining unit employees consistent with their classification.

RESPONSIBILITIES TO OUR MISSION, OUR PEOPLE, OUR STAKEHOLDERS

29) Affected bargaining unit employees who have no previous or recent experience with newly assigned duties as a result of implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols shall be provide necessary training. Training for newly assigned duties shall be in accordance with the terms of Article 29 of the Agreement. Employees shall be given a reasonable training period to become proficient in performing new duties as a result of implementation the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols. Additional training, follow-up, and refresher instruction will be provided upon the employee's request.

30) In the event RA/DRA/FOD or PAO establishes deadlines that have short turnaround times and requirements that may conflict with an employee's assigned program work, they shall coordinate with the PD or the employee's immediate supervisor to ensure adjusted reasonable program deadlines are immediately established. While sensitive to the priorities of program activities in the Field, it is understood that full communication of priorities and deadlines must be conducted by Management to ensure that the employee is provided enough opportunity for the employee to reach the full performance level of his/her program assigned work and goals.

31) Once the parties successfully complete negotiations of this supplement, Management will notify the employees of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols within 60 days after the date of this signed supplement. The parties agree that the terms of this supplement shall be completely communicated before any implementation begins.

32) In the event the RA/DRA/FOD leadership establishes continuity of operations activities and local disaster preparation due to an emergency incident (local, regional or national) resulting from the implementation of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols, the parties agree that they will be handled in accordance with Article 41of the Agreement. Any subsequent supplements to this Agreement shall be consistent with all applicable Health and Safety regulations, statutes and directives.

This includes but is not limited to:

a) Continuity of Operations (COOP), emergency/disaster incident reporting, interagency disaster preparedness, response and recovery initiatives.

b) Interagency initiatives include, but are not limited to, Federal Continuity Directives (FCD), the National Response Framework (NRF), and the National Disaster Recovery Framework (NDRF). FPM Regional Disaster Recovery Coordinators, in collaboration with the Office of Disaster Management and National Security (ODMNS) and the Office of Administration (OA), support field office objectives and provide guidance, technical assistance, training and oversight across COOP, emergency/disaster incident reporting, and interagency preparedness, response and recovery initiatives.

33) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will be administered in accordance with Article 16 and Supplement 3 of the Agreement.

34) The 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols will provide travel and per diem costs consistent with the FTR (Federal Travel Regulation) for employees to attend organizational meetings (e.g. place-based, cross-program). This shall also include meetings related to agency priorities and contractual obligatory meetings concerning employee training and adverse actions. All employee travel shall be administered in accordance with Article 23 "Travel and Travel Charge Cards" of the Agreement.

35) Incentive awards resulting from work assigned due to the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols shall be administered in accordance with the Agreement.

36) The parties agree that no later than six months after implementation of the 2016 HUD Operating Standard Protocols, both the Union and Management will conduct a conference call to discuss any concerns resulting from the implementation of this supplement.

37) When provisions of the 2016 HUD Standard Operating Protocols are inconsistent with or contradict this supplement, this supplement shall prevail.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS GUIDANCE FOR REGIONAL AND FIELD OFFICES

This guidance is meant to ensure HUD's regional Public Affairs Officers respond promptly and effectively and in a standardized manner to news media queries. Because working relations with media representatives are by nature both personal and highly professional, this guidance is a mixture of concise direction and background guidance growing out of collective experience. Both are necessary to deal successfully with the media and explain what we do, why we do it, and how we do it.

Public interest can be high not only because of HUD's role in communities throughout the country but also because of our considerable budget.

Public support is critical because HUD programs depend on public acceptance and funding. Public interest provides the opportunity to explain how HUD is using public resources to address the nation's housing needs. Our ability to be effective depends on our ability to communicate HUD's accomplishments, problems and needs to the public.

ATTRIBUTION POLICY.

In contacts with media, people speaking on behalf of U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development are, in effect, announcing Department policy. Therefore, the designated on-the-record, spokespeople for the Department are Assistant and Deputy Secretaries, the Regional Directors and their Public Affairs Officers. On a case-by-case basis, Regional Directors and their Public Affairs Officers can authorize Field Directors and key program area specialists to be quoted, on-the-record.

Headquarters public affairs should be pre-briefed, or back-briefed if time does not permit, about all on-the record media statements/interviews made by HUD officials in the field. This is of particular importance if the request originates from a major national/regional media outlet.

MEDIA INTERVIEW GUIDELINES.

Interviews give reporters the chance to get in-depth information about HUD directly from primary sources. The ability to ask HUD official questions privately provides for a maximum exchange of information. This also permits rapid correction of misconceptions and misinformation.

Reporters prefer individual interviews to protect exclusive stories from competitors. Usually, interviews are one-on-one between a reporter and the official, with a PAO monitoring. The following suggestions help guarantee effective interviews:

- Make sure the news medium and the representative is reputable. If in doubt, ask Headquarters for advice.
- Determine precisely what the reporter wants to know and the intended use of this information. What kinds of stories does the reporter usually write? Are other interviews being done on the same subject (if so, with whom)? Could HUD be placed in an adversary relationship to a community interest? Answers to these questions will help you determine whether, and to what extent, you should cooperate by providing an interview.

After receiving a media interview request, the Regional Director and Regional Public Affairs Officer should determine the appropriate HUD official to provide the requested information. Determine the appropriate official who can speak on the subject and who expresses thoughts clearly and briefly. If the interview is for radio or television, the person selected should be able to express themselves in suitable broadcast sound bites.

Prepare a memo for the interviewee including the news outlet and the reporter involved, background on the reporter, samples of the reporter's work, other interviews on the same subject, and whether the interview is on the record, for background, or off-the-record.

Confirm the time and place, who will escort the reporter, and who will participate in the interview.

Before agreeing to the interview, establish the ground rules. Be absolutely sure everyone understands your definitions and agrees to the conditions in advance. There are no universally agreed on or standard definitions for interview terms, thus you will want to ensure that both parties agree on the exact conditions for the interview.

You should explain the following terms and specify the one that applies to the interview. Obtain interviewee's and reporter's agreement before continuing.

Off-the-Record. The interviewee provides information that may not be used but is for a reporter's understanding of an issue. Use off-the-record very rarely, if at all, and only when there are compelling reasons.

Background. The reporter may use the material verbatim, but may not identify the interviewee by name or title. The reporter and the interviewee agree regarding attribution. An example is: A senior HUD official said.

On-the-Record. The reporter may quote verbatim the interviewee by name and title. An example is: "Jack Jones, HUD's Regional Director said,..."
NOTE: There are various interpretations of the categories of attribution among news people; therefore, agree to attribution at the outset of the interview.

Set up a suitable place for the interview:

Print media prefer a quiet room. The same room may not be right for a radio broadcaster looking for ambient background sound, or for a television reporter who needs a visual background to go with the ambient sound.

To prepare for all interviews anticipate probable questions. With the help of program area specialists, draft good answers to the questions. Discuss these questions and answers with the interviewee. If the interview is extremely important, do a mock interview and critique the interviewee's answers. This enables the interviewee to solidly frame the answers, builds confidence, and helps overcome natural reluctance to speak on the record.

The PAO attends the interview to:

- Open the interview professionally by introducing the participants.
- Clarify the purpose of the interview.
- State, explain, and get agreement on the ground rules (although these should be agreed to before the interview).
- Spot and prevent communication failure. The interviewee thinks mainly about the topic instead of the feedback. The reporter is partly preoccupied with the next question. The Public Affairs representative is the only one who is concentrating equally on everything. The public Affairs representative can see misconceptions on both sides and can correct them.
- Alert other interested HUD people to potential public affairs problems as a result of questions asked at the interview.

For radio or TV interviews, both interviewee and the PAO must plan accordingly.

The statements made are usually brief and factual. Interviews for print media are greatly expanded from this. As a result, some interviewees prefer not to be audio taped in long interviews in which they cannot speak comfortably for fear of an error in quoted expression. The possibility also exists a comment can be taken out of context. For these reasons, find out whether print media reporters want to audio tape the interview. If so, obtain the interviewee's approval in advance and inform them that everything is on-the-record from the moment they enter the room.

Some interviewees, conversely, want to tape the interview to protect themselves from errors in attribution. Determine this in advance and set up a digital recorder with fresh batteries. Under these circumstances, you might offer the same courtesy to the reporter.

Be sure the reporter has your telephone number and e-mail address in the event of changed plans or post-interview clarification.

If the interview raises critical subjects, brief the headquarters public affairs staff and your Regional Director on the questions, answers, and your evaluation of the probable impact.

Remember, you represent a service organization that provides assistance to low-to-moderate income families. Your image should project that fact. Always dress for the occasion.

KEYS TO A SUCCESSFUL COMMUNICATION WITH THE MEDIA AND CONTROL OF AN INTERVIEW

- Your positive attitude.
- Knowledge of subject matter.
- Your familiarity with the media – do your research.
- Candor, honesty.

Concise, simple talking points on the subject to remember:

- You represent the Department when doing an interview. Keep personal opinions to a minimum.
- Take the attitude the reporter represents the public and the public has a right to know.
- Do not use technical jargon or HUD acronyms. Talk the public's language.
- Put your conclusion first; then expand.
- Use short quotes; long answers are seldom used.
- When you have made your points, stop!
- Do not make off-the-record statements. Do not say anything outside the interview you would not want to see or hear the next day.
- Keep "cool" under fire.
- Know the up-to-the-minute breaking news stories.
- Do not accept a reporter's facts or figures, or answer hypothetical questions.
- If you do not know the answer, admit it, but offer to find out.
- Most reporters are generalists; you are the expert on the subject.
- Do not try to impress the reporter.
- Arrive early; talk to the reporter; offer subjects, points you want to discuss.
- Do not use "no comment" unless advised by a member of the Office of General Counsel--you will sound and look guilty. Tell why you cannot answer.

HUD-17-0235-B-000055

- Have prepared points you want to make. Get your soundbite out first.
- Know why you were asked for the interview. Think beyond the initial question.
- Establish ground rules and subjects to be covered.
- Be prepared; even in your specialty a brush-up is wise.
- Question your own position; play devil's advocate. Justify your position.
- The reporter is probably as biased as you; and, as professional.
- Relax.
- Anticipate the questions and draft and coordinate proposed answers.

Thanks Barbara! Kelly is definitely receiving the WH briefings - just thought she could help expedite things! Sorry for the confusion.

Basically, all 3 of us (me, Deana & Barbara) need the press pool, the WH press briefings and Cliff Sims briefings. Deana may already receive all or some of these, but please make sure she's on all too. Thanks you!

Subject: AFTERNOON COMMUNICATIONS BRIEFING - February 28, 2017

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

AFTERNOON COMMUNICATIONS BRIEFING
Feb. 28, 2017

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO A JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS

The President is committed to keeping his promises to the American people.

- He has already saved taxpayers millions of dollars by renegotiating promises, and will save billions more on contracts all across government.
- We have undertaken a historic effort to roll back over-burdensome regulations.
- The President has begun the process of draining the swamp of Washington corruption.

- He has cleared the way for pipeline construction and withdrew the country from the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

Looking forward, the President will lay out an optimistic vision for the nation with a focus on the government putting the interests of the American people first.

- There is a renewed spirit of optimism sweeping the country.
- We are thinking like Americans again – dreaming big, building and undertaking monumental tasks and solving enormous problems.
- But we must work together – across party lines – to do it.

We must restart the engine of America's economy.

- American businesses are being crushed under an avalanche of taxes and regulations.
- We must make it easier for companies to do business in America.
- We will deliver historic tax reform so that American businesses can compete and thrive.
- The middle class must get tax relief.
- We must have fair trade for our workers – foreign countries can no longer be allowed to tax our exports while shipping goods into our country for free.
- We must protect our workers by enforcing our immigration laws, and it is time to implement a merit-based immigration system.
- We will be guided by two core rules: Buy American, and Hire American.

Our people must have access to quality, affordable healthcare of their choosing.

- Congress must repeal Obamacare and replace it with a system that expands choice, increases access and lowers costs.
- Americans with pre-existing conditions must have coverage, and we must smooth the transition for Americans currently in the exchanges.
- Our governors must have flexibility and resources they need to ensure no one slips through the cracks.
- Americans must have the freedom to purchase health insurance in a national marketplace – it is time for competition that benefits consumers.
- We must eliminate the burdensome approval process for life-saving drugs so that more lives can be saved.

Every parent deserves a choice, and every child deserves a chance.

- Education is a civil rights issue – every child must have access to a quality education, no matter their zip code.
- Our disadvantaged youth, including millions of African-American and Latino children, deserve access to good schools and great teachers.
- We want to help our children break the cycle of poverty, and education is the key.

Every family deserves the opportunity to live in peace and safety in their homes and communities.

- We must break the cycle of violence in our cities.
- To accomplish this, we must support our men and women in law enforcement. They deserve our respect and appreciation.
- For our people to be truly safe, our men and women of the military must have the tools they need to prevent – and, if they must, win – a war.
- And when our veterans come home, they must be taken care of.

Looking abroad, an America First policy calls for robust engagement with the world in areas of mutual interest.

- We support NATO, but our partners must meet their financial obligations.
- Our strategic partners around the world must play meaningful roles in operations and help cover the costs.
- We must learn from the mistakes of the past that have led to so much destruction around the world.
- We are prepared to forge new partnerships where our interests align. We are looking for partners in peace.

OTHER NEWS OF THE DAY

Legislation and Executive Orders Signed Today

H.R. 321 – The INSPIRE Act

- This bill, which was passed unanimously by Congress, encourages NASA to have women and girls participate in science, technology, engineering, mathematics, and to pursue careers in aerospace, using existing programs and resources.
- Specifically, the bill encourages the expansion of the missions of:
    - NASA Girls & NASA Boys
    - Aspire to Inspire
    - The Summer Institute in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Research.
- Also requires NASA to produce a report in 90 days to detail how the agency can best support engagement for women and girls in aerospace and related fields.

H.R. 255 – The Promoting Women in Entrepreneurship Act

- Similar to the INSPIRE Act, H.R. 255 encourages the National Science Foundation to use existing programs to recruit and support women in the sciences.
- R. 255 was passed by unanimous consent in both the House and Senate and has no cost according to the Congressional Budget Office.
- This bill is in part of the Innovation Initiative, launched jointly by Leader McCarthy and Representative McHenry

Executive Order on the Waters of the United States (WOTUS)

- The Waters of the United States issue has had a long odyssey in the regulatory and legal world for the last 30 years, including 3 Supreme Court decisions and revised guidance from multiple administrations.
- The last administration overturned previous guidance and instituted the Clean Water Rule, previously known as the Waters of the U.S. Rule, a massive power grab that vastly expands federal jurisdiction into state and local areas and decisions regarding their land use.
    - This rule is strongly opposed by farmers, ranchers, and agricultural workers all across our country because it prohibits them from doing their jobs as efficiently as possible and treats our small farmers as if they were major industrial polluters.
- Past Supreme Court decisions have tried to make it clear that the jurisdiction of federal agencies who oversee this issue should be shrinking, not expanding.
- This order directs the Army Corps of Engineers and the EPA to review and reconsider the Obama administration's rule and provides instruction to the Attorney General for proceeding with current legal action regarding the rule.
- By eliminating this rule, we will unleash our farmers and ranchers to freely, yet still safely, expand their operations, and allow more Americans to make their living off our great land.

Executive Order on the Historically Black Colleges and Universities Initiative

- President Trump is making HBCUs a priority again by repositioning the HBCU initiative in the White House.
- This repositioning will strengthen the initiative by:
    - Allowing it to function across all executive departments and agencies and utilize the full resources of the federal government
    - Establishing HBCUs as a strategic partner in the President's urban agenda of creating jobs, revitalizing communities, and making inner cities safe again
    - Increasing the private sector's role in supporting HBCUs
    - Strengthening HBCUs participation in federal programs that partner with outside groups or private organizations
- Each President since Jimmy Carter has issued an executive order on HBCUs. These previous initiatives lost track because they did not have the full force of the White House behind them. That stops with President Trump.

The President's Budget

- The President's first budget will be submitted to Congress on March 16th.
- The American people elected the President to prioritize their security, and that is exactly what he will do.
    - This budget provides for one of the largest increases in defense spending without increasing the debt.
    - There will be a $54 billion increase in defense spending in Fiscal Year 2018, in addition to $30 billion in supplemental spending for the current fiscal year.
        - This funding is vital. We must devote this money to protect the country.
    - We will also increase funding for our veterans, secure our border, and fund our other priorities.
- We are a nation that soon will be $20 trillion in debt, so prioritizing financial security is as important as protecting our nation's physical security.
    - Families all across America have made tough choice in recent years over tradeoffs about what they can and cannot afford, but the federal government has continued to spend taxpayer dollars without pause.
    - The President has instructed his Budget Director, Mick Mulvaney, to write a budget that rebuilds our nation's military, while also making tough choices for the American people.
    - This budget will insist on $54 billion in cuts to nondefense programs. The so-called "firewall" that protects lesser priorities from being used to pay for defense increases must go.
    - Foreign aid to other countries will be cut deeply. It is time to prioritize the security of this country and ask the rest of the world to step up and pay their fair share.
- Many government agencies will also experience cuts.
    - These cuts will be sensible, they will be rational, but they will be tough.
- That is what the moment calls for, and the President looks forward to engaging the Congress in passing his first security budget.

ObamaCare

- ObamaCare has delivered Americans an unsustainable health care system with out of control premiums, rising deductibles and dwindling choices.
- Nancy Pelosi cited three critical fronts on which ObamaCare's success should be judged: lowering costs, expanding benefits, and increasing access. The law has completely failed all three.
    - Costs:

        - Under ObamaCare, the American people face rising premiums, unaffordable deductibles, fewer insurance choices, and higher taxes to pay for skyrocketing costs.
        - This year, the average premium for ObamaCare insurance plans in all four tiers (bronze, silver, gold, platinum) are facing a double-digit increase.
    - Expanding Benefits:
        - Obamacare's mandates have led to mass cancellations of coverage, soaring out of pocket costs, and enrollment figures declining as millions choose to pay a tax over buying government mandated insurance.
    - Increased Access:
        - As insurers leave the marketplace, Americans are left with fewer insurance choices, with 17% having only one insurer option available in their exchange.
        - The ObamaCare Co-Op program has failed, with 16 of 23 co-ops having failed and gone out of business.
- We are confident that once Americans see the choice between this failed system that has had two terms under the last president to deliver but has been unable to and another choice for a patient-centered plan that will return choice to the American consumer, both with insurers and doctors, and bring back down costs from where they have skyrocketed to, they will support our effort to repeal and responsibly replace ObamaCare.

POTUS SCHEDULE

- Meeting with National Association of Attorneys General
- Signs H.R. 321 and H.R. 255
- Signs Executive Orders on WOTUS and HBCUs
- Visit with Guests of First Address to the Joint Session of Congress
- Addresses Joint Session of Congress

ADDITIONAL BACKGROUND ON RECENT NEWS

New Extreme Vetting EO

- As the President said at his press conference, we'll be issuing a new executive action that will comprehensively protect our country.
- The new executive order is being finalized - what we are doing now is running it through the different departments and agencies to ensure that it is executed in a flawless manner.
    - This is not a matter of delaying, it's a matter of getting it right.
- The court which made the misguided decision on the President's initial executive order had its decisions reversed by the Supreme Court a remarkable 79% between 2010 and 2015.

Anti-Semitic Attacks Against Jewish Community Centers and Cemeteries

- The President is deeply concerned by the reports of further vandalism at Jewish cemeteries.
- The cowardly destruction in Philadelphia this weekend comes on top of similar accounts from Missouri, and threats made to Jewish Community Centers across the country last week.
- The President continues to condemn these and any other anti-Semitic and hateful acts in the strongest terms.

- From our country's founding, we have been dedicated to protecting freedom of religion. No one in America should feel afraid to freely and openly follow the religion of their choosing.

White House Relationship with the Media

- Every time the media turns themselves into the story, the American people – among whom trust in the media remains near historical lows – roll their eyes.
- The truth is that this was simply a gaggle – not a full briefing – in a smaller space, and the pool was there to share what was said with their peers. The entire gaggle was also transcribed.
    - Background: A press pool is a rotating group of journalists from subscribing news organizations that pool resources and produce reports for all members to draw from in their reporting.
    - Further, we actually allowed more press in than usual for pooled events.
    - We could have kept it to the smaller pool, but instead expanded it as much as allowed by the space in the Press Secretary's office.
- It's completely false to suggest that outlets were "blocked." The media was represented by the pool, as it is in all situations when space or other factors limit the amount of press able to access an event.

False CNN Reporting

- The headlines and talking heads are completely ignoring the facts of this situation.
- The conversation, which centered entirely around the false New York Times report and was not related to any investigation, was initiated by the FBI, not the White House.
- Some reports have indicated communications between White House staff and the FBI might be inappropriate according to previous practice. However, those restrictions do not apply to conversations of public affairs.
- The Deputy Director of the FBI reached out, on his own, to the White House Chief of Staff to let him know that the New York Times report regarding contact between Russia and the Trump campaign was inaccurate. There was no "pressure" exerted on the FBI to push back on the story.
- It was the logical next step for the Chief of Staff to ask, once told that the story was false, what could be done to correct the record.
- The FBI said it would be appropriate for the Chief of Staff to say publicly that he had been briefed by intelligence officials at the highest level regarding the inaccuracy of the report.
    - Quote from the Chief of Staff: "I have talked to the highest levels of intelligence officials, and they have assured me that the New York Times story about constant contacts is grossly overstated and inaccurate. So I wouldn't come on your show and say something like that if I didn't have a green light and approval to say it. It's not true." – Fox & Friends (FNC), 2/17/17
- Just because reporters and anchors say something over and over again doesn't start to make it true. At some point, we get to a place where we have to move on and focus on the things that the American people actually care about. This has been asked and answered, let's move forward.

Liberal Activists at Town Halls

- Every American has a right to speak his or her mind at town halls or other events, and we respect that.
- Reports of lawmakers distancing themselves from the President are overblown and exaggerated.
- In a recent poll, 70% of Americans (including most Democrats) wanted Democrats in Washington to work with our Administration, not protest and oppose us at all turns. A vocal minority doesn't represent the majority.

Reporting on the Yemen Raid

- Every American owes Ryan Owens and his family a great deal of gratitude. He will always be remembered as an American hero who made the ultimate sacrifice in service of his country.
- It is standard operating procedure at the Department of Defense that, anytime there is a fatality on an operation, an investigation known as a 15-6 is triggered. It can take several months to complete and a redacted version is available to the public under FOIA.

White House Correspondent's Dinner

- POTUS Tweet: I will not be attending the White House Correspondents' Association Dinner this year. Please wish everyone well and have a great evening!
- The President's tweet speaks for itself. He wishes everyone who is attending well but will not be attending himself.
- The event was originally created for promoting scholarships for young journalists. It's lost that focus entirely and become just another chance for the dishonest media and professional Washington to celebrate themselves.

DHS Implementation Memos

Top Line:

- Department of Homeland Security Secretary Kelly issued two memoranda to the DHS workforce providing direction for implementing two of the President's executive orders: "Border Security and Immigration Improvement" and "Enhancing Public Safety in the Interior of the United States."
- These memos ensure that all DHS employees are intimately familiar with how to implement the President's executive orders, key stakeholders are in the loop and the public is well informed on the facts.
- These memos, along with fact sheets and Q&A documents, are easily accessible by both DHS staff and the general public at www.dhs.gov/executiveorders. This page will continue to be updated as appropriate.
- Ultimately, these memos direct DHS staff to faithfully execute the immigration laws of the United States and provide them with the appropriate resources to do so.
- Specific questions about these memos can be referred to DHS.

Border Security and Immigration Improvement Memo:

- This memo outlines how DHS will comply with the President's executive order by deploying all lawful means to secure the nation's southern border, prevent further illegal immigration into the United States, and to repatriate illegal immigrations swiftly, consistently, and humanely.
- This memo does not affect DACA recipients.
- Key policies in this memo include:
    - Establishing operational control of the border, including a physical barrier
    - Detaining illegal immigrants at our near the border
    - Ending the practice of "catch and release"
    - Hiring 5,000 additional border agents
    - Empowering state and local law enforcement to support federal enforcement of immigration law
    - Ensuring prosecution guidelines place a high priority on crimes near our southern border

Enhancing Public Safety in the Interior of the United States Memo:

- This memo addresses enforcement and removal of those who illegally enter or remain in the United States, particularly those who engage in criminal conduct while here.
- Key policies in this memo include:
    - Establishing the Victims of Immigration Crime Engagement (VOICE) Office within ICE to facilitate engagement with the victims and their families to ensure, to the extent permitted by law, they are provided with information about the offender, and that their additional questions and concerns regarding immigration enforcement efforts are addressed.
    - Hiring 10,000 ICE agents and officers, as well as additional mission support and legal staff necessary
    - Establishing a program to collect all fines and penalties for which the Department is authorized
    - Facilitating the collection and reporting of data on the apprehensions and release of illegal immigrations

Appointment of Lieutenant General Herbert Raymond "H.R." McMaster to serve as Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs

Top Line:

- General McMaster – known by his nickname, "The Iconoclast General" -- brings over three decades of experience to the post of National Security Advisor.
- The President's first duty is to keep the American people safe. General McMaster has the knowledge and foresight necessary to provide the President with expert advice as he protects America's interests at home and abroad.
- Bio:
    - General McMaster is a graduate of West Point and earned both his Masters of Arts and Ph.D degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
    - During his over three decades in the United States Army, General McMaster gained renown for his roles in the Gulf War, Operation Iraqi Freedom, and Operation Enduring Freedom.
    - He was a Captain in the Battle of 73 Easting, a critical engagement during which outnumbered American forces took advantage of superior military equipment and the element of surprise to destroy over 80 Iraqi Republican Guard vehicles without a single loss.
    - While serving during the Iraq War, General McMaster ran the model for the successful "clear, hold, and build" counterinsurgency method in the town of Tal Afar, a strategy credited with turning the war around during the surge.
    - General McMaster earned the Silver Star for his valor during the Gulf War.

Quote from President Trump:

- "General McMaster has served with distinction in the United States Army for over three decades and will now bring that tremendous experience with him to his new post as my National Security Advisor. My first duty as President is to keep the American people safe. General McMaster has the knowledge and foresight necessary to provide me with expert advice as we work to protect America's interests at home and abroad. I am pleased to welcome him to our team."

Quote from General McMaster:

- "I am honored to serve as President Trump's National Security Advisor. The safety of the American people and security of the American homeland are our top priorities. I will work tirelessly in this new role to assist the President as he addresses the complex and growing threats our country is facing around the globe."

President Trump Inherited a Mess

- During his press conference on Thursday, President Trump explained that he "inherited a mess... As you know, our administration inherited many problems across government, and across the economy." Here are the facts:
- Economy
    - The economy grew by just 1.6 percent last year, and President Obama did not have a single year of 3+ percent economic growth.
    - President Obama was the first president since Herbert Hoover to not have at least one year of economic growth of 3 percent or higher.
    - Wage growth was stagnant under President Obama. The median U.S. hourly wage only increased by 34 cents, or 1.8 percent while he was in office. Salaries and benefits rose just 2.2 percent.
    - The nation lost over 200,000 manufacturing jobs under President Obama.
    - The homeownership rate decreased under President Obama and hit a five-decade low last year.
    - On President Obama's watch, the national debt increased by over 88 percent, a total of $9.3 trillion.
- Healthcare
    - Obamacare is a mess, with higher costs and fewer choices.
    - Premiums for Obamacare's mid-level "Silver" plans are increasing by an average of 25 percent this year, coming on top of the 7.5 percent increase for 2016.
    - Lower level "Bronze" plans are facing premium increases of 21 percent this year.
    - As many as 8.4 million Americans will see a sharp rise in premiums this year, according to HHS.
    - Deductibles are rising, so consumers have to pay more before their insurance even kicks in.
    - Taxpayers are paying billions for skyrocketing premium subsidies.
- Foreign Policy
    - The Obama administration's foreign policy left the world in disorder: from the disastrous nuclear deal with Iran to the failed Russian reset to the humanitarian crisis in Syria.
    - According to former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, there are more safe havens for terrorists "than at any time in history."
    - President Obama failed to foresee and counter the rise of ISIS, which he famously called a "JV Team."
    - North Korea became a more dangerous threat to their region and the world.
- Disunity
    - Race relations deteriorated under President Obama, with polls showing that "both blacks and whites believe race relations have deteriorated." (AP)

PROFILE

SHORT BACKGROUND: Harrell & Chambliss LLP, formerly Wilder & Gregory, is a full service minority owned law firm founded in 1982 by former Virginia Governor L. Douglas Wilder and Judge Roger L. Gregory of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. The Firm has ten (10) lawyers who have the professional depth and the technical support necessary to provide the highest caliber of legal services. The Firm is engaged in the general practice of law with a diverse client base that includes several large corporations and public sector entities.

OVERVIEW OF FIRM PRACTICE

PUBLIC FINANCE AND STRUCTURED FINANCE TRANSACTIONS: Harrell & Chambliss LLP offers extensive experience in public finance and structured finance transactions. In 1991, the Firm was the first minority-owned law firm in Virginia with the distinction of being listed among the municipal bond law firms in The Bond Buyer's Municipal Marketplace (the "Red Book"). The Firm also provides legal services in connection with structured finance securities transactions.

BANKING: The Firm provides advice and counsel with respect to matters concerning banking regulations (state and federal), employment issues, commercial transactions, creditors' rights and bankruptcy in its general counsel representation of a full service bank in Richmond and other representation of financial institutions.

CORPORATE/BUSINESS and TAX: Business services include consulting with clients concerning organizational structure, drafting and revising articles of incorporation and bylaws, advising corporations on duties and liabilities of directors and officers, preparation of documents relating to Subchapter S election, stock subscriptions and shareholder agreements and other matters relating to business operations, negotiation of contracts and sale of a business. The tax practice of the Firm is made up of a diverse group of clients with interesting and challenging issues and transactions. In many instances, the work performed by the Firm's tax practice is performed concurrently with the services provided in the Business Service area, the Real Estate Service area and the Public Finance Service area of the Firm.

CONTRACT, PROCUREMENT and EDUCATION SERVICES: Attorneys at H&C have extensive experience in assisting clients with drafting and reviewing contracts and procurement transactions, education legal services in school board and administration matters, education related litigation, worker's compensation, transactions and in numerous other matters.

COMMERCIAL LITIGATION AND INSURANCE DEFENSE: H&C's trial attorneys have substantial experience in various areas of specialized litigation and routinely appear in Federal and state courts throughout Virginia. The Firm has over ten years experience in defending auto, general liability and worker's compensation claims. The Firm represents several companies in insurance defense litigation and has previously handled product liability litigation for corporations and other similar types of disputes.

REAL ESTATE: H&C's real estate attorneys have extensive experience in real estate acquisition, development, financing and disposition services on behalf of municipal and business clients. In the Firm's representation of all of its clients, H&C has provided a broad range of real estate law services, including residential and commercial closings and foreclosures, performance of title searches, legal negotiations for the acquisition or sale of properties and preparation of financing instruments and agreements.

EDUCATION LAW: The Firm has served as general counsel to the Richmond City Public Schools for nearly twenty years. In the last seven years, the Firm has committed itself to growing this practice area, and now serves as general counsel and/or regularly provides legal services to more than fifteen public school districts and private schools in the Commonwealth of Virginia. The practice includes all forms of representation for school districts, including, but not limited to, matters regarding employment, students, special education, policy, real estate, public procurement, general governance and matters impacting public bodies, such as the Virginia Freedom of Information Act.

EMPLOYMENT LAW: The Firm's attorneys regularly represent corporate clients involved in employment litigation in federal and state courts and advise clients with respect to labor and employment related matters. The firm's practice covers the wide spectrum of labor and employment litigation, arbitration, and administrative practice before the EEOC.

ADMINISTRATIVE/LEGISLATIVE: Clients frequently call upon H&C to advise them with regard to the Freedom of Information Act, Conflicts of Interest Act, Administrative Process Act, Privacy Protection Act and Virginia Public Procurement Act as well as federal and state laws relating to real estate and employment.

RESUME

CAPACITY AND RESOURCES

Harrell & Chambliss LLP ("H&C" or the "Firm") is a full service minority-owned law firm founded in 1982 by minority attorneys, The Honorable L. Douglas Wilder, former Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia and The Honorable Roger L. Gregory. In January 2001, the Firm's name changed due to the appointment of our partner Roger L. Gregory to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. The Firm's offices are located in Downtown Richmond, Virginia and in Newport News, Virginia. The Firm currently has ten (10) attorneys. The Firm is engaged in the general practice of law with a diverse client base that includes several large corporations, nationally recognized insurers, nationally recognized non-profits and foundations and public sector entities.

The Firm has access to a full range of resources such as Westlaw, an internet legal research system, and other subscription services, such as the Federal Taxation of Municipal Bonds Deskbooks, which provides us with the most up-to-date information in all areas of the law.

H&C has a Microsoft NT File Server with dual drives and a Microsoft Exchange Server. The Firm utilizes Microsoft Word to create all documents, legal memoranda and correspondence generated by the Firm. Our software programs include Microsoft Windows, Microsoft Office Professional, Microsoft Outlook, Microsoft Excel and Microsoft PowerPoint, Abacus Case Management Software, Timeslips and Billing. Our case management software tracks clients, schedules appointments, reminders, etc. and manages files, matters, cases and documents. H&C's automated time and billing and case management systems are responsible for timekeeping and billing, management reporting, trust accounting, conflict avoidance, general ledger and accounts payable for the Firm. H&C maintains easy access for clients by providing e-mail access through all of its employee computer terminals in the office and internet access for all employees to obtain more and easier information in serving our clients.

GENERAL FIRM PRACTICE DESCRIPTION

Harrell & Chambliss LLP (the “Firm” or “H&C”) has the professional depth and the technical support necessary to provide the highest caliber of legal services in the areas of corporate and business law, public finance and structured securities finance transactions, contracts and procurement, banking, commercial litigation, insurance defense, personal injury defense, tax law, commercial real estate transactions, municipal law, commercial law, public utilities law, acquisitions, estate planning and administration, eminent domain, administrative/legislative services, administrative law, telecommunications, information technology, foreclosure, creditors' rights and bankruptcy, civil litigation, labor, housing law, education law, employment and personnel matters.

Public Finance and Structured Transactions Services

H&C has extensive experience in debt and revenue financings. Since 1991, the Firm has been listed among municipal bond law firms in The Bond Buyer's Municipal Marketplace, formerly known as The Bond Buyer's Directory of Municipal Bond Dealers of the United States (the "Red Book"). H&C’s municipal and public finance experience extends to numerous areas, including airports, general obligation financings for traditional municipal projects, housing, health care financings, university financings and industrial development. The Firm's lead attorney for public finance and structured transactions services, Nancy Griffin Chambliss, Co-Managing Partner of the Firm, has over twenty-five (25) years of experience in public finance transactions as bond, underwriter’s and issuer’s counsel in bond financings for issuers in various states.

Bond Counsel Experience. H&C attorneys have served as bond counsel or issuer's counsel in financings for numerous local issuers and housing authorities in Virginia, for several state or inter-jurisdiction issuers in Virginia and in Maryland and West Virginia, Massachusetts, District of Columbia, South Carolina, Florida and Pennsylvania. The Firm's attorneys have represented numerous financial institutions, companies, partnerships, developers and individuals in connection with tax-exempt financings. During the period 2010-2012, the Firm has completed over 20 debt issuance transactions in the issuance of over $1.9 billion of tax-exempt and taxable bonds. Attorneys in the Firm have participated as bond counsel, co-bond counsel, underwriters’ counsel, disclosure counsel and issuer’s counsel in over $9 billion of tax-exempt and taxable bond transactions.

Attorneys in the Firm have worked on financings involving complex and innovative financings techniques, including forward purchase obligations, interest rate swap transactions, auction rate and commercial paper financings, FHMLC/mortgage-backed pass through securities, FHA multi-family mortgage programs, variable interest rate financings, bond financings involving collaterized and uncollaterized letters of credit and other credit enhancements, bond financings insured by municipal bond insurers such as MBIA, AMBAC and FGIC and bond financings involving syndications.

Firm Affiliation. In 1990, H&C and Lewis & Munday, Detroit, Michigan ("L&M"), formed an affiliation for the practice of public finance law. In addition to Richmond and Detroit, L&M has partnership/affiliate offices in Washington, D.C., Seattle, Chicago and Atlanta (collectively, the "Partnership"). The work of the Partnership in public finance law has been extensive nationally.

Structured Securities Transactions. H&C serves as co-legal advisor to Government National Mortgage Association (“Ginnie Mae”) to provide legal advisor services in connection with its multiclass securities program. The Firm provides such services as part of Ginnie Mae’s legal advisor team in connection with the issuance of over $14 billion of Ginnie Mae Guaranteed REMIC Pass-Through Securities and MX Securities.

Representative financings of attorneys at H&C, as bond counsel, co-bond counsel, underwriter’s, issuer's counsel, legal advisor with respect to taxable and tax-exempt revenue bonds and structured securities, are set forth in the Appendix.

Banking Services

H&C provides its financial institution clients with advice and counsel with respect to matters concerning banking regulations (state and federal), employment issues, commercial transactions, estate issues, creditors' rights and bankruptcy, foreclosure, collection and civil litigation as well as any other legal matter that H&C is requested to address for clients. As co-counsel to Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority ("RRHA"), the Firm has developed the loan documents for RRHA's various loan programs. Additionally, H&C has represented the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") and SAMDA Contractors and represents RRHA in the real estate lending it makes to commercial and residential borrowers.

Corporate/Business Services

The Firm represents a diverse group of business clients in a full array of corporate/business transactions. Additionally, the Firm has been successful in developing a business practice, which spans from start up businesses to the representation of financial institutions. The Firm’s lead attorney for business services, Adam N. Harrell, Jr., Co-Managing Partner of the Firm, has over twenty (20) years of experience in representing corporate and business clients. The emphasis of the Firm's business practice is in providing general business and planning assistance to its clients, including closely held and publicly owned entities, non-profit and tax-exempt organizations, churches and individuals. H&C has assisted its municipal and business clients including Southside Community Development and Housing Corporation ("SCDHC") in the formation and operation of subsidiary corporations and partnerships as well as the syndication of limited partnership interests in connection with the purchase, acquisition and ownership of multifamily residential rental housing developments. Two (2) projects in which such expertise was necessary are SCDHC's acquisition of the 1286 unit residential rental development, Southside Village Apartments and New Chicago Avenue Associates, L.P.'s acquisition and rehabilitation of Chicago Manor apartments located in Richmond, Virginia.

Entities – Commercial, Non-profit and Churches. H&C's business services include consulting with clients concerning the organizational structure of businesses, preparing entity documents for businesses, preparing and negotiating contracts for businesses and providing legal advice to businesses as to how they can best serve the needs of their clients. The Firm advises businesses on the duties, responsibilities and liabilities of owners and principals and other matters that arise in the on going operations of the businesses. The Firm attends annual meetings and other periodic meetings of the clients, as requested. The Firm represents clients in the sale of assets of a business or in any merger, acquisition or consolidation that affects their business. The Firm represents its clients in any other business matter that involves legal implications against the business, non-profit organization or individual. The Firm has advised churches in connection with all forms of property acquisitions and transactions and any legal exposure that may exist because of the transaction. The Firm provides legal advice regarding the expansion of church ministries and initiatives under the umbrella of the church and within the realm of the tax-exempt purpose of the church.

Telecommunication and Information Technology Services. H&C has advised clients with respect to open access and internet service matters. The Firm's attorneys have experience in drafting and negotiating computer contracts for the purchase or sale of hardware, software and other services incident thereto.

Tax Services

The tax practice of the Firm is made up of a diverse group of clients with interesting and challenging issues and transactions. The Firm's lead attorney for tax services, Gerald W.S. Carter, a partner in the Firm, has over ten (10) years of experience in representing clients in diverse tax matters. Before joining H&C in 1992, Mr. Carter attended New York University School of Law's Graduate Tax Program and obtained his Masters of Law Degree in Taxation.

In many instances, the work performed by the Firm's tax practice is performed concurrently with the services provided in the Business Service area, the Real Estate

Service area and the Public Finance Service area of the Firm. This usually stems from the advice given to closely held and publicly owned clients, non-profit and tax-exempt entities, churches and individuals where the essence of their transaction is tax driven or requires a detail tax analysis to determine the economics of the contemplated transaction.

In the formation of entities for business clients, H&C advises clients of the tax implications of the entities formed and the contemplated transaction or transactions of the business and what to expect based on the use of the chosen entity and transaction or transactions implemented. The services provided in the Firm's tax practice include tax matters relating to commercial and real estate transactions, formation and organizational structure of entities, tax implications of bankruptcy transactions, mergers, acquisitions and consolidations of businesses, sale of assets of businesses, administrative tax proceedings and appeals, tax litigation, estate planning, estate administration, non-profit and tax-exempt organizations, churches and public finance issues and transactions.

The Firm's tax practice was established in 1992 and has grown substantially since its formation. The tax practice has enabled the Firm to become more well-rounded in the legal services H&C provides to clients and better tooled and equipped to meet the needs and challenges of clients today and in the future. Our tax practice is an emerging area in the Firm and we expect it to continue to grow well into the twenty-first century.

Litigation Services

The Firm's trial attorneys have substantial experience in various areas of specialized litigation and routinely appear in Federal and state courts throughout Virginia. The litigation team has over thirty years of combined litigation and trial experience. Our trial attorneys' experience includes not only actual trial preparation and work, such as preparing and filing appropriate pleadings (including the appropriate memoranda of law and briefs), conducting discovery, evaluating investigative materials, arranging for independent medical examinations as required and preparing for trial and trying cases, but also providing advice and consultation with clients during all phases of the judicial process. In addition, the Firm's attorneys are familiar with and actively encourage the use of Alternative Dispute Resolution techniques such as mediation and arbitration.

The Firm's litigation attorneys handle in excess of 200 files on an annual basis. In over eighty percent (80%) of these matters, the Firm represents the defendant or one of the defendants in active litigation. A significant percentage of these cases settle, generally after aggressive and vigorous discovery. Of the litigation matters handled by the Firm's litigation team, approximately eighty-five percent (85%) settled prior to the commencement of trial. As a result of the solid representation provided by the Firm's litigation team, each of the Firm's litigation attorneys in past years actually tried between eight (8) to ten (10) cases to a jury verdict on an annual basis.

Generally, the cases handled by the Firm's litigation team consist of civil litigation matters from the Firm's financial institution clients, the defense of automobile accident claims, premises liability claims, wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution claims, product liability matters, workers' compensation claims, employment and labor claims, eminent domain claims, contractual claims and commercial claims.

Insurance and Personal Injury. H&C has considerable experience in representing both plaintiffs and defendants in personal injury claims. The Firm's practice includes personal injury, property damage and insurance coverage and liability questions of all types. At the present time, the Firm represents State Farm Insurance, Kemper Insurance, Companion Property & Casualty, Grocers Insurance and other insurers defending civil litigation. The Firm has also represented a number of public bodies and their employees, including Richmond City Public Schools, RRHA and the City of Richmond.

Labor and Equal Employment. The Firm's attorneys regularly represent clients involved in labor litigation and advise clients with respect to labor and employment related matters. The Firm's practice covers the wide spectrum of labor and employment litigation, arbitration, mediation and administrative practice before the EEOC and applicable Courts and tribunals and providing legal advice in this area. Additionally, the Firm represents clients in worker's compensation claims and has appeared numerous times before the Workers' Compensation Commission in connection with such claims.

General Tort and Product Liability. H&C handles numerous tort claims. The Firm has previously defended manufacturers in product liability claims and numerous other related disputes.

Education Services

H&C has extensive experience in representing one of largest public school divisions in the Commonwealth of Virginia, the City of Richmond Public Schools. H&C also has provided representation to more than fifteen public school districts and private schools in the Commonwealth of Virginia, including the Carroll County, Montgomery County, Hanover County, Poquoson City, Hopewell City, King William County, Fauquier County, Mecklenburg County, Prince William County, New Kent County, Alexandria City, Louisa County, and Henrico County Public Schools, as well as the Mountain Vista Regional Governor's School and The Steward School. The Firm's lead attorney for education services is Jonnell Lilly in providing legal advice and opinions concerning matters relating to the affairs of the school systems together with attendance at meetings of the school boards and their various committees. The Firm provides advice on the application of the Virginia Freedom of Information Act, the Virginia Public Procurement Act, and other state and federal laws pertaining to public elementary and secondary education and employment, including the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and No Child Left Behind. Additionally, we draft, prepare and revise contracts and other legal documents and prosecute or defend legal and administrative proceedings in state and federal courts, and before governmental agencies or units such as the Virginia Employment Commission, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Office of Civil Rights.

H&C monitors state and federal legislation relating to education issues and its attorneys attend and present at education law conferences to stay abreast of the latest trends. The Firm has extensive experience in providing advice and counsel with respect to relevant state and federal regulations, statutes and court decisions relating to special education, and FAPE standards and represents the school division in due process hearings and other proceedings.

Attorneys at H&C have extensive experience in providing education legal services in contract and procurement transactions, education related litigation, worker's compensation matters and business transactions and in numerous other education matters.

Creditors' Rights, Bankruptcy and Foreclosure Services

Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy. Along with representing financial institutions, H&C has been successful in developing a solid Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy practice. H&C has invested a great deal of time in developing expertise in the Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy area. As counsel to our financial institution clients, H&C represents them in all matters pertaining to Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy and Commercial Litigation. Further, H&C represents RRHA, a political subdivision of the Commonwealth dedicated to residential rehabilitation and the development of affordable housing and commercial real estate, in many areas of Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy. H&C has represented the RTC in various practice areas, including Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy and Commercial Litigation

Foreclosures. H&C attorneys have experience in loan workouts and foreclosures of multifamily residential rental housing developments. Additionally, H&C has been certified as a foreclosure commissioner by the Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") and has conducted numerous foreclosure sales of multifamily residential rental housing developments. H&C handles all of the foreclosures for Consolidated and RRHA and assists Consolidated and RRHA with workouts under its numerous loan programs. Moreover, H&C represents numerous financial institutions including Premier Bank and SunTrust Bank and personal lenders where it is called upon to assist its clients with workouts and non-judicial foreclosures. H&C's real estate attorneys have extensive experience in conducting non-judicial foreclosures. Furthermore, H&C has conducted numerous non-judicial foreclosure sales for the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") Atlanta Office as well as other RTC offices and SAMDA Contractors.

Real Estate Services

H&C real estate attorneys have extensive experience in real estate acquisition, development, financing and disposition services on behalf of municipal and business clients. The Firm has experience in eminent domain law, principally through its representation of RRHA, the Commonwealth of Virginia (Virginia Department of Transportation), the Virginia Biotechnology Research Park Authority (the "Biotech Park Authority") and the Greater Richmond Convention Center Authority. The Firm is co-counsel to the RRHA and the Biotech Park Authority, which entities undertake a substantial volume of development and redevelopment projects in the City of Richmond. The Firm also is counsel to Petersburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority which is undertaking significant development and redevelopment projects in the City of Petersburg.

The Firm is general counsel to the Southside Community Development and Housing Corporation ("SCDHC"). SCDHC has been involved with many significant and sophisticated real estate development and multifamily residential real estate transactions in Richmond's Southside area over the past ten (10) years. The Firm has been involved with SCDHC from its formation.

In the Firm's representation of all of its clients, H&C has provided a broad range of real estate law services, including residential and commercial closings and foreclosures, performance of title searches, legal negotiations for the acquisition or sale of properties and preparation of financing instruments and agreements.

Administrative/Legislative Services

H&C serves as general counsel to RRHA and the Biotech Park and as such our lawyers attend the respective meetings of the Boards of Commissioners. As general counsel we advise our clients as to matters of federal and state law applicable to their various programs and operations. These clients frequently call upon H&C to advise them with regard to the Freedom of Information Act, Conflicts of Interest Act, Administrative Process Act, Privacy Protection Act and Virginia Public Procurement Act as well as federal and state laws relating to real estate entities, securities, and employment. In addition to developing the documents for RRHA loan programs, H&C advises RRHA regarding federal and state law relating to mortgage lending and housing such as Truth-in-Lending, RESPA and fair housing legislation. H&C also provides such advice to its financial institution clients. Further, H&C has extensive experience in residential and commercial real estate closings.

The Firm's attorneys practice regularly before state agencies, including the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Workers' Compensation Commission of Virginia and the State Corporation Commission. H&C also assists professional organizations, business trade groups and individual business entities in developing strategies for interfacing with the Virginia General Assembly, public service commissions, local government officials and various interest groups. In addition, H&C monitors proposed legislation by the Virginia General Assembly. The Firm digests, analyzes and disseminates to the client such proposals relevant to the client's interests.

The Firm provides legal advice and opinions concerning matters relating to the affairs of public bodies together with attendance at meetings and conferences relating to those matters. Our attorneys attend board meetings, draft, prepare and revise contracts and other legal documents. Additionally, we prosecute or defend legal actions or arbitration proceedings, including judicial, administrative or other proceedings before governmental agencies or units.

Real Estate Projects for Housing Authorities in Virginia

McGuireWoods has extensive experience representing public housing authorities on real estate-related transactions. We currently serve as general counsel or counsel to the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority, Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, and Hampton Redevelopment and Housing Authority on various real estate-related projects. These projects have included multifamily and single-family housing projects, mixed-income projects and mixed-use projects, as well as funding from numerous sources, including HOPE VI grants, Federal Home Loan Bank funds, private financing (bridge, construction and permanent), equity from the sale of various tax credits, grant funds and loans from local governmental entities, funding from VHDA, HOME funds and CIP funds. We have also assisted with land assemblage and condemnation matters. Further, in the past we have also represented the Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority and the Petersburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority. We also represent similar organizations outside of Virginia, including the Housing Authority of Cook County, Ill.

As a result of McGuireWoods' representation of public housing authorities on real estate-related projects like those referenced above, the firm has vast experience drafting and negotiating the various documentation required and assisting our public housing authority clients with establishing ownership and financing structures. In addition, the firm has extensive experience working with HUD, VHDA and local governmental entities to identify and obtain all of the approvals required for these types of projects. Finally, the firm understands and appreciates the array of legal and political issues involved, and we have a proven track record of working with our public housing authority clients to resolve those issues.

Representative Projects

Baltimore County, Maryland. McGuireWoods represented a developer in the acquisition and redevelopment of a 200-unit affordable development in Baltimore County. The project was financed in part by the issuance of short-term tax-exempt bonds and a long-term taxable 221(d)(4) insured loan, low-income housing tax credits, and a housing assistance project based voucher contract that was restructured through the RAD-2 program. Alan Sun was lead counsel on this transaction and the firm's work included: (i) reviewing and negotiating HUD required evidentiary documents and the RAD required documentation; (ii) reviewing tax credit equity documents; (iii) reviewing and negotiating tax-exempt bond documents and verifying compliance with the tax-exempt bond documents; (iv) reviewing construction contracts and proposed construction and operating budgets; (v) negotiating and drafting a payment in lieu of taxes agreement; (vi) reviewing property management agreements; (vii) coordinating closing with HUD; and (viii) rendering the required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions.

Howard County, Maryland. Bond counsel for bonds issued by a housing authority that financed the refinance of the acquisition and a portion of the construction of approximately 60 mixed-income units and the portion of the costs of improvements to 50 public housing units that were being transitioned to the RAD program. The firm's work included: (i) drafting all required bond and tax documents; (ii) drafting disclosure documents and reviewing compliance with disclosure requirements; (iii) conducting tax due diligence and drafting tax compliance agreement; (iv) reviewing housing authority financial statements and outstanding indebtedness for disclosure; and (v) rendering all required opinions.

Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Townes at River South Project. This project consisted of 161 multifamily, mixed-income units constructed on a former public housing site as part of RRHA's HOPE VI Project. The project was constructed in two phases and was financed with HOPE VI grant funds, tax credit equity, Federal Home Loan Bank funds and private financing (bridge, construction and permanent). The firm's work on both phases included: (i) assisting RRHA in obtaining disposition approvals from HUD; (ii) assisting RRHA with structuring the ownership entities for each phase; (iii) preparing and negotiating a development agreement with RRHA's development partner for each phase; (iv) preparing and negotiating required HOPE VI evidentiary documents for each phase; (v) submitting required HOPE VI evidentiary documents to HUD for each phase; (vi) reviewing and negotiating construction and permanent loan documents for each phase; (vii) preparing and negotiating loan documents for RRHA loans to the ownership entities for each phase; (viii) reviewing and negotiating tax credit equity documents for each phase; (ix) preparing and negotiating ground leases for each phase; (x) reviewing and negotiating construction contracts and architectural agreements for each phase; (xi) rendering required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions for each phase; and (xii) preparing and reviewing property management agreements for each phase.

Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Fulton Village II Project. This project consisted of 26 single-family units designated for sale to purchasers with area median incomes of 50-115 percent and constituted the final phase of the off-site for-sale component of RRHA's HOPE VI Project. The units in this project are to be constructed by the developer over a two-year period, subject to market demand. Construction of the units is financed through a combination of private financing and HOPE VI grant funds. The firm's work on this project included: (i) assisting RRHA with structuring the transaction; (ii) preparing and negotiating a development agreement with RRHA's development partner; (iii) assisting RRHA with addressing title and environmental issues with respect to the project site; (iv) preparing and negotiating required HOPE VI evidentiary documents, including, without limitation, documents evidencing the HOPE VI subsidies to be provided to each qualified purchaser; (v) submitting required HOPE VI evidentiary documents to HUD and submittal of required real estate documents to HUD's field office; (vi) reviewing developer's construction loan documents; (vii) preparing and negotiating a ground lease for the project site; (viii) preparing form conveyance documents to be used to convey completed units to purchasers; (ix) preparing and negotiating covenants, conditions and restrictions for the project; and (x) rendering the required HUD opinion for closing.

Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Chatham Square Project. This project consisted of 100 for-sale market-rate units and 52 assisted units and constituted the on-site component of ARHA's HOPE VI Project. The proceeds from the sale by ARHA to its development partner of the property for the 100 for-sale market-rate units was used to finance a portion of the cost of constructing the 52 assisted units. The other sources for funding the construction of the 52 assisted units were HOPE VI grant funds, private financing and tax credit equity. The firm's work included: (i) reviewing and negotiating HUD required evidentiary documents; (ii) reviewing and negotiating tax credit equity documents; (iii) reviewing and negotiating loan documents; (iv) reviewing and negotiating construction contracts; (v) reviewing proposed construction and operating budgets; (vi) negotiating required guarantees; (vii) reviewing and negotiating a Master Declaration for project; (viii) reviewing and negotiating property management agreements; (ix) coordinating closing with HUD; and (x) rendering the required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions.

Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Glebe Park and James Bland Project. This project consists of a multiphase, multiyear redevelopment of two of ARHA's public housing projects. To date, three of seven phases have closed. The firm's work has thus far included: (i) preparing and negotiating a pre-development agreement; (ii) preparing and negotiating a master purchase, sale and development agreement; (iii) assisting ARHA with structuring the overall transaction; (iv) preparing conveyance documents for each phase; (v) addressing title and survey issues for each phase; (vi) reviewing project budgets and schedules; (vii) preparing and negotiating project guarantees and guarantees for each phase; (viii) reviewing and negotiating a Master Declaration and condominium documents for the project; (ix) reviewing tax credit equity solicitations and proposals; (x) reviewing and negotiating construction and architect agreements; and (xi) reviewing and negotiating loan documents with the city and other funding sources.

Tax Exempt Bond Financing

Our attorneys are public finance experts and assist and advise the entire spectrum of participants in of bond issues, including qualified 501(c)(3) bonds, residential rental bonds, including 4% LIHTC credit transactions, and other types of bond issues (including tax increment financing) that can be used to develop housing. We regularly serve as counsel to owners, lenders, bond purchasers, borrowers, whether for-profit developers or non-profit entities, issuers, underwriters, and banks in the entire range of tax-exempt bond transactions.

Nonprofit Organizations

We represent a number of tax-exempt organizations throughout the country whose missions are to promote affordable housing. We assist in the formation of the entities; in the representation of the entities throughout the application process, which has included appearing before the IRS; and in the continued representation of those organizations in structuring joint ventures with other nonprofit organizations and for-profit developers. We also have experience responding to IRS audits of these organizations.

Workouts Involving Tax Credit Transactions

We also represent clients in workouts and foreclosures involving tax credit and tax-exempt bond transactions. We work with all parties involved in a transaction including lenders, developers and equity investors, and offer structured solutions to under-performing or non-performing LIHTC developments. We often restructure the financing and ownership of these transactions, as well as communicate with the appropriate allocating agencies to obtain consents and other relief from them. We represent trustees, bondholders and borrowers in tax-exempt bond workouts. We also deal with foreclosures, receiverships and deed-in-lieu of foreclosure matters, and provide post-transition compliance advice.

Other Subsidy Programs

In addition to the LIHTC program, we are experienced in most subsidized housing programs, including those involving tax-exempt financing. We represent both developers as well as the implementing governmental agencies. We provide the advice and expertise necessary to allow all parties to maximize the investment in the housing development, while minimizing the adverse effects, including tax consequences to investors, which can be associated with some subsidies.

We assist clients in state and federal subsidy programs, including but not limited to HOME Funds, AHP grants, §221(d)(4), §221(d)(3), HOPE and HUD programs. We represent developers in connection with these subsidy programs, which includes assisting them throughout the application process, dealing with the applicable agency or other entities, and providing compliance advice, and governmental agencies in awarding such subsidies.

OGC friends,
Was wondering if you could expedite the eDiscovery searches related to Shermichael Singleton. Since there are several and they are assigned for my personal review, I would like to get a read on the scope and plan my resources accordingly. Sandy, can you send Nina the FOIA request numbers so we make sure we are capturing the right ones? Thank you!

Dear Mr. O'Connor:

This letter is an interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated February 19, 2017. Your request was received in the Department's FOIA Branch on February 21, 2017. You asked for copies of all forms, questionnaires, or similar documents completed by Shermichael Singleton from January 23, 2017, to February 16, 2017, as part of the vetting process for political appointees and single copies of any similar records for any other political appointees.

Your request is granted in part. Enclosed are copies of the releasable portions records pertaining to Shermichael Singleton. I am withholding Mr. Singleton's personal information under FOIA Exemption 6. Exemption 6 protects information that would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. The interest of the general public in reviewing these portions of government documents does not outweigh the individuals' right to privacy.

The Department is still conducting a search for records pertaining to the singles copies of any similar records for any other political appointees. Appeal rights will be provided to you in the Department's final response letter.

For your information, your FOIA request, including your identity and any information made available, is releasable to the public under subsequent FOIA requests. In responding to these requests, the Department does not release personal information, such as home address, telephone number, or Social Security number, all of which are protected from disclosure under FOIA Exemption 6.

If you have any questions regarding your request, please contact Mrs. Sandra J. Wright at (202) 402-5510. Thank you for your interest in the Department's programs and policies.

Sincerely,

Helen Goff Foster
Chief Administrative Officer

FOIA Control No.: 17-FI-HQ-00634

Dear Ms. Dillion:

This letter is in response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated and received February 9, 2017. You asked for all records (including emails and other communications, memos, and any other document) related to the recommendation, selection, and hiring of Lynne Patton, who is serving as Senior Advisor and Director of the Office of Public Liaison.

Your request is granted in part. Enclosed are copies of the records you have requested. I am withholding Ms. Patton's home address, cell phone number, personal email address, Social Security number, date of birth, and personal information from her resume under FOIA Exemption 6. Exemption 6 protects information that would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. The interest of the general public in reviewing these portions of government documents does not outweigh the individuals' right to privacy.

I am the official responsible for this determination based on information provided by the Department's Office of General Counsel. You may appeal this determination within 90 days from the date of this letter. If you decide to appeal, your appeal should include copies of your original request and this response, as well as discussion of the reasons supporting the appeal. With regard to FOIA Exemption 6, your appeal should address the nature of the overriding public interest in disclosure that outweighs the personal privacy interest protected by the exemption. The envelope should be plainly marked to indicate that it contains a FOIA appeal and addressed to:

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
Attention: FOIA Appeals
Office of Ethics, Appeals and Personnel Law
Ethics and Appeals Division
451 Seventh Street, SW, Room 2130
Washington, DC 20410
Telephone: (202) 708-3815

You may also submit your appeal online at:
http://:portal.hud.gov/hudportal/HUD?src=/program_office/administration/foia/foiaappeals.

In addition, you may contact the Office of Government Information Services (OGIS) at the National Archives and Records Administration to inquire about the FOIA mediation services they offer. The contact information for OGIS is as follows:

Action Items, activities of note or issues for the coming week

From General Deputy Assistant Secretary, Cliff Taffet

- Work begins on the renovation of the OBGA/OAHP space in HQ.
- Mid-year employee progress review period is underway, running through May 15.
- Written Congressional Justifications (CJs) for the FY 2018 budget are due to OCFO as per the following schedule:
  - Accounts with no eliminations or policy changes – Due April 10
  - Accounts with significant edits or policy changes, core rental assistance programs, S&E accounts, IT Fund, WCF – Due April 13

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Operations, Lori Michalski
Some Highlights from the Field

Anchorage Field Office

- On April 11, the Anchorage CPD Director will participate in a program-related session to discuss CDBG opportunities and program possibilities for a dilapidated high-rise in downtown Fairbanks, Alaska. Staff from Senator Murkowski's Office and several Federal agencies are expected to attend the meeting.

Milwaukee Field Office

- On April 12, the Milwaukee CPD Director will convene a telephone conference call with the City of La Crosse, Wisconsin community development leaders, representatives from the City of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC), and philanthropic partners. The purpose of the call is to share the La Crosse Promise Neighborhood Program's unique homeownership strategy, in which home buyers are provided scholarships of up to $50K in return for their commitment to purchase homes or vacant lots in designated neighborhoods. The goal of the meeting is to assess whether the City's strategy may work in certain Milwaukee neighborhoods.

From the Office of the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Grant Programs, Stan Gimont

- The Relocation and Real Estate Division has engaged program counsel to determine the applicability of Section 104(d) relocation assistance requirements on the West Calumet Public Housing project in East Chicago. The State of Indiana is seeking to use NSP1 funding for the actual demolition costs.

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Special Needs Programs, Ann Oliva

- On April 10, OHH staff will assist in leading the monthly "Peer to Peer" call with VAWA/HOPWA grantees. These calls allow grantees the opportunity to provide status updates regarding their projects.
- On April 11, DAS Oliva will participate in the Homelessness and Opioid Abuse convening with Federal partners and stakeholders.
- On April 12, DAS Oliva will attend the monthly SDCT meeting with staff members from the VA and USICH to discuss progress and priorities related to ending Veteran homelessness.

HUD-17-0235-B-000122

From the Offices of Rural Housing and Economic Development, Jackie Williams/Danielle Arigoni

Office of Rural Housing and Economic Development

- On April 12, ORHED Director Williams will facilitate the HUD-USDA Rural and Tribal Technical Assistance Strategy Working Group conference call. The meeting will focus on planning the next Rural Gateway Peer-to-Peer national conference call, which will focus on "Rural Economic Development and Infrastructure." Presenters will represent HUD, USDA, and the Delta Regional Authority (DRA).

Office of Economic Development

- On April 12 and 13, the first orientation sessions will be held for new roles under the agency-wide Place Based effort. These orientations – focusing on Data Support Analysts, and Regional Community Resource Coordinators, respectively – will ensure that all PBEC staff have the necessary tools to execute these new functions, particularly as they pertain to support for the 88 new "community partnerships" that have been identified across all ten regions. The orientations will also serve to establish in-person and virtual cohorts among HUD staff to support their ongoing capacity building and information exchange. Additional trainings for Community Capacity Liaisons and Subject Matter Experts will follow in subsequent weeks.

Outcomes of the Week

From General Deputy Assistant Secretary, Cliff Taffet

- Agreement reached with the Union to proceed with the reconfiguration of the OBGA/OAHP space in HQ.
- Secretary debriefed senior staff on Monday, April 3 on his listening tour visit to Dallas/Fort Worth.
- AFFH Process Improvement Workshop, facilitated by Deloitte, on Friday, April 7.
- Only three Assessment of Fair Housing (AFH) submissions were expected for this round – due April 4.

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Operations, Lori Michalski

- The requisition to fund the 5-month contract extension with CACI was released to the Office of the Chief Procurement Officer (OCPO) on Wednesday, 3/22/17. CPD has requested that OCPO prioritize the obligation of the funds to the General Services Administration.
- IDIS release 11.13 successfully went live on Monday, 3/27/17. The 11.13 release deployed 24-Month HOME Commitment Deadline functionality to address Office of Inspector General audits under the First-In-First-Out (FIFO) project.
- The FY 2017 Community Compass NOFA is in Departmental Clearance through April 14.
- On April 4, OPDC's Audit Division held a Listening Session with the three Section 4 program grantees. The purpose of the meeting was for OPDC staff to learn what the Section 4 grantees think about various policies and processes related to the design, organization and management of the Section 4 program, and for them to offer their ideas for improvements or innovations for OPDC to consider.

Some Highlights from the Field

Anchorage Field Office

- On April 3-7, CPD Anchorage participated in several community meetings with Coordinated Entry/Youth Homeless Demonstration technical assistance provider, ICF Incorporated.
- On April 4, the Anchorage CPD Director participated in the Region X United States Interagency Council on Homelessness meeting.

Fort Worth Regional Office

- Last week, CPD Fort Worth convened a meeting of its entitlement community Directors. Staff from the Headquarters Entitlement Communities Division presented by Video Teleconference on CDBG Timeliness, the Federal Financial Report, and Code Enforcement. Additionally, the Regional Relocation Specialist provided Uniform Relocation Act updates and the Regional Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity Director answered questions about Assessment of Fair Housing submissions.

- Last week, CPD Fort Worth participated in Freedom of Information Act Improvement Act of 2016 training that was provided by the Office of General Counsel. The training covered major new requirements, changes in procedures, response letters, and exemptions.

Milwaukee Field Office

- On April 4, the Milwaukee CPD Director, Public and Indian Housing (PIH) staff and the Office of Public Housing Investments met to discuss the Housing Authority of the City of Milwaukee's (HACM) Critical Community Improvement Plan required for the City's Choice Neighborhood grant. CPD staff will be working with PIH staff to assist HACM in preparing its plan.

Philadelphia Regional Office

- On April 4, CPD Philadelphia, in collaboration with other program divisions, the Philadelphia Continuum of Care and Public Housing Authority partners, participated in a U.S. Department of Labor (DOL)-sponsored Webinar. The Webinar covered support services available to homeless youth, ages 16 to 24, and outlined how DOL and HUD resources could be utilized collaboratively to serve this select homeless population.

Pittsburgh Field Office

- Last week, CPD Pittsburgh and OBGA's Financial Management Division provided a Section 108 Loan Guarantee Program training to their CDBG grantees. Grantees presented proposed Section 108 Loan projects and received feedback and advice from the Financial Management Division about project viability, and additional information that could assist the grantees regarding their proposal.

From the Office of the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Grant Programs, Stan Gimont

- HUD approved the State of Louisiana's CDBG-DR Action Plan for its $1.2B grant to recover from severe flooding events that occurred in 2016.
- On March 31, Gloria Coates, Puping Huang, and Duncan Yetman of the Office of Block Grant Assistance, Entitlement Communities Division, made a video presentation on CDBG-funded Code Enforcement, the Federal Financial Report, and CDBG Timeliness and At-Risk Activities, respectively, at the Ft. Worth Regional Office All-Grantee Meeting.
- CPD staff provided technical review to FHEO consultant Deloitte on how program year changes and consolidated plan cycles impact the submission of an AFH.
- Acting DAS Gimont, Acting OBGA Director Kome and Entitlement Communities Division staff met by conference call with staff from the city of Albuquerque, NM on April 4. Albuquerque has been designated a high-risk grantee as a result of numerous ongoing performance deficiencies across programs. Of particular import during this call was the construction status of an affordable housing project funded with both HOME and CDBG-R (Recovery Act) funds. HUD had previously issued findings of noncompliance with Recovery Act and CDBG regulatory requirements over the lack of progress in completing this project.
- On April 4, OBGA held consolidated plan webinars covering best practices in the substantial amendment and plan set-up in the eCon Planning Suite.
- On April 6, OBGA and OED met with EDA to continue developing guidance for better coordination of local planning efforts and around how planning documents prepared for one agency can be adapted for submission to the other agency.
- On April 7, OBGA will participate in FHEO's AFFH Process Improvement Work Session. The session will explore detailed findings and opportunities for integration across program offices, prioritize the identified opportunities based on feasibility and impact, and identify initial actions to achieve these process improvements.
- OBGA Entitlement Communities Division staff, along with staff from OAHP, SNAPS and other HUD program offices, participated in meetings with delegations of local officials from Washington County, OR (April 4) and Fontana, CA (April 5). Developing affordable housing in the face of rapidly-increasing costs and tight rental markets is of concern to both jurisdictions.
- OBGA Entitlement Communities Division staff met by conference call with the City Manager and Community Development Director of Monterey, CA on April 6 to discuss the city's timely expenditure progress.

- In preparation for anticipated office moves, Entitlement Communities Division staff culled through over 150 linear feet of CDBG program historical files, achieving a 2/3 reduction in the volume of files needing to be retained.
- To date, CPD field offices and OAHP have approved 43 HTF allocation plans. Thirty-five FY 2016 HTF grants have been obligated and are ready in IDIS.
- On April 5, the Relocation and Real Estate Division participated in the weekly CPD, Housing, and PIH meeting to address RAD relocation portfolio compliance issues including policy matters. This week's meeting committed to further discussion on determining the applicability of Uniform Relocation Act requirements to RAD projects that involve a Transfer of Assistance.
- On April 5, the Relocation and Real Estate Division provided the Office of Housing/Recap with confirmation of the second installment of resident replacement housing payments to address relocation corrective actions in the El Paso Housing Authority Tranche I RAD project. This second escrow payment of $344,228 represents 19 former households who were provided incentive payments to exit public housing in violation of RAD URA requirements.

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Special Needs Programs, Ann Oliva

- Starting on April 3, Continuums of Care began submitting their System Performance Measures data via HUD's Homelessness Data Exchange (HDX). SNAPS hosted a training for Continuums of Care on March 30.
- SNAPS posted the FY 2017 CoC Program Registration Notice on the HUD Exchange website this week.
- On April 3, Director Suchar participated on a call with A Way Home America and other Federal partners to discuss input into their dashboard on their communities' progress towards ending youth homelessness.
- SNAPS placed the FY 2017 CoC Program Competition NOFA into Departmental Clearance this week.
- On April 4, Director Suchar met with the National Alliance to End Homelessness to discuss emergency shelter technical assistance.
- On April 4, SNAPS Division Director Brian Fitzmaurice met with a delegation of leaders from Washington County, OR to discuss VASH vouchers and homelessness.
- On April 4, SNAPS Specialist Scott Rich attended a meeting with other HUD staff members and city officials from Roseville, CA. The meeting focused on the city's efforts to end homelessness.
- On April 5, OHH started the review process for the HOPWA competitive renewal applications received via the Grant Solutions online system.
- On April 5, Director Flegel provided a HOPWA program update to the National AIDS Housing Coalition, including the Board of Directors and Consumer Advisory Group.
- On April 5, Senior Program Specialist Amy Palilonis served on a panel of Federal presenters at the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's Targeted Capacity Expansion Program: Substance Abuse Treatment for Racial/Ethnic Minority Populations at High-Risk for HIV/AIDS (TCE-HIV) All Grantee Meeting.
- On April 5, Senior SNAPS Specialist Lisa Coffman was a panelist at the annual Freedom Network Conference. Lisa addressed questions surrounding human trafficking and discussed HUD's involvement on the issue.
- On April 5-6, Senior Advisor Marcy Thompson participated in a Built for Zero learning session in Los Angeles, CA. Built for Zero is a national change effort with 70 communities that are committed to ending veteran and chronic homelessness.
- On April 6, SNAPS Division Director Brian Fitzmaurice joined a meeting with the officials from Stanislaus County, CA. The county thanked HUD for their partnership and provided a status update on their approach to end homelessness.
- On April 6, SNAPS Specialist Caroline Crouse attended a meeting with elected officials from the City of Aurora to discuss HUD-VASH and homelessness.
- On April 7, Director Suchar met with USICH to discuss youth homelessness data.

From the Offices of Rural Housing and Economic Development, Jackie Williams/Danielle Arigoni

Office of Rural Housing and Economic Development

- On April 3, ORHED Director Williams participated in CPD's Risk Assessment Programs meeting. This meeting was facilitated by the CFO Funds Control Assurance Division.
- On April 6, Senior Policy Advisor Stephen Cerny participated in a conference call on the implementation of the Local Foods, Local Places (LFLP) technical assistance program third round, which began in late February. LFLP is an EPA-led interagency partnership program that provides technical assistance to mostly small, rural communities that want to link downtown revitalization efforts with the development of strategies to grow their local food economies.

Office of Economic Development

- On April 3, Danielle Arigoni presented to the 5th offering of the Delivering Outcomes for Communities training offered by Partnership for Public Service. The training featured 30 federal employees from a range of agencies, and equips them to incorporate place-based approaches in their work with communities. Danielle moderated a panel on the success of San Antonio's place-based approach, and discussed HUD's efforts to implement its own place-based operational model.
- OED staff consulted with members of OGC to determine a path forward for HUD's response to the March 28 executive order on energy independence. A draft response will be prepared by OGC for Departmental Clearance (tentatively slated for late April).
- On April 5, Danielle Arigoni and Holly Kelly (FPM) presented to the Region 9 FPM Management Meeting on the PBEC model.
- Last week, at PD&R's invitation, four members of OED attended Programming I training for SAS statistical analysis software. During this free training, attendees learned the fundamentals of coding in the SAS language, allowing them to run descriptive data functions for extremely large datasets.
- On April 6, OED staff will meet with counterparts from EPA on status and future of the interagency Urban Waters Partnership. (This meeting will serve as a preparatory meeting in advance of a higher-level meeting of participating agency officials in April).
- On April 3, Patrick Revord, along with Marika Bertram of FPM, presented a workshop entitled "Federal Agencies' Efforts to Communicate Program Impacts" at USDA's Local Food Impact Conference in Washington DC. Patrick and Marika described how HUD's previous challenges tracking data for the Sustainable Communities Initiative and for Community Needs Assessments informed the new data and performance measurement system built for the Place-Based Community Partnerships.
- OED staff reviewed the draft and provided comments on the Final Report on HUD's Energy Innovation Fund, which provided $20+ million to a number of organizations to test innovative mechanisms for financing energy efficiency improvements in HUD-assisted multifamily housing.

Long-Term Action Items, activities of note or issues

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Operations, Lori Michalski

- CPD and the Office of the Chief Information Officer are working with GSA towards re-compete for the next IT contract for a 2017 award. HUD will extend the current contract with CACI through 10/25/17 to allow time to complete the acquisition of the new contract.
- CPD is working with CACI to formally re-plan the FIFO project and address the delays resulting from the unanticipated complexity of the HOME Commitment Deadline work. IDIS release 11.14 will still occur in late May, but now with reduced scope. All leftover FIFO work will be shifted to a later release in September.
- The five follow up Technical Assistance working groups previously mentioned in this Weekly Report are in varying stages of implementation. We have reached out to some field representatives to serve as members, and each group plans to hold focus groups with various program and field offices throughout their process. The TA work group topics include:
    - TA Communication and Coordination (across HUD programs and Field Offices)
        - To be launched by summer 2017
    - TA Reporting Tool
        - The TA Reporting Tool work group has developed wireframes and solicited input from Field and Program Office Focus Groups last month. The enhancements are still underway.
    - Award and Workplan Closeout
        - Underway
    - Learning Pathways (improving user experience in finding learning materials on HUD Exchange)
        - Underway – recently launched
    - Marketing and analytics for TA Tools and Products

HUD-17-0235-B-000126

- Underway

Some Highlights from the Field

Philadelphia Regional Office

- CPD Philadelphia management has begun working collaboratively with the Office of Field Policy and Management and the other Regional Program Divisions to outline the anticipated roles and responsibilities that each office will undertake as part of the Region's placed-based strategy. Two communities, the West Philadelphia Promise Zone area of the City of Philadelphia and the City of Dover, Delaware, will benefit from the placed-based strategy.

From the Office of the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Grant Programs, Stan Gimont

- Registration opened this week for the May 4 webcast on using the 20% historic tax credit for developing or rehabilitating affordable housing in older buildings. The presentation is being developed through a TA project awarded to Enterprise Community Partners and a historic preservation consultant. Extensive promotion is planned.
- For the next several weeks, CDBG-DR staff and staff from CPD Greensboro, CPD Pittsburgh, CPD Jacksonville, and CPD Columbia will be reviewing Action Plans from CDBG-DR grantees who received funds for 2016 disasters.
- According to the 2/28/2017 HOME Deadline Compliance Reports, a total of $635 million is at risk of deobligation as a result of missed commitment deadlines occurring in 2017. This amount decreased only 3.3% since the January 31, 2017 report. Currently 544 HOME PJs (85%) have commitment requirement shortfalls greater than $100,000. Field Offices are encouraged to examine the DCRs monthly, and consult regularly with HOME PJs about progress toward these deadlines.

Requirement	Cumulative (1992-2014)	Grant Specific FY 2015	Total 2/28/17	Total 1/31/17	% Change
Commitment	270,601,297.07	364,063,716.14	634,665,013.21	656,383,536.48	-3.3%
CHDO	1,904,370.60	58,943,694.20	60,848,064.80	64,162,743.37	-5.2%
Expenditure	91,497,456.61	NA	NA	106,408,070.86	-14.0%

From the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Special Needs Programs, Ann Oliva

- OHH will complete the review process for the HOPWA competitive renewal applications by May 19.
- SNAPS received 38 non-concurrence Departmental Clearance comments from OGC on the HMIS Final Rule. SNAPS is currently working with OGC to resolve these comments.
- SNAPS anticipates that the FY 2017 CoC Program Competition NOFA will be published in late May.
- On October 4, SNAPS received non-concurrence Departmental Clearance comments from OGC on "FR-5476-N-05: Continuum of Care (CoC) Program, Solicitation of Comment on Specific Issues" and is working to resolve them.
- SNAPS is in the process of evaluating its entire CoC grants process in a project called "CoC Re-Imagining." They are working with staff experts, management, and field office representatives to evaluate possible changes to the way the CoC process is implemented.
- OHH will host a HOPWA Institute for formula grantees, competitive grantees, and project sponsors August 9-11. The 3-day Institute will offer learning tracks for the administrative and service delivery aspects of HOPWA, as well as provide a structured platform for peer-to-peer knowledge sharing.

From the Offices of Rural Housing and Economic Development, Jackie Williams/Danielle Arigoni

Office of Rural Housing and Economic Development

- ORHED is in the implementation stage to develop the new Veterans Home Rehabilitation Program. Senior Policy Advisor Steve Cerny and Senior CPD Specialist Sylvia Purvis are working with OGC's Office of Legislation and Regulation staff to prepare the public notice.

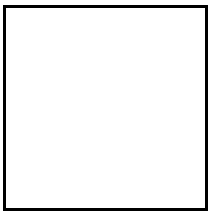
NBCC Letter To Chicago Mayor on HUD Section 3 Contracts and Hiring Opportunities



Harry Alford

Letter to the Mayor of Chicago
February 21, 2013

Honorable Rahm Emanuel
Office of the Mayor
121 North LaSalle St, 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60602

Re: Increasing Jobs / Decreasing Crime

Dear Mayor Emanuel:

Chicago has become the "Poster Child" for criminal violence. Your city is often in the news because of the never ending homicides. Most of the victims are youths or young adults. Many are crying out for an end to this carnage but no one seems to know the answer. We think the answer is obvious.

Bruce Weinberg, Professor at Ohio State University, states: *"Public officials can put more cops on the beat, pass tougher sentencing laws, and take other steps to reduce crime, but there are limits to how much these can do…*We found that a bad labor market has a profound impact on the crime rate." The explanation of the violence happening in your crime zones is further explained in The Review of Economics and Statistics: "As wages go down and unemployment goes up, crime goes up – driving businesses and residents out of the community. This in turn causes more unemployment, which causes more crime – a 'spiral dive' situation from which it is difficult to recover." That is what Chicago needs – jobs!

There is a way to address this need in neighborhoods with higher poverty rates. Simply implement Section 3 of the HUD Act (24CFR Part 135). Section 3 states that 30% of all new jobs from HUD funding are to go to people living in public housing or under the poverty level. Businesses that hire these Section 3 residents can be self-certified as Section 3 firms. Section 3 firms are allocated a 10% set aside for all contracts derived from HUD funding. If the Chicago Housing Authority alone would be compliant with this required law it would have let over $120 million in Section 3 contracts and created thousands of new Section 3 jobs during the past three years. This fact was found during a three year audit of CHA by HUD authorities. This audit came after some of our members filed a complaint against CHA. CHA is now entering into a Voluntary Compliance Agreement (VCA) with HUD. So, the timing is brilliant if your office ensures that CHA will start doing the right thing and begin hiring its residents and create and utilize Section 3 firms.

Over the years, many agencies and divisions under the control of your office have received billions of dollars from HUD. However, none of these entities comply with Section 3 of the HUD Act. We know that from a Freedom of Information Act request via HUD. Think of how many jobs can be created and many people rising up from poverty thanks to the due diligence of their mayor. Mr. Mayor, you can do this. Demand compliance from your people and HUD will even come in and train them. Implement this program and watch the crime decrease on a monthly basis.

There will be very little "job shifting". The majority of Section 3 workers will be taking jobs that are probably performed by people living outside the Chicago city limits. We did a review of the last Midway Airport expansion. Of course, there was a Project Labor Agreement on this expansion. The vast majority of the home zip codes of the workers were outside of Chicago. Many were outside of the Chicago Metropolitan Area and a noticeable number were out of state. Besides that, the Section 3 program is the LAW! One sweet day, Chicago will start complying and we pray that now will be that time. We trust in your leadership and wisdom.

Section 3 of the HUD Act

Sir, if you do make this bold move and make Chicago the model city for Section 3 compliance, small business creation and a flourishing labor market, the National Black Chamber of Commerce will applaud this effort. We have 24 chapters within the state of Illinois. Our state chapter, the Illinois Black Chamber of Commerce, Larry Ivory – President/CEO, is ready to assist in the implementation of Section 3. We will give our chapters in the Chicago area technical assistance in showing public housing facilities how to organize and move as one progressive and organized network. HUD will provide assistance but is limited in its budget (for manpower). We are nonprofit with a mission to assist in projects like this. The NBCC is the largest Black business association in the world and we have been advocating the compliance of Section 3 since our beginning in 1993. Please do not hesitate in having your people contact our office. Here's to a better Chicago.

Sincerely,

Harry C. Alford
President/CEO

There will be very little “job shifting”. The majority of Section 3 workers will be taking jobs that are probably performed by people living outside the Chicago city limits. We did a review of the last Midway Airport expansion. Of course, there was a Project Labor Agreement on this expansion. The vast majority of the home zip codes of the workers were outside of Chicago. Many were outside of the Chicago Metropolitan Area and a noticeable number were out of state. Besides that, the Section 3 program is the LAW! One sweet day, Chicago will start complying and we pray that now will be that time. We trust in your leadership and wisdom.

news because of the never ending homicides. Most of the victims are youths or young adults. Many are crying out for an end to this carnage but no one seems to know the answer. We think the answer is obvious.

Bruce Weinberg, Professor at Ohio State University, states: *"Public officials can put more cops on the beat, pass tougher sentencing laws, and take other steps to reduce crime, but there are limits to how much these can do…*We found that a bad labor market has a profound impact on the crime rate." The explanation of the violence happening in your crime zones is further explained in The Review of Economics and Statistics: "As wages go down and unemployment goes up, crime goes up – driving businesses and residents out of the community. This in turn causes more unemployment, which causes more crime – a 'spiral dive' situation from which it is difficult to recover." That is what Chicago needs – jobs!

There is a way to address this need in neighborhoods with higher poverty rates. Simply implement Section 3 of the HUD Act (24CFR Part 135). Section 3 states that 30% of all new jobs from HUD funding are to go to people living in public housing or under the poverty level. Businesses that hire these Section 3 residents can be self-certified as Section 3 firms. Section 3 firms are allocated a 10% set aside for all contracts derived from HUD funding. If the Chicago Housing Authority alone would be compliant with this required law it would have let over $120 million in Section 3 contracts and created thousands of new Section 3 jobs during the past three years. This fact was found during a three year audit of CHA by HUD authorities. This audit came after some of our members filed a complaint against CHA. CHA is now entering into a Voluntary Compliance Agreement (VCA) with HUD. So, the timing is brilliant if your office ensures that CHA will start doing the right thing and begin hiring its residents and create and utilize Section 3 firms.

Over the years, many agencies and divisions under the control of your office have received billions of dollars from HUD. However, none of these entities comply with Section 3 of the HUD Act. We know that from a Freedom of Information Act request via HUD. Think of how many jobs can be created and many people rising up from poverty thanks to the due diligence of their mayor. Mr. Mayor, you can do this. Demand compliance from your people and HUD will even come in and train them. Implement this program and watch the crime decrease on a monthly basis.

There will be very little "job shifting". Deana and others,

Bishop Wellington Boone will be in Washington, DC, from May 14-29. We are requesting an appointment with Secretary Ben Carson during that time.

Bishop Boone wants to include in this meeting four seasoned Christian attorneys who are men of integrity and have decades of prestigious experience, including HUD and the criminal justice system. I am attaching their resumes again.

- Adam Harrell, Jr. (co-managing partner of Harrell & Chambliss, former law partner to Virginia Governor Douglas Wilder)
- Gerald Carter (partner at Harrell & Chambliss)
- George Keith Martin (managing partner, Richmond office of McGuire Woods)
- Garland R. Hunt, Sr. (vice president of Fellowship of International Churches, former Chairman of Board of Pardons and Paroles and Commissioner of Juvenile Justice under Georgia Governor Sonny Perdue, who is now Secretary of Agriculture)

We will coordinate with these attorneys once you set an appointment.

Bishop Boone's bio is at this link: http://wellingtonboone.com/about Secretary Carson and Bishop Boone communicated briefly when they were both in Miami recently but they were not able to get together for some personal time.

We appreciate your willingness to facilitate this meeting!

Deana,

Thank you for your email to Bishop Wellington Boone following up on his email to Secretary Ben Carson. Bishop Boone and the Richmond attorneys are looking forward to meeting with Secretary Carson at his earliest convenience.

I will be your contact person to coordinate the meeting.

Bishop Boone has some commitments through this coming weekend but after that he is free for the following two weeks. We could arrange a meeting with the attorneys in Richmond, Virginia, at the law offices of Harrell & Chambliss, which Bishop Boone thought might be advantageous to Secretary Carson, or they can meet in Washington, DC.

I am in contact with Adam Harrell, Jr., and we will be able to coordinate the schedule with the others through him once we know your timeframe.

Thanks again, and I look forward to hearing from your office at any time, day or night. I have given you my cell number below.

Bishop Boone,

I hope this email finds you well.

Secretary Carson asked that I follow up with you to schedule a meeting with you and the group of attorney's from Richmond that you referenced. Please let me know the best person on your team to facilitate getting this on the calendar.

Also, I will reach out to Garland Hunt and make sure that he is in touch with the appropriate people on Secretary Carson's staff.

PROFILE

SHORT BACKGROUND: Harrell & Chambliss LLP, formerly Wilder & Gregory, is a full service minority owned law firm founded in 1982 by former Virginia Governor L. Douglas Wilder and Judge Roger L. Gregory of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. The Firm has ten (10) lawyers who have the professional depth and the technical support necessary to provide the highest caliber of legal services. The Firm is engaged in the general practice of law with a diverse client base that includes several large corporations and public sector entities.

OVERVIEW OF FIRM PRACTICE

PUBLIC FINANCE AND STRUCTURED FINANCE TRANSACTIONS: Harrell & Chambliss LLP offers extensive experience in public finance and structured finance transactions. In 1991, the Firm was the first minority-owned law firm in Virginia with the distinction of being listed among the municipal bond law firms in The Bond Buyer's Municipal Marketplace (the "Red Book"). The Firm also provides legal services in connection with structured finance securities transactions.

BANKING: The Firm provides advice and counsel with respect to matters concerning banking regulations (state and federal), employment issues, commercial transactions, creditors' rights and bankruptcy in its general counsel representation of a full service bank in Richmond and other representation of financial institutions.

CORPORATE/BUSINESS and TAX: Business services include consulting with clients concerning organizational structure, drafting and revising articles of incorporation and bylaws, advising corporations on duties and liabilities of directors and officers, preparation of documents relating to Subchapter S election, stock subscriptions and shareholder agreements and other matters relating to business operations, negotiation of contracts and sale of a business. The tax practice of the Firm is made up of a diverse group of clients with interesting and challenging issues and transactions. In many instances, the work performed by the Firm's tax practice is performed concurrently with the services provided in the Business Service area, the Real Estate Service area and the Public Finance Service area of the Firm.

CONTRACT, PROCUREMENT and EDUCATION SERVICES: Attorneys at H&C have extensive experience in assisting clients with drafting and reviewing contracts and procurement transactions, education legal services in school board and administration matters, education related litigation, worker's compensation, transactions and in numerous other matters.

COMMERCIAL LITIGATION AND INSURANCE DEFENSE: H&C's trial attorneys have substantial experience in various areas of specialized litigation and routinely appear in Federal and state courts throughout Virginia. The Firm has over ten years experience in defending auto, general liability and worker's compensation claims. The Firm represents several companies in insurance defense litigation and has previously handled product liability litigation for corporations and other similar types of disputes.

REAL ESTATE: H&C's real estate attorneys have extensive experience in real estate acquisition, development, financing and disposition services on behalf of municipal and business clients. In the Firm's representation of all of its clients, H&C has provided a broad range of real estate law services, including residential and commercial closings and foreclosures, performance of title searches, legal negotiations for the acquisition or sale of properties and preparation of financing instruments and agreements.

EDUCATION LAW: The Firm has served as general counsel to the Richmond City Public Schools for nearly twenty years. In the last seven years, the Firm has committed itself to growing this practice area, and now serves as general counsel and/or regularly provides legal services to more than fifteen public school districts and private schools in the Commonwealth of Virginia. The practice includes all forms of representation for school districts, including, but not limited to, matters regarding employment, students, special education, policy, real estate, public procurement, general governance and matters impacting public bodies, such as the Virginia Freedom of Information Act.

EMPLOYMENT LAW: The Firm's attorneys regularly represent corporate clients involved in employment litigation in federal and state courts and advise clients with respect to labor and employment related matters. The firm's practice covers the wide spectrum of labor and employment litigation, arbitration, and administrative practice before the EEOC.

ADMINISTRATIVE/LEGISLATIVE: Clients frequently call upon H&C to advise them with regard to the Freedom of Information Act, Conflicts of Interest Act, Administrative Process Act, Privacy Protection Act and Virginia Public Procurement Act as well as federal and state laws relating to real estate and employment.

CREDITORS' RIGHTS, BANKRUPTCY AND FORECLOSURES: As counsel to our financial institution and public sector clients, H&C represents them in matters pertaining to Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy and Foreclosures. The Firm has extensive experience in loan workouts under various loan programs and in conducting non-judicial foreclosures for numerous financial institutions.

TELECOMMUNICATION AND INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY: H&C has advised clients with respect to open access and internet service matters. The Firm's attorneys have experience in drafting and negotiating computer contracts for the purchase or sale of hardware, software and other services incident thereto.

RESUME

CAPACITY AND RESOURCES

Harrell & Chambliss LLP ("H&C" or the "Firm") is a full service minority-owned law firm founded in 1982 by minority attorneys, The Honorable L. Douglas Wilder, former Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia and The Honorable Roger L. Gregory. In January 2001, the Firm's name changed due to the appointment of our partner Roger L. Gregory to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. The Firm's offices are located in Downtown Richmond, Virginia and in Newport News, Virginia. The Firm currently has ten (10) attorneys. The Firm is engaged in the general practice of law with a diverse client base that includes several large corporations, nationally recognized insurers, nationally recognized non-profits and foundations and public sector entities.

The Firm has access to a full range of resources such as Westlaw, an internet legal research system, and other subscription services, such as the Federal Taxation of Municipal Bonds Deskbooks, which provides us with the most up-to-date information in all areas of the law.

H&C has a Microsoft NT File Server with dual drives and a Microsoft Exchange Server. The Firm utilizes Microsoft Word to create all documents, legal memoranda and correspondence generated by the Firm. Our software programs include Microsoft Windows, Microsoft Office Professional, Microsoft Outlook, Microsoft Excel and Microsoft PowerPoint, Abacus Case Management Software, Timeslips and Billing. Our case management software tracks clients, schedules appointments, reminders, etc. and manages files, matters, cases and documents. H&C's automated time and billing and case management systems are responsible for timekeeping and billing, management reporting, trust accounting, conflict avoidance, general ledger and accounts payable for the Firm. H&C maintains easy access for clients by providing e-mail access through all of its employee computer terminals in the office and internet access for all employees to obtain more and easier information in serving our clients.

GENERAL FIRM PRACTICE DESCRIPTION

Harrell & Chambliss LLP (the “Firm” or “H&C”) has the professional depth and the technical support necessary to provide the highest caliber of legal services in the areas of corporate and business law, public finance and structured securities finance transactions, contracts and procurement, banking, commercial litigation, insurance defense, personal injury defense, tax law, commercial real estate transactions, municipal law, commercial law, public utilities law, acquisitions, estate planning and administration, eminent domain, administrative/legislative services, administrative law, telecommunications, information technology, foreclosure, creditors' rights and bankruptcy, civil litigation, labor, housing law, education law, employment and personnel matters.

Public Finance and Structured Transactions Services

H&C has extensive experience in debt and revenue financings. Since 1991, the Firm has been listed among municipal bond law firms in The Bond Buyer's Municipal Marketplace, formerly known as The Bond Buyer's Directory of Municipal Bond Dealers of the United States (the "Red Book"). H&C’s municipal and public finance experience extends to numerous areas, including airports, general obligation financings for traditional municipal projects, housing, health care financings, university financings and industrial development. The Firm's lead attorney for public finance and structured transactions services, Nancy Griffin Chambliss, Co-Managing Partner of the Firm, has over twenty-five (25) years of experience in public finance transactions as bond, underwriter’s and issuer’s counsel in bond financings for issuers in various states.

Bond Counsel Experience. H&C attorneys have served as bond counsel or issuer's counsel in financings for numerous local issuers and housing authorities in Virginia, for several state or inter-jurisdiction issuers in Virginia and in Maryland and West Virginia, Massachusetts, District of Columbia, South Carolina, Florida and Pennsylvania. The Firm's attorneys have represented numerous financial institutions, companies, partnerships, developers and individuals in connection with tax-exempt financings. During the period 2010-2012, the Firm has completed over 20 debt issuance transactions in the issuance of over $1.9 billion of tax-exempt and taxable bonds. Attorneys in the Firm have participated as bond counsel, co-bond counsel, underwriters’ counsel, disclosure counsel and issuer’s counsel in over $9 billion of tax-exempt and taxable bond transactions.

Attorneys in the Firm have worked on financings involving complex and innovative financings techniques, including forward purchase obligations, interest rate swap transactions, auction rate and commercial paper financings, FHMLC/mortgage-backed pass through securities, FHA multi-family mortgage programs, variable interest rate financings, bond financings involving collaterized and uncollaterized letters of credit and other credit enhancements, bond financings insured by municipal bond insurers such as MBIA, AMBAC and FGIC and bond financings involving syndications.

Firm Affiliation. In 1990, H&C and Lewis & Munday, Detroit, Michigan ("L&M"), formed an affiliation for the practice of public finance law. In addition to Richmond and Detroit, L&M has partnership/affiliate offices in Washington, D.C., Seattle, Chicago and Atlanta (collectively, the "Partnership"). The work of the Partnership in public finance law has been extensive nationally.

Structured Securities Transactions. H&C serves as co-legal advisor to Government National Mortgage Association (“Ginnie Mae”) to provide legal advisor services in connection with its multiclass securities program. The Firm provides such services as part of Ginnie Mae’s legal advisor team in connection with the issuance of over $14 billion of Ginnie Mae Guaranteed REMIC Pass-Through Securities and MX Securities.

Representative financings of attorneys at H&C, as bond counsel, co-bond counsel, underwriter’s, issuer's counsel, legal advisor with respect to taxable and tax-exempt revenue bonds and structured securities, are set forth in the Appendix.

Banking Services

H&C provides its financial institution clients with advice and counsel with respect to matters concerning banking regulations (state and federal), employment issues, commercial transactions, estate issues, creditors' rights and bankruptcy, foreclosure, collection and civil litigation as well as any other legal matter that H&C is requested to address for clients. As co-counsel to Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority ("RRHA"), the Firm has developed the loan documents for RRHA's various loan programs. Additionally, H&C has represented the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") and SAMDA Contractors and represents RRHA in the real estate lending it makes to commercial and residential borrowers.

Corporate/Business Services

The Firm represents a diverse group of business clients in a full array of corporate/business transactions. Additionally, the Firm has been successful in developing a business practice, which spans from start up businesses to the representation of financial institutions. The Firm’s lead attorney for business services, Adam N. Harrell, Jr., Co-Managing Partner of the Firm, has over twenty (20) years of experience in representing corporate and business clients. The emphasis of the Firm's business practice is in providing general business and planning assistance to its clients, including closely held and publicly owned entities, non-profit and tax-exempt organizations, churches and individuals. H&C has assisted its municipal and business clients including Southside Community Development and Housing Corporation ("SCDHC") in the formation and operation of subsidiary corporations and partnerships as well as the syndication of limited partnership interests in connection with the purchase, acquisition and ownership of multifamily residential rental housing developments. Two (2) projects in which such expertise was necessary are SCDHC's acquisition of the 1286 unit residential rental development, Southside Village Apartments and New Chicago Avenue Associates, L.P.'s acquisition and rehabilitation of Chicago Manor apartments located in Richmond, Virginia.

Entities – Commercial, Non-profit and Churches. H&C's business services include consulting with clients concerning the organizational structure of businesses, preparing entity documents for businesses, preparing and negotiating contracts for businesses and providing legal advice to businesses as to how they can best serve the needs of their clients. The Firm advises businesses on the duties, responsibilities and liabilities of owners and principals and other matters that arise in the on going operations of the businesses. The Firm attends annual meetings and other periodic meetings of the clients, as requested. The Firm represents clients in the sale of assets of a business or in any merger, acquisition or consolidation that affects their business. The Firm represents its clients in any other business matter that involves legal implications against the business, non-profit organization or individual. The Firm has advised churches in connection with all forms of property acquisitions and transactions and any legal exposure that may exist because of the transaction. The Firm provides legal advice regarding the expansion of church ministries and initiatives under the umbrella of the church and within the realm of the tax-exempt purpose of the church.

Telecommunication and Information Technology Services. H&C has advised clients with respect to open access and internet service matters. The Firm's attorneys have experience in drafting and negotiating computer contracts for the purchase or sale of hardware, software and other services incident thereto.

Tax Services

The tax practice of the Firm is made up of a diverse group of clients with interesting and challenging issues and transactions. The Firm's lead attorney for tax services, Gerald W.S. Carter, a partner in the Firm, has over ten (10) years of experience in representing clients in diverse tax matters. Before joining H&C in 1992, Mr. Carter attended New York University School of Law's Graduate Tax Program and obtained his Masters of Law Degree in Taxation.

In many instances, the work performed by the Firm's tax practice is performed concurrently with the services provided in the Business Service area, the Real Estate

Service area and the Public Finance Service area of the Firm. This usually stems from the advice given to closely held and publicly owned clients, non-profit and tax-exempt entities, churches and individuals where the essence of their transaction is tax driven or requires a detail tax analysis to determine the economics of the contemplated transaction.

In the formation of entities for business clients, H&C advises clients of the tax implications of the entities formed and the contemplated transaction or transactions of the business and what to expect based on the use of the chosen entity and transaction or transactions implemented. The services provided in the Firm's tax practice include tax matters relating to commercial and real estate transactions, formation and organizational structure of entities, tax implications of bankruptcy transactions, mergers, acquisitions and consolidations of businesses, sale of assets of businesses, administrative tax proceedings and appeals, tax litigation, estate planning, estate administration, non-profit and tax-exempt organizations, churches and public finance issues and transactions.

The Firm's tax practice was established in 1992 and has grown substantially since its formation. The tax practice has enabled the Firm to become more well-rounded in the legal services H&C provides to clients and better tooled and equipped to meet the needs and challenges of clients today and in the future. Our tax practice is an emerging area in the Firm and we expect it to continue to grow well into the twenty-first century.

Litigation Services

The Firm's trial attorneys have substantial experience in various areas of specialized litigation and routinely appear in Federal and state courts throughout Virginia. The litigation team has over thirty years of combined litigation and trial experience. Our trial attorneys' experience includes not only actual trial preparation and work, such as preparing and filing appropriate pleadings (including the appropriate memoranda of law and briefs), conducting discovery, evaluating investigative materials, arranging for independent medical examinations as required and preparing for trial and trying cases, but also providing advice and consultation with clients during all phases of the judicial process. In addition, the Firm's attorneys are familiar with and actively encourage the use of Alternative Dispute Resolution techniques such as mediation and arbitration.

The Firm's litigation attorneys handle in excess of 200 files on an annual basis. In over eighty percent (80%) of these matters, the Firm represents the defendant or one of the defendants in active litigation. A significant percentage of these cases settle, generally after aggressive and vigorous discovery. Of the litigation matters handled by the Firm's litigation team, approximately eighty-five percent (85%) settled prior to the commencement of trial. As a result of the solid representation provided by the Firm's litigation team, each of the Firm's litigation attorneys in past years actually tried between eight (8) to ten (10) cases to a jury verdict on an annual basis.

Generally, the cases handled by the Firm's litigation team consist of civil litigation matters from the Firm's financial institution clients, the defense of automobile accident claims, premises liability claims, wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution claims, product liability matters, workers' compensation claims, employment and labor claims, eminent domain claims, contractual claims and commercial claims.

Insurance and Personal Injury. H&C has considerable experience in representing both plaintiffs and defendants in personal injury claims. The Firm's practice includes personal injury, property damage and insurance coverage and liability questions of all types. At the present time, the Firm represents State Farm Insurance, Kemper Insurance, Companion Property & Casualty, Grocers Insurance and other insurers defending civil litigation. The Firm has also represented a number of public bodies and their employees, including Richmond City Public Schools, RRHA and the City of Richmond.

Labor and Equal Employment. The Firm's attorneys regularly represent clients involved in labor litigation and advise clients with respect to labor and employment related matters. The Firm's practice covers the wide spectrum of labor and employment litigation, arbitration, mediation and administrative practice before the EEOC and applicable Courts and tribunals and providing legal advice in this area. Additionally, the Firm represents clients in worker's compensation claims and has appeared numerous times before the Workers' Compensation Commission in connection with such claims.

General Tort and Product Liability. H&C handles numerous tort claims. The Firm has previously defended manufacturers in product liability claims and numerous other related disputes.

Education Services

H&C has extensive experience in representing one of largest public school divisions in the Commonwealth of Virginia, the City of Richmond Public Schools. H&C also has provided representation to more than fifteen public school districts and private schools in the Commonwealth of Virginia, including the Carroll County, Montgomery County, Hanover County, Poquoson City, Hopewell City, King William County, Fauquier County, Mecklenburg County, Prince William County, New Kent County, Alexandria City, Louisa County, and Henrico County Public Schools, as well as the Mountain Vista Regional Governor's School and The Steward School. The Firm's lead attorney for education services is Jonnell Lilly in providing legal advice and opinions concerning matters relating to the affairs of the school systems together with attendance at meetings of the school boards and their various committees. The Firm provides advice on the application of the Virginia Freedom of Information Act, the Virginia Public Procurement Act, and other state and federal laws pertaining to public elementary and secondary education and employment, including the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and No Child Left Behind. Additionally, we draft, prepare and revise contracts and other legal documents and prosecute or defend legal and administrative proceedings in state and federal courts, and before governmental agencies or units such as the Virginia Employment Commission, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Office of Civil Rights.

H&C monitors state and federal legislation relating to education issues and its attorneys attend and present at education law conferences to stay abreast of the latest trends. The Firm has extensive experience in providing advice and counsel with respect to relevant state and federal regulations, statutes and court decisions relating to special education, and FAPE standards and represents the school division in due process hearings and other proceedings.

Attorneys at H&C have extensive experience in providing education legal services in contract and procurement transactions, education related litigation, worker's compensation matters and business transactions and in numerous other education matters.

Creditors' Rights, Bankruptcy and Foreclosure Services

Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy. Along with representing financial institutions, H&C has been successful in developing a solid Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy practice. H&C has invested a great deal of time in developing expertise in the Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy area. As counsel to our financial institution clients, H&C represents them in all matters pertaining to Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy and Commercial Litigation. Further, H&C represents RRHA, a political subdivision of the Commonwealth dedicated to residential rehabilitation and the development of affordable housing and commercial real estate, in many areas of Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy. H&C has represented the RTC in various practice areas, including Creditors' Rights and Bankruptcy and Commercial Litigation

Foreclosures. H&C attorneys have experience in loan workouts and foreclosures of multifamily residential rental housing developments. Additionally, H&C has been certified as a foreclosure commissioner by the Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") and has conducted numerous foreclosure sales of multifamily residential rental housing developments. H&C handles all of the foreclosures for Consolidated and RRHA and assists Consolidated and RRHA with workouts under its numerous loan programs. Moreover, H&C represents numerous financial institutions including Premier Bank and SunTrust Bank and personal lenders where it is called upon to assist its clients with workouts and non-judicial foreclosures. H&C's real estate attorneys have extensive experience in conducting non-judicial foreclosures. Furthermore, H&C has conducted numerous non-judicial foreclosure sales for the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") Atlanta Office as well as other RTC offices and SAMDA Contractors.

Real Estate Services

H&C real estate attorneys have extensive experience in real estate acquisition, development, financing and disposition services on behalf of municipal and business clients. The Firm has experience in eminent domain law, principally through its representation of RRHA, the Commonwealth of Virginia (Virginia Department of Transportation), the Virginia Biotechnology Research Park Authority (the "Biotech Park Authority") and the Greater Richmond Convention Center Authority. The Firm is co-counsel to the RRHA and the Biotech Park Authority, which entities undertake a substantial volume of development and redevelopment projects in the City of Richmond. The Firm also is counsel to Petersburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority which is undertaking significant development and redevelopment projects in the City of Petersburg.

The Firm is general counsel to the Southside Community Development and Housing Corporation ("SCDHC"). SCDHC has been involved with many significant and sophisticated real estate development and multifamily residential real estate transactions in Richmond's Southside area over the past ten (10) years. The Firm has been involved with SCDHC from its formation.

In the Firm's representation of all of its clients, H&C has provided a broad range of real estate law services, including residential and commercial closings and foreclosures, performance of title searches, legal negotiations for the acquisition or sale of properties and preparation of financing instruments and agreements.

Administrative/Legislative Services

H&C serves as general counsel to RRHA and the Biotech Park and as such our lawyers attend the respective meetings of the Boards of Commissioners. As general counsel we advise our clients as to matters of federal and state law applicable to their various programs and operations. These clients frequently call upon H&C to advise them with regard to the Freedom of Information Act, Conflicts of Interest Act, Administrative Process Act, Privacy Protection Act and Virginia Public Procurement Act as well as federal and state laws relating to real estate entities, securities, and employment. In addition to developing the documents for RRHA loan programs, H&C advises RRHA regarding federal and state law relating to mortgage lending and housing such as Truth-in-Lending, RESPA and fair housing legislation. H&C also provides such advice to its financial institution clients. Further, H&C has extensive experience in residential and commercial real estate closings.

The Firm's attorneys practice regularly before state agencies, including the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Workers' Compensation Commission of Virginia and the State Corporation Commission. H&C also assists professional organizations, business trade groups and individual business entities in developing strategies for interfacing with the Virginia General Assembly, public service commissions, local government officials and various interest groups. In addition, H&C monitors proposed legislation by the Virginia General Assembly. The Firm digests, analyzes and disseminates to the client such proposals relevant to the client's interests.

The Firm provides legal advice and opinions concerning matters relating to the affairs of public bodies together with attendance at meetings and conferences relating to those matters. Our attorneys attend board meetings, draft, prepare and revise contracts and other legal documents. Additionally, we prosecute or defend legal actions or arbitration proceedings, including judicial, administrative or other proceedings before governmental agencies or units.

Real Estate Projects for Housing Authorities in Virginia

McGuireWoods has extensive experience representing public housing authorities on real estate-related transactions. We currently serve as general counsel or counsel to the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority, Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, and Hampton Redevelopment and Housing Authority on various real estate-related projects. These projects have included multifamily and single-family housing projects, mixed-income projects and mixed-use projects, as well as funding from numerous sources, including HOPE VI grants, Federal Home Loan Bank funds, private financing (bridge, construction and permanent), equity from the sale of various tax credits, grant funds and loans from local governmental entities, funding from VHDA, HOME funds and CIP funds. We have also assisted with land assemblage and condemnation matters. Further, in the past we have also represented the Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority and the Petersburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority. We also represent similar organizations outside of Virginia, including the Housing Authority of Cook County, Ill.

As a result of McGuireWoods' representation of public housing authorities on real estate-related projects like those referenced above, the firm has vast experience drafting and negotiating the various documentation required and assisting our public housing authority clients with establishing ownership and financing structures. In addition, the firm has extensive experience working with HUD, VHDA and local governmental entities to identify and obtain all of the approvals required for these types of projects. Finally, the firm understands and appreciates the array of legal and political issues involved, and we have a proven track record of working with our public housing authority clients to resolve those issues.

Representative Projects

Baltimore County, Maryland. McGuireWoods represented a developer in the acquisition and redevelopment of a 200-unit affordable development in Baltimore County. The project was financed in part by the issuance of short-term tax-exempt bonds and a long-term taxable 221(d)(4) insured loan, low-income housing tax credits, and a housing assistance project based voucher contract that was restructured through the RAD-2 program. Alan Sun was lead counsel on this transaction and the firm's work included: (i) reviewing and negotiating HUD required evidentiary documents and the RAD required documentation; (ii) reviewing tax credit equity documents; (iii) reviewing and negotiating tax-exempt bond documents and verifying compliance with the tax-exempt bond documents; (iv) reviewing construction contracts and proposed construction and operating budgets; (v) negotiating and drafting a payment in lieu of taxes agreement; (vi) reviewing property management agreements; (vii) coordinating closing with HUD; and (viii) rendering the required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions.

Howard County, Maryland. Bond counsel for bonds issued by a housing authority that financed the refinance of the acquisition and a portion of the construction of approximately 60 mixed-income units and the portion of the costs of improvements to 50 public housing units that were being transitioned to the RAD program. The firm's work included: (i) drafting all required bond and tax documents; (ii) drafting disclosure documents and reviewing compliance with disclosure requirements; (iii) conducting tax due diligence and drafting tax compliance agreement; (iv) reviewing housing authority financial statements and outstanding indebtedness for disclosure; and (v) rendering all required opinions.

Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Townes at River South Project. This project consisted of 161 multifamily, mixed-income units constructed on a former public housing site as part of RRHA's HOPE VI Project. The project was constructed in two phases and was financed with HOPE VI grant funds, tax credit equity, Federal Home Loan Bank funds and private financing (bridge, construction and permanent). The firm's work on both phases included: (i) assisting RRHA in obtaining disposition approvals from HUD; (ii) assisting RRHA with structuring the ownership entities for each phase; (iii) preparing and negotiating a development agreement with RRHA's development partner for each phase; (iv) preparing and negotiating required HOPE VI evidentiary documents for each phase; (v) submitting required HOPE VI evidentiary documents to HUD for each phase; (vi) reviewing and negotiating construction and permanent loan documents for each phase; (vii) preparing and negotiating loan documents for RRHA loans to the ownership entities for each phase; (viii) reviewing and negotiating tax credit equity documents for each phase; (ix) preparing and negotiating ground leases for each phase; (x) reviewing and negotiating construction contracts and architectural agreements for each phase; (xi) rendering required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions for each phase; and (xii) preparing and reviewing property management agreements for each phase.

Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Fulton Village II Project. This project consisted of 26 single-family units designated for sale to purchasers with area median incomes of 50-115 percent and constituted the final phase of the off-site for-sale component of RRHA's HOPE VI Project. The units in this project are to be constructed by the developer over a two-year period, subject to market demand. Construction of the units is financed through a combination of private financing and HOPE VI grant funds. The firm's work on this project included: (i) assisting RRHA with structuring the transaction; (ii) preparing and negotiating a development agreement with RRHA's development partner; (iii) assisting RRHA with addressing title and environmental issues with respect to the project site; (iv) preparing and negotiating required HOPE VI evidentiary documents, including, without limitation, documents evidencing the HOPE VI subsidies to be provided to each qualified purchaser; (v) submitting required HOPE VI evidentiary documents to HUD and submittal of required real estate documents to HUD's field office; (vi) reviewing developer's construction loan documents; (vii) preparing and negotiating a ground lease for the project site; (viii) preparing form conveyance documents to be used to convey completed units to purchasers; (ix) preparing and negotiating covenants, conditions and restrictions for the project; and (x) rendering the required HUD opinion for closing.

Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Chatham Square Project. This project consisted of 100 for-sale market-rate units and 52 assisted units and constituted the on-site component of ARHA's HOPE VI Project. The proceeds from the sale by ARHA to its development partner of the property for the 100 for-sale market-rate units was used to finance a portion of the cost of constructing the 52 assisted units. The other sources for funding the construction of the 52 assisted units were HOPE VI grant funds, private financing and tax credit equity. The firm's work included: (i) reviewing and negotiating HUD required evidentiary documents; (ii) reviewing and negotiating tax credit equity documents; (iii) reviewing and negotiating loan documents; (iv) reviewing and negotiating construction contracts; (v) reviewing proposed construction and operating budgets; (vi) negotiating required guarantees; (vii) reviewing and negotiating a Master Declaration for project; (viii) reviewing and negotiating property management agreements; (ix) coordinating closing with HUD; and (x) rendering the required HUD, lender and tax credit equity opinions.

Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority's Glebe Park and James Bland Project. This project consists of a multiphase, multiyear redevelopment of two of ARHA's public housing projects. To date, three of seven phases have closed. The firm's work has thus far included: (i) preparing and negotiating a pre-development agreement; (ii) preparing and negotiating a master purchase, sale and development agreement; (iii) assisting ARHA with structuring the overall transaction; (iv) preparing conveyance documents for each phase; (v) addressing title and survey issues for each phase; (vi) reviewing project budgets and schedules; (vii) preparing and negotiating project guarantees and guarantees for each phase; (viii) reviewing and negotiating a Master Declaration and condominium documents for the project; (ix) reviewing tax credit equity solicitations and proposals; (x) reviewing and negotiating construction and architect agreements; and (xi) reviewing and negotiating loan documents with the city and other funding sources.

Tax Exempt Bond Financing

Our attorneys are public finance experts and assist and advise the entire spectrum of participants in of bond issues, including qualified 501(c)(3) bonds, residential rental bonds, including 4% LIHTC credit transactions, and other types of bond issues (including tax increment financing) that can be used to develop housing. We regularly serve as counsel to owners, lenders, bond purchasers, borrowers, whether for-profit developers or non-profit entities, issuers, underwriters, and banks in the entire range of tax-exempt bond transactions.

Nonprofit Organizations

We represent a number of tax-exempt organizations throughout the country whose missions are to promote affordable housing. We assist in the formation of the entities; in the representation of the entities throughout the application process, which has included appearing before the IRS; and in the continued representation of those organizations in structuring joint ventures with other nonprofit organizations and for-profit developers. We also have experience responding to IRS audits of these organizations.

Workouts Involving Tax Credit Transactions

We also represent clients in workouts and foreclosures involving tax credit and tax-exempt bond transactions. We work with all parties involved in a transaction including lenders, developers and equity investors, and offer structured solutions to under-performing or non-performing LIHTC developments. We often restructure the financing and ownership of these transactions, as well as communicate with the appropriate allocating agencies to obtain consents and other relief from them. We represent trustees, bondholders and borrowers in tax-exempt bond workouts. We also deal with foreclosures, receiverships and deed-in-lieu of foreclosure matters, and provide post-transition compliance advice.

Other Subsidy Programs

In addition to the LIHTC program, we are experienced in most subsidized housing programs, including those involving tax-exempt financing. We represent both developers as well as the implementing governmental agencies. We provide the advice and expertise necessary to allow all parties to maximize the investment in the housing development, while minimizing the adverse effects, including tax consequences to investors, which can be associated with some subsidies.

We assist clients in state and federal subsidy programs, including but not limited to HOME Funds, AHP grants, §221(d)(4), §221(d)(3), HOPE and HUD programs. We represent developers in connection with these subsidy programs, which includes assisting them throughout the application process, dealing with the applicable agency or other entities, and providing compliance advice, and governmental agencies in awarding such subsidies.

John & Christine Spanyers

We are filing a complaint against the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) for Retaliation and ongoing Discrimination.

After we had rejected a conciliation offer Katherine Amaya, local FHEO HUD, had written up, the OHA forced us to move into an OHA (b) (6) housing unit over our repeated objections or face eviction even though a more appropriate housing unit was available being the unit offered us by Ms. Amaya in the conciliation offer. The reason(s) why we rejected this offer was:

A “reasonable accommodation” is a change, exception, or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice, or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling, including public and common use spaces. Since rules, policies, practices, and services may have a different effect on persons with disabilities than on other persons, treating persons with disabilities exactly the same as others will sometimes deny them an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. The Act makes it unlawful to refuse to make reasonable accommodations to rules, policies, practices, or services when such accommodations may be necessary to afford persons with disabilities an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling.

A provider has an obligation to provide prompt responses to reasonable accommodation requests. An undue delay in responding to a reasonable accommodation request may be deemed to be a failure to provide a reasonable accommodation.

The following is from the Housing Authority of the City of Omaha ACOP. These are OHA's Guidelines found at URL:

http://www.ohauthority.org/images/stories/pdfs/ACOP2011revised5-24-11.pdf

Under:

CHAPTER 6: DETERMINATION OF TOTAL TENANT PAYMENT

V. Annual Income

B. Amounts Excluded from Annual Income HUD requires OHA to exclude certain types of income from annual income. The OHA will work to ensure its employees are familiar with excluded income types, and will check periodically to determine whether new HUD directives have been issued. The following amounts are to be excluded from annual income under current HUD regulations:

16. Amounts specifically excluded by any other Federal statute from consideration as income for purposes of determining eligibility or benefits under a category of assistance programs that includes assistance under any program to which the exclusions set forth in 24 CFR 5.609(c) apply.

The following is the Federal statute 24 CFR 5.609(c), in which the exclusions OHA follows are set forth in:

(16) Amounts specifically excluded by any other federal statute from consideration as income for purposes of determining eligibility or benefits under a category of assistance programs that includes assistance under any program to which the exclusions set forth in 24 CFR 5.609(c) apply. A notice will be published in the Federal Register and distributed to housing owners identifying the benefits that qualify for this exclusion. Updates will be published and distributed when necessary.

(e) Payments or allowances made under the Department of Health and Human Services' Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (42 U.S.C. 8624[f]);

The OHA was in direct Violation of their own Policy (ACOP) by counting our payment from the Nebraska Dept. of Health and Human Services' Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) against OHA's portion of a Higher Utility Allowance for our household. This act was a direct Violation of our Fair Housing Rights.

As a part of HUD's FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement, the FHEO written up by Kathryn A. Amaya in both RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT as well as RELIEF IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST that we would receive what we were already entitled lawfully under Federal Statues.

Issues not addressed by Kathryn A. Amaya FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement were:

1. That we have been displaced three times by the respondents due to no fault of our own from being placed in mold conditions by the respondents.

2. It did not address the unnecessary delays in transfers to remove us from these conditions.

3. It did not address the coercion and the retaliatory acts committed by the respondents.

4. It did not address the pain and suffering that we have endured by the respondent.

5. It did not address the public humiliation that we have been made to suffer by the respondent.

6. It did not address that we were forced to live in bedbugs for nearly nine months due to the respondent refusing to treat our unit for bedbugs without the use of chemicals in accordance with the reasonable accommodations signed by our doctor.

7. It did not address that we had been forced to wrongfully pay rent for substandard living/housing conditions by the respondent since February 2011.

8. It did not address in any manner compensation for the above said, (#1 thru #7)

9. There was nothing in the RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT nor in the RELIEF IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST to safe guard or prevent the respondent from doing this again in the future to ourselves or others in the future.

10. In the RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT concerning the Federal LIHEAP, the respondent only agreed to allow, what is already MANDATORY UNDER LAW and which is also required by established by law regarding the extra utility allowance concerning LIHEAP and our Reasonable Accommodations.

Why would anyone sign an agreement to receive what we are already fully entitled to under Federal Law and that which HUD under Federal Law should had been enforced by HUD to begin with? Why did the HUD's FHEO refuse to acknowledge our Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as well as Title III of the ADA RIGHTS?

The OHA then placed us in a hostile environment when we were relocated to the back to the OHA (b) (6) housing unit located at (b) (6) After the OHA forced us to be relocated to the (b) (6) Units, we notified the OHA of ACOP violations that were occurring at the (b) (6) Units. We wrote the following complaint to the OHA Management:

I am contacting you regarding on going conditions being generated by a fellow resident "(b) (6)that lives at (b) (6) ((b) (6) Apartments) and her live in boyfriend known as using the name "(b) (6)

This last weekend on June 19th 2016, I witnessed at 11:30pm at night (b) (6)disassemble the east porch railing at (b) (6) . After disassembling the rail I witnessed (b) (6)applying foam on the porch.. When I asked him if he had permission from OHA to make alteration and repairs he was doing he stated that OHA has given him and (b) (6)permission to make any installations or repairs as they deem necessary for both our building as well as the building attached to ours. I then asked (b) (6)if he was a contractor or employee of OHA. He stated that no he was not. I then asked exactly whom with the OHA, gave him and (b) (6)this permission or authority. He stated that it was "on the need to know basis and that it was between him (b) (6)and OHA. It was then that I pointed out that the OHA is obligated to maintain OHA's units and in a safe condition, and to make all necessary repairs to our units such as he was attempting to do in the middle of the night. He then stated "You need to get back in your place and mind your own business or else".

I would also like point out as I shared with you on the phone that this is the same household that claims that OHA designated their house hold to exclusive control over the usage of the outside water faucets. I am concerned with the statements being made by this household. I even pointed out to this household that if what they were saying to all of us was true, it would mean that what they are stating about the OHA is tantamount to saying that the OHA is practicing discriminatory policies against all of the other residents here at (b) (6) in favor of their household and that I would be inquiring about this since it would be discrimination if in fact it was true.

How and why this household is being allowed to use the commons of our community to store their personal belongings in the entrance hall to our front door, the laundry room, the laundry room closet, and everything on the grounds in front from their unit to the end of the adjoining building as seen in the youtube link gives the appearance that what they are saying has merit, even if it's not true. Heaven forbid if a fire broke out in their unit or the adjoining building in front because as you can see everyone would be in danger due to the impediments and obstacles that the emergency service will be forced to encounter because this households personal property. Also as you can see it also prevents the OHA open access to these areas.

Earlier this week I spoke with the Blue Jay Technician when he was here on site to spray for bugs at (b) (6) I had asked him if with all these plants being so close to the building whether or not they were contributing factors to the insect infestation, and He said absolutely . I would like to respectfully ask that you speak with him as so you can appreciate and understand what the behavior of this household is generating not only for the residents but also for Blue Jay and OHA.

It is my understanding from Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy (ACOP) that may be located at http://ohauthority.org/public-documents that the photo's I am sharing with you are in clear violations of the set policy and procedure of the OHA for all of the OHA tenants and is not UNIFORM with the property design, nor is it uniform with the neighborhood.

I would also like to share with you that they are the only household that drives up on the front lawn with an unlicensed vehicle to load and unload their personal property and apparatus's that is being spread out two buildings long.

Please note that our new maintenance team were compelled to throw out some of (b) (6) and (b) (6) belongings they were storing in the laundry room. Our new team went ahead and left the contents in the closet as well as their sheet of glass that they have stored next to the wash basin in the laundry room. Our new team did a great job of removing these from our commons.

As you can see from Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy (that the photos and video are in opposition to Part 1 Terms and Conditions Of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy. (See Below)

To remove from OHA property any vehicle without valid registration and inspection stickers. To refrain from parking any vehicles in any right-of-way or fire-lane designated and marked by OHA. Any inoperable or unlicensed vehicle as described above will be removed from OHA property at Tenant's expense. Automobile repairs are not permitted on the project

To avoid obstructing sidewalks, areaways, galleries, passages, elevators, or stairs, and to avoid using these for purposes other than going in and out of the dwelling unit. http://imgur.com/(b) (6) http://imgur.com/(b) (6)

Pets must be maintained within the resident's unit. When outside of the unit (within the building or on the grounds) dogs and cats must be kept on a leash or carried and must be under the control of the resident or other responsible individual at all times.

An area of the development grounds has been designated as the area in which to exercise animals and to permit dogs to relieve themselves of bodily wastes. This area will be identified in pet agreement. Residents may not exercise pets or permit pets to deposit waste on the project premises outside of the areas designated for such purposes.

Pets are not permitted in common areas including lobbies, community rooms and laundry areas except for those common areas which are entrances to and exits from the building. In addition, pets are not permitted in OHA playgrounds, day care centers, management offices, community centers and/or recreation center areas.

Dogs may only be kept in Towers, and/or in designated Scattered Site dwelling units with an enclosed yard space. As with other animals, dogs may not be tethered or chained outside the dwelling unit.

No animals may be tethered or chained outside or inside the dwelling unit. http://imgur.com/(b) (6) http://imgur.com/(b) (6)

To refrain from placing signs of any type in or about the dwelling except those allowed under applicable zoning ordinances and then only after having received written permission of
OHA. http://imgur.com/(b) (6) http://imgur.com/(b) (6)

Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We want to point out to the OHA that we were moved to our current OHA rental unit over our objections. As such, the OHA insisted we had to move here or lose our affordable housing. Again, we were moved into an OHA unit in which we have NO PRIVACY and we are being treated differently than other (b) (6) Apartment tenants.

The issues going on here involve multiple OHA ACOP Violations being committed by tenants (b) (6) and (b) (6) These individuals are targeting us because we had brought this concern to the OHA. Further, these individuals walk around with a cigarette in their mouths in the apartment building. This is a violation of the lease; however, these violations are continuing without intervention.

All of the issues we have brought up concerning these tenants and the (b) (6) property have been in the best interest and benefit of the OHA to help protect the property and to assure tenants are following the OHA ACOP and their lease. Further, Ms. (b) (6) and Mr. (b) (6) have plants on the outside of the (b) (6) apartment building blocking the windows to apartments. Why is it we aren't allow to block the windows on the inside of the apartment, but Ms. (b) (6) and Mr. (b) (6) are being allowed to block the windows on the outside of the apartment buildings? Again, this hinders Emergency Services from getting to tenants. This is being allowed to continue.

Signed,

John & Christine Spanyers

After we notified the OHA of these ACOP violations, the OHA knowing and purposely allowed their tenants to harass us and abuse us relentlessly at the (b) (6) Apartments for our reporting the OHA 'S ACOP violations and possible housing composition fraud by (b) (6) household. The OHA repeatedly ignored our multiple requests asking for intervention to stop the tenants from harassing us and abusing us. We had asked the OHA to transfer us from the (b) (6) unit due to the abuse, but the OHA ignored our request to be transferred.

Additionally we notified the OHA the following:

Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We have contacted you concerning the tenant, Ms. (b) (6) who resides above us at (b) (6) and who is violating City Code of Ordinances. We have reported to you that Ms. (b) (6) is storing trash on her unit porch in which is unsanitary and attracts rodents, pests and vermin. We had previously brought this to your attention; however, it still continues. As such, the following excerpt is found at this link:

- Chapter 18 - NUISANCES[1]
- ARTICLE I. - IN GENERAL[2]
- Sec. 18-1. - Extraterritorial jurisdiction.

The provisions of this chapter shall be applicable to all that property within the city and all property within three miles of the city limits.

(Code 1980, § 18-1; Ord. No. 37950, § 2, 1-8-08)

- Sec. 18-2. - Definition.

For the purposes of this chapter, a nuisance exists when a person fails to perform a duty or permits any condition or thing to exist, which act, omission, condition or thing either:

(l)

Any abandoned or open wells, cisterns or cellars.

(m)

The discharge of any filthy or offensive water, swill, liquid or waste from any commercial establishment into or on any street, alley, sidewalk, gutter, vacant lot, stream or river.

(n)

The keeping or maintaining of any hives or boxes used or occupied or for the purpose of housing or occupation by bees within the city limits, except as hereinafter provided. The keeping of bees shall not be prohibited in agricultural zones, provided no box or hive containing bees permitted to fly at large shall be kept within 100 feet of any dwelling except the dwelling of the owner of such bees, or within 50 feet of any exterior boundary within which the box or hive is kept.

(o)

The parking or storage of any vehicle or machine or parts thereof in violation of any municipal code, state statute or federal law.

(p)

Any building or structure, including the ground on which it sits, that is used for the unlawful manufacture, cultivation, growth, production, processing, sale, possession, or storage of any controlled substance as defined in R.R.S. 1943, § 28-401 et seq.

(q)

Any gathering of five or more persons after 1:00 a.m. but before 6:00 a.m. which results in criminal activity, excessive noise that is the subject of complaints from others, or creates a result in violation ofsection 18-2(f).

(r)

Any open or exposed surface or substrata in any dwelling which is coated with, consists of or contains any lead-based paint or other lead-based coating material is declared to be a hazard and a nuisance if such surface, substrata, or generated debris is accessible or may become accessible to ingestion or inhalation by any person, but particularly children under the age of six, or may become accessible as a result of a remediation, repair, or construction and is flaking, cracking, peeling, scaling, blistered, chipped or loose, and is present on or in any interior or exterior surface, including but not necessarily limited to any porches or their steps, decking, banisters or railing, walls, windows and sills, doors and jambs, ceilings, exterior trim, boarding, or fascia.

Any building, structure or dwelling which has upholstered or other furniture which is designed or manufactured primarily for indoor use, including but not limited to upholstered chairs, upholstered couches, appliances, and mattresses used or left on unenclosed exterior porches, balconies or in an exposed open area including but not limited to decks, patios, roofs, yards, driveways or walkways.

Every other act or thing done, made, permitted, allowed or continued on any property, whether public or private, detrimental to the health or likely to injure any of the inhabitants of the city or its extraterritorial jurisdiction.

(Code 1980, § 18-3; Ord. No. 38290, § 1, 11-18-08; Ord. No. 38334, § 1, 12-23-08; Ord. No. 39545, § 1, 12-18-12)

- Sec. 18-4. - Prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person to cause, permit, maintain or allow the creation of a nuisance.

(Code 1980, § 18-4)

- Sec. 18-5. - Penalty.

In addition to such other sanctions imposed by law, any person who violates the provisions of this chapter shall, upon conviction, be punished as provided in section 1-10 of this Code. Every such person shall be deemed guilty of a separate offense for every day on which such violation shall continue.

(Code 1980, § 18-5)

Further, we are being forced to endure loud noises occurring above us in our rental unit coming from Ms. (b) (6) unit in which is disturbing our peace. It sounds like bowling balls falling over our head occurring in spurts throughout the day. This is disturbing our peace and enjoyment. We had previously brought this to your attention; however, it still continues.

- We have put the OHA on notice of the ongoing actions of Ms. (b) (6) who resides at (b) (6)

John & Christine Spanyers

We were being harassed by the tenant above us and across the hall from us. As such, the tenant across the hall from us placed cameras on our unit and looking into our unit windows of which these cameras were positioned on the tenant's porch. The tenant's name who resided across the hall from us is (b) (6) who resides at (b) (6) The tenant above us kept jumping up and down above us every day disturbing our peace. The tenant throw trash down in front of our unit on a regular basis and they threw cigar innards on our rental unit porch. We had written Cease & Desist letters to the tenant of which the

OHA received copies of. The tenant's name who resided above us is (b) (6) who resides at (b) (6)

The following are the Cease and Desist letters:

This is a legal demand that you immediately Cease & Desist the causing of loud and disturbing noise and ruckus (i.e. banging, slamming, jumping up and down, music, etc.) your household continuously causes our household to endure. We have attempted to discuss this matter with you to no avail. We had contacted the landlord being the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) concerning this matter. Further, we had contacted the Omaha Police Department (OPD) in which they had intervened on our behalf to address this matter with you. Even so, you continue to disturb our peace which is in violation of Nebraska Statute 28-1322.

Ms. (b) (6)

This is a legal demand that you immediately Cease & Desist the piling of trash on your outdoor unit porch as this is a rodent, pest and vermin attraction. Further, your regular practice of piling trash on your outdoor unit porch has been releasing a fluid overhead onto our unit porch. We demand that you immediately Cease & Desist throwing cigarette butts down onto our unit porch and the grounds around our unit porch as this is a fire hazard. We demand that you immediately stop throwing your cigar innards onto our unit porch. We had contacted the landlord being the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) concerning this matter. Additionally we notified the OHA the following:

Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We have done everything we can to address and STOP the ONGOING loud disturbing noise from the household of (b) (6) who resides above our unit at (b) (6) to NO AVAIL!!!

The OHA HAS BEEN NOTIFIED of this ONGOING issue via certified mail, emails and conversations yet we are continually being abused by the household of (b) (6) with loud disturbing noises to include Loud Music w/Bass as occurred over our heads yesterday, repeated jumping up and down which is now occurring over our heads, startling Slamming and Banging which is now occurring over our heads. We are at the mercy of (b) (6) household as to when we can sleep or not and whether or not we are going to be startled with Slamming and Banging coming from the household of (b) (6) We are AGAIN informing the OHA that we are being abused with Loud Noises coming from the household of (b) (6) in which is disturbing our peace and Violating State and City Laws. It appears we were made to relocate from an OHA unit in with an undisclosed Death and "Toxc Mold" to a unit in which we are continuously being tortured by OHA tenants as the OHA has NOT stopped this ongoing torture from occurring to us. We can only assume this is meant to occur to us to attempt to run us out of affordable housing!

We even attempted to get a protection order from the Court but was denied. After we attempted to get a protection order, the (b) (6)household went and filed for one and the complete transcribed transcripts and evidence allowed for submission may be viewed by your investigators at the Clerk of District Court on the 3rd Floor at the Douglas County Court.

It will be found by the investigator (HUD or DOJ) that the testimony by (b) (6) and (b) (6) was conflictive and that I had not broken rules or guidelines set forth by HUD. It will also be found whom directed (b) (6) and (b) (6) (i.e. the OHA).

Andrea Freeny the Official Court Reporter transcribed and notified me of the following after it was completed.

Mr. Spanyers,

Please be advised the bill of exceptions you have inquired about in re: (b) (6) v. Spanyers, Douglas County District Court Case No. CI16-5577, was filed 9/30/16 as required. My duties in this matter are thus concluded.

On October 12th, 2016 the OHA had us evicted us to the streets through a court decree but allowed us to stay at the unit until midnight in October 31st, 2016. Exactly one week later, unbeknown to us, the OHA rushed and requested on November 7th, 2016 from HUD's Enforcement Center a review to have our complaints dismissed without notifying HUD that they had evicted us. Additionally we did not know if the OHA disclosed that owed us a year of utility reimbursement when they had asked for this review.

It will be clear to the investigators that we were targeted by the OHA for filing HUD Complaints as well for filing a civil lawsuit in District Court.

JOHN SPANYERS and CHRISTINE SPANYERS,

Plaintiff,

vs.

OMAHA HOUSING AUTHORITY, a Political Subdivision of the State of Nebraska

Defendants.

COMES NOW, the Plaintiffs, by and through their counsel, Douglas R. Novotny, and for their Complaint against the Defendant, Omaha Housing Authority, alleges and states the following:

1. Plaintiffs are residents of Omaha, Douglas County, Nebraska and have been residents of said state and county for all times relevant to this lawsuit.

2. The Defendant, Omaha Housing Authority (Hereinafter "OHA"), is a political subdivision of the State of Nebraska. That at all times material herein, this Defendant contracts with HUD to provide low and moderate income individuals with housing in the Omaha metro area, including Douglas County, Nebraska.

3. That pursuant to the Nebraska Political Subdivisions Tort Claims Act, Neb. Rev. Stat. §13-901, et seq., Plaintiffs filed two separate claims with the Defendant. The first claim was submitted to the OHA, via e-mail and Certified Mail on January 14, 2015 (Exhibit A pgs. 1-5). A second claim was submitted to the OHA, via e-mail and Certified Mail, on January 19, 2016. (Ex. B pgs. 1-7). That six months have passed since Plaintiffs filed their claim and no final disposition has been determined. That as a consequence on July 28, 2016, Plaintiffs' counsel sent Defendant a letter withdrawing his tort claim from consideration from the OHA, a copy which is attached hereto and marked as Exhibit "C".

4. That the Plaintiffs have been tenants of the OHA for a number of years and resided at (b) (6)

5. The OHA owns the property, including the apartment complex, located at (b) (6)

6. That in August of 2014, the OHA retained an exterminator to inspect the apartment complex located at (b) (6)

7. During that August 2014 inspection, it is believed the exterminator advised the OHA that he found evidence of bed bugs within the Plaintiffs apartment, located at (b) (6)

8. Due to John Spanyers suffering from respiratory issues, including COPD, it is the Plaintiffs belief that the pest inspector advised the OHA to conduct heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs in the Plaintiffs' apartment located at (b) (6)

9. Subsequently in September of 2015 a second inspector, retained by the OHA, went to the Plaintiffs apartment and found evidence of bed bugs.

10. Without action being taken by the OHA, The Plaintiffs wrote a letter to the OHA, on or about September 19, 2014 requesting their apartment undergo heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs.

11. On September 22, 2014, Plaintiffs went to their physician to treat for bed bug bites. Pathology reports on September 23, 2014 confirmed bed bugs, and their physician recommended treatment of the apartment.

12. On or about November 3, 2014, Mike Wolski, of Wolski Pest Control, inspected the Plaintiffs apartment, at the Plaintiffs request, and found evidence of bed bugs inside the premises. Mr. Wolski drafted a letter indicating the presence of bed bugs and recommended heat treatment be used to eradicate the bed bugs due to Mr. Spanyers respiratory issues.

13. A request for heat treatment to eradicate the bed bug issue within the Spanyers apartment was made to Clifford Scott, the then director of the OHA, on November 6, 2014. On November 13, 2014, in response to said request, the OHA refused to conduct heat treatment and would only authorize chemical treatments to eradicate the bed bugs inside the Plaintiffs apartment.

14. Further requests were made to the OHA to heat treat the apartment, with the OHA either ignoring or denying the requests.

15. On February 12, 2015, the OHA finally agreed to conduct heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs within the Spanyers apartment. However, because mold was found in the apartment at around the same time, heat treatment was never conducted. By this time, the Plaintiffs had endured over six months of being exposed to bed bugs, suffering bites and being under a great deal of mental distress.

16. During this time between August 2014 through February of 2015, the Spanyers also began noticing allergic and respiratory issues.

17. On February 18, 2015 the OHA retained a company to conduct a Limited Mold Assessment and Testing. The inspection and testing showed fungal/mold growth within the furnace room and on the duct work. The fungus/mold was likely due to water intruding into the building due to a roof leak.

18. Due to Mr. Spanyers respiratory issues and Mrs. Spanyers allergies, the Plaintiffs, on February 19, 2015, requested the OHA transfer them to a new unit.

19. The OHA refused to transfer the Spanyers to a new unit until April of 2015 due to unrelated issues.

20. The OHA never conducted heat treatments of the Plaintiffs apartment located at (b) (6) to eradicate the bed bugs. Accordingly, the Spanyers were exposed to bed bugs, suffering bites and being under a great deal of distress from August 2014 through April of 2015.

21. Further the OHA did not fix or remediate the mold issue at the apartment located at (b) (6) first discovered in February of 2015, while the Plaintiffs resided at said Apartment. Accordingly the Plaintiffs suffered from respiratory distress, allergic reactions and mental distress.

22. In April of 2015, the Plaintiffs were transferred to an OHA owned property located at 3712 Frances Street. Plaintiffs became tenants of that property with the OHA being its landlord.

23. Upon moving into the unit located at 3712 Frances Street, the Plaintiffs noticed a bulge in the bathroom wall and subsequently a bulge in the wall in the kitchen.

24. The Plaintiffs notified the OHA, via numerous written e-mail, of the bulges in the wall, but no action, other than cosmetic measures were taken to cover up the bulges.

25. After moving into the residence located at 3712 Frances Street in April of 2015 the Plaintiffs noticed respiratory issues, sinus and allergic reactions.

26. The Plaintiffs were concerned of possibly mold in their unit and made numerous written and verbal requests for their unit to be inspected.

27. The OHA did not respond to the Plaintiffs complaints until December of 2015. In the OHA's inspection by its maintenance crew in December of 2015, it found evidence of mold within the unit located at 3712 Frances Street.

28. On December 11, 2015 the Douglas County Health Department conducted a visual inspection of the unit located at 3712 Frances Street and found indications of mold.

29. The Plaintiffs retained a contractor to conduct an inspection of the area on December 17, 2015 and verified mold being within the unit located at 3712 Francis Street, including Stachybrotos and Aspergillus molds.

30. Due to these reports of mold, Plaintiffs physicians urged that the Plaintiffs be removed from the unit located at 3712 Frances Street.

31. The OHA transferred the Plaintiffs to the (b) (6) Apartment Complex, but not until the end of April, 2016. Accordingly from April 2015 through April of 2016, the Plaintiffs were subjected to leaving in a mold infested environment and suffering from respiratory distress, sinus and allergic reactions and mental distress.

32. Due to Plaintiffs financial condition and reliance on the OHA for housing, they could not break their lease with the OHA or find other housing.

33. Due to Plaintiffs financial condition and requirements under their lease agreement with the OHA they were unable to remediate either the bed bug issue or mold/fungus issues on their own.

COUNT I

THE OHA VIOLATED THE LANDLORD TENANT ACT

34. The Plaintiffs incorporate paragraphs 1-33 as if full set forth herein.

35. The OHA owned the properties located at 8306 Underwood Ave, Apt. 205 and 3712 Frances Street at all times material herein;

36. The Plaintiffs were tenants of the OHA at the properties located at 8306 Underwood Ave, Apt. 205 and 3712 Frances Street at all times material herein;

37. Pursuant to Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419, a landlord, such as the OHA , has certain duties including but not limited to:

a. Substantially comply, after written or actual notice, with the requirements of the applicable minimum housing codes materially affecting health and safety;

b. Make all repairs and do whatever is necessary, after written or actual notice, to put and keep the premises in a fit and habitable condition; and

c. Maintain in good and safe working order and condition all sanitary, ventilating and other facilities and appliances.

38. The OHA had both written and actual notice of bed bugs within the premises of (b) (6) and never remediated the situation, causing Plaintiffs to suffer from bed bug bites and extreme mental distress. Further the OHA did not transfer the Plaintiffs to a different unit until more than 8 months had passed from the first discovery of bed bugs within the apartment. Nor did the OHA do whatever was necessary to protect the Plaintiffs from being exposed to bed bugs or fixing the situation considering Plaintiffs physical ailments and conditions.

39. The OHA had both written and actual notice of fungus/mold in the units located at (b) (6) and 3712 Frances Street and either did not remediate the situation or take appropriate measures to do what was necessary to protect the Plaintiffs from being exposed to mold considering Plaintiffs physical ailments and conditions.

40. The Plaintiffs, due to their physical and financial conditions, were/are reliant on housing form the OHA and were unable to move or break its lease with the OHA. Further, due to their physical and financial conditions, Plaintiffs were unable to remediate the bed bugs or mold issues.

41. As a result of the Defendant's non-compliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419, Plaintiffs incurred damages as follows:

a. Physical injuries from bed bug bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic conditions due to exposure to fungus/mold and other related injuries;

b. Medical bills related to bed beg bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic reactions and other related physical symptoms due to the mold/fungus exposure;

c. Extreme mental strain, distress and stress, anxiety and depression;

d. Out of pocket expenses for testing of mold;

e. Property damage and losses due to exposure to bed bugs and mold, the total amount to be determined at time of trial;

f. They are likely to continue to suffer long term effects, both mentally and physically, due to their exposure to the above conditions.

42. The actions of the OHA were willful in their non-compliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419.

43. Further the Plaintiffs are entitled to recovery of attorney fees.

Wherefore, due to the Defendants willful action and in being in noncompliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. 76-1419, Plaintiffs request their special damages, general damages, to be determined at trial, along with recovery of reasonable attorney fees and costs.

COUNT 2 NEGLIGENCE

44. The Plaintiff incorporates Paragraphs 1-43 as if fully set forth herein.

45. The Defendants, as landlords of the Plaintiffs at (b) (6) and 3712 Francis Streets, owed a duty to maintain a habitable premises.

46. The OHA breached this duty in the following particulars:

a. Not properly and efficiently remediating or eradicating the bed bug infestation at the Plaintiffs premises located at (b) (6)

b. Not transferring the Plaintiffs from (b) (6) in a timely fashion and having them reside in a bed bug infested apartment for over 8 months;

c. Not doing whatever was reasonably necessary to accommodate the Plaintiffs and fix the bed bug infestation.

d. Not properly inspecting/treating the property for bed bugs.

e. Not properly and efficiently remediating or fixing the mold/fungus issues at both the properties located at (b) (6) and 3712 Francis Street.

f. Not properly inspecting/treating the properties for mold/fungus;

g. Not doing whatever was reasonable necessary to accommodate the Plaintiffs and fix the mold/fungus situation at both properties;

h. Not transferring the Plaintiffs from (b) (6) or 3712 Frances Street after notice of the mold situation, thereby subjecting Plaintiffs to physical harm, sickness and mental distress for a long period of time.

47. That as a direct and proximate result of the negligence of the Defendant, Plaintiffs have incurred the following damages:

a. Physical injuries from bed bug bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic conditions due to exposure to fungus/mold and other related injuries;

b. Medical bills related to bed beg bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic reactions and other related physical symptoms due to the mold/fungus exposure;

c. Extreme mental strain, distress and stress, anxiety and depression;

d. Out of pocket expenses for testing of mold;

e. Property damage and losses due to exposure to bed bugs and mold, the total amount to be determined at time of trial;

f. They are likely to continue to suffer long term effects, both mentally and physically, due to their exposure to the above conditions.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff, prays for judgment against Defendant, for their special and general damages, together with the costs herein expended.

This info is included for self-evident reasons and it reflects what HUD FHEO refused to investigate, refused to stop, and allowed the OHA to commit against us. It also reflects the retaliation we suffered at the hands of the OHA and their surrogates and was sanctioned by HUD's FHEO in Washington D.C., Kansas City Regional Office, Omaha FHEO Office as well as the Omaha Local HUD Office. Instead of recognizing that we are a protected class of disabled seniors we were asked to stop filing complaints and that HUD does not typically intervene with the general operations of their partners.

What we are informing you of is a Fact. The tenant in (b) (6) in our (b) (6) apartment building had a protection order upheld against her while she has resided here at (b) (6) As such, the OHA had elected to NOT EVICT her and instead allow her to continue living in public housing. Further, this tenant is a witness to the fact that (b) (6) has been residing with (b) (6) since she has been living in the unit across the hall from ours. (b) (6) had informed us that she has been living in that unit for 7 years now. (b) (6) also claims she lives alone as she had testified to under oath and had signed as a fact under penalty of perjury in her complaint against myself John Spanyers.

Since the OHA has elected to bypass an eviction process for an upheld protection order against the tenant in (b) (6) then we are being treated differently than other tenants and as such, the OHA is applying a double standard against our household which is a discriminatory act. It is important that we inform you of this fact.

Patrick Cohoon, an Attorney for Legal Aid of Nebraska whom represented us in this eviction matter noticed the clear conflictive testimony by (b) (6)and her Witnesses. He also recognized that I had done nothing that warranted an eviction that would rise to the level for such an eviction and that it is the first time that he had seen such harshness in a case like this. He also noted that we had kept the OHA informed as to why we were recording the violations.

It should be noted for the record that we also reported these activities to HUD's OIG Hotline as well as with Janet Blackman with the State Investigative Unit.

I wrote the following to Ms. Blackman:

Dear Ms. Blackman,

As promised back in June, I would contact you with more information if and when I had more information concerning (b) (6)Jo Doyon and (b) (6) that both reside at (b) (6) that is known as the '(b) (6) Apartments" that is managed by the Omaha Housing Authority.

As you can see by the attached information, we have been attempting to communicate to our landlord our concerns and questions regarding this household. To our knowledge our landlord has not addressed or followed thru on investigating this household for housing fraud. We have pointed out according to our understanding, ongoing violations of the admission and continued occupancy policy (ACOP), the Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Our Lease violations, the Violation - City Code Of Ordinances: (which may be located here https://www.municode.com/library/ne/omaha/codes/code_of_ordinances?nodeId=PTIIMUCO_CH18NU&showChanges=true), the cameras that they (not OHA), installed, the middle of the night property alterations they so frequently do under the cover of darkness, as well as the fact that that (b) (6) is living there.

Although we have been informed that they have been living together since 2009 we have only been able to establish that Mr. (b) (6) (thru public records) has claimed to be residing here at (b) (6) since 2011. The fact that his name is on the mail box here as a resident also reflects this. It might help for you to see what address he is using on his driver's license (which is "(b) (6) that is attached with the additional information in this email.

It is our understanding that you will be able to confirm more information thru the IRS (State & Federal), Social Security Administration, the Dept of Labor as well as the many other interface resources, that you have at your disposal, to confirm this individuals residence, employment, and resources.

Our life has been turned into living hell by this household and their friend that lives above us since our managers came and directed her to remove her plants from the hall way. We have been harassed, threatened, abused and have had lies stated upon us in a false fictitious (Under the Penalty of Perjury) Affidavit, for bringing to light what they are and have been doing.

As you know, we have been questioning the validity of their statements regarding their living composition and possible unreported income. The first red flag I had was why her caretaker was making in the middle of the night alterations, to the OHA managed property, and why was he driving and parking an unlicensed vehicle since he held a full time job. I think the biggest flag was why Ms. (b) (6)had or needed a live-in caretaker in a one room apartment when we were witnessing daily attending to all her flowers and plants without him out there. I have never known anyone that could attend to so many plants that required a live-in care taker.

Prior to us moving back to (b) (6) this is how it the front of our unit. These are Ms. (b) (6) fixtures and plants that she is outraged at me for wanting them removed.

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

Why it has not raised flags with anyone as to how she has been able to tend for these plants if she is as she claims she is. Admittedly she does have a green thumb for gardening as you can see from the link below.

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

We are hoping and praying that all the other investigators will coordinate with you to get to the bottom of what should not be occurring.

Again thank you for addressing this.

Respectfully,

John & Christine Spanyers

For the record as of today March 9th 2017 nothing has changed at the (b) (6) Apartment's. The (b) (6) Household still has their unlicensed and uninsured (b) (6) VIN # (b) (6) and is still parked on the back parking lot to (b) (6) It is apparent that the OHA is allowing these residents to break Omaha City Ordinances, violate the ACOP Rules pointed out in our complaints to the OHA. Rather than enforcing their own ACOP rules, it appears that the OHA's primary focus was to have us evicted and to allow and encourage criminal activity by their resident proxy as a reward for their help in getting us evicted from the OHA Program.

We will be respectfully asking our President, President Trump, our HUD Secretary, Dr. Ben Carson and our U.S. Attorney General, Attorney General Jeff Sessions to please investigate our complaints and to have all emails sent to/from us ((b) (6)@(b) (6) and (b) (6) @(b) (6)) and all emails sent by/ received from the following HUD Officials to our email address including all correspondence mailed to us from HUD's FHEO – Sara Pratt, Gordon Patterson, Gayle Bohling (Washington D.C.), Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, Antony May (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office, HUD Hotline OIG, HUD online 503 Complaints filed as well as Nandinee Kutty from the HUD Enforcement Center in Washington D.C. recovered and reviewed from the National Archives and Records Administration.

These records will clearly show how discriminately cruel the FHEO and Local HUD Employees were toward our household and just how little these employee did for our household other than telling us to stop bothering them with complaints. It will also show that the FHEO singled us out and refused to process our complaints or give us proper due process.

This information will help our Administration and Dr. Carson understand why Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office should be termed immediately and why this PHA should be debarred and stripped of Federal Grant Monies. Additionally we will be asking that copies be provided to the House Oversight Committee as well as the Senate Appropriations Committee to aid the members in deciding whether funding should be cut or suspended to this PHA organization.

Gregory King and Shila Hernandez both out right lied to us when they told us that this PHA is not allowed to retaliate against us for filing complaints. That is all this PHA has done to us since we filed our complaints. They have slandered and assassinated our character, accused us of committing computer crimes at board meetings forced us to live in substandard housing and to pay for rent this. They were allowed to cause irreparable harm to our mental and emotional health, caused undue hardship in an attempt to compel us to with draw our HUD complaints.

Even now they are requiring that in order to settle our state lawsuit they want us to sign an indemnify clause as so HUD will not come after them for damages and to release them on all State and Federal Tort Action before they will settle our State case. We are left wondering if this is another brain storm or joint operation by Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office and this PHA.

We were directed to stop filing complaints and stop sending email to which we complied. As a result of following these directive it allowed the OHA to have its way with us to put us in a very hostile environment and as so this PHA could use its resident proxies to have us removed from affordable housing and to have us removed from the program and thrown to the streets.

Even now we are fearful of Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office. These individuals were fully aware of what we were being subjected to by this PHA and they outright refused to take any action to protect us from these abuses such as filing a TRO and relocating us to another PHA. Instead of trying to eliminate housing discrimination these individuals by their actions promoted just the opposite and embolden this PHA to continue abusing us.

Although we both meet and exceed the criteria for a protected class in accordance with Federal Law and HUD'S FHEO standards, we unfortunately have learned that we do not meet the racial criteria with Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office to be given equal access and equal protection by their FHEO Office and local HUD Office. It should be added that we have emails and other evidentiary in support of this dual complaint.

Since we writing this email to our City Council…

Email written to Omaha City Council Members September 4th, 2012

Dear Distinguished and Honorable Members of the Omaha City Council,

I am writing to ask for your help with ongoing concerns and issues. I am afraid that unless our City Council intervenes, on behalf of ourselves and our City, this is going to continue. I know of no other Department in our City where the Board is ran by insubordinate's nor do I know of any other City that would allow, insubordinate's such as these to remain in a position of Public Trust. These insubordinates are costing our City.

We have, as best as we know how, have attempted to communicate every possible means our Housing Authority Board Member's the seriousness of our situation, and the consequences for ignoring them.

And yet nothing is done on their part. Unlike yourselves, they seem to behave as a puppet Board, rather than exercise the Powers given to them when they received the Privilege and Honor, to be appointment, by our Mayor and the Trust and Confidence of our Omaha Council Members, when they were appointed there to present position.

We want to apologize, for having to bother our City Council Member's, with concerns that should have been addressed long, long time ago. We feel that we are being forced to come to you, in order to stop the abuse and violations occurring at our Housing Authority. The fact that our Commissioners, are allowing these insubordinates to dictate and manipulate our Board Member's infuriates us beyond words. I do not feel our City needs the reputation or the disgrace that is occurring to our City now. You are our, most respected leaders, because we the citizen of Omaha trust you. This is something you have earned. When we the citizens go to the ballot box and cast a vote, we are saying, "You have earned our Trust, our Confidence, and our Knowing, you have earned our Vote!"

We the citizens trust your wisdom in all affairs of our City, Our Great and Beautiful City, the City of Omaha Nebraska. We trust that you will protect our City from harm. We trust that you will protect our City's Honor/Reputation. We trust that you will promote tourism, and business growth in our community. We trust that you will conduct and perform your Duties. We Trust You!!!

Without our Council Members, there would be no City. Our Council Members have created our order by passing laws to delegate how to protect and maintain our City from harm, as so we the citizens may have maintained safety from harm. It does not matter from which political party you subscribe. What is important is, that we Trust you and we the citizens have Confidence in your vision for our future. Trust is the seat of all of our commerce and business. In fact Trust is so important to our great nation that we have embedded "In God We Trust" up on our Currency that we use in our commerce and business. Trust is a wonderful thing. With Trust comes Honor, with Honor comes Respect. These three Vestments are, the Crown Jewels of Truth, upon which all Good Things Spring. Truth is what validates the core of our values. Are we not asked when we take a witness stand to make an oath, by swearing to tell the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth?

What happens when our core values, are brutally assaulted by acts of betrayal, cheating, cons, deceiving, double-cross, duping, finesse, flimflamming, hoodwinking, manipulating, play for a sucker, roping in, scamming, stringing along, suckering in, trickery, playing for a chump, baiting, with the beguiled acts, by insubordinates that all the while bait, bewitch, cajole, captivate, charm, come on, enchant, persuade, entrap, lead on, seduce, tempt, prevent, tantalize, coax, decoy, fascinate, entice, hook, threaten, turn on, sweep off feet, win over, and wile, all those that that seek an explanation of their acts , to prevent the truth from being known.

Does not our trust turn to disbelief, distrust and mistrust? Does not our honor turn to derision, humiliation, and disgrace? Does not our respect turn to scorn, condemnation, dishonor, disrespect, and disobedience? And does not our truth become falsehood, lies, deceitfulness and mendacity when we allow insubordinates to beguile us from our Cities, foundation of Trust, Honor, Respect, and Truth? When Haters and Deceivers take away our Truth; we are allowing them to take away our Respect.

When we allow them to take away our Respect; we are allowing them to take away our Honor. When we allow them to take away our Honor; we are allowing them to take away our Trust. When we allow them take away our Trust; we are allowing them to take away our Faith in Our City Government. So you see Trust Is Very Important, especially when it comes to our City Government, and our City Government Administrative Employees.

Throughout our ordeal we have made every attempt to possible, to be removed from our dilemma and express our concerns about what was occurring, within our Housing Authority, and how we were being treated. When it became apparent that we were getting nowhere, we elected to remain silent and except the hopelessness of our situation, as so often happens with residents within our Housing Authority, because of everything being stacked against us, because of our Housing Authority Administrators and Managers.

You can only imagine how delighted we were when Ben Gray invited us to come to the Omaha Housing Authority to share our concerns. We were especially excited because we were able to share this with our District Councilman so we could get resolve. We actually believed that Ben Gray cared for the Citizens of Omaha, and was working with both Honorable Mayor and our Distinguished City Council Members to make our City of Omaha a Safe and Healthy place for us to raise our families. Knowing Ben Gray had the personal ear of our Honorable Mayor gave us even greater confidence that our dilemma would soon be over, which is why we attended our Housing Authority Board meeting, on July 26th 2012. Please we invite each you our Distinguished Council Members to take some time to review this meeting. Here: http://youtu.be/(b) (6)

We attended this meeting even though our fellow resident and visitors insisted it, was nothing but a pure waste of our time. They argued that crime rate and violence in District Two is the Highest in our City and if Ben Gray did not care about the African Americans in his own District why would he careabout us. We were asked if we had contributed to his campaign, and were we politically news worthy enough to catapult his political ambitions. If not we were on dream time. When added to the fact fact that we were not African American, certainly guarantees nothing that nothing was going to happen.

Being a believer in our Country's values and the value of our City Government, I staunchly advocated that they were badly mistaken, and they would see that he was not someone whom gave lip service, just for the primary purpose of pandering to the voters, for the sole purpose for to further own selfish political career. What a complete fool I was, and I am ashamed of myself for not listening. It has been nothing less than a humiliating for me to go and sincerely apologize to every person that I spoke so highly too about Ben Gray.

It has been bad enough that we were made a complete laughing stock to everyone in our building since we were purposely placed in a unit that did not have the proper mold remediation and then forced to live in it, and then to have a Housing Board Member, and City Council Board Member tell us that he knew that the mold report was wrong but there is nothing he could do, and but he would look into it, has gave us no other choice but to file a proper complaints, to get to the bottom of what has been happening to us here at the Crown Tower since our move in. Clearly Ben Gray refuses to act individually in his own capacity as a Board Member of the Omaha Housing Authority, or individually in his official capacity as a Distinguished Member of our Omaha City Council. It is insulting that he does not understand or even appreciate his own position of Trust that has been bestowed upon him. I admit that I am poor, uneducated and disabled, but at least I do appreciate and have more revere respect to the positions that he is disgracing, a lot more than he understands what his responsibilities are in both these positions to our wonderful City of Omaha Nebraska.

I mean no disrespect to the most Honorable Offices that Ben Gray holds, nor do I want to offend the Officers of these positions, because I have the Highest Respect for these Distinguished and Honorable Office's. But to be frank I cannot respect the man, Ben Gray that holds these such offices, and I am more than confident that the voters, we the citizens, will not forget his actions (or lack thereof,) nor will they forgive his neglect of duties for years to come, concerning what has happened to us, and we are certain that it will inevitable haunt all of his political aspirations for years and years to come. This we are sure of!!! Trust is very important to all of us, we the citizens of our Great City, and more importantly to all of us, we the citizens of our Great State of Nebraska.

On February, 9th 2010,we came back from getting groceries, only to find our beloved family pet and my service pet, was found mutilated by (b) (6) This monster not only killed our beloved pet, he stated he was sorry that he did this out of family love. We informed him that we were going to file charges against him for his actions, and for what he did to our pet. It was then that he ran and grabbed a rifle and started shooting this firearm in the house, yelling obscenities as to how he was going to kill every mother*er, my wife grabbed our pet while he chased after her and our mutilated pet that was in my wife's arms, he then coked the rifle three times and proceeded to aim it directly at her head, and then shot at our car where he thought I was. He kept yelling how a lot of people were going to die and started yelling all sorts of terroristic threats, and threatened to kill us. While the Police were on their way, (b) (6) was on the telephone calling his gang member brother, receiving instructions on what to do and what to say when the Police arrived. (b) (6) then proceeded to attempt to hide the weapons used in the commission of his crimes all the while communicating with his older gang member brother. This happened at my wife's father's place of resident. This was the very same home where my wife had grown up in, and was continuously abused. (b) (6) older brother (b) (6) is a lifelong THUG gang member of MBC in south Omaha. He has an arrest record for possession of drugs and was not happy that we were, as they called us "50 Callers" when it came to illegal activities. In fact we had no idea what we were confronting when we were trying stop the illegal activities occurring at her father's home. After the Police standoff, the Omaha Police Department searched and confiscated the firearms that my wife's father continuously allowed (b) (6) to use, so he could go rob our citizens and use the firearms toward the purpose of intimidation to get what he wanted when he wanted, throughout our City in the commission of crimes. Our Brave Omaha Police Department was finally able to arrest this psychopath by taking him into custody, from there he was placed it the adult day care facility for dysfunctional adults, better known as the Douglas County Jail. After learning that we were not killed, (b) (6) (his gang member name) became very upset that his brother was arrested and that our Omaha Police took away all the fire arms, so they were without their"Heat and Glocks" as he was known to call them. It was on my birthday that I found the weapon used to kill our pet Jasper. (please see attached)

Both my wife and I are eternally grateful to (b) (6) and his office for putting this monster in prison, where he belongs. Namely it was (b) (6) that finally put this monster in prison for 8 years and 8 months. To give you an idea of what we had to go through, after our family pet and my service pet was mutilated and murdered by (b) (6) we witnessed my wife's dad intentionally and purposely attempt to cover up his crimes. He knowingly and intentionally went out of his way to soak and then wash EVERY knife and screw driver in his house and garage in kerosene to remove any and all traces of blood because, he was unable, to confirm with (b) (6) where he hid them, before the police came the night he committed mutilated our pet. My wife's dad demanded that we let (b) (6) out of Jail because he was only playing with our cat and if we did not, help him to get out of Jail, then we were not a good Christians. He also explained that (b) (6) was only playing around when he aimed the rifle at my wife's head and shot up our car. My wife's father is an enabler in the worst way, he allows these thugs to do drugs and in his home and has allowed these thugs to illegally do construction work in his home without getting proper permits for installs such as his furnace, which by the way we are surprises has not blown up or caused carbon monoxide poisoning. These Thugs are constantly getting money from him for their illegal drugs or selling him stolen items. He has even witnessed (b) (6) rape a girl in his home and refuses to report what he witnessed. He has also witnessed a child being abused by (b) (6) and did nothing to stop what was happening. In fact both my wife and I had to go to the Federal Bureau of Investigation to report activities. Every one of these thugs that my wife's father knows and affiliates with, are nothing more than drug abusers. They come to his home, for the sole purpose just to get money from him so they can purchase and use a white substance called methamphetamines. It is the PARASITE DESTROYER !!! Whenever these THUGS want money for their poison the all go to "Grandpa" as he is known to get their cash. And when these THUGS can't get the cash out of him they turn around and rip off his home. Rather than criminally prosecuting them he instead just plays stupid so he can turn it into his insurance, for a higher price than what he really pays for it. The whole thing was just sickly repulsive. The only reason I could not go to my family for help is because all of my brother and sisters, we were all taken away from my parents for the brutal abuse I and my siblings were made to suffer at the hands of my parent. It was after I had my front teeth knocked out of my mouth and my ear and hearing permanently damaged, that anything was, actually done, to stop the abuse. In fact I had was placed in a hospital for the longest time, while the State placed my other siblings in foster homes, for adoption to other families in other States, in order to protect us from being abused. To this day I do not where any of my siblings are or if they are even alive. In fact my mother committed suicide on my brothers birthday when she learned we would never be coming back home. It was because of what my dad had been doing to all of us, and her. It completely devastated her. To this day I am still suffering from effects of what I was made to suffer growing up. You see it was legislatures such as yourself on a State level that made it possible to make changes in laws as so culprits can't run off and not be accountable as my dad was able to do our mom and all of us kids. I share this with you as so you can better understand why I have so much faith in our Rules of Law and those that oversee the creation of them. Hopefully you will understand why we decided to live in our car rather than staying at my wife's fathers place. We came to our Housing Authority to seek refuge and escape abuse, not to be abused in our refuge.

We are no longer interested in more excuses. Nor are we any interested in the irrelevancy of whether it was right or wrong. What we are interested in, is whether or not it has been legal.

I do not know how to ask any clearer, or make it any simpler to our Housing Authority Board Member's, what their Responsibilities are to our City, and for them to fulfill them.

Below are the emails we have sent, and the responses.

Truly this is not good for our - City Omaha Nebraska.

I want to thank you addressing these matters,

Respectfully Your,

John and Christine Spanyers

Jaun Perez with the Omaha World Herald reported - "OHA is required to repay $1.1 million in federal Section 8 voucher funds that were improperly used for the agency's operations last year. The agency also moved roughly $1.5 million in restricted money to fund Housing in Omaha."

Now look at those involved with our HUD complaints:

OHA CHIEF Former EXECUTIVE OFFICER – (Clifford Scott) An individual that acted insubordinate with his previous employer (back in Youngstown Ohio), and then came here to Omaha and overstated his previous pay. Was this to balloon the salary he was seeking and given?

This was reported by: Liz Dorland, ldorland@action3news.com. This is what our Honorable Nebraska State Senator Ernie Chambers has said about Two of our Housing Authority Board Members. I already have shared what I believe concerning, George B. Achola, Clifford Scott and Ben Gray with our other City Council Member of the Omaha Housing Authority. You will note that Fred Conley is the Chairman of the Omaha Housing Authority. These are four key individuals involved with our complaints and living conditions that our Omaha HUD Office has and have been working with concerning our issues. You may want to go look for yourself.

Omaha, NE -- Ernie Chambers is taking no prisoners. The former Nebraska State Senator not only went after his opponent Senator Brenda Council, but anyone who's publicly supported her. Chambers used his weekly show to slam his District 11 opponent Brenda Council on the same day she admitted in court, to using her campaign funds at casinos. With just 48- days until voters head to the polls, State Senator Ernie Chambers is taking-off the gloves. He's not only going after Council, but her associates as well. Nebraska State Senator Brenda Council's guilty plea made national headlines in the Washington Post and The Huffington Post. While she isn't talking about how her conviction is impacting her campaign for re-election, Ernie Chambers wasted no time getting right to the point, on his weekly show on Cox CTI 22. "She is a self-confessed convicted criminal, and we have people saying that this community believes that we can be properly represented by a criminal," said State Senator Ermitus. Chambers didn't stop there. He also fired-off at Nebraska Attorney General John Bruning, claiming Council's crimes are felonies. He stated,"The Attorney General did not charge her with any violation of the campaign laws which she in-fact violated. That is how white men can orchestrate something to let a person off the hook when they want to." He also called out Council's supporters: Omaha City Councilman Ben Gray, OPS Board President Freddie Gray, County Commissioner Chris Rogers and Campaign Manager Fred Conley. Chambers sternly stated on his show, "They came to the defense of Freddie Gray who is established as a liar", "Ben Gray is a liar" and "Douglas County Commissioner Chris Rogers, who has done nothing for this community people have no idea who he is." Chambers also pointed out in 1992, Senator Council's campaign manager, Fred Conley, was fined big bucks for misusing campaign funds. Conley who is traveling to Washington D.C said, "I really think Chambers is beating a dead horse ... as far as the election, she (Council) wants to move forward on what she can do for the district, and I think Chambers needs to do the same." Fred Conley didn't argue the claim of misusing campaign money. He also said Senator Council is removing her name from the list of people who are able to sign campaign checks. KMTV contacted Attorney General John Bruning, and Commissioner Chris Rogers, but haven't heard back. We also asked to talk with Senator Council, but was told "she's not talking about it anymore". Reported By: Liz Dorland, ldorland@action3news.com Respectfully, John and Christine Spanyers Lastly Former U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Deputy Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Programs (Sara K.Pratt).

Lastly I shared this with Ms. Kutty with HUD'S Enforcement Center in an email titled "Unanswered and unresolved outstanding issues!!!" on January 23rd 2017.

The only time we ever met any investigator's was when Sheila Hernández and Gregory King came to the Crown Towers the second week of August 2013. In fact I sent you an email showing the molds spores witnessed growing by FHEO's Investigators Sheila Hernandez and Gregory King when they came and interviewed us the second week of August 2013.

This again was the ONLY time that any that the FHEO ever came in person to investigate. The whole time that we were being Tormented and Tortured with Bedbugs and mold including TOXIC MOLD the FHEO REFUSED to come witness and investigate the intolerable conditions we were being made to live in and forced to pay rent without investigating in person regarding the intolerable conditions we were being made to live in.

Rather than investigating and stopping the ongoing retaliatory acts of the OHA, the FHEO instead sent us three separate emails stating "As a matter of practice, HUD does not typically intervene with the general operations of our partners," and refused to relocate us from the abuse and abusers and did absolutely nothing about what HUD CLEARLY knew was outright lies that we had crashed local HUD computers. Instead HUD allowed their partner to repeatedly retaliate on us and allowed their partner the free reign to torture us with bedbugs while they mocked and laughed openly in September of 2015 Board Meeting while they knew we were in mold conditions, dangerously high carbon dioxide air levels, while being eaten alive mercilessly by bedbugs.

If this hell wasn't bad enough, HUD's partner Susan Gilroy moved us into a unit where the previous tenant of 3712 Frances St had died in the front room on the carpet that was not replaced after his death and neither Susan Gilroy nor her site manager had the courtesy to inform us of this. This nondisclosure was both sick and cruel.

The unit we were placed by HUD's partner the OHA is where they refused for months to maintenance, properly and where we were forced to have a non-working faulty (13 year old) hot water heater that had to be replaced due to its malfunction and its age. In fact when we did our walk thru we pointed out the bulge in the walls and the leaking drain gutters. As a result after months of refusing and ignoring the issues we had to send the copy emails to Susan Gilroy, Jennifer Dexter and copied HUD and Senator Fischer's Office.

Ms. Dexter & Ms. Gilroy:

We have repair issues that need to be addressed. Repair orders have previously been called into the OHA repair line. HUD is copied on this email due to the nature of these maintenance concerns.

1) One of the most pressing repair issues is the fact that the tempered glass on the front door of the oven keeps falling down / falling open and is in danger of falling off the stove / oven and possibly shattering. One could easily walk into the sharp edges of this large glass piece and seriously get hurt and as such, the OHA has been put on notice of this danger and possible injury. This matter should be addressed as an Emergency. The HEAVY glass oven door piece is taped on at this time in an attempt to keep the glass on the oven door. Due to this condition, the oven is unusable. Shawn with the OHA Maintenance Dept. had replaced the oven door gasket and it appears that the door wasn't properly reassembled. This occurrence with the door glass piece started last evening when we were cooking in the oven and was called into the OHA repair line this morning.

2) Another issue again is the gutter and drain pipe on the back side of our rental unit at Frances Court Apartments as whenever it rains, it causes LOUD SOUNDS off of the defective drain pipe and gutter which is close to our unit bedroom window and as such, it keeps us up and unable to properly sleep when we sleep in our unit bedroom affecting our tenant rights as is our understanding. We had called this repair order in a while back as you had instructed us to do after OHA Maintenance had failed to fix the problem in the first place from your work order and to date, the OHA has not fixed this problem. We had even previously discussed this matter with you via phone and also via email. Was awoken again this morning with the LOUD SOUND of the rain hitting the drain pipe and interrupting our right to sleep. The weather forecast includes daily rain for multiple days except this Saturday and Sunday. Does this mean that we will need to suffer ongoing without proper sleep for multiple days when trying to sleep in our bed due to "no fault of our own"? This is another recorded attempt to address this maintenance need with the OHA.

3) There appears to be significant bulging occurring that is causing a large crack and paint peeling at the upper wall / ceiling area over the kitchen cabinetry. This was previously discussed a while back with Shawn with OHA Maintenance and as such, Shawn was going to have a painter address this matter; however, to date, this has not been done. We had even made a work order request a while back concerning this matter; however, to date this has not been addressed. The concern is that Christine is allergic to mold and this could be a symptom of housing mold and as such, we are again attempting to get this concern addressed by the OHA. This attempt becomes a matter of record.

4) The gutter above our unit front door is NOT PROPERLY SEALED. Rain is coming through and drips on whoever is underneath the gutter in this area when it rains. Shawn with OHA Maintenance had replaced the front gutter, but it wasn't properly sealed and as such, this should be addressed. This work order request was called into the OHA. If this repair need isn't addressed prior to winter, then we are in danger of an ice build-up in front of our unit door and as such, the OHA has been put on notice of this danger and cause of possible injury. This concern was previously discussed with Shawn; however, he feels that he had properly sealed the gutter. We are being dripped on underneath the front door gutter and it is dripping through the front door gutter when it rains and as such, we pray that the OHA will fix this repair need.

5) We had made a work order a while back for weather stripping for the screen door and the front door as there doesn't appear to be any weather stripping under the screen door and the weather stripping under the front door is tearing off. This work order was called in a while back after discussing this issue with Shawn with OHA Maintenance as he had instructed us to call in a work order for weather stripping for the screen door and the front door of our rental unit. To date, this has not been fixed. Please note that we have asked the OHA for an extra utility allowance due to medical and weather stripping helps with utilities and protection against weather elements. When it is storming and raining out with a strong wind, the wind pulls the screen door wide open as it doesn't latch well and there doesn't appear to be any weather stripping under the screen door to help keep the door sealed. This is an old door. We were sent an application via mail for weatherization assistance for our rental unit and as such, it appears that this weatherization assistance application was sent to us by the State of Nebraska which is our understanding falls under the Federal LIHEAP energy program. We are in the process of sending this application in to SENCA for weatherization help. This will involve an evaluation of weatherization needs for our rental unit. It is our understanding that SENCA will also have the efficiency of our unit appliances checked to include the furnace and hot water heater. It is good that the OHA had elected to replace the inefficient hot water heater that was in our rental unit when we were first moved here. This was done after we had made multiple requests that the OHA fix the hot water heater problem.

We don't understand why our repair needs aren't being properly addressed. This is an attempt to have our repair needs properly addressed and fixed. We pray that our repair needs are addressed and fixed by the OHA.

Sincerely,

John & Christine Spanyers

It took until December 3rd, 2015 (seven months) before HUD's partner Susan Gilroy and her Site Manager came to our unit to address the bulge in the walls. When it was discovered toxic mold coming thru both sides of the wall (Bathroom & Kitchen) due to no fault of our own. Attached is the hand delivered ultimatum that Susan Gilroy hand delivered personally by hand the following day.

As you can see from the first email I sent you, the OHA refused to repair the gutters or the ice buildup that was occurring at our front door all because we did not want the OHA to do toxic mold remediation (with our belongings in the unit), or be placed back at the (b) (6) Apartments. It was then that the OHA legal Counsel approximately a month later Mr. Hansen sent the attached email to our State case legal counsel offering a suitable unit for us, PROVIDED we release the OHA from our discrimination complaints. We filed our complaints because of the never ending ongoing discriminative retaliatory actions and abuse that we had been made to suffer by the OHA all the while HUD was copied on and stood by thru out this abuse and did absolutely NOTHING to remove us from the harsh conditions that was being imposed on us. There is no doubt what so ever that this was being done to us, ALL because of our HUD Discrimination complaints that we had filed, on HUD's partner the OHA.

It's a fact that the OHA continued with the ongoing retaliation by NOT repairing the gutters or keeping the ice from our front door but rather singled us out and made sure everyone else (including their own on-sight office), was cleared of all ice and snow but repeatedly refused to do a single thing concerning our unit or our household to remove the ongoing sheets of ice in front of our unit in order to cause or create personal harm or injury.

As you can clearly see beyond any doubt that we did all that we could in order not to be placed back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartment. Even though HUD had full knowledge that we were being forced to go there or the streets rather than 3716 Frances Street which would have adequately met all of our reasonable accommodations, HUD instead presented us with FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement, that offered to give us Rights that HUD should have been enforcing unconditionally to begin with since it is the LAW. This with FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement drawn up by Kathryn A. Amaya was nothing less than insultingly shameful if not disgraceful. To HUD's credit it made abundantly apparent that HUD's part had been way more than complacent if not conjunctive in the ongoing abuse that we were made to suffer at the hands of HUD's partner the Omaha Housing Authority, which explains to us why HUD has never so much as did one a single thing to protect us, protect our class and our protected Rights given under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as well as Title III of the ADA RIGHTS. But these violations were also in violation of our Equal Protection Rights as U.S. citizens, our U.S. Constitutional Bill of Rights, namely being our 8th and 14thAmendment.

We were directed by both HUD and its partner the OHA to stop filing complaints and to stop emailing, which we did accordingly. We have no misgivings that HUD was in fact instrumental in our placement back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartments rather than placing us at 3716 Frances Street because we would not with draw our complaints.

Ms. Kutty, we want you to know that we have EVERY email both sent and received, every document, every video, and every audio as well as every photo preserved and recorded since this started. Back when we were living at the towers one of the Managers stated that it wasn't personal against us, it was politics. We know that with our New Administration and our new Cabinet picks that it won't politics, it will be personal. Needless to say we very, very are anxiously waiting for our Administration's Cabinet to be sworn in as so we can go forward and be made whole again.

We have been punished repeatedly for whistle blowing and reporting those that are committing fraud and reporting it to HUD and HUD's partner the OHA concerning those tenant's that were committing these fraudulent acts as well as the violators of the OHA ACOPS Rules as is encouraged by the OHA. The only one made afflicted by this has been us all the while those committing fraud are rewarded with affordable housing while HUD's Partner Susan Gilroy looks the other way.

We have no doubt what so ever that we were placed back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartments as so we could be further abused for refusing to drop our discrimination complaints and thrown out the program as so HUD's partner the OHA could have all of our complaints dismissed. The HUD's FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement drawn up by Kathryn A. Amaya removes all doubt on this.

Lastly both my wife and myself have and had reasonable accommodation's stating that we cannot tolerate mold and that we were to avoid mold and yet we were placed in mold at EVERY location. This was a repeated and REPEATED over and over, even though it was in complete violation of our reasonable accommodations by HUD's Partner the OHA. A question we intend to get answered is why this happened and why did the Department allow this, but more importantly why did the Department omit these violations in our complaints even though we provided proof that this was occurring. Hopefully we will learn WHY the Department refused to aggravate this repeated offense. And what the Department's part was in this ongoing abuse.

Before we go we went ahead and already forwarded pertinent emails to you prior to this email

We have absolutely zero faith in the Washington D.C. FHEO Office, Kansas City, Kansas FHEO Office, as well as the Omaha Nebraska FHEO Field Office which is why we are now allowing the reporters copies of all of our emails, audio recordings, video recordings, and photographs as well as other evidentiary that we have retained.

I believe it will help the public understand why we feel that it is imperative that the Administration immediately cut funding's to those PHA Organization that steal from the America Tax Payers and the Government entity that oversees and protects these thieving Organizations and allows them to retaliate, discriminate and abuse disabled families like ours when reporting abuse and discriminatory practices.

Through the FOIA Act these reporters will also be able to find out what FHEO's part is as a contributor to coving up these acts as well what and how much the FHEO has contributed to or is responsible for some of the billions of dollars in discrepancies now being reported since they do not like to interfere with the operations of their partners by allowing and facilitating crimes against the most vulnerable that are disabled by their partners such as in our cases.

We are filing a complaint against the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) for Retaliation and ongoing Discrimination.

After we had rejected a conciliation offer Katherine Amaya, local FHEO HUD, had written up, the OHA forced us to move into an OHA (b) (6) housing unit over our repeated objections or face eviction even though a more appropriate housing unit was available being the unit offered us by Ms. Amaya in the conciliation offer. The reason(s) why we rejected this offer was:

A "reasonable accommodation" is a change, exception, or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice, or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling, including public and common use spaces. Since rules, policies, practices, and services may have a different effect on persons with disabilities than on other persons, treating persons with disabilities exactly the same as others will sometimes deny them an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. The Act makes it unlawful to refuse to make reasonable accommodations to rules, policies, practices, or services when such accommodations may be necessary to afford persons with disabilities an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling.

A provider has an obligation to provide prompt responses to reasonable accommodation requests. An undue delay in responding to a reasonable accommodation request may be deemed to be a failure to provide a reasonable accommodation.

Under:

CHAPTER 6: DETERMINATION OF TOTAL TENANT PAYMENT

V. Annual Income

B. Amounts Excluded from Annual Income HUD requires OHA to exclude certain types of income from annual income. The OHA will work to ensure its employees are familiar with excluded income types, and will check periodically to determine whether new HUD directives have been issued. The following amounts are to be excluded from annual income under current HUD regulations:

16. Amounts specifically excluded by any other Federal statute from consideration as income for purposes of determining eligibility or benefits under a category of assistance programs that includes assistance under any program to which the exclusions set forth in 24 CFR 5.609(c) apply.

The following is the Federal statute 24 CFR 5.609(c), in which the exclusions OHA follows are set forth in:

(16) Amounts specifically excluded by any other federal statute from consideration as income for purposes of determining eligibility or benefits under a category of assistance programs that includes assistance under any program to which the exclusions set forth in 24 CFR 5.609(c) apply. A notice will be published in the Federal Register and distributed to housing owners identifying the benefits that qualify for this exclusion. Updates will be published and distributed when necessary.

(e) Payments or allowances made under the Department of Health and Human Services' Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (42 U.S.C. 8624[f]);

The OHA was in direct Violation of their own Policy (ACOP) by counting our payment from the Nebraska Dept. of Health and Human Services' Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) against OHA's portion of a Higher Utility Allowance for our household. This act was a direct Violation of our Fair Housing Rights.

As a part of HUD's FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement, the FHEO written up by Kathryn A. Amaya in both RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT as well as RELIEF IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST that we would receive what we were already entitled lawfully under Federal Statues.

Issues not addressed by Kathryn A. Amaya FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement were:

1. That we have been displaced three times by the respondents due to no fault of our own from being placed in mold conditions by the respondents.
2. It did not address the unnecessary delays in transfers to remove us from these conditions.
3. It did not address the coercion and the retaliatory acts committed by the respondents.
4. It did not address the pain and suffering that we have endured by the respondent.
5. It did not address the public humiliation that we have been made to suffer by the respondent.
6. It did not address that we were forced to live in bedbugs for nearly nine months due to the respondent refusing to treat our unit for bedbugs without the use of chemicals in accordance with the reasonable accommodations signed by our doctor.
7. It did not address that we had been forced to wrongfully pay rent for substandard living/housing conditions by the respondent since February 2011.
8. It did not address in any manner compensation for the above said, (#1 thru #7)
9. There was nothing in the RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT nor in the RELIEF IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST to safe guard or prevent the respondent from doing this again in the future to ourselves or others in the future.
10. In the RELIEF FOR COMPLAINANT concerning the Federal LIHEAP, the respondent only agreed to allow, what is already MANDATORY UNDER LAW and which is also required by established by law regarding the extra utility allowance concerning LIHEAP and our Reasonable Accommodations.

Why would anyone sign an agreement to receive what we are already fully entitled to under Federal Law and that which HUD under Federal Law should had been enforced by HUD to begin with? Why did the HUD's FHEO refuse to acknowledge our Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as well as Title III of the ADA RIGHTS?

The OHA then placed us in a hostile environment when we were relocated to the back to the OHA (b) (6) housing unit located at (b) (6) After the OHA forced us to be relocated to the (b) (6) Units, we notified the OHA of ACOP violations that were occurring at the (b) (6) Units. We wrote the following complaint to the OHA Management:

I am contacting you regarding on going conditions being generated by a fellow resident "(b) (6)that lives at (b) (6) ((b) (6) Apartments) and her live in boyfriend known as using the name "(b) (6)

This last weekend on June 19th 2016, I witnessed at 11:30pm at night (b) (6)disassemble the east porch railing at 8312 Underwood Ave Apt. 110. After disassembling the rail I witnessed (b) (6)applying foam on the porch.. When I asked him if he had permission from OHA to make alteration and repairs he was doing he stated that OHA has given him and (b) (6)permission to make any installations or repairs as they deem necessary for both our building as well as the building attached to ours. I then asked Rick if he was a contractor or employee of OHA. He stated that no he was not. I then asked exactly whom with the OHA, gave him and (b) (6)this permission or authority. He stated that it was "on the need to know basis and that it was between him (b) (6)and OHA. It was then that I pointed out that the OHA is obligated to maintain OHA's units and in a safe condition, and to make all necessary repairs to our units such as he was attempting to do in the middle of the night. He then stated "You need to get back in your place and mind your own business or else".

I would also like point out as I shared with you on the phone that this is the same household that claims that OHA designated their house hold to exclusive control over the usage of the outside water faucets. I am concerned with the statements being made by this household. I even pointed out to this household that if what they were saying to all of us was true, it would mean that what they are stating about the OHA is tantamount to saying that the OHA is practicing discriminatory policies against all of the other residents here at (b) (6) in favor of their household and that I would be inquiring about this since it would be discrimination if in fact it was true.

How and why this household is being allowed to use the commons of our community to store their personal belongings in the entrance hall to our front door, the laundry room, the laundry room closet, and everything on the grounds in front from their unit to the end of the adjoining building as seen in the youtube link gives the appearance that what they are saying has merit, even if it's not true. Heaven forbid if a fire broke out in their unit or the adjoining building in front because as you can see everyone would be in danger due to the impediments and obstacles that the emergency service will be forced to encounter because this households personal property. Also as you can see it also prevents the OHA open access to these areas.

Earlier this week I spoke with the Blue Jay Technician when he was here on site to spray for bugs at (b) (6) I had asked him if with all these plants being so close to the building whether or not they were contributing factors to the insect infestation, and He said absolutely . I would like to respectfully ask that you speak with him as so you can appreciate and understand what the behavior of this household is generating not only for the residents but also for Blue Jay and OHA.

It is my understanding from Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy (ACOP) that may be located at http://ohauthority.org/public-documents that the photo's I am sharing with you are in clear violations of the set policy and procedure of the OHA for all of the OHA tenants and is not UNIFORM with the property design, nor is it uniform with the neighborhood.

I would also like to share with you that they are the only household that drives up on the front lawn with an unlicensed vehicle to load and unload their personal property and apparatus's that is being spread out two buildings long.

Please note that our new maintenance team were compelled to throw out some of (b) (6)and (b) (6) belongings they were storing in the laundry room. Our new team went ahead and left the contents in the closet as well as their sheet of glass that they have stored next to the wash basin in the laundry room. Our new team did a great job of removing these from our commons.

As you can see from Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy (that the photos and video are in opposition to Part 1 Terms and Conditions Of Lease as well as The Admission and Continued Occupancy Policy. (See Below)

To remove from OHA property any vehicle without valid registration and inspection stickers. To refrain from parking any vehicles in any right-of-way or fire-lane designated and marked by OHA. Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We want to point out to the OHA that we were moved to our current OHA rental unit over our objections. As such, the OHA insisted we had to move here or lose our affordable housing. Again, we were moved into an OHA unit in which we have NO PRIVACY and we are being treated differently than other (b) (6) Apartment tenants.

The issues going on here involve multiple OHA ACOP Violations being committed by tenants (b) (6) and (b) (6) These individuals are targeting us because we had brought this concern to the OHA. Further, these individuals walk around with a cigarette in their mouths in the apartment building. This is a violation of the lease; however, these violations are continuing without intervention.

All of the issues we have brought up concerning these tenants and the (b) (6) property have been in the best interest and benefit of the OHA to help protect the property and to assure tenants are following the OHA ACOP and their lease. Further, Ms. (b) (6)and Mr. (b) (6) have plants on the outside of the (b) (6) apartment building blocking the windows to apartments. Why is it we aren't allow to block the windows on the inside of the apartment, but Ms. (b) (6)and Mr. (b) (6) are being allowed to block the windows on the outside of the apartment buildings? Again, this hinders Emergency Services from getting to tenants. This is being allowed to continue.

Signed,
John & Christine Spanyers

After we notified the OHA of these ACOP violations, the OHA knowing and purposely allowed their tenants to harass us and abuse us relentlessly at the (b) (6) Apartments for our reporting the OHA 'S ACOP violations and possible housing composition fraud by (b) (6) household. The OHA repeatedly ignored our multiple requests asking for intervention to stop the tenants from harassing us and abusing us. We had asked the OHA to transfer us from the (b) (6) unit due to the abuse, but the OHA ignored our request to be transferred.

Additionally we notified the OHA the following:

Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We have contacted you concerning the tenant, Ms. (b) (6)who resides above us at (b) (6) and who is violating City Code of Ordinances. We have reported to you that Ms. (b) (6)is storing trash on her unit porch in which is unsanitary and attracts rodents, pests and vermin. We had previously brought this to your attention; however, it still continues. As such, the following excerpt is found at this link:

- Chapter 18 - NUISANCES[1]
- ARTICLE I. - IN GENERAL[2]

- Sec. 18-1. - Extraterritorial jurisdiction.

  The provisions of this chapter shall be applicable to all that property within the city and all property within three miles of the city limits.

(Code 1980, § 18-1; Ord. No. 37950, § 2, 1-8-08)

- Sec. 18-2. - Definition.

  For the purposes of this chapter, a nuisance exists when a person fails to perform a duty or permits any condition or thing to exist, which act, omission, condition or thing either:

  (a)

  Injures or endangers the comfort, repose, health or safety of others;

  (b)

  Offends decency;

  (c)

  Is offensive to the senses;

  Unlawfully interferes with, obstructs or tends to obstruct or renders dangerous for passage any public or private street, alley, highway, sidewalk, stream, ditch or drainage;

(e)

In any way renders other persons insecure in life or the use of property; or

(f)

Essentially interferes with the quiet enjoyment of life and property, or tends to depreciate the value of the property of others.

(Code 1980, § 18-2)

Cross reference— Definitions and rules of construction generally, § 1-2.

- Sec. 18-3. - Illustrative enumeration.

The maintaining, using, placing, depositing, leaving or permitting to be or remain on the public or private property of any of the following items, conditions or actions is hereby declared to be and to constitute a nuisance; however, this enumeration shall not be deemed or construed to be conclusive, limiting or restrictive:

(a)

Any condition which provides harborage for rats, mice, snakes and other vermin.

(b)

Any building or other structure which is in such a dilapidated condition that it is unfit for human habitation, or kept in such an unsanitary condition that it is a menace to the health of people residing in the vicinity thereof, or presents a fire hazard in the vicinity where it is located.

(c)

All unnecessary or unauthorized noises and annoying vibrations, including but not limited to animal noises.

(d)

All disagreeable or obnoxious gases, odors and/or fumes, as well as the conditions, substances or other causes which give rise to the emission or generation of such gases, odors and/or fumes.

(e)

The dressed or undressed carcasses of fish, animals or fowl, wild game or domestic animals, not disposed of, processed, or removed from the general public view.

(f)

The pollution of any public well or cistern, stream, lake, canal or body of water by sewage, dead animals, creamery or industrial wastes, or other substances.

(g)

Any building, structure or location wherein or upon which any activity which is in violation of local, state or federal law is conducted, performed or maintained.

(h)

Any accumulation of stagnant water permitted or maintained on any lot or property.

(i)

Dense smoke, noxious fumes, gas, soot or cinders, in unreasonable quantities.

(j)

Any method of human excreta disposal which does not conform to the provisions of this chapter, state law or city ordinance, rule or regulation.

(k)

Leaking or defective water pipes, sewer pipes, hydrants, cisterns, wells, gutters, drains, rain spouts or seepage in or about any structure used for human occupancy or the surrounding earth.

(l)

Any abandoned or open wells, cisterns or cellars.

(m)

The discharge of any filthy or offensive water, swill, liquid or waste from any commercial establishment into or on any street, alley, sidewalk, gutter, vacant lot, stream or river.

(n)

The keeping or maintaining of any hives or boxes used or occupied or for the purpose of housing or occupation by bees within the city limits, except as hereinafter provided. It shall be unlawful for any person to cause, permit, maintain or allow the creation of a nuisance.

- Sec. 18-5. - Penalty.

  In addition to such other sanctions imposed by law, any person who violates the provisions of this chapter shall, upon conviction, be punished as provided in section 1-10 of this Code. Every such person shall be deemed guilty of a separate offense for every day on which such violation shall continue.

(Code 1980, § 18-5)

Further, we are being forced to endure loud noises occurring above us in our rental unit coming from Ms. (b) (6) unit in which is disturbing our peace. It sounds like bowling balls falling over our head occurring in spurts throughout the day. This is disturbing our peace and enjoyment. We had previously brought this to your attention; however, it still continues.

- We have put the OHA on notice of the ongoing actions of Ms. (b) (6)who resides at (b) (6)

- Signed,

  John & Christine Spanyers

We were being harassed by the tenant above us and across the hall from us. As such, the tenant across the hall from us placed cameras on our unit and looking into our unit windows of which these cameras were positioned on the tenant's porch. The tenant's name who resided across the hall from us is (b) (6) who resides at (b) (6) The tenant above us kept jumping up and down above us every day disturbing our peace. The tenant throw trash down in front of our unit on a regular basis and they threw cigar innards on our rental unit porch. We had written Cease & Desist letters to the tenant of which the OHA received copies of. The tenant's name who resided above us is (b) (6) who resides at (b) (6)

The following are the Cease and Desist letters:

Ms. (b) (6)

This is a legal demand that you immediately Cease & Desist the causing of loud and disturbing noise and ruckus (i.e. banging, slamming, jumping up and down, music, etc.) your household continuously causes our household to endure. We have attempted to discuss this matter with you to no avail. We had contacted the landlord being the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) concerning this matter. Further, we had contacted the Omaha Police Department (OPD) in which they had intervened on our behalf to address this matter with you. Even so, you continue to disturb our peace which is in violation of Nebraska Statute 28-1322.

Ms. (b) (6)

This is a legal demand that you immediately Cease & Desist the piling of trash on your outdoor unit porch as this is a rodent, pest and vermin attraction. Further, your regular practice of piling trash on your outdoor unit porch has been releasing a fluid overhead onto our unit porch. We demand that you immediately Cease & Desist throwing cigarette butts down onto our unit porch and the grounds around our unit porch as this is a fire hazard. We demand that you immediately stop throwing your cigar innards onto our unit porch. We had contacted the landlord being the Omaha Housing Authority (OHA) concerning this matter. Your actions constitute the violation of the Omaha, Nebraska City Code of Ordinances under Chapter 18 – Nuisances, Article I. – In General, Sec. 18-3. – Illustrative enumeration.

Additionally we notified the OHA the following:

Ms. Gilroy & Ms. Consentino:

We have done everything we can to address and STOP the ONGOING loud disturbing noise from the household of (b) (6) who resides above our unit at (b) (6) to NO AVAIL!!!

The OHA HAS BEEN NOTIFIED of this ONGOING issue via certified mail, emails and conversations yet we are continually being abused by the household of (b) (6) with loud disturbing noises to include Loud Music w/Bass as occurred over our heads yesterday, repeated jumping up and down which is now occurring over our heads, startling Slamming and Banging which is now occurring over our heads. We are at the mercy of (b) (6) household as to when we can sleep or not and whether or not we are going to be startled with Slamming and Banging coming from the household of (b) (6) We are AGAIN informing the OHA that we are being abused with Loud Noises coming from the household of (b) (6) in which is disturbing our peace and Violating State and City Laws. It appears we were made to relocate from an OHA unit in with an undisclosed Death and "Toxc Mold" to a unit in which we are continuously being tortured by OHA tenants as the OHA has NOT stopped this ongoing torture from occurring to us. We can only assume this is meant to occur to us to attempt to run us out of affordable housing!

Signed,
John & Christine Spanyers

We even attempted to get a protection order from the Court but was denied. After we attempted to get a protection order, the (b) (6)household went and filed for one and the complete transcribed transcripts and evidence allowed for submission may be viewed by your investigators at the Clerk of District Court on the 3rd Floor at the Douglas County Court.

It will be found by the investigator (HUD or DOJ) that the testimony by (b) (6) and (b) (6)was conflictive and that I had not broken rules or guidelines set forth by HUD. It will also be found whom directed (b) (6)and (b) (6)(i.e. the OHA).

Andrea Freeny the Official Court Reporter transcribed and notified me of the following after it was completed.

Mr. Spanyers,

Please be advised the bill of exceptions you have inquired about in re: (b) (6)v. Spanyers, Douglas County District Court Case No. CI16-5577, was filed 9/30/16 as required. My duties in this matter are thus concluded.

On October 12th, 2016 the OHA had us evicted us to the streets through a court decree but allowed us to stay at the unit until midnight in October 31st, 2016. Exactly one week later, unbeknown to us, the OHA rushed and requested on November 7th, 2016 from HUD's Enforcement Center a review to have our complaints dismissed without notifying HUD that they had evicted us. Additionally we did not know if the OHA disclosed that owed us a year of utility reimbursement when they had asked for this review.

It will be clear to the investigators that we were targeted by the OHA for filing HUD Complaints as well for filing a civil lawsuit in District Court.

JOHN SPANYERS and CHRISTINE SPANYERS,

Plaintiff,

vs.

OMAHA HOUSING AUTHORITY, a Political Subdivision of the State of Nebraska

Defendants.

COMES NOW, the Plaintiffs, by and through their counsel, Douglas R. Novotny, and for their Complaint against the Defendant, Omaha Housing Authority, alleges and states the following:

1. Plaintiffs are residents of Omaha, Douglas County, Nebraska and have been residents of said state and county for all times relevant to this lawsuit.
2. The Defendant, Omaha Housing Authority (Hereinafter "OHA"), is a political subdivision of the State of Nebraska. That at all times material herein, this Defendant contracts with HUD to provide low and moderate income individuals with housing in the Omaha metro area, including Douglas County, Nebraska.
3. That pursuant to the Nebraska Political Subdivisions Tort Claims Act, Neb. Rev. Stat. §13-901, et seq., Plaintiffs filed two separate claims with the Defendant. The first claim was submitted to the OHA, via e-mail and Certified Mail on January 14, 2015 (Exhibit A pgs. 1-5). A second claim was submitted to the OHA, via e-mail and Certified Mail, on January 19, 2016. (Ex. B pgs. 1-7). That six months have passed since Plaintiffs filed their claim and no final disposition has been determined. That as a consequence on July 28, 2016, Plaintiffs' counsel sent Defendant a letter withdrawing his tort claim from consideration from the OHA, a copy which is attached hereto and marked as Exhibit "C".

4. That the Plaintiffs have been tenants of the OHA for a number of years and resided at (b) (6)

5. The OHA owns the property, including the apartment complex, located at (b) (6)

6. That in August of 2014, the OHA retained an exterminator to inspect the apartment complex located at (b) (6)
7. During that August 2014 inspection, it is believed the exterminator advised the OHA that he found evidence of bed bugs within the Plaintiffs apartment, located at (b) (6)

8. Due to John Spanyers suffering from respiratory issues, including COPD, it is the Plaintiffs belief that the pest inspector advised the OHA to conduct heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs in the Plaintiffs' apartment located at (b) (6)
9. Subsequently in September of 2015 a second inspector, retained by the OHA, went to the Plaintiffs apartment and found evidence of bed bugs.
10. Without action being taken by the OHA, The Plaintiffs wrote a letter to the OHA, on or about September 19, 2014 requesting their apartment undergo heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs.
11. On September 22, 2014, Plaintiffs went to their physician to treat for bed bug bites. Pathology reports on September 23, 2014 confirmed bed bugs, and their physician recommended treatment of the apartment.
12. On or about November 3, 2014, Mike Wolski, of Wolski Pest Control, inspected the Plaintiffs apartment, at the Plaintiffs request, and found evidence of bed bugs inside the premises. Mr. Wolski drafted a letter indicating the presence of bed bugs and recommended heat treatment be used to eradicate the bed bugs due to Mr. Spanyers respiratory issues.
13. A request for heat treatment to eradicate the bed bug issue within the Spanyers apartment was made to Clifford Scott, the then director of the OHA, on November 6, 2014. On November 13, 2014, in response to said request, the OHA refused to conduct heat treatment and would only authorize chemical treatments to eradicate the bed bugs inside the Plaintiffs apartment.
14. Further requests were made to the OHA to heat treat the apartment, with the OHA either ignoring or denying the requests.

15. On February 12, 2015, the OHA finally agreed to conduct heat treatment to eradicate the bed bugs within the Spanyers apartment. However, because mold was found in the apartment at around the same time, heat treatment was never conducted. By this time, the Plaintiffs had endured over six months of being exposed to bed bugs, suffering bites and being under a great deal of mental distress.
16. During this time between August 2014 through February of 2015, the Spanyers also began noticing allergic and respiratory issues.
17. On February 18, 2015 the OHA retained a company to conduct a Limited Mold Assessment and Testing. The inspection and testing showed fungal/mold growth within the furnace room and on the duct work. The fungus/mold was likely due to water intruding into the building due to a roof leak.
18. Due to Mr. Spanyers respiratory issues and Mrs. Spanyers allergies, the Plaintiffs, on February 19, 2015, requested the OHA transfer them to a new unit.
19. The OHA refused to transfer the Spanyers to a new unit until April of 2015 due to unrelated issues.
20. The OHA never conducted heat treatments of the Plaintiffs apartment located at (b) (6) to eradicate the bed bugs. Accordingly, the Spanyers were exposed to bed bugs, suffering bites and being under a great deal of distress from August 2014 through April of 2015.
21. Further the OHA did not fix or remediate the mold issue at the apartment located at (b) (6) first discovered in February of 2015, while the Plaintiffs resided at said Apartment. Accordingly the Plaintiffs suffered from respiratory distress, allergic reactions and mental distress.
22. In April of 2015, the Plaintiffs were transferred to an OHA owned property located at 3712 Frances Street. Plaintiffs became tenants of that property with the OHA being its landlord.
23. Upon moving into the unit located at 3712 Frances Street, the Plaintiffs noticed a bulge in the bathroom wall and subsequently a bulge in the wall in the kitchen.
24. The Plaintiffs notified the OHA, via numerous written e-mail, of the bulges in the wall, but no action, other than cosmetic measures were taken to cover up the bulges.

25. After moving into the residence located at 3712 Frances Street in April of 2015 the Plaintiffs noticed respiratory issues, sinus and allergic reactions.
26. The Plaintiffs were concerned of possibly mold in their unit and made numerous written and verbal requests for their unit to be inspected.
27. The OHA did not respond to the Plaintiffs complaints until December of 2015. In the OHA's inspection by its maintenance crew in December of 2015, it found evidence of mold within the unit located at 3712 Frances Street.
28. On December 11, 2015 the Douglas County Health Department conducted a visual inspection of the unit located at 3712 Frances Street and found indications of mold.
29. The Plaintiffs retained a contractor to conduct an inspection of the area on December 17, 2015 and verified mold being within the unit located at 3712 Francis Street, including Stachybrotos and Aspergillus molds.
30. Due to these reports of mold, Plaintiffs physicians urged that the Plaintiffs be removed from the unit located at 3712 Frances Street.
31. The OHA transferred the Plaintiffs to the (b) (6) Apartment Complex, but not until the end of April, 2016. Accordingly from April 2015 through April of 2016, the Plaintiffs were subjected to leaving in a mold infested environment and suffering from respiratory distress, sinus and allergic reactions and mental distress.
32. Due to Plaintiffs financial condition and reliance on the OHA for housing, they could not break their lease with the OHA or find other housing.
33. Due to Plaintiffs financial condition and requirements under their lease agreement with the OHA they were unable to remediate either the bed bug issue or mold/fungus issues on their own.

COUNT I

THE OHA VIOLATED THE LANDLORD TENANT ACT

34. The Plaintiffs incorporate paragraphs 1-33 as if full set forth herein.
35. The OHA owned the properties located at 8306 Underwood Ave, Apt. 205 and 3712 Frances Street at all times material herein;
36. The Plaintiffs were tenants of the OHA at the properties located at 8306 Underwood Ave, Apt. 205 and 3712 Frances Street at all times material herein;

37. Pursuant to Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419, a landlord, such as the OHA , has certain duties including but not limited to:
    a. Substantially comply, after written or actual notice, with the requirements of the applicable minimum housing codes materially affecting health and safety;
    b. Make all repairs and do whatever is necessary, after written or actual notice, to put and keep the premises in a fit and habitable condition; and
    c. Maintain in good and safe working order and condition all sanitary, ventilating and other facilities and appliances.
38. The OHA had both written and actual notice of bed bugs within the premises of (b) (6) and never remediated the situation, causing Plaintiffs to suffer from bed bug bites and extreme mental distress. Further the OHA did not transfer the Plaintiffs to a different unit until more than 8 months had passed from the first discovery of bed bugs within the apartment. Nor did the OHA do whatever was necessary to protect the Plaintiffs from being exposed to bed bugs or fixing the situation considering Plaintiffs physical ailments and conditions.
39. The OHA had both written and actual notice of fungus/mold in the units located at (b) (6) and 3712 Frances Street and either did not remediate the situation or take appropriate measures to do what was necessary to protect the Plaintiffs from being exposed to mold considering Plaintiffs physical ailments and conditions.
40. The Plaintiffs, due to their physical and financial conditions, were/are reliant on housing form the OHA and were unable to move or break its lease with the OHA. Further, due to their physical and financial conditions, Plaintiffs were unable to remediate the bed bugs or mold issues.
41. As a result of the Defendant's non-compliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419, Plaintiffs incurred damages as follows:
    a. Physical injuries from bed bug bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic conditions due to exposure to fungus/mold and other related injuries;
    b. Medical bills related to bed beg bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic reactions and other related physical symptoms due to the mold/fungus exposure;

c. Extreme mental strain, distress and stress, anxiety and depression;

d. Out of pocket expenses for testing of mold;

e. Property damage and losses due to exposure to bed bugs and mold, the total amount to be determined at time of trial;

f. They are likely to continue to suffer long term effects, both mentally and physically, due to their exposure to the above conditions.

42. The actions of the OHA were willful in their non-compliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. §76-1419.

43. Further the Plaintiffs are entitled to recovery of attorney fees.

Wherefore, due to the Defendants willful action and in being in noncompliance with Neb. Rev. Stat. 76-1419, Plaintiffs request their special damages, general damages, to be determined at trial, along with recovery of reasonable attorney fees and costs.

COUNT 2 NEGLIGENCE

44. The Plaintiff incorporates Paragraphs 1-43 as if fully set forth herein.

45. The Defendants, as landlords of the Plaintiffs at (b) (6) and 3712 Francis Streets, owed a duty to maintain a habitable premises.

46. The OHA breached this duty in the following particulars:

a. Not properly and efficiently remediating or eradicating the bed bug infestation at the Plaintiffs premises located at (b) (6)

b. Not transferring the Plaintiffs from (b) (6) in a timely fashion and having them reside in a bed bug infested apartment for over 8 months;

c. Not doing whatever was reasonably necessary to accommodate the Plaintiffs and fix the bed bug infestation.

d. Not properly inspecting/treating the property for bed bugs.

e. Not properly and efficiently remediating or fixing the mold/fungus issues at both the properties located at (b) (6) and 3712 Francis Street.

f. Not properly inspecting/treating the properties for mold/fungus;

g. Not doing whatever was reasonable necessary to accommodate the Plaintiffs and fix the mold/fungus situation at both properties;

h. Not transferring the Plaintiffs from (b) (6) or 3712 Frances Street after notice of the mold situation, thereby subjecting Plaintiffs to physical harm, sickness and mental distress for a long period of time.

47. That as a direct and proximate result of the negligence of the Defendant, Plaintiffs have incurred the following damages:

a. Physical injuries from bed bug bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic conditions due to exposure to fungus/mold and other related injuries;

b. Medical bills related to bed beg bites and respiratory, sinus and allergic reactions and other related physical symptoms due to the mold/fungus exposure;

c. Extreme mental strain, distress and stress, anxiety and depression;

d. Out of pocket expenses for testing of mold;

e. Property damage and losses due to exposure to bed bugs and mold, the total amount to be determined at time of trial;

f. They are likely to continue to suffer long term effects, both mentally and physically, due to their exposure to the above conditions.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff, prays for judgment against Defendant, for their special and general damages, together with the costs herein expended.

This info is included for self-evident reasons and it reflects what HUD FHEO refused to investigate, refused to stop, and allowed the OHA to commit against us. It also reflects the retaliation we suffered at the hands of the OHA and their surrogates and was sanctioned by HUD's FHEO in Washington D.C., Kansas City Regional Office, Omaha FHEO Office as well as the Omaha Local HUD Office. Instead of recognizing that we are a protected class of disabled seniors we were asked to stop filing complaints and that HUD does not typically intervene with the general operations of their partners.

What we are informing you of is a Fact. The tenant in (b) (6) in our (b) (6) apartment building had a protection order upheld against her while she has resided here at (b) (6) As such, the OHA had elected to NOT EVICT her and instead allow her to continue living in public housing. Further, this tenant is a witness to the fact that (b) (6) has been residing with (b) (6) since she has been living in the unit across the hall from ours. (b) (6) had informed us that she has been living in that unit for 7 years now. (b) (6) also claims she lives alone as she had testified to under oath and had signed as a fact under penalty of perjury in her complaint against myself John Spanyers.

Since the OHA has elected to bypass an eviction process for an upheld protection order against the tenant in (b) (6) then we are being treated differently than other tenants and as such, the OHA is applying a double standard against our household which is a discriminatory act. It is important that we inform you of this fact.

Patrick Cohoon, an Attorney for Legal Aid of Nebraska whom represented us in this eviction matter noticed the clear conflictive testimony by (b) (6)and her Witnesses. He also recognized that I had done nothing that warranted an eviction that would rise to the level for such an eviction and that it is the first time that he had seen such harshness in a case like this. He also noted that we had kept the OHA informed as to why we were recording the violations.

It should be noted for the record that we also reported these activities to HUD's OIG Hotline as well as with Janet Blackman with the State Investigative Unit.

I wrote the following to Ms. Blackman:

Dear Ms. Blackman,

As promised back in June, I would contact you with more information if and when I had more information concerning (b) (6)Jo Doyon and (b) (6) that both reside at (b) (6) that is known as the '(b) (6) Apartments" that is managed by the Omaha Housing Authority.

As you can see by the attached information, we have been attempting to communicate to our landlord our concerns and questions regarding this household. To our knowledge our landlord has not addressed or followed thru on investigating this household for housing fraud. We have pointed out according to our understanding, ongoing violations of the admission and continued occupancy policy (ACOP), the Part 1 Terms and Conditions of Our Lease violations, the Violation - City Code Of Ordinances: (which may be located here https://www.municode.com/library/ne/omaha/codes/code_of_ordinances?nodeId=PTIIMUCO_CH18NU&showChanges=true), the cameras that they (not OHA), installed, the middle of the night property alterations they so frequently do under the cover of darkness, as well as the fact that that (b) (6) is living there.

Although we have been informed that they have been living together since 2009 we have only been able to establish that Mr. (b) (6) (thru public records) has claimed to be residing here at (b) (6) since 2011. The fact that his name is on the mail box here as a resident also reflects this. It might help for you to see what address he is using on his driver's license (which is "(b) (6) that is attached with the additional information in this email.

It is our understanding that you will be able to confirm more information thru the IRS (State & Federal), Social Security Administration, the Dept of Labor as well as the many other interface resources, that you have at your disposal, to confirm this individuals residence, employment, and resources.

Our life has been turned into living hell by this household and their friend that lives above us since our managers came and directed her to remove her plants from the hall way. We have been harassed, threatened, abused and have had lies stated upon us in a false fictitious (Under the Penalty of Perjury) Affidavit, for bringing to light what they are and have been doing.

As you know, we have been questioning the validity of their statements regarding their living composition and possible unreported income. The first red flag I had was why her caretaker was making in the middle of the night alterations, to the OHA managed property, and why was he driving and parking an unlicensed vehicle since he held a full time job. I think the biggest flag was why Ms. (b) (6) had or needed a live-in caretaker in a one room apartment when we were witnessing daily attending to all her flowers and plants without him out there. I have never known anyone that could attend to so many plants that required a live-in care taker.

Prior to us moving back to (b) (6) this is how it the front of our unit. These are Ms. (b) (6) fixtures and plants that she is outraged at me for wanting them removed.

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

Why it has not raised flags with anyone as to how she has been able to tend for these plants if she is as she claims she is. Admittedly she does have a green thumb for gardening as you can see from the link below.

https://youtu.be/(b) (6)

We are hoping and praying that all the other investigators will coordinate with you to get to the bottom of what should not be occurring.

Again thank you for addressing this.

Respectfully,

John & Christine Spanyers

For the record as of today March 9th 2017 nothing has changed at the (b) (6) Apartment's. The (b) (6)Household still has their unlicensed and uninsured (b) (6) VIN # (b) (6) and is still parked on the back parking lot to (b) (6) It is apparent that the OHA is allowing these residents to break Omaha City Ordinances, violate the ACOP Rules pointed out in our complaints to the OHA. Rather than enforcing their own ACOP rules, it appears that the OHA's primary focus was to have us evicted and to allow and encourage criminal activity by their resident proxy as a reward for their help in getting us evicted from the OHA Program.

We will be respectfully asking our President, President Trump, our HUD Secretary, Dr. Ben Carson and our U.S. Attorney General, Attorney General Jeff Sessions to please investigate our complaints and to have all emails sent to/from us ((b) (6)@(b) (6) and (b) (6) @(b) (6)) and all emails sent by/ received from the following HUD Officials to our email address including all correspondence mailed to us from HUD's FHEO – Sara Pratt, Gordon Patterson, Gayle Bohling (Washington D.C.), Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, Antony May (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office, HUD Hotline OIG, HUD online 503 Complaints filed as well as Nandinee Kutty from the HUD Enforcement Center in Washington D.C. recovered and reviewed from the National Archives and Records Administration.

These records will clearly show how discriminately cruel the FHEO and Local HUD Employees were toward our household and just how little these employee did for our household other than telling us to stop bothering them with complaints. It will also show that the FHEO singled us out and refused to process our complaints or give us proper due process.

This information will help our Administration and Dr. Carson understand why Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office should be termed immediately and why this PHA should be debarred and stripped of Federal Grant Monies. Additionally we will be asking that copies be provided to the House Oversight Committee as well as the Senate Appropriations Committee to aid the members in deciding whether funding should be cut or suspended to this PHA organization.

Gregory King and Shila Hernandez both out right lied to us when they told us that this PHA is not allowed to retaliate against us for filing complaints. That is all this PHA has done to us since we filed our complaints. They have slandered and assassinated our character, accused us of committing computer crimes at board meetings forced us to live in substandard housing and to pay for rent this. They were allowed to cause irreparable harm to our mental and emotional health, caused undue hardship in an attempt to compel us to with draw our HUD complaints.

Even now they are requiring that in order to settle our state lawsuit they want us to sign an indemnify clause as so HUD will not come after them for damages and to release them on all State and Federal Tort Action before they will settle our State case. We are left wondering if this is another brain storm or joint operation by Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office and this PHA.

We were directed to stop filing complaints and stop sending email to which we complied. As a result of following these directive it allowed the OHA to have its way with us to put us in a very hostile environment and as so this PHA could use its resident proxies to have us removed from affordable housing and to have us removed from the program and thrown to the streets.

Even now we are fearful of Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office. These individuals were fully aware of what we were being subjected to by this PHA and they outright refused to take any action to protect us from these abuses such as filing a TRO and relocating us to another PHA. Instead of trying to eliminate housing discrimination these individuals by their actions promoted just the opposite and embolden this PHA to continue abusing us.

Although we both meet and exceed the criteria for a protected class in accordance with Federal Law and HUD'S FHEO standards, we unfortunately have learned that we do not meet the racial criteria with Betty Bottiger, Gregory King, (Kansas City FHEO Office), Kathryn Amaya, Shila Hernandez, Connie Radcliff (Local Omaha FHEO Office), Earl Redrick, and Denise Gipson (Omaha Field Office), Omaha Field Office to be given equal access and equal protection by their FHEO Office and local HUD Office. It should be added that we have emails and other evidentiary in support of this dual complaint.

Since we writing this email to our City Council…

Email written to Omaha City Council Members September 4th, 2012

Dear Distinguished and Honorable Members of the Omaha City Council,

I am writing to ask for your help with ongoing concerns and issues. I am afraid that unless our City Council intervenes, on behalf of ourselves and our City, this is going to continue. I know of no other Department in our City where the Board is ran by insubordinate's nor do I know of any other City that would allow, insubordinate's such as these to remain in a position of Public Trust. These insubordinates are costing our City.

We have, as best as we know how, have attempted to communicate every possible means our Housing Authority Board Member's the seriousness of our situation, and the consequences for ignoring them.

And yet nothing is done on their part. Unlike yourselves, they seem to behave as a puppet Board, rather than exercise the Powers given to them when they received the Privilege and Honor, to be appointment, by our Mayor and the Trust and Confidence of our Omaha Council Members, when they were appointed there to present position.

We want to apologize, for having to bother our City Council Member's, with concerns that should have been addressed long, long time ago. We feel that we are being forced to come to you, in order to stop the abuse and violations occurring at our Housing Authority. The fact that our Commissioners, are allowing these insubordinates to dictate and manipulate our Board Member's infuriates us beyond words. I do not feel our City needs the reputation or the disgrace that is occurring to our City now. You are our, most respected leaders, because we the citizen of Omaha trust you. This is something you have earned. When we the citizens go to the ballot box and cast a vote, we are saying, “You have earned our Trust, our Confidence, and our Knowing, you have earned our Vote!”

We the citizens trust your wisdom in all affairs of our City, Our Great and Beautiful City, the City of Omaha Nebraska. We trust that you will protect our City from harm. We trust that you will protect our City's Honor/Reputation. We trust that you will promote tourism, and business growth in our community. We trust that you will conduct and perform your Duties. We Trust You!!!

Without our Council Members, there would be no City. Our Council Members have created our order by passing laws to delegate how to protect and maintain our City from harm, as so we the citizens may have maintained safety from harm. It does not matter from which political party you subscribe. What is important is, that we Trust you and we the citizens have Confidence in your vision for our future. Trust is the seat of all of our commerce and business. In fact Trust is so important to our great nation that we have embedded "In God We Trust" up on our Currency that we use in our commerce and business. Trust is a wonderful thing. With Trust comes Honor, with Honor comes Respect. These three Vestments are, the Crown Jewels of Truth, upon which all Good Things Spring. Truth is what validates the core of our values. Are we not asked when we take a witness stand to make an oath, by swearing to tell the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth?

What happens when our core values, are brutally assaulted by acts of betrayal, cheating, cons, deceiving, double-cross, duping, finesse, flimflamming, hoodwinking, manipulating, play for a sucker, roping in, scamming, stringing along, suckering in, trickery, playing for a chump, baiting, with the beguiled acts, by insubordinates that all the while bait, bewitch, cajole, captivate, charm, come on, enchant, persuade, entrap, lead on, seduce, tempt, prevent, tantalize, coax, decoy, fascinate, entice, hook, threaten, turn on, sweep off feet, win over, and wile, all those that that seek an explanation of their acts , to prevent the truth from being known.

Does not our trust turn to disbelief, distrust and mistrust? Does not our honor turn to derision, humiliation, and disgrace? Does not our respect turn to scorn, condemnation, dishonor, disrespect, and disobedience? And does not our truth become falsehood, lies, deceitfulness and mendacity when we allow insubordinates to beguile us from our Cities, foundation of Trust, Honor, Respect, and Truth? When Haters and Deceivers take away our Truth; we are allowing them to take away our Respect.

When we allow them to take away our Respect; we are allowing them to take away our Honor. When we allow them to take away our Honor; we are allowing them to take away our Trust. When we allow them take away our Trust; we are allowing them to take away our Faith in Our City Government. So you see Trust Is Very Important, especially when it comes to our City Government, and our City Government Administrative Employees.

Throughout our ordeal we have made every attempt to possible, to be removed from our dilemma and express our concerns about what was occurring, within our Housing Authority, and how we were being treated. When it became apparent that we were getting nowhere, we elected to remain silent and except the hopelessness of our situation, as so often happens with residents within our Housing Authority, because of everything being stacked against us, because of our Housing Authority Administrators and Managers.

You can only imagine how delighted we were when Ben Gray invited us to come to the Omaha Housing Authority to share our concerns. We were especially excited because we were able to share this with our District Councilman so we could get resolve. We actually believed that Ben Gray cared for the Citizens of Omaha, and was working with both Honorable Mayor and our Distinguished City Council Members to make our City of Omaha a Safe and Healthy place for us to raise our families. Knowing Ben Gray had the personal ear of our Honorable Mayor gave us even greater confidence that our dilemma would soon be over, which is why we attended our Housing Authority Board meeting, on July 26th 2012. Please we invite each you our Distinguished Council Members to take some time to review this meeting. Here: http://youtu.be/yeqWcTI1Isk

We attended this meeting even though our fellow resident and visitors insisted it, was nothing but a pure waste of our time. They argued that crime rate and violence in District Two is the Highest in our City and if Ben Gray did not care about the African Americans in his own District why would he careabout us. We were asked if we had contributed to his campaign, and were we politically news worthy enough to catapult his political ambitions. If not we were on dream time. When added to the fact fact that we were not African American, certainly guarantees nothing that nothing was going to happen.

Being a believer in our Country's values and the value of our City Government, I staunchly advocated that they were badly mistaken, and they would see that he was not someone whom gave lip service, just for the primary purpose of pandering to the voters, for the sole purpose for to further own selfish political career. What a complete fool I was, and I am ashamed of myself for not listening. It has been nothing less than a humiliating for me to go and sincerely apologize to every person that I spoke so highly too about Ben Gray.

It has been bad enough that we were made a complete laughing stock to everyone in our building since we were purposely placed in a unit that did not have the proper mold remediation and then forced to live in it, and then to have a Housing Board Member, and City Council Board Member tell us that he knew that the mold report was wrong but there is nothing he could do, and but he would look into it, has gave us no other choice but to file a proper complaints, to get to the bottom of what has been happening to us here at the Crown Tower since our move in. Clearly Ben Gray refuses to act individually in his own capacity as a Board Member of the Omaha Housing Authority, or individually in his official capacity as a Distinguished Member of our Omaha City Council. It is insulting that he does not understand or even appreciate his own position of Trust that has been bestowed upon him. I admit that I am poor, uneducated and disabled, but at least I do appreciate and have more revere respect to the positions that he is disgracing, a lot more than he understands what his responsibilities are in both these positions to our wonderful City of Omaha Nebraska.

I mean no disrespect to the most Honorable Offices that Ben Gray holds, nor do I want to offend the Officers of these positions, because I have the Highest Respect for these Distinguished and Honorable Office's. But to be frank I cannot respect the man, Ben Gray that holds these such offices, and I am more than confident that the voters, we the citizens, will not forget his actions (or lack thereof,) nor will they forgive his neglect of duties for years to come, concerning what has happened to us, and we are certain that it will inevitable haunt all of his political aspirations for years and years to come. This we are sure of!!! Trust is very important to all of us, we the citizens of our Great City, and more importantly to all of us, we the citizens of our Great State of Nebraska.

On February, 9th 2010,we came back from getting groceries, only to find our beloved family pet and my service pet, was found mutilated by (b) (6) This monster not only killed our beloved pet, he stated he was sorry that he did this out of family love. We informed him that we were going to file charges against him for his actions, and for what he did to our pet. It was then that he ran and grabbed a rifle and started shooting this firearm in the house, yelling obscenities as to how he was going to kill every mother*er, my wife grabbed our pet while he chased after her and our mutilated pet that was in my wife's arms, he then coked the rifle three times and proceeded to aim it directly at her head, and then shot at our car where he thought I was. He kept yelling how a lot of people were going to die and started yelling all sorts of terroristic threats, and threatened to kill us. While the Police were on their way, (b) (6) was on the telephone calling his gang member brother, receiving instructions on what to do and what to say when the Police arrived. (b) (6) then proceeded to attempt to hide the weapons used in the commission of his crimes all the while communicating with his older gang member brother. This happened at my wife's father's place of resident. This was the very same home where my wife had grown up in, and was continuously abused. (b) (6) older brother (b) (6) is a lifelong THUG gang member of MBC in south Omaha. He has an arrest record for possession of drugs and was not happy that we were, as they called us "50 Callers" when it came to illegal activities. In fact we had no idea what we were confronting when we were trying stop the illegal activities occurring at her father's home. After the Police standoff, the Omaha Police Department searched and confiscated the firearms that my wife's father continuously allowed Matthew to use, so he could go rob our citizens and use the firearms toward the purpose of intimidation to get what he wanted when he wanted, throughout our City in the commission of crimes. Our Brave Omaha Police Department was finally able to arrest this psychopath by taking him into custody, from there he was placed it the adult day care facility for dysfunctional adults, better known as the Douglas County Jail. After learning that we were not killed, (b) (6) (his gang member name) became very upset that his brother was arrested and that our Omaha Police took away all the fire arms, so they were without their"Heat and Glocks" as he was known to call them. It was on my birthday that I found the weapon used to kill our pet Jasper. (please see attached)

Both my wife and I are eternally grateful to (b) (6) and his office for putting this monster in prison, where he belongs. Namely it was (b) (6) that finally put this monster in prison for 8 years and 8 months. To give you an idea of what we had to go through, after our family pet and my service pet was mutilated and murdered by (b) (6) we witnessed my wife's dad intentionally and purposely attempt to cover up his crimes. He knowingly and intentionally went out of his way to soak and then wash EVERY knife and screw driver in his house and garage in kerosene to remove any and all traces of blood because, he was unable, to confirm with (b) (6) where he hid them, before the police came the night he committed mutilated our pet. My wife's dad demanded that we let (b) (6) out of Jail because he was only playing with our cat and if we did not, help him to get out of Jail, then we were not a good Christians. He also explained that (b) (6) was only playing around when he aimed the rifle at my wife's head and shot up our car. My wife's father is an enabler in the worst way, he allows these thugs to do drugs and in his home and has allowed these thugs to illegally do construction work in his home without getting proper permits for installs such as his furnace, which by the way we are surprises has not blown up or caused carbon monoxide poisoning. These Thugs are constantly getting money from him for their illegal drugs or selling him stolen items. He has even witnessed (b) (6) rape a girl in his home and refuses to report what he witnessed. He has also witnessed a child being abused by (b) (6) and did nothing to stop what was happening. In fact both my wife and I had to go to the Federal Bureau of Investigation to report activities. Every one of these thugs that my wife's father knows and affiliates with, are nothing more than drug abusers. They come to his home, for the sole purpose just to get money from him so they can purchase and use a white substance called methamphetamines. It is the PARASITE DESTROYER !!! Whenever these THUGS want money for their poison the all go to "Grandpa" as he is known to get their cash. And when these THUGS can't get the cash out of him they turn around and rip off his home. Rather than criminally prosecuting them he instead just plays stupid so he can turn it into his insurance, for a higher price than what he really pays for it. The whole thing was just sickly repulsive. The only reason I could not go to my family for help is because all of my brother and sisters, we were all taken away from my parents for the brutal abuse I and my siblings were made to suffer at the hands of my parent. It was after I had my front teeth knocked out of my mouth and my ear and hearing permanently damaged, that anything was, actually done, to stop the abuse. In fact I had was placed in a hospital for the longest time, while the State placed my other siblings in foster homes, for adoption to other families in other States, in order to protect us from being abused. To this day I do not where any of my siblings are or if they are even alive. In fact my mother committed suicide on my brothers birthday when she learned we would never be coming back home. It was because of what my dad had been doing to all of us, and her. It completely devastated her. To this day I am still suffering from effects of what I was made to suffer growing up. You see it was legislatures such as yourself on a State level that made it possible to make changes in laws as so culprits can't run off and not be accountable as my dad was able to do our mom and all of us kids. I share this with you as so you can better understand why I have so much faith in our Rules of Law and those that oversee the creation of them. Hopefully you will understand why we decided to live in our car rather than staying at my wife's fathers place. We came to our Housing Authority to seek refuge and escape abuse, not to be abused in our refuge.

We are no longer interested in more excuses. Nor are we any interested in the irrelevancy of whether it was right or wrong. What we are interested in, is whether or not it has been legal.

I do not know how to ask any clearer, or make it any simpler to our Housing Authority Board Member's, what their Responsibilities are to our City, and for them to fulfill them.

Below are the emails we have sent, and the responses.

Truly this is not good for our - City Omaha Nebraska.

I want to thank you addressing these matters,

Respectfully Your,

John and Christine Spanyers

This was reported by: Liz Dorland, ldorland@action3news.com. This is what our Honorable Nebraska State Senator Ernie Chambers has said about Two of our Housing Authority Board Members. I already have shared what I believe concerning, George B. Achola, Clifford Scott and Ben Gray with our other City Council Member of the Omaha Housing Authority. You will note that Fred Conley is the Chairman of the Omaha Housing Authority. These are four key individuals involved with our complaints and living conditions that our Omaha HUD Office has and have been working with concerning our issues. You may want to go look for yourself.

Omaha, NE -- Ernie Chambers is taking no prisoners. The former Nebraska State Senator not only went after his opponent Senator Brenda Council, but anyone who's publicly supported her. Chambers used his weekly show to slam his District 11 opponent Brenda Council on the same day she admitted in court, to using her campaign funds at casinos. With just 48- days until voters head to the polls, State Senator Ernie Chambers is taking-off the gloves. He's not only going after Council, but her associates as well. Nebraska State Senator Brenda Council's guilty plea made national headlines in the Washington Post and The Huffington Post. While she isn't talking about how her conviction is impacting her campaign for re-election, Ernie Chambers wasted no time getting right to the point, on his weekly show on Cox CTI 22. "She is a self-confessed convicted criminal, and we have people saying that this community believes that we can be properly represented by a criminal," said State Senator Ermitus. Chambers didn't stop there. He also fired-off at Nebraska Attorney General John Bruning, claiming Council's crimes are felonies. He stated,"The Attorney General did not charge her with any violation of the campaign laws which she in-fact violated. That is how white men can orchestrate something to let a person off the hook when they want to." He also called out Council's supporters: Omaha City Councilman Ben Gray, OPS Board President Freddie Gray, County Commissioner Chris Rogers and Campaign Manager Fred Conley. Chambers sternly stated on his show, "They came to the defense of Freddie Gray who is established as a liar", "Ben Gray is a liar" and "Douglas County Commissioner Chris Rogers, who has done nothing for this community people have no idea who he is." Chambers also pointed out in 1992, Senator Council's campaign manager, Fred Conley, was fined big bucks for misusing campaign funds. Conley who is traveling to Washington D.C said, "I really think Chambers is beating a dead horse ... as far as the election, she (Council) wants to move forward on what she can do for the district, and I think Chambers needs to do the same." Fred Conley didn't argue the claim of misusing campaign money. He also said Senator Council is removing her name from the list of people who are able to sign campaign checks. KMTV contacted Attorney General John Bruning, and Commissioner Chris Rogers, but haven't heard back. We also asked to talk with Senator Council, but was told "she's not talking about it anymore". Reported By: Liz Dorland, ldorland@action3news.com Respectfully, John and Christine Spanyers Lastly Former U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Deputy Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Programs (Sara K.Pratt).

Lastly I shared this with Ms. Kutty with HUD'S Enforcement Center in an email titled "Unanswered and unresolved outstanding issues!!!" on January 23rd 2017.

The only time we ever met any investigator's was when Sheila Hernández and Gregory King came to the Crown Towers the second week of August 2013. In fact I sent you an email showing the molds spores witnessed growing by FHEO's Investigators Sheila Hernandez and Gregory King when they came and interviewed us the second week of August 2013.

This again was the ONLY time that any that the FHEO ever came in person to investigate. The whole time that we were being Tormented and Tortured with Bedbugs and mold including TOXIC MOLD the FHEO REFUSED to come witness and investigate the intolerable conditions we were being made to live in and forced to pay rent without investigating in person regarding the intolerable conditions we were being made to live in.

Rather than investigating and stopping the ongoing retaliatory acts of the OHA, the FHEO instead sent us three separate emails stating "As a matter of practice, HUD does not typically intervene with the general operations of our partners," and refused to relocate us from the abuse and abusers and did absolutely nothing about what HUD CLEARLY knew was outright lies that we had crashed local HUD computers. Instead HUD allowed their partner to repeatedly retaliate on us and allowed their partner the free reign to torture us with bedbugs while they mocked and laughed openly in September of 2015 Board Meeting while they knew we were in mold conditions, dangerously high carbon dioxide air levels, while being eaten alive mercilessly by bedbugs.

If this hell wasn't bad enough, HUD's partner Susan Gilroy moved us into a unit where the previous tenant of 3712 Frances St had died in the front room on the carpet that was not replaced after his death and neither Susan Gilroy nor her site manager had the courtesy to inform us of this. This nondisclosure was both sick and cruel.

The unit we were placed by HUD's partner the OHA is where they refused for months to maintenance, properly and where we were forced to have a non-working faulty (13 year old) hot water heater that had to be replaced due to its malfunction and its age. In fact when we did our walk thru we pointed out the bulge in the walls and the leaking drain gutters. As a result after months of refusing and ignoring the issues we had to send the copy emails to Susan Gilroy, Jennifer Dexter and copied HUD and Senator Fischer's Office.

Ms. Dexter & Ms. Gilroy:

We have repair issues that need to be addressed. Repair orders have previously been called into the OHA repair line. HUD is copied on this email due to the nature of these maintenance concerns.

1) One of the most pressing repair issues is the fact that the tempered glass on the front door of the oven keeps falling down / falling open and is in danger of falling off the stove / oven and possibly shattering. One could easily walk into the sharp edges of this large glass piece and seriously get hurt and as such, the OHA has been put on notice of this danger and possible injury. This matter should be addressed as an Emergency. The HEAVY glass oven door piece is taped on at this time in an attempt to keep the glass on the oven door. Due to this condition, the oven is unusable. Shawn with the OHA Maintenance Dept. had replaced the oven door gasket and it appears that the door wasn't properly reassembled. This occurrence with the door glass piece started last evening when we were cooking in the oven and was called into the OHA repair line this morning.

2) Another issue again is the gutter and drain pipe on the back side of our rental unit at Frances Court Apartments as whenever it rains, it causes LOUD SOUNDS off of the defective drain pipe and gutter which is close to our unit bedroom window and as such, it keeps us up and unable to properly sleep when we sleep in our unit bedroom affecting our tenant rights as is our understanding. We had called this repair order in a while back as you had instructed us to do after OHA Maintenance had failed to fix the problem in the first place from your work order and to date, the OHA has not fixed this problem. We had even previously discussed this matter with you via phone and also via email. Was awoken again this morning with the LOUD SOUND of the rain hitting the drain pipe and interrupting our right to sleep. The weather forecast includes daily rain for multiple days except this Saturday and Sunday. Does this mean that we will need to suffer ongoing without proper sleep for multiple days when trying to sleep in our bed due to "no fault of our own"? This is another recorded attempt to address this maintenance need with the OHA.

3) There appears to be significant bulging occurring that is causing a large crack and paint peeling at the upper wall / ceiling area over the kitchen cabinetry. This was previously discussed a while back with Shawn with OHA Maintenance and as such, Shawn was going to have a painter address this matter; however, to date, this has not been done. We had even made a work order request a while back concerning this matter; however, to date this has not been addressed. The concern is that Christine is allergic to mold and this could be a symptom of housing mold and as such, we are again attempting to get this concern addressed by the OHA. This attempt becomes a matter of record.

4) The gutter above our unit front door is NOT PROPERLY SEALED. Rain is coming through and drips on whoever is underneath the gutter in this area when it rains. Shawn with OHA Maintenance had replaced the front gutter, but it wasn't properly sealed and as such, this should be addressed. This work order request was called into the OHA. If this repair need isn't addressed prior to winter, then we are in danger of an ice build-up in front of our unit door and as such, the OHA has been put on notice of this danger and cause of possible injury. This concern was previously discussed with Shawn; however, he feels that he had properly sealed the gutter. We are being dripped on underneath the front door gutter and it is dripping through the front door gutter when it rains and as such, we pray that the OHA will fix this repair need.

5) We had made a work order a while back for weather stripping for the screen door and the front door as there doesn't appear to be any weather stripping under the screen door and the weather stripping under the front door is tearing off. This work order was called in a while back after discussing this issue with Shawn with OHA Maintenance as he had instructed us to call in a work order for weather stripping for the screen door and the front door of our rental unit. To date, this has not been fixed. Please note that we have asked the OHA for an extra utility allowance due to medical and weather stripping helps with utilities and protection against weather elements. When it is storming and raining out with a strong wind, the wind pulls the screen door wide open as it doesn't latch well and there doesn't appear to be any weather stripping under the screen door to help keep the door sealed. This is an old door. We were sent an application via mail for weatherization assistance for our rental unit and as such, it appears that this weatherization assistance application was sent to us by the State of Nebraska which is our understanding falls under the Federal LIHEAP energy program. We are in the process of sending this application in to SENCA for weatherization help. This will involve an evaluation of weatherization needs for our rental unit. It is our understanding that SENCA will also have the efficiency of our unit appliances checked to include the furnace and hot water heater. It is good that the OHA had elected to replace the inefficient hot water heater that was in our rental unit when we were first moved here. This was done after we had made multiple requests that the OHA fix the hot water heater problem.

We don't understand why our repair needs aren't being properly addressed. This is an attempt to have our repair needs properly addressed and fixed. We pray that our repair needs are addressed and fixed by the OHA.

Sincerely,

John & Christine Spanyers

It took until December 3rd, 2015 (seven months) before HUD's partner Susan Gilroy and her Site Manager came to our unit to address the bulge in the walls. When it was discovered toxic mold coming thru both sides of the wall (Bathroom & Kitchen) due to no fault of our own. Attached is the hand delivered ultimatum that Susan Gilroy hand delivered personally by hand the following day.

As you can see from the first email I sent you, the OHA refused to repair the gutters or the ice buildup that was occurring at our front door all because we did not want the OHA to do toxic mold remediation (with our belongings in the unit), or be placed back at the (b) (6) Apartments. It was then that the OHA legal Counsel approximately a month later Mr. Hansen sent the attached email to our State case legal counsel offering a suitable unit for us, PROVIDED we release the OHA from our discrimination complaints. We filed our complaints because of the never ending ongoing discriminative retaliatory actions and abuse that we had been made to suffer by the OHA all the while HUD was copied on and stood by thru out this abuse and did absolutely NOTHING to remove us from the harsh conditions that was being imposed on us. There is no doubt what so ever that this was being done to us, ALL because of our HUD Discrimination complaints that we had filed, on HUD's partner the OHA.

It's a fact that the OHA continued with the ongoing retaliation by NOT repairing the gutters or keeping the ice from our front door but rather singled us out and made sure everyone else (including their own on-sight office), was cleared of all ice and snow but repeatedly refused to do a single thing concerning our unit or our household to remove the ongoing sheets of ice in front of our unit in order to cause or create personal harm or injury.

As you can clearly see beyond any doubt that we did all that we could in order not to be placed back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartment. Even though HUD had full knowledge that we were being forced to go there or the streets rather than 3716 Frances Street which would have adequately met all of our reasonable accommodations, HUD instead presented us with FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement, that offered to give us Rights that HUD should have been enforcing unconditionally to begin with since it is the LAW. This with FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement drawn up by Kathryn A. Amaya was nothing less than insultingly shameful if not disgraceful. To HUD's credit it made abundantly apparent that HUD's part had been way more than complacent if not conjunctive in the ongoing abuse that we were made to suffer at the hands of HUD's partner the Omaha Housing Authority, which explains to us why HUD has never so much as did one a single thing to protect us, protect our class and our protected Rights given under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as well as Title III of the ADA RIGHTS. But these violations were also in violation of our Equal Protection Rights as U.S. citizens, our U.S. Constitutional Bill of Rights, namely being our 8th and 14thAmendment.

We were directed by both HUD and its partner the OHA to stop filing complaints and to stop emailing, which we did accordingly. We have no misgivings that HUD was in fact instrumental in our placement back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartments rather than placing us at 3716 Frances Street because we would not with draw our complaints.

Ms. Kutty, we want you to know that we have EVERY email both sent and received, every document, every video, and every audio as well as every photo preserved and recorded since this started. Back when we were living at the towers one of the Managers stated that it wasn't personal against us, it was politics. We know that with our New Administration and our new Cabinet picks that it won't politics, it will be personal. Needless to say we very, very are anxiously waiting for our Administration's Cabinet to be sworn in as so we can go forward and be made whole again.

We have been punished repeatedly for whistle blowing and reporting those that are committing fraud and reporting it to HUD and HUD's partner the OHA concerning those tenant's that were committing these fraudulent acts as well as the violators of the OHA ACOPS Rules as is encouraged by the OHA. The only one made afflicted by this has been us all the while those committing fraud are rewarded with affordable housing while HUD's Partner Susan Gilroy looks the other way.

We have no doubt what so ever that we were placed back at the OHA (b) (6) Apartments as so we could be further abused for refusing to drop our discrimination complaints and thrown out the program as so HUD's partner the OHA could have all of our complaints dismissed. The HUD's FHEO alleged good faith proposed drafted conciliation agreement drawn up by Kathryn A. Amaya removes all doubt on this.

Lastly both my wife and myself have and had reasonable accommodation's stating that we cannot tolerate mold and that we were to avoid mold and yet we were placed in mold at EVERY location. This was a repeated and REPEATED over and over, even though it was in complete violation of our reasonable accommodations by HUD's Partner the OHA. A question we intend to get answered is why this happened and why did the Department allow this, but more importantly why did the Department omit these violations in our complaints even though we provided proof that this was occurring. Hopefully we will learn WHY the Department refused to aggravate this repeated offense. And what the Department's part was in this ongoing abuse.

Before we go we went ahead and already forwarded pertinent emails to you prior to this email

We have absolutely zero faith in the Washington D.C. FHEO Office, Kansas City, Kansas FHEO Office, as well as the Omaha Nebraska FHEO Field Office which is why we are now allowing the reporters copies of all of our emails, audio recordings, video recordings, and photographs as well as other evidentiary that we have retained.

I believe it will help the public understand why we feel that it is imperative that the Administration immediately cut funding's to those PHA Organization that steal from the America Tax Payers and the Government entity that oversees and protects these thieving Organizations and allows them to retaliate, discriminate and abuse disabled families like ours when reporting abuse and discriminatory practices.

Through the FOIA Act these reporters will also be able to find out what FHEO's part is as a contributor to coving up these acts as well what and how much the FHEO has contributed to or is responsible for some of the billions of dollars in discrepancies now being reported since they do not like to interfere with the operations of their partners by allowing and facilitating crimes against the most vulnerable that are disabled by their partners such as in our cases.

Deana, Thanks for including me in the meetings. Here is a summary of OFPM due outs/actions and status:

- Section 3 TF meeting, HUD (07/13)
  - Met with Merrie Nichols-Dixon, PIH. We confirmed that the Public Housing Authority is aware, that the PIH Program Director is aware and working with OFPM Field Office Director Mike Polsinelli. Action Completed.
  - "Field Trip" - Boys and Girls Club Alexandria. Mr. Bregon may be interested. However, if he does not attend I would like to have Holly Kelly go on our behalf as I will be on leave. Pending.
  - I reached out to Jim Cunningham and updated him on the meeting. He will follow up with Mike Polsinelli. Action Completed.
- Envision Center meeting, SBA (07/14)
  - Bonding Discussion – Holly Kelly is reaching out to Earnest Knott this afternoon. Will schedule a meeting to establish a relationship, scope out existing SBA programs and benchmark the Small Contractor Initiative bond component. Pending
  - Interagency Agreement Discussion – I have attached the updated agreement for your consideration. It has not been submitted to OGC for clearance. Pending
  - App Discussion – We will follow up and connect Zander (Last name unknow) from the SBA tech team with the app team here at HUD. Pending

Recommendations:

- That one of us set a follow-on discussion with Ryan Lambert, Office of Entrepreneurial Development to firm up that relationship and follow-up on his comments.
- That we consider a meeting with Treasury as the CDFI micro-lending component rests with them.
- That we follow up with Christopher Webb on the CDC Micro-Lenders ("First Level of Capital") discussion.

Please let us know if we can do anything else. What a great initiative this is.

Thanks, Jaime

Hunter, Deana, John and Adolfo,

Thank you for agreeing to be on a panel to discuss the Secretarial initiatives with OGC's field and headquarters managers. I have attached the agenda.

Beth Zorc will introduce you as she is finishing up. Sheila will be speaking for the first 15 minutes at 9:00 and then leave. In addition to her substantive remarks, Beth will be giving out service pins and Distinguished Service Awards so there should be a lot of positivity in the room before you present.

I leave it to you to divide the time among you, but 15 minutes of remarks each would be good. That would leave 15 minutes for questions and answers. The audience will be friendly and engaging.

It would be great if you could send me a copy of your biographies so we can include them in the course materials and use them for Beth's introductions. If you have any materials that you would like us to include, we need them by COB on Wednesday, September 6.

Thank you,
Linda

Seth,

On November 19, 2015, Chairman Duffy sent a letter to Secretary Castro to request certain records relating to two competitions using funds from the CDBG-DR Program. Since making that request, HUD produced records to the Committee on December 18, 2015, February 3, 2016, March 18, 2016, and May 20, 2016, and in each transmittal letter to the Committee, noted that HUD "continues to cooperate with this request" and will provide additional responsive records "on a rolling basis." See, e.g., Letter from the Hon. Erika Moritsugu to the Hon. Sean Duffy (May 20, 2016). The Committee has yet to receive any additional responsive records since HUD had last produced records on May 20, 2016.

Please continue to provide responsive records to the November 19, 2015 request. Also, the records produced on February 3, 2016 contain a number of redactions—please reproduce an unredacted copy of those records to the Committee by no later than October 18, 2017. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Sean Dillon or myself.

This is run through the same portal as our FOIA and litigation document requests and we are seeing a record number of inquiries, but it has been expedited to the top of the queue. That being said, we met this morning for a status update and it seems like end of next week is when we should have something, but I will keep you posted. Thanks for your patience.

Hello Mr. Kelley and Mr. Appleton,

My name is Jon Sperl, and I'm an analyst at the Congressional Budget Office. My colleague Rob Reese referred me to you on a data inquiry CBO has for a project we are working on concerning federal disaster spending.

In short, we are attempting to break out HUD's CDBG-DR spending into its ultimate end-use activities—specifically, we seek to quantify how much goes toward:

1. Housing: either for repairs/rehabilitation work on living quarters, or for temporary/other housing assistance
2. Individual Assistance activities: this is a category of aid under FEMA's DRF, but CDBG-DR funds are used by some states for the same sort of activities, like providing assistance for housing or "other needs" like moving/cleanup/health care, etc.
3. Business/Economic Development: assistance for businesses rebuilding, replacing property/capital, compensating business interruption, loan programs

4. Any other activities that would be covered by FEMA's Individual Assistance or SBA Disaster Loans (we're not particularly interested in support to state/local governments for infrastructure, debris removal, cleanup)

We are wondering if you are aware of any datasets for CDBG-DR (either publicly available or that HUD can provide upon request) that might be able to break out this information, if it exists? (We understand that FEMA breaks out Public Assistance into subcategories like facilities, debris removal, etc.; perhaps HUD does something similar with its CDBG-DR grant data?).

Would you be able to provide a referral to staff at HUD who are closest to this information?

We know HUD is quite busy right now doing hurricane response, so any help you can provide would be greatly appreciated!

Cheers,
Jon

Seth,

On November 19, 2015, Chairman Duffy sent a letter to Secretary Castro to request certain records relating to two competitions using funds from the CDBG-DR Program. Since making that request, HUD produced records to the Committee on December 18, 2015, February 3, 2016, March 18, 2016, and May 20, 2016, and in each transmittal letter to the Committee, noted that HUD "continues to cooperate with this request" and will provide additional responsive records "on a rolling basis." See, e.g., Letter from the Hon. Erika Moritsugu to the Hon. Sean Duffy (May 20, 2016). The Committee has yet to receive any additional responsive records since HUD had last produced records on May 20, 2016.

Please continue to provide responsive records to the November 19, 2015 request. Also, the records produced on February 3, 2016 contain a number of redactions—please reproduce an unredacted copy of those records to the Committee by no later than October 18, 2017. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Sean Dillon or myself.

Afternoon Helen-

CIR received an inquiry from the House Oversight and Government Reform (OGR) Committee regarding a reporting requirement from P.L. 115-59. The text of the statute can be found here: https://www.congress.gov/115/bills/hr624/BILLS-115hr624enr.pdf

According to this law, all CFO Agencies were required to submit this report to House OGR today. Clearly, this did not happen as no one knew anything about this.

I've spoken with OMB and they are not providing any government-wide guidance on this reporting requirement. That said, they passed along the attached OMB Circular to help with HUD's crafting of the report.

Can you help us here? Happy to chat on the phone to discuss further.

Many thanks,

1. Introduction

Information and information technology (IT) resources are critical to the U.S. social, political, and economic well-being. They enable the Federal Government to provide quality services to citizens, generate and disseminate knowledge, and facilitate greater productivity and advancement as a Nation. It is important for the Federal Government to maximize the quality and security of Federal information systems, and to develop and implement uniform and consistent information resources management policies in order to inform the public and improve the productivity, efficiency, and effectiveness of agency programs. Additionally, as technology evolves, it is important that agencies manage information systems in a way that addresses and mitigates security and privacy risks associated with new information technologies and new information processing capabilities.

These new information technologies and information processing capabilities also provide significant opportunities for agencies. The deeply embedded nature of IT in all Federal agency missions and business processes, and the emergence of the digital economy, combined with the increasing interconnection of technology and public services, has changed the way we share information, changed the way we use and view technology, and has forever changed Americans' expectations. To meet expectations of the American people and facilitate innovation, the Federal Government must continue to transform itself to embrace and respond to the digital revolution by developing and maintaining a top-notch workforce and delivering secure, world-class digital services that serve the public. With IT at the core of nearly everything the Federal Government does, agencies must continually identify ways to apply new and emerging technologies that can fundamentally improve the way Government works and delivers services to the American people in the most cost-effective way possible. Delivering world-class digital services requires the Federal Government to change its approach to buying, building, and delivering IT and information. This Circular is designed to help drive the transformation of the Federal Government and the way it builds, buys, and delivers technology by institutionalizing more agile approaches intended to facilitate the rapid adoption of changing technologies, in a way that enhances information security, privacy, and management of information resources across all Federal programs and services.

2. Purpose

This Circular[1] establishes general policy for the planning, budgeting, governance, acquisition, and management of Federal information, personnel, equipment, funds, IT resources and supporting infrastructure and services. The appendices to this Circular also include responsibilities for protecting Federal information resources and managing personally identifiable information (PII). While it is the responsibility of all agency leadership, program managers, and staff to implement the requirements of this Circular, agency heads have ultimate [1] Although this Circular touches on many specific information resources management issues such as privacy, confidentiality, information quality, dissemination, and statistical policy, those topics are covered more fully in other Office of Management and Budget (OMB) policies, which are available on the OMB website. Agencies shall implement the policies in this Circular and those in other OMB policy guidance in a mutually consistent fashion.

responsibility for ensuring that the requirements of this Circular are implemented for their agency.

3. Applicability

The requirements of this Circular apply to the information resources management activities of all agencies[2] of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government. The requirements of this Circular apply to management activities concerning all information resources in any medium (unless otherwise noted), including paper and electronic information. When an agency acts as a service provider, the ultimate responsibility for compliance with applicable requirements of this Circular is not shifted (to the service provider). Agencies shall describe the responsibilities of service providers in relevant agreements with the service providers. Agencies are not required to apply this Circular to national security systems (defined in 44 U.S.C. § 3552), but are encouraged to do so where appropriate. For national security systems, agencies shall follow applicable statutes, executive orders, directives, and internal agency policies.

4. Basic Considerations

Federal information is both a strategic asset and a valuable national resource. It enables the Government to carry out its mission and programs effectively. It provides the public with knowledge of the Government, society, economy, and environment – past, present, and future. Federal information is also a means to ensure the accountability of Government, to manage the Government's operations, and to maintain and enhance the performance of the economy, the public health, and welfare. Appropriate access to Federal information significantly enhances the value of the information and the return on the Nation's investment in its creation. The following considerations reflect these principles:

a. The free flow of information between the Government and the public is essential to a democratic society. Therefore, the management of Federal information resources shall protect the public's right of access to Federal information;

b. Government agencies shall be open, transparent, and accountable to the public. Promoting openness and interoperability, subject to applicable legal and policy requirements, increases operational efficiencies, reduces costs, improves services, supports mission needs, and increases public access to valuable Federal information;

c. Making Federal information discoverable, accessible, and usable can fuel entrepreneurship, innovation, and scientific discovery that improves the lives of Americans, and contributes significantly to national stability and prosperity, and fosters public participation in Government;

d. The Federal Government shall provide members of the public with access to public information on Government websites. This responsibility includes taking affirmative steps to ensure and maximize the quality, objectivity, utility, and integrity of Federal information prior to public dissemination, and maintaining processes for addressing requests for correction of information disseminated publicly;

[2] 'Agency' means any executive agency or department, military department, Federal Government corporation, Federal Government-controlled corporation, or other establishment in the Executive Branch of the Federal Government, or any independent regulatory agency.

HUD-17-0235-B-000283

e. The open and efficient exchange of scientific and technical Federal information, subject to applicable security and privacy controls and the proprietary rights of others, fosters excellence in scientific research and effective use of Federal research and development resources;

f. Federal information is a strategic asset subject to risks that must be managed to minimize harm;

g. Protecting an individual's privacy is of utmost importance. The Federal Government shall consider and protect an individual's privacy throughout the information life cycle;

h. While security and privacy are independent and separate disciplines, they are closely related, and it is essential for agencies to take a coordinated approach to identifying and managing security and privacy risks and complying with applicable requirements;

i. The design of information collections shall be consistent with the intended use of the information, and the need for new information shall be balanced against the burden imposed on the public, the cost of the collection, and any privacy risks;

j. It is essential that the Federal Government minimize the Federal information collection burden on the public, minimize the costs of its information activities, and maximize the usefulness of Government information; and

k. Attention to the management of Federal Government records from creation to disposition is an essential component of sound information resources management that promotes public accountability. Together with records preservation, it helps protect the Federal Government's historical record and safeguards the legal and financial rights of the Federal Government and the public.

5. Policy

Agencies shall establish a comprehensive approach to improve the acquisition and management of their information resources by: performing information resources management activities in an efficient, effective, economical, secure, and privacy-enhancing manner; focusing information resources planning to support their missions; implementing an IT investment management process that links to and supports budget formulation and execution; and rethinking and restructuring the way work is performed before investing in new information systems.

a. Planning and Budgeting

Agencies shall establish agency-wide planning and budgeting processes in accordance with OMB guidance. As discussed below, important components of planning and budgeting consist of developing and maintaining a strategy for managing and maintaining their information resources, referred to as the Information Resource Management (IRM) Strategic Plan, as well as ensuring effective collaboration between agency leadership on budget activities.

1) Strategic Planning

In support of agency missions and business needs, and as part of the agency's overall strategic and performance planning processes, agencies shall develop and maintain an IRM Strategic Plan that describes the agency's technology and information resources goals, including but not limited to, the processes described in this Circular. The IRM Strategic Plan must support the goals of the Agency Strategic Plan required by the Government Performance and Results Modernization Act of 2010 (GPRA Modernization Act). The IRM Strategic Plan shall demonstrate how the technology and information resources goals map to the agency's mission and organizational priorities. These goals shall be specific, verifiable, and measurable, so that progress against these goals can be tracked. The agency shall review its IRM Strategic Plan annually alongside the Annual Performance Plan reviews, required by the GPRA Modernization Act, to determine if there are any performance gaps or changes to mission needs, priorities, or goals. As part of the planning and maintenance of an effective information strategy, agencies shall meet the following requirements, in addition to all other requirements in this Circular:

a) Inventories

Agencies shall:

i. Maintain an inventory[3] of the agency's major information systems,[4] information holdings, and dissemination products, at the level of detail that OMB and the agency determine is most appropriate for overseeing and managing the information resources; and

ii. Maintain an inventory of the agency's information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII to allow the agency to regularly review its PII and ensure, to the extent reasonably practicable, that such PII is accurate, relevant, timely, and complete; and to allow the agency to reduce its PII to the minimum necessary for the proper performance of authorized agency functions.[5]

b) Information Management

Agencies shall:

i. Continually facilitate adoption of new and emerging technologies, and regularly assess the following throughout the life of each information system: the inventory of the physical and software assets associated with the system[6]; the maintainability and sustainability of the information resources and infrastructure supporting the system; and actively determine when significant upgrades,

[3] The inventory of agency information resources shall include an enterprise-wide data inventory that accounts for data used in the agency's information systems.

[4] The inventory of major information systems is required in accordance with 44 U.S.C. § 3505(c). All information systems are subject to the requirements of the Federal Information Security Modernization Act (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35) whether or not they are designated as a major information system.

[5] This inventory may be combined with the agency's inventory of information systems, as described above.

[6] Agencies shall ensure that physical devices, software applications, hardware platforms, and systems within the organization are inventoried initially when obtained and updated on an ongoing basis.

replacements, or disposition is required to effectively support agency missions or business functions and adequately protect agency assets;[7] and

ii. Ensure the terms and conditions of contracts and other agreements involving the processing, storage, access to, transmission, and disposition of Federal information are linked to the IRM strategic plan goals, and are sufficient to enable agencies to meet their policy and legal requirements.

c) Risk Management

Agencies shall:

i. Consider information security, privacy, records management, public transparency, and supply chain security issues for all resource planning and management activities throughout the system development life cycle so that risks are appropriately managed;

ii. Develop plan, in consultation with Chief Information Officers (CIOs), Senior Agency Officials for Records Management (SAORMs), and Senior Agency Officials for Privacy (SAOPs), for information systems and components that cannot be appropriately protected or secured and ensure that such systems are given a high priority for upgrade, replacement, or retirement;[8]

iii. Regularly review and address risk regarding processes, people, and technology; and

iv. Consult National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) and NIST Special Publications (SPs) (e.g., 500, 800, and 1800 series guidelines).

2) Enterprise Architecture

Agencies shall develop an enterprise architecture (EA) that describes the baseline architecture, target architecture, and a transition plan to get to the target architecture. The agency's EA shall align to their IRM Strategic Plan. The EA should incorporate agency plans for significant upgrades, replacements, and disposition of information systems when the systems can no longer effectively support missions or business functions. The EA should align business and technology resources to achieve strategic outcomes. The process of describing the current and future state of the agency, and laying out a plan for transitioning from the current state to the desired future state, helps agencies to eliminate waste and duplication, increase shared services, close performance gaps, and promote engagement among Government, industry, and citizens.

[7] The assessment process is described in NIST SP 800-53A, Guide for Assessing the Security Controls in Federal Information Systems and Organizations.

[8] Includes hardware, software, or firmware components no longer supported by developers, vendors, or manufacturers through the availability of software patches, firmware updates, replacement parts, and maintenance contracts. NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems and Organizations, provides additional guidance on unsupported software components.

3) Planning, Programming, and Budgeting

Agencies shall, in accordance with the Federal Information Technology Acquisition Reform Act (FITARA) and related OMB policy:[9]

a) Ensure that IT resources are distinctly identified and separated from non-IT resources during the planning, programming, and budgeting processes in a manner that affords agency CIOs appropriate visibility and specificity to provide effective management and oversight of IT resources;

b) Ensure that the agency-wide budget development process includes the CFO, CAO, and CIO in the planning, programming, and budgeting stages for programs that include IT resources (not just programs that are primarily information- and technology-oriented);

c) The agency head, in consultation with the CFO, CAO, CIO, and program leadership, shall define the processes by which program leadership works with the CIO to plan an overall portfolio of IT resources that achieve program and business objectives efficiently and effectively by:

   i. Weighing potential and ongoing IT investments and their underlying capabilities against other proposed and ongoing IT investments in the portfolio; and

   ii. Identifying gaps between planned and actual cost, schedule, and performance goals for IT investments and developing a corrective action plan to close such gaps;

d) Ensure that the CIO approves the IT components of any plans, through a process defined by the agency head that balances IT investments with other uses of agency funding. Agencies shall also ensure that the CIO is included in the internal planning processes for how the agency uses information resources to achieve its objectives at all points in their life cycle, including operations and disposition or migration;

e) Ensure that agency budget justification materials, in their initial budget submission to OMB, include a statement that affirms:

   i. The CIO has reviewed and approves the IT investments portion of the budget request;

   ii. The SAOP has reviewed the IT investments portion of the budget request to ensure that privacy requirements, as well as any associated costs, are explicitly identified and included with respect to any IT resources that will be used to create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII;

[9] OMB policy documents can be located at https://www.whitehouse.gov/omb/circulars_default and https://www.whitehouse.gov/omb/memoranda_default. The Department of Defense (DoD), the Intelligence Community, and portions of other agencies that operate systems related to national security are subject to only certain portions of Federal Information Technology Acquisition Reform (FITARA) (Pub. L. 113-291), as provided for in the statute.

iii. The CFO and CIO jointly affirm that the CIO had a significant role in reviewing planned IT support for major program objectives and significant increases and decreases in IT resources; and

iv. The IT Portfolio includes appropriate estimates of all IT resources included in the budget request;

f) Ensure that the CFO, CAO, and CIO define agency-wide policy for the level of detail of planned expenditure reporting for all transactions that include IT resources.

4) Business Continuity Planning

Agencies shall develop a Business Continuity Plan.[10] A Business Continuity Plan to continue agency operations during times of service disruption is essential. Therefore, agencies shall develop continuity strategies in order to ensure services and access can be restored in time to meet the mission needs. Manual workarounds shall be part of the plan so business can continue while information systems are being restored.

b. Governance

In support of agency missions and business needs, and in coordination with program managers, agencies shall:

1) Define, implement, and maintain processes, standards, and policies applied to all information resources at the agency, in accordance with OMB guidance;

2) Require that the CIO, in coordination with appropriate governance boards, defines processes and policies in sufficient detail to address information resources appropriately. At a minimum, these processes and policies shall require that:

a) Investments and projects in development are evaluated to determine the applicability of agile development;[11]

b) Open data standards are used to the maximum extent possible when implementing IT systems;

c) Appropriate measurements are used to evaluate the cost, schedule, and overall performance variances[12] of IT projects across the portfolio leveraging processes such

[10] The Federal Information Security Modernization Act of 2014 (FISMA) (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35) requires each agency to develop, document, and implement an agency-wide information security program that includes plans and procedures to ensure continuity of operations for information systems that support the operations and assets of the agency. For additional information related to continuity planning and contingency planning, see Appendix I.

[11] This evaluation shall be conducted as part of the acquisition planning process and involve staff from the CIO of the department, the implementing program managers, the appropriate contracting office representatives, and other applicable agency officials;

[12] Standard definitions from budget or performance management practices, such as earned value management, shall be used for cost variance and schedule variance to measure progress.

as IT investment management, enterprise architecture, and other agency IT or performance management processes;[13]

d) There are agency-wide policies and procedures for conducting IT investment reviews, operational analyses, or other applicable performance reviews to evaluate IT resources, including projects in development and ongoing activities;

e) Data and information needs are met through agency-wide data governance policies that clearly establish the roles, responsibilities, and processes by which agency personnel manage information as an asset and the relationships among technology, data, agency programs, strategies, legal and regulatory requirements, and business objectives;[14] and

f) Unsupported information systems and system components[15] are phased out as rapidly as possible, and planning and budgeting activities for all IT systems and services incorporate migration planning and resourcing to accomplish this requirement;

3) Ensure that the CIO is a member of governance boards that inform decisions regarding IT resources to provide for early matching of appropriate information resources with program objectives. The CIO may designate, in consultation with other senior agency officials, other agency officials to act as their representative to fulfill aspects of this responsibility so long as the CIO retains accountability;

4) Require that information security and privacy be fully integrated into the system development process;

5) Conduct TechStat reviews, led by the CIO, or use other applicable performance measurements to evaluate the use of agency information resources. The CIO may recommend to the agency head the modification, pause, or termination of any acquisition, investment, or activity that includes a significant IT component based on the CIO's evaluation, within the terms of the relevant contracts and applicable regulations;

6) Establish and maintain a process for the CIO to regularly engage with program managers to evaluate IT resources supporting each agency strategic objective. It shall be the CIO and program managers' shared responsibility to ensure that legacy and ongoing IT investments are appropriately delivering customer value and meeting the business objectives of the agency and the programs that support the agency; and

7) Measure performance in accordance with the GPRA Modernization Act and OMB Circular A-11, Preparation, Submission, and Execution of the Budget.

[13] The Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994 (Pub. L. 103-355) requires agencies to achieve, on average, ninety percent of the cost and schedule goals established for major and non-major acquisition programs of the agency without reducing the performance or capabilities of the items being acquired.

[14] In accordance with the information management responsibilities outlined in 44 U.S.C. § 3506(b).

[15] Includes hardware, software, or firmware components no longer supported by developers, vendors, manufacturers, or communities through the availability of software patches, firmware updates, replacement parts, and maintenance contracts. NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems and Organizations, provides additional guidance on unsupported software components.

c. Leadership and Workforce

Agencies shall:

1) Require that the Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO), CIO, CAO, and SAOP develop a set of competency requirements for information resources staff, including program managers, information security, privacy, and IT leadership positions, and develop and maintain a current workforce planning process to ensure that the agency can:

   a) Anticipate and respond to changing mission requirements;

   b) Maintain workforce skills in a rapidly developing IT environment; and

   c) Recruit and retain the IT talent needed to accomplish the mission;

2) Ensure that the workforce, which supports the acquisition, management, maintenance, and use of information resources, has the appropriate knowledge and skills to facilitate the achievement of the portfolio's performance goals and, further, evaluate the extent to which the agency's executive-level workforce has appropriate information and technology-related knowledge and skills;

3) Implement innovative approaches and track performance of workforce development training, including cross-functional training, rotational development and assignments, and effective training and education used by the private sector, to maintain and enhance skills or obtain additional skills;

4) Ensure that the CHCO and CIO jointly establish an agency-wide critical element (or elements) to be included in all component or bureau CIOs' performance evaluations. In addition, the CIO shall identify key component or bureau CIOs and provide input to the rating official for these component or bureau CIOs at the time of the initial summary rating and for any required progress reviews. The rating official will consider the input from the CIO when determining the initial summary rating and discuss it with the component or bureau CIO during progress reviews;

5) Ensure that the CIO is involved in the recruitment, approves the selection, and provides input for the performance review of any component or bureau CIO, which includes any component or bureau leader who holds CIO duties but not necessarily the "CIO" title. The title and responsibilities of current component or bureau CIOs should be designated or transferred to other agency personnel by the agency head or their designee as appropriate, and such decisions should take into consideration recommendations from the agency CIO;

6) Ensure that the SAOP is involved in assessing and addressing the hiring, training, and professional development needs of the agency with respect to privacy; and

7) Ensure that the CIO, CHCO, SAOP, and other hiring managers take advantage of flexible hiring authorities for specialized positions, as established by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM).

d. IT Investment Management

1) Acquisition of Information Technology and Services

Agencies shall:

HUD-17-0235-B-000290

a) Make use of adequate competition, analyze risks (including supply chain risks) associated with potential contractors and the products and services they provide, and allocate risk responsibility between Government and contractor when acquiring IT;

b) Conduct definitive technical, cost, and risk analyses of alternative design implementations, including consideration of the full life cycle costs of IT products and services, including but not limited to, planning, analysis, design, implementation, sustainment, maintenance, re-competition, and retraining costs, scaled to the size and complexity of individual requirements;[16]

c) Consider existing Federal contract solutions or shared services when developing planned information systems, available within the same agency, from other agencies, or from the private sector to meet agency needs to avoid duplicative IT investments;

d) Acquire IT products and services in accordance with Government-wide requirements;[17]

e) Ensure that decisions to improve existing information systems with custom-developed solutions or develop new information systems are initiated only when no existing alternative private sector or governmental source can efficiently meet the need, taking into account long-term sustainment and maintenance;

f) Structure acquisitions for major IT investments into useful segments, with a narrow scope and brief duration, in order to reduce risk, promote flexibility and interoperability, increase accountability, and better match mission need with current technology and market conditions;

g) To the extent practicable, modular contracts for IT, including orders for increments or useful segments of work, should be awarded within 180 days after the solicitation is issued. If award cannot be made within 180 days, agencies shall consider cancelling the solicitation. The IT acquired should be delivered within 18 months after the solicitation resulting in award of the contract was issued;[18]

h) Align IT procurement requirements with larger agency strategic goals;

i) Promote innovation in IT procurements, including conducting market research in order to maximize utilization of innovative ideas; and

j) Include security, privacy, accessibility, records management, and other relevant requirements in solicitations.

2) Agency Approval

Agencies shall ensure that all acquisition strategies, plans, and requirements (as described in FAR Part 7), or interagency agreements (such as those used to support

[16] Other acquisition planning provisions are set forth in the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) Subpart 7.1, Acquisition Plans, and Part 10, Market Research.

[17] For information regarding Government-wide requirements, refer to OMB policy and the Federal Acquisition Regulation. For the acquisition of Personal Identity Verification (PIV) and public key infrastructure (PKI) products and services, also refer to the FIPS 201 Evaluation Program at https://www.idmanagement.gov.

purchases through another agency) that include IT are reviewed and approved by the purchasing agency's CIO. These approvals shall consider the following factors:

a) Alignment with mission and program objectives in coordination with program leadership;

b) Appropriateness with respect to the mission and business objectives supported by the IRM Strategic Plan;

c) Inclusion of innovative solutions;

d) Appropriateness of contract type for IT-related resources;

e) Appropriateness of IT-related portions of statement of needs or statement of work;

f) Ability to deliver functionality in short increments;

g) Inclusion of Government-wide IT requirements, such as information security; and

h) Opportunities to migrate from end-of-life software and systems, and to retire those systems.

3) Investment Planning and Control

Agencies are responsible for establishing a decision-making process that shall cover the life of each information system and include explicit criteria for analyzing the projected and actual costs, benefits, and risks, including information security and privacy risks, associated with the IT investments. Agencies shall designate IT investments according to relevant statutes, regulations, and guidance in OMB Circular A-11, and execute processes commensurate with the size, scope, duration, and delivery risk of the investment. The IT investment processes shall encompass planning, budgeting, procurement, management, and assessment. For further guidance related to investment planning, refer to OMB Circular A-11, including the Capital Programming Guide. At a minimum, agencies shall ensure that:

a) All IT resources (see "Information Technology Resources" definition) are included in IT investment planning documents or artifacts;

b) Decisions related to major IT investments are supported by business cases with appropriate evidence;

c) IT investments implement an agile development approach, as appropriate;[19]

d) IT investments support and enable core mission and operational functions and processes related to the agency's missions and business requirements;

e) IT capital investment plans and budgetary requests are reviewed to ensure that Government-wide requirements, as well as any associated costs, are explicitly identified and included, with respect to any IT resources. This includes IT resources that will be used to create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII; and

f) Decisions to improve, enhance, or modernize existing IT investments or to develop new IT investments are made only after conducting an alternatives analysis that includes both government-provided (internal, interagency, and intra-agency where applicable) and commercially available options, and the option representing the best value to the Government has been selected.

4) Selection Criteria and Requirements

Agencies shall consider the following factors when analyzing IT investments:

a) Qualitative and quantitative research methods are used to determine the goals, needs, and behaviors of current and prospective managers and users of the service to strengthen the understanding of requirements;

b) All decisions concerning the selection of information system technologies and services – including decisions to acquire or develop custom or duplicative solutions – shall be merit-based and consider factors such as, but not limited to, ability to meet operational or mission requirements, total life cycle cost of ownership, performance, security, interoperability, privacy, accessibility, ability to share or reuse, resources required to switch vendors, and availability of quality support. Consistent with the FAR, contracts for custom software development are to include contractual provisions that reaffirm the right to reuse the software throughout the Federal Government;

c) Agencies shall consider use of suitable existing Federal information technology resources and commercially-available solutions in order to ensure effective management of Federal resources. Consistent with law and regulation, agencies should consider and evaluate the suitability of existing Federal information technologies and related services, including software, Federal shared services, and commercially-available solutions before embarking upon new developments of software and information technologies; and

d) Information systems security levels are commensurate with the impact that may result from unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction of such information consistent with NIST standards and guidelines.

5) IT Investment Design and Management

Agencies shall implement the following requirements:

a) Information systems and processes must support and maximize interoperability and access to information, where appropriate, by using documented, scalable, and continuously available application programming interfaces and open machine-readable formats;

b) IT investments must facilitate interoperability, application portability, and scalability across networks of heterogeneous hardware, software, and communications platforms;

c) Information systems, technologies, and processes shall facilitate accessibility under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended; in particular, see specific electronic and

IT accessibility requirements commonly known as "section 508" requirements (29 U.S.C. § 794d);

d) Records management functions and retention and disposition requirements must be fully incorporated into information life cycle processes and stages, including the design, development, implementation, and decommissioning of information systems, particularly Internet resources to include storage solutions and cloud-based services such as software as a service, platform as a service, and infrastructure as a service; and

e) IT investments use an Earned Value Management System (EVMS) and Integrated Baseline Review, when appropriate, as required by FAR Subpart 34.2. When an EVMS is required, agencies must have a documented process for accepting a contractor's EVMS. Agencies are encouraged to share information about their acceptance process with other agencies and to consider recognizing each other's acceptance of an EVMS so that a contractor is not required to complete a duplicative process. When an EVMS is not required, implement a baseline validation process as part of an overall investment risk management strategy consistent with OMB guidance.

e. Information Management and Access

1) Agencies shall incorporate the following steps, as appropriate, in planning, budgeting, governance, and other policies:

a) Federal information is properly managed throughout its life cycle, including all stages through which the information passes, such as: creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposition;

b) Federal information is managed by making information accessible, discoverable, and usable by the public to the extent permitted by law and subject to privacy, security (which includes confidentiality), or other valid restrictions pertaining to access, use, dissemination, and disclosure;

c) Federal information is managed consistent with applicable records retention and disposition requirements;

d) Federal information and information systems are managed in a manner that identifies and mitigates privacy and security risks; and

e) Federal information is managed with clearly designated roles and responsibilities to promote effective and efficient design and operation of information resources management processes within their agency.

2) Agencies have a responsibility to provide information to the public consistent with their missions and subject to Federal law and policy. Agencies will discharge this responsibility by:

a) Publishing public information online in a manner that promotes analysis and reuse for the widest possible range of purposes, meaning that the information is publicly accessible, machine-readable, appropriately described, complete, and timely. This includes providing such public information in a format(s) accessible to employees and members of the public with disabilities;[20]

b) Avoiding establishing, or permitting others to establish on their behalf, exclusive, restricted, or other distribution arrangements that interfere with the agency's ability to disseminate its public information on a timely and equitable basis;

c) Avoiding charging fees or royalties for public information or establishing unnecessary restrictions on the resale or re-dissemination of public information by the public. Agencies shall not, unless specifically authorized by statute, establish fees that exceed the cost of dissemination to the public, restrict or regulate the use, resale, or re-dissemination of public information by the public; or establish any mechanism that interferes with the timely and equitable availability of public information to the public;[21]

d) As appropriate, making Government publications available to depository libraries through the Government Publishing Office regardless of format;[22]

e) Taking advantage of all dissemination channels, including Federal, State, local, tribal, and territorial governments, libraries and educational institutions, for-profit and nonprofit organizations, and private sector entities, in discharging agency information dissemination responsibilities; and

f) Considering the impact of providing agency information and services over the Internet for individuals who do not own computers or lack Internet access and, to the extent practicable, pursuing additional or alternative modes of delivery to ensure that such information and services are accessible to, and their availability is not diminished for, such individuals.

3) Agencies shall establish policies, procedures, and standards that enable data governance so that information is managed and maintained according to relevant statute, regulations, and guidance.

4) Agencies shall collect or create information in a way that supports downstream interoperability among information systems and streamlines dissemination to the public, where appropriate, by creating or collecting all new information electronically by default, in machine-readable open formats, using relevant data standards, that upon creation includes standard extensible metadata in accordance with OMB guidance.

5) Agencies shall include appropriate provisions in contracts, and other agreements, to encourage recipients of Federal funding to maximize access to data developed under an award and to prepare data management plans that describe data to be created in funded programs and approaches for long-term preservation and access to created data.

[22] Pursuant to the Depository Library Act of 1962 (44 U.S.C. Chapter 19).

6) Agencies shall ensure that there is a mechanism for the public to provide feedback about public information.

7) Agencies shall manage information in accordance with the following principles as appropriate:

   a) Providing notice of Federal agency practices for the creation, collection, use, processing, preservation, storage, maintenance, disclosure, dissemination, and disposal of information, as appropriate;

   b) Providing adequate notice when initiating, substantially modifying, or terminating dissemination of significant information that the public may be using;

   c) Identifying the source of the information disseminated to the public, if from outside the agency, where practicable;

   d) Considering target audiences of Federal information when determining format, frequency of update, and other information management decisions;

   e) Considering the impact of decisions and actions in each stage of the information life cycle on other stages;

   f) Considering the effects of information management actions on members of the public and State, local, tribal and territorial governments and their access to Federal information and ensure consultation with the public and those governments as appropriate;

   g) Seeking to satisfy new information needs through interagency or intergovernmental sharing of information, or through nongovernmental sources, where lawful and appropriate, before creating or collecting new information; and

   h) Complying with all applicable statutes and policies governing the disclosure or dissemination of information, including those related to the quality, privacy, security, accessibility, and other valid access, use, and dissemination restrictions.

f. Privacy and Information Security[23]

   1) Privacy

      Agencies shall:

      a) Establish and maintain a comprehensive privacy program that ensures compliance with applicable privacy requirements, develops and evaluates privacy policy, and manages privacy risks;[24]

      b) Designate an SAOP who has agency-wide responsibility and accountability for developing, implementing, and maintaining an agency-wide privacy program to [23] Although this section includes requirements for protecting Federal information resources, this area is covered more fully in the Appendices to this Circular.

[24] When considering privacy risks, privacy programs shall consider the risks to an individual or individuals associated with the agency's creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, or disposal of their PII.

HUD-17-0235-B-000296

ensure compliance with all applicable statutes, regulations, and policies regarding the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of PII by programs and information systems, developing and evaluating privacy policy, and managing privacy risks at the agency;[25]

c) Monitor Federal law, regulation, and policy for changes that affect privacy;

d) Limit the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, and disclosure of PII to that which is legally authorized, relevant, and reasonably deemed necessary for the proper performance of agency functions;

e) To the extent reasonably practicable, ensure that PII is accurate, relevant, timely, and complete, and reduce all PII to the minimum necessary for the proper performance of authorized agency functions;

f) Take steps to eliminate unnecessary collection, maintenance, and use of Social Security numbers, and explore alternatives to the use of Social Security numbers as a personal identifier;

g) Comply with all applicable privacy-related laws, including the requirements of the Privacy Act,[26] and ensure that the Privacy Act system of records notices are published, revised, and rescinded, as required;

h) Maintain all records with PII in accordance with applicable records retention or disposition schedules approved by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA);

i) Conduct privacy impact assessments when developing, procuring, or using IT, in accordance with the E-Government Act,[27] and make the privacy impact assessments available to the public in accordance with OMB policy;

j) Maintain and post privacy policies on all agency websites, mobile applications, and other digital services, in accordance with the E-Government Act and OMB policy; and

k) Ensure that the SAOP and the agency's privacy personnel closely coordinate with the agency CIO, senior agency information security officer, and other agency offices and officials, as appropriate.

[25] The SAOP shall be designated by the head of the agency, pursuant to Executive Order 13719, Establishment of the Federal Privacy Council (2016), and OMB guidance.

[26] Agencies should also consult OMB policies on privacy, and OMB Circular A-108, Federal Agency Responsibilities for Review, Reporting, and Publication under the Privacy Act.

[27] Section 208(b) of the E-Government Act requires agencies, absent an applicable exception under that section, to conduct a PIA before: (i) developing or procuring IT that collects, maintains, or disseminates information that is in an identifiable form; or (ii) initiating a new collection of information that – (I) will be collected, maintained, or disseminated using IT; and (II) includes any information in an identifiable form permitting the physical or online contacting of a specific individual, if identical questions have been posed to, or identical reporting requirements imposed on, 10 or more persons, other than agencies, instrumentalities, or employees of the Federal Government.

2) Information Security

To provide proper safeguards, agencies shall:

a) Ensure that the CIO designates a senior agency information security officer to develop and maintain an agency-wide information security program in accordance with the Federal Information Security Modernization Act of 2014 (FISMA);

b) Protect information in a manner commensurate with the risk that would result from unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction of such information; and

c) Implement security policies issued by OMB, as well as requirements issued by the Department of Commerce, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the General Services Administration (GSA), and the Office of Personnel Management (OPM). This includes applying the standards and guidelines contained in the NIST FIPS, NIST SPs (e.g., 800 series guidelines), and where appropriate and directed by OMB, NIST Interagency or Internal Reports (NISTIRs).[28]

g. Electronic Signatures[29]

To support the transition to electronic government, agencies shall:

1) Allow individuals or entities that deal with the agencies the option to submit information or transact with the agency electronically, when practicable, and for agencies to maintain records electronically, when practicable. Electronic records and their related electronic signatures are not to be denied legal effect, validity, or enforceability merely because they are in electronic form;[30]

2) Promote the use of electronic contract formation, signatures, and recordkeeping in private commerce by establishing legal equivalence between: contracts written on paper and contracts in electronic form; pen-and-ink signatures and electronic signatures; and other legally required written documents (termed "records") and the same information in electronic form; and [31]

[28] NISTIRs describe research of a technical nature of interest to a specialized audience.

[29] In support of Government Paperwork Elimination Act (GPEA) and Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-Sign), the Federal Chief Information Officers Council maintains guidance on use of Electronic Signatures (E-Signatures) in Federal organization transactions. The Federal Chief Information Officers Council guidance, Use of Electronic Signatures in Federal Organization Transactions, can be located at https://www.idmanagement.gov. This guidance expands upon OMB guidance.

[30] Pursuant to the Government Paperwork Elimination Act of 1998 (44 U.S.C. § 3504).

[31] Pursuant to E-Sign (15 U.S.C. Chapter 96). E-Sign applies broadly to commercial, consumer, and business transactions affecting interstate or foreign commerce, and to transactions regulated by both Federal and State Government.

3) Develop and implement processes to support use of digital signatures, a form of electronic signature, for employees and contractors.[32]

h. Records Management

Agencies shall:

1) Designate a senior agency official for records management (SAORM) who has overall agency-wide responsibility for records management;

2) Institute records management programs that provide documentation of agency activities;[33]

3) Manage electronic records in accordance with Government-wide requirements. This includes:

   a) Managing all permanent electronic records electronically to the fullest extent possible for eventual transfer and accessioning by NARA in an electronic format; and

   b) Managing all email records electronically and retaining them in an appropriate electronic system that supports records management and litigation requirements, including the capability to identify, retrieve, and retain the records for as long as they are needed;

4) Ensure the ability to access, retrieve, and manage records throughout their life cycle regardless of form or medium;

5) Ensure agency records managed by the SAORM are treated as information resources and follow the requirements in this Circular;

6) Establish and obtain the approval of the Archivist of the United States for retention schedules for Federal records in a timely fashion;

7) Ensure the proper and timely disposition of Federal records in accordance with a retention schedule approved by the Archivist of the United States; and

8) Provide training and guidance, as appropriate, to all agency employees and contractors regarding their Federal records management responsibilities.

i. Leveraging the Evolving Internet

In a global and connected economy, it is essential for the United States and the Federal Government to strive to ensure that Internet-based technologies remain competitive. The Federal Government needs to continue to lead in innovation, contribute to the free flow of information, participate in an open and available market, and do this in a way that is scalable and secure. Networking demands, escalating with the continued emergence of connecting technologies, has grown well beyond initial capabilities. The use of the newest Internet Protocol (currently, Internet Protocol Version 6 [IPv6]) is an essential part of accomplishing [32] Digital signatures can help agencies streamline mission or business processes and transition manual processes to more automated processes to include, for example, online transactions.

[33] Additional information regarding adequate and proper documentation is available in 36 C.F.R. § 1222.22.

these goals and ensuring that the network infrastructure can meet our needs for growing capacity, security, and privacy, and keep the United States competitive in the ever-escalating global electronic economy. Therefore, agencies shall:

1) Implement agency-wide processes requiring that all IT acquisitions using Internet Protocol conform to the FAR; and[34]

2) Ensure that all public-facing Internet services and enterprise networks fully support the newest version of Internet Protocol as required by OMB policy.

6. Government-wide Responsibilities

a. Department of Commerce

The Secretary of Commerce shall:

1) Develop and issue standards and guidelines for the security and privacy of information in Federal information systems and systems which create, collect, process, store, transmit, disseminate, or dispose of information on behalf of the Federal Government;[35]

2) Provide OMB and the agencies with scientific and technical advisory services relating to the development and use of IT;[36]

3) Conduct studies and evaluations concerning telecommunications technology, and the improvement, expansion, testing, operation, and use of Federal telecommunications systems, and advise the Director of OMB and appropriate agencies of the recommendations that result from such studies;[37]

4) Develop, in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Director of OMB, plans, policies, and programs relating to international telecommunications issues affecting Federal information activities;[38]

5) Identify needs for standardization of telecommunications and information processing technology, and develop standards, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the Administrator of General Services, to ensure efficient application of such technology;[39]

[34] When acquiring information technology using Internet Protocol, agencies must include the appropriate Internet Protocol compliance requirements in accordance with § 11.002(g) of the FAR. For additional information, refer to https://www.acquisition.gov/.

[38] Pursuant to the NTIA Organization Act, as amended (47 U.S.C. §902(b)(2)(G)).

[39] Pursuant to the NIST Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 272(b), 278g-3, and OMB A-119, Federal Participation in the Development and Use of Voluntary Consensus Standards and in Conformity Assessment Activities.

6) Ensure that the Federal Government is represented in the development of national and international (in consultation with the Secretary of State) IT standards, and advise the Director of OMB on such activities;[40]

7) Evaluate new information technologies to assess their security vulnerabilities, with technical assistance from the Department of Defense (DOD) and DHS;

8) Solicit and consider the recommendations of the Information Security and Privacy Advisory Board regarding such standards and guidelines;[41] and

9) Lead the development of a Cybersecurity Framework to reduce cyber risks to critical infrastructure pursuant to Executive Order 13636, Improving Critical Infrastructure Cybersecurity.

b. Department of Homeland Security

The Secretary of Homeland Security shall:[42]

1) Perform its responsibilities under FISMA, including assisting OMB in carrying out its statutory authorities and functions of information security oversight and policy responsibilities;[43]

2) Develop and oversee the implementation of binding operational directives pursuant to FISMA;[44]

3) Monitor agency implementation of information security policies and practices;

4) Convene meetings with senior agency officials to help ensure effective implementation of information security policies and procedures;

5) Coordinate Government-wide efforts on information security policies and practices, including consultation with the Federal Chief Information Officers Council, and the Director of NIST;

6) Provide operational and technical assistance to agencies in implementing policies, principles, standards, and guidelines on information security, including implementation of standards promulgated under 40 U.S.C. § 11331, including by:

a) Operating the Federal information security incident center established under 44 U.S.C. § 3556;

b) Upon request by an agency, deploying technology to assist the agency to continuously diagnose and mitigate cyber threats and vulnerabilities, with or without reimbursement;

[40] Pursuant to NIST Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 272(b), 273, 278g–3 and OMB A-119, Federal Participation in the Development and Use of Voluntary Consensus Standards and in Conformity Assessment Activities.

[41] Pursuant to the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. §278g–4).

c) Compiling and analyzing data on agency information security; and

d) Developing and conducting targeted operational evaluations, including threat and vulnerability assessments, on the information systems;

7) Consult with the Director of NIST regarding any binding operational directives that implements the standards and guidelines developed by NIST;

8) Coordinate the development of binding operational directives and the oversight of the implementation of such directives with OMB to ensure consistency with OMB policies;

9) Ensure that binding operational directives do not conflict with the guidelines issued under 40 U.S.C. § 11331;

10) Take other actions as the Director of OMB or the Secretary, in consultation with the Director of OMB, may determine necessary to carry out the implementation of effective agency information security policies and practices for information systems;

11) Manage Government-wide information security programs and provide and operate Federal information security shared services, in coordination with OMB and in accordance with OMB policies;

12) Provide, as appropriate, intelligence and other information about cyber threats, vulnerabilities, and incidents to agencies to assist in risk assessments conducted under FISMA;[45] and

13) Solicit and consider the recommendations of the Information Security Privacy Advisory Board, established by the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (NIST Act).[46]

c. Federal Chief Information Officers Council (Federal CIO Council)

Pursuant to the E-Government Act of 2002, the Federal CIO Council shall:[47]

1) Develop recommendations for OMB on Government information resources management policies and requirements;

2) Share experiences, ideas, best practices, and innovative approaches related to information resources management;

3) Assist OMB in the identification, development, and coordination of multiagency projects and other innovation initiatives to improve Federal Government performance through use of IT;

4) Promote the development and use of common performance measures for agency information resources management, as further described in statute;

[45] 44 U.S.C. § 3556(a)(4).

[47] E-Government Act of 2002 (44 U.S.C. § 3603).

5) Work as appropriate with NIST and OMB to develop recommendations on IT standards developed under the NIST Act and promulgated under section 11331 of title 40, and maximize the use of commercial standards, as further described in statute;

6) Work with OPM to assess and address the hiring, training, classification, and professional development needs of the Federal Government related to information resources management;

7) Work with the Archivist of the United States to assess how the Federal Records Act can be addressed effectively by Federal information resources management activities; and

8) Solicit perspectives from the Chief Financial Officers Council, Federal Acquisition Officers Council, Chief Human Capital Officers' Council, Budget Officers Advisory Council, and other key groups in the Federal Government, as well as industry, academia, and other Federal, State, local, tribal and territorial governments, on matters of concern to the Council as appropriate.

d. Federal Privacy Council

Pursuant to Executive Order 13719, the Federal Privacy Council shall:[48]

1) Develop recommendations for OMB on Federal Government privacy policies and requirements;

2) Coordinate and share ideas, best practices, and approaches for protecting privacy and implementing appropriate privacy safeguards;

3) Assess and recommend how best to address the hiring, training, and professional development needs of the Federal Government with respect to privacy matters;

4) Perform other privacy-related functions, consistent with law, as designated by the Chair of the Federal Privacy Council; and

5) In performing its duties, engage in appropriate coordination as described in Executive Order 13719.[49]

(i) The Chair and the Privacy Council shall coordinate with the Federal Chief Information Officers Council (CIO Council) to promote consistency and efficiency across the executive branch when addressing privacy and information security issues. In addition, the Chairs of the Privacy Council and the CIO Council shall coordinate to ensure that the work of the two councils is complementary and not duplicative.

(ii) The Chair and the Privacy Council should coordinate, as appropriate, with such other interagency councils and councils and offices within the Executive Office of the President, as appropriate, including the President's Management Council, the Chief Financial Officers Council, the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, the National Science and Technology Council, the National Economic Council, the Domestic Policy Council, the National Security Council staff, the Office of Science and Technology Policy, the Interagency Council on Statistical Policy, the Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council, and the Small Agency Council.

e. General Services Administration

The Administrator of General Services shall:

1) Provide a Government-wide network services contract that leverages shared solutions for many agencies;[50]

2) Ensure that contract vehicles and services made available to agencies are cost-effective and provide for capabilities that are consistent with Government-wide requirements;[51]

3) Assist OMB in setting strategic direction for electronic government and overseeing Government-wide implementation, and recommend changes relating to Government-wide strategies and priorities;[52]

4) Promote innovative uses of IT by agencies, particularly initiatives involving multiagency collaboration, through support of pilot projects, research, experimentation, and the use of innovative technologies;[53]

5) Maintain a Federal public key infrastructure (PKI) framework to allow efficient interoperability among agencies when using digital certificates;[54] and

6) Ensure that effective controls are in place to protect the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of the Federal PKI framework components managed and overseen by the agency, to include performing information security continuous monitoring of the Federal PKI.

f. National Archives and Records Administration

The Archivist of the United States shall:

1) Administer the Federal Records Act and NARA regulations (36 CFR Subchapter B—Records Management);[55]

2) Develop regulations relating to electronic records management;[56]

3) Work with agencies to ensure the transfer of permanent Federal electronic records to the National Archives of the United States in digital or electronic form to the greatest extent possible;[57]

5) Serve as the Executive Agent for the Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) program.[59]

g. Office of Personnel Management

The Administrator of the Office of Personnel Management shall:[60]

1) Analyze, on an ongoing basis, the workforce needs of the Federal Government related to IT and information resources management, in conjunction with relevant agencies;

2) Identify training needs of the Federal Government workforce related to IT and information resources management;

3) Oversee the development of curricula, training methods, and training priorities that correspond to the projected personnel needs related to IT and information resources management; and

4) Assess the training of employees in IT disciplines to address information resources management needs.

7. Effectiveness

This Circular is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity by any party against the United States, its departments, agencies, or entities, its officers, employees, or agents, or any other person.

8. Oversight

The Director of OMB shall use IT planning reviews, fiscal budget reviews, information collection reviews, management reviews, and such other measures as the Director deems necessary to evaluate the adequacy and efficiency of each agency's information resources management and compliance with this Circular.

The Director of OMB may, consistent with statute and upon written request of an agency, grant a waiver from particular requirements of this Circular. Requests for waivers must detail the reasons why a particular waiver is sought, identify the duration of the waiver sought, and include a plan for the prompt and orderly transition to full compliance with the requirements of this Circular. Notice of each waiver request must be published promptly by the agency in the Federal Register, with a copy of the waiver request made available to the public on request.

10. Definitions

a. The following definitions are applicable within this policy:

1) 'Accessibility' means information technology products or services that are in full compliance with the standards of section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.[62]

2) 'Adequate security' means security protections commensurate with the risk resulting from the unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction of information. This includes ensuring that information hosted on behalf of an agency and information systems and applications used by the agency operate effectively and provide appropriate confidentiality, integrity, and availability protections through the application of cost-effective security controls.

3) 'Agency' means any executive agency or department, military department, Federal Government corporation, Federal Government-controlled corporation, or other establishment in the Executive Branch of the Federal Government, or any independent regulatory agency.

4) 'Agency Strategic Plan' means a plan that provides general and long-term goals that the agency aims to achieve, the actions the agency will take to realize those goals, the

The 508 standards apply to ICT developed, procured, maintained, or used by Federal agencies covered by section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. § 794d), as amended. Accessibility also refers to the guidelines for telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment covered by Section 255 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.).

strategies planned, how the agency will deal with challenges and risks that may hinder achieving results, and the approaches it will use to monitor its progress.[63]

5) 'Agile Development' means a development methodology that uses an iterative approach to deliver solutions incrementally through close collaboration and frequent reassessment.

6) 'Authorization to Operate' means the official management decision given by a senior Federal official or officials to authorize operation of an information system and to explicitly accept the risk to agency operations (including mission, functions, image, or reputation), agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation based on the implementation of an agreed-upon set of security and privacy controls. Authorization also applies to common controls inherited by agency information systems.

7) 'Authorization boundary' means all components of an information system to be authorized for operation by an authorizing official. This excludes separately authorized systems to which the information system is connected.[64]

8) 'Authorization package' means the essential information that an authorizing official uses to determine whether to authorize the operation of an information system or the use of a designated set of common controls. At a minimum, the authorization package includes the information system security plan, privacy plan, security control assessment, privacy control assessment, and any relevant plans of action and milestones.

9) 'Authorizing official' means a senior Federal official or executive with the authority to authorize (i.e., assume responsibility for) the operation of an information system or the use a designated set of common controls at an acceptable level of risk to agency operations (including mission, functions, image, or reputation), agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.

10) 'Binding Operational Directive' means a compulsory direction from the Department of Homeland Security to an agency that is for the purposes of safeguarding Federal information and information systems from a known or reasonably suspected information security threat, vulnerability, or risk; shall be in accordance with policies, principles, standards, and guidelines issued by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; and may be revised or repealed by the Director if the direction issued on behalf of the Director is not in accordance with policies and principles developed by the Director (44 U.S.C. § 3552).

11) 'Business Continuity Plan' means a plan that focuses on sustaining an organization's mission or business processes during and after a disruption, and may be written for [63] For additional information, refer to the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) of 1993, as amended by the Government Performance and Results Modernization Act (GPRA Modernization Act) of 2010 (5 U.S.C. § 306 and 31 U.S.C. § 1115 et seq.); and OMB Circular A-11, Preparation, Submission, and Execution of the Budget.

[64] Agencies have significant flexibility in determining what constitutes an information system and its associated boundary.

mission or business processes within a single business unit or may address the entire organization's processes.[65]

12) 'Chief Information Officer' means the senior official that provides advice and other assistance to the head of the agency and other senior management personnel of the agency to ensure that IT is acquired and information resources are managed for the agency in a manner that achieves the agency's strategic goals and information resources management goals; and is responsible for ensuring agency compliance with, and prompt, efficient, and effective implementation of, the information policies and information resources management responsibilities, including the reduction of information collection burdens on the public.

13) 'Chief Information Officers Council' means the Council codified in the E-Government Act of 2002 (44 U.S.C § 101).

14) 'Common control' means a security or privacy control that is inherited by multiple information systems or programs.[66]

15) 'Controlled Unclassified Information' means information that requires safeguarding or dissemination controls pursuant to and consistent with law, regulations, and Government-wide policies, excluding information classified under Executive Order 13526 of December 29, 2009, or the Atomic Energy Act, as amended.

16) 'Critical infrastructure' means systems and assets, whether physical or virtual, so vital to the United States that the incapacity or destruction of such systems and assets would have a debilitating impact on security, national economic security, national public health safety, or any combination of those matters (42 U.S.C. § 5195c(e)).

17) 'Cybersecurity' means prevention of damage to, protection of, and restoration of computers, electronic communications systems, electronic communications services, wire communication, and electronic communication, including information contained therein, to ensure its availability, integrity, authentication, confidentiality, and non-repudiation.

18) 'Dissemination' means the government-initiated distribution of information to a nongovernment entity, including the public. The term 'dissemination,' as used within this Circular, does not include distribution limited to Federal Government employees, intra- or interagency use or sharing of Federal information, and responses to requests for agency records under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. § 552) or the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. § 552a).

19) 'Enterprise architecture' (a) means – (i) a strategic information asset base, which defines the mission; (ii) the information necessary to perform the mission; (iii) the technologies necessary to perform the mission; and (iv) the transitional processes for implementing [65] The Federal Information Security Modernization Act (44 U.S.C. § 3554(b))) requires each agency to develop, document, and implement an agency-wide information security program that includes plans and procedures to ensure continuity of operations for information systems that support the operations and assets of the agency.

[66] A control is inherited by an information system when the control is selected for the system but the control is developed, implemented, assessed, authorized, and monitored by entities other than those responsible for the system.

new technologies in response to changing mission needs; and (b) includes – (i) a baseline architecture; (ii) a target architecture; and (iii) a sequencing plan (44 U.S.C. § 3601).

20) 'Environment of operation' means the physical surroundings in which an information system processes, stores, and transmits information.

21) 'Executive agency' has the meaning defined in Title 41, Public Contracts section 133 (41 U.S.C. § 133).

22) 'Federal information' means information created, collected, processed, maintained, disseminated, disclosed, or disposed of by or for the Federal Government, in any medium or form.

23) 'Federal information system' means an information system used or operated by an agency or by a contractor of an agency or by another organization on behalf of an agency.

24) 'Federal Privacy Council' means the Council established by Executive Order 13719.[67]

25) 'Government publication' means information that is published as an individual document at Government expense, or as required by law, in any medium or form (44 U.S.C. § 1901).

26) 'Hybrid control' means a security or privacy control that is implemented for an information system in part as a common control and in part as a system-specific control.

27) 'Incident' means an occurrence that actually or imminently jeopardizes, without lawful authority, the confidentiality, integrity, or availability of information or an information system; or constitutes a violation or imminent threat of violation of law, security policies, security procedures, or acceptable use policies (44 U.S.C. § 3552).

28) 'Information' means any communication or representation of knowledge such as facts, data, or opinions in any medium or form, including textual, numerical, graphic, cartographic, narrative, electronic, or audiovisual forms.

29) 'Information dissemination product' means any recorded information, regardless of physical form or characteristics, disseminated by an agency, or contractor thereof, to the public.

30) 'Information life cycle' means the stages through which information passes, typically characterized as creation or collection, processing, dissemination, use, storage, and disposition, to include destruction and deletion.

31) 'Information management' means the planning, budgeting, manipulating, and controlling of information throughout its life cycle. The term encompasses both information itself and the related resources, such as personnel, equipment, funds, and information technology.

32) 'Information resources' means information and related resources, such as personnel, equipment, funds, and information technology (44 U.S.C. § 3502).

[67] Executive Order 13719, Establishment of the Federal Privacy Council (2016).

33) 'Information resources management' means the process of managing information resources to accomplish agency missions. The term encompasses an agency's information and the related resources, such as personnel, equipment, funds, and information technology (44 U.S.C. § 3502).

34) 'Information Resource Management Strategy' means a strategy that demonstrates how information resources management decisions are integrated with organizational planning, budget, procurement, financial management, human resources management, and program decisions (44 U.S.C. 3506 (b)(2)).

35) 'Information security' means the protection of information and information systems from unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction in order to provide:

    a) Integrity, which means guarding against improper information modification or destruction, and includes ensuring information non-repudiation and authenticity;

    b) Confidentiality, which means preserving authorized restrictions on access and disclosure, including means for protecting personal privacy and proprietary information; and

    c) Availability, which means ensuring timely and reliable access to and use of information (44 U.S.C. § 3552).

36) 'Information security architecture' means an embedded, integral part of the enterprise architecture that describes the structure and behavior of the enterprise security processes, information security systems, personnel, and organizational subunits, showing their alignment with the enterprise's mission and strategic plans.

37) 'Information security continuous monitoring' means maintaining ongoing awareness of information security, vulnerabilities, threats, and incidents to support agency risk management decisions.[68]

38) 'Information security continuous monitoring program' means the compendium of methods, tools, and techniques necessary to implement the agency information continuous monitoring strategy in a way that is sufficient to inform risk-based decisions and maintain operations within established risk tolerances. The program includes determining monitoring metrics, establishing monitoring frequencies, and developing a monitoring architecture.

39) 'Information security continuous monitoring strategy' means a comprehensive plan to address monitoring requirements and activities at each organizational tier (organization, mission or business process, and information system).

40) 'Information system security plan' means a formal document that provides an overview of the security requirements for an information system and describes the security controls in place or planned for meeting those requirements.[69]

[68] The terms continuous and ongoing in this context mean that security controls and agency risks are assessed and analyzed at a frequency sufficient to support risk-based security decisions to adequately protect agency information.

[69] The information system security plan and the privacy plan may be integrated into one consolidated document.

41) 'Information security program plan' means a formal document that provides an overview of the security requirements for an organization-wide information security program and describes the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting those requirements.

42) 'Information system' means a discrete set of information resources organized for the collection, processing, maintenance, use, sharing, dissemination, or disposition of information (44 U.S.C. § 3502).

43) 'Information system life cycle' means all phases in the useful life of an information system, including planning, acquiring, operating, maintaining, and disposing. (See also OMB A-11 Part 7, Capital Programming Guide and OMB Circular A-131, Value Engineering for more information regarding the costs and management of assets through their complete life cycle.)

44) 'Information system resilience' means the ability of an information system to operate under adverse conditions or stress, even if in a degraded or debilitated state, while maintaining essential operational capabilities, and to recover to an effective operational posture in a time frame consistent with mission needs.

45) 'Information technology' means any services or equipment, or interconnected system(s) or subsystem(s) of equipment, that are used in the automatic acquisition, storage, analysis, evaluation, manipulation, management, movement, control, display, switching, interchange, transmission, or reception of data or information by the agency. For purposes of this definition, such services or equipment if used by the agency directly or is used by a contractor under a contract with the agency that requires its use; or to a significant extent, its use in the performance of a service or the furnishing of a product. The term "information technology" includes computers, ancillary equipment (including imaging peripherals, input, output, and storage devices necessary for security and surveillance), peripheral equipment designed to be controlled by the central processing unit of a computer, software, firmware and similar procedures, services (including cloud computing and help-desk services or other professional services which support any point of the life cycle of the equipment or service), and related resources. The term "information technology" does not include any equipment that is acquired by a contractor incidental to a contract which does not require its use (40 U.S.C. § 11101).

46) 'Information technology investment' means an expenditure of information technology resources to address mission delivery and management support. This may include a project or projects for the development, modernization, enhancement, or maintenance of a single information technology asset or group of information technology assets with related functionality, and the subsequent operation of those assets in a production environment. These investments shall have a defined life cycle with start and end dates, with the end date representing the end of the currently estimated useful life of the investment, consistent with the investment's most current alternatives analysis if applicable.

47) 'Information Technology Investment Management' means a decision-making process that, in support of agency missions and business needs, provides for analyzing, tracking, and evaluating the risks, including information security and privacy risks, and results of all major investments made by an agency for information systems. The process shall cover the life of each system and shall include explicit criteria for analyzing the projected and actual costs, benefits, and risks, including information security and privacy risks, associated with the investments.[70]

48) 'Information technology resources' means all agency budgetary resources, personnel, equipment, facilities, or services that are primarily used in the management, operation, acquisition, or other activity related to the life cycle of information technology; acquisitions or interagency agreements that include information technology and the services or equipment provided by such acquisitions or interagency agreements; but does not include grants that establish or support information technology not operated directly by the Federal Government.

49) 'Initial authorization' means the initial risk determination and risk acceptance decision based on a zero-base review[71] of the information system conducted prior to its entering the operations or maintenance phase of the system development life cycle. The zero-base review includes an assessment of all security and privacy controls (i.e., system-specific, hybrid, and common controls) contained in an information system security plan or in a privacy plan and implemented within an information system or the environment in which the system operates.

50) 'Interagency agreement' means, for the purposes of this document, a written agreement entered into between two or more Federal agencies that specifies the goods to be furnished or tasks to be accomplished by one agency (the servicing agency) in support of the other(s) (the requesting agency), including assisted acquisitions as described in OMB Memorandum: Improving the Management and Use of Interagency Acquisitions and other cases described in FAR Part 17.

51) 'Major information system' means a system that is part of an investment that requires special management attention as defined in OMB guidance[72] and agency policies, a "major automated information system" as defined in 10 U.S.C. § 2445, or a system that is part of a major acquisition as defined in the OMB Circular A-11, Capital Programming Guide, consisting of information resources.[73]

52) 'Major information technology investment' means an investment that requires special management attention as defined in OMB guidance and agency policies, a "major automated information system" as defined in 10 U.S.C. § 2445, or a major acquisition as

[70] See the Clinger Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. § 11302) for statutory requirements.

[71] A zero-base review of an information system is the first complete security assessment performed in order to provide the authorizing official with a comprehensive set of security-related information to facilitate making an appropriate risk determination.

[72] For example, an information system requires special management attention because of its importance to an agency mission; its high development, operating, or maintenance costs; or its significant role in the administration of agency programs, finances, property, or other resources.

[73] All information systems are subject to the requirements of the Federal Information Security Modernization Act (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35) whether or not they are designated as a major information system.

defined in the OMB Circular A-11, Capital Programming Guide, consisting of information resources.

53) 'National security system' means any information system (including any telecommunications system) used or operated by an agency or by a contractor of an agency, or other organization on behalf of an agency, the function, operation, or use of which involves intelligence activities; involves cryptologic activities related to national security; involves command and control of military forces; involves equipment that is an integral part of a weapon or weapons system; or is critical to the direct fulfillment of military or intelligence missions (excluding a system that is to be used for routine administrative and business applications, for example, payroll, finance, logistics, and personnel management applications); or is protected at all times by procedures established for information that have been specifically authorized under criteria established by an executive order or an Act of Congress to be kept classified in the interest of national defense or foreign policy (44 U.S.C. § 3552).

54) 'Ongoing authorization' means the risk determinations and risk acceptance decisions subsequent to the initial authorization, taken at agreed-upon and documented frequencies in accordance with the agency's mission or business requirements and agency risk tolerance. Ongoing authorization is a time-driven or event-driven authorization process whereby the authorizing official is provided with the necessary and sufficient information regarding the security and privacy state of the information system to determine whether the mission or business risk of continued system operation is acceptable.

55) 'Open data' means publicly available data that are made available consistent with relevant privacy, confidentiality, security, and other valid access, use, and dissemination restrictions, and are structured in a way that enables the data to be fully discoverable and usable by end users. Generally, open data are consistent with principles, explained in OMB guidance, of such data being public, accessible, machine-readable, described, reusable, complete, timely, and managed post-release.

56) 'Overlay' means a specification of security or privacy controls, control enhancements, supplemental guidance, and other supporting information employed during the tailoring process, that is intended to complement (and further refine) security control baselines. The overlay specification may be more stringent or less stringent than the original security control baseline specification and can be applied to multiple information systems. (See "tailoring" definition.)

57) 'Personally identifiable information' means information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, either alone or when combined with other information that is linked or linkable to a specific individual.

58) 'Privacy continuous monitoring' means maintaining ongoing awareness of privacy risks and assessing privacy controls at a frequency sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks.

59) 'Privacy continuous monitoring program' means an agency-wide program that implements the agency's privacy continuous monitoring strategy and maintains ongoing awareness of threats and vulnerabilities that may pose privacy risks; monitors changes to information systems and environments of operation that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII; and conducts privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at an agency across the agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks.

60) 'Privacy continuous monitoring strategy' means a formal document that catalogs the available privacy controls implemented at an agency across the agency risk management tiers and ensures that the controls are effectively monitored on an ongoing basis by assigning an agency-defined assessment frequency to each control that is sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks.

61) 'Privacy control' means the administrative, technical, and physical safeguards employed within an agency to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks.

62) 'Privacy control assessment' means the assessment of privacy controls to determine whether the controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks. A privacy control assessment is both an assessment and a formal document detailing the process and the outcome of the assessment.

63) 'Privacy impact assessment' means an analysis of how information is handled to ensure handling conforms to applicable legal, regulatory, and policy requirements regarding privacy; to determine the risks and effects of creating, collecting, using, processing, storing, maintaining, disseminating, disclosing, and disposing of information in identifiable form in an electronic information system; and to examine and evaluate protections and alternate processes for handling information to mitigate potential privacy concerns. A privacy impact assessment is both an analysis and a formal document detailing the process and the outcome of the analysis.

64) 'Privacy program plan' means a formal document that provides an overview of an agency's privacy program, including a description of the structure of the privacy program, the resources dedicated to the privacy program, the role of the Senior Agency Official for Privacy and other privacy officials and staff, the strategic goals and objectives of the privacy program, and the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks.

65) 'Privacy plan' means a formal document that details the privacy controls selected for an information system or environment of operation that are in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks, details how the controls have been implemented, and describes the methodologies and metrics that will be used to assess the controls.[74]

66) 'Program management control' means, in the context of information security and privacy, a control that is generally implemented at the agency level, independent of any particular information system, and essential for managing information security or privacy programs.

67) 'Provisioned IT Service' means an information technology service that is owned, operated, and provided by an outside vendor or external government organization, and consumed by the agency.

68) 'Public information' means any information, regardless of form or format, that an agency discloses, disseminates, or makes available to the public (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35).

69) 'Reauthorization' means the risk determination and risk acceptance decision that occurs after an initial authorization. In general, reauthorization actions may be time-driven or event-driven; however, under ongoing authorization, reauthorization is typically an event-driven action initiated by the authorizing official or directed by the Risk Executive (function) in response to an event that drives risk above the previously agreed-upon agency risk tolerance.

70) 'Records' means all recorded information, regardless of form or characteristics, made or received by a Federal agency under Federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successor as evidence of the organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the United States Government or because of the informational value of data in them (44 U.S.C. § 3301).

71) 'Records management' means the planning, controlling, directing, organizing, training, promoting, and other managerial activities involved with respect to records creation, records maintenance and use, and records disposition in order to achieve adequate and proper documentation of the policies and transactions of the Federal Government and effective and economical management of agency operations (44 U.S.C. § 2901(2)).

72) 'Resilience' means the ability to prepare for and adapt to changing conditions and withstand and recover rapidly from disruption. Resilience includes the ability to withstand and recover from deliberate attacks, accidents, or naturally occurring threats or incidents.

73) 'Risk' means a measure of the extent to which an entity is threatened by a potential circumstance or event, and typically is a function of: (i) the adverse impact, or magnitude of harm, that would arise if the circumstance or event occurs; and (ii) the likelihood of occurrence.[75]

74) 'Risk management' means the program and supporting processes to manage risk to agency operations (including mission, functions, image, reputation), agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation, and includes: establishing the context for risk-related activities; assessing risk; responding to risk once determined; and monitoring risk over time.

75) 'Risk management strategy' means the description of how an agency intends to assess risk, respond to risk, and monitor risk, making explicit and transparent the risk perceptions that organizations routinely use in making both investment and operational decisions.

76) 'Risk response' means accepting, avoiding, mitigating, sharing, or transferring risk to agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, or the Nation.

77) 'Security category' means the characterization of information or an information system based on an assessment of the potential impact that a loss of confidentiality, integrity, or availability of such information or information system would have on agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.

78) 'Security control' means the safeguards or countermeasures prescribed for an information system or an organization to protect the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of the system and its information.

79) 'Security control assessment' means the testing or evaluation of security controls to determine the extent to which the controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and producing the desired outcome with respect to meeting the security requirements for an information system or organization.

80) 'Security control baseline' means the set of minimum security controls defined for a low-impact, moderate-impact, or high-impact information system.

81) 'Senior Agency Official for Privacy' means the senior official, designated by the head of each agency, who has agency-wide responsibility for privacy, including implementation of privacy protections; compliance with Federal laws, regulations, and policies relating to privacy; management of privacy risks at the agency; and a central policy-making role in the agency's development and evaluation of legislative, regulatory, and other policy proposals.

82) 'Senior Agency Official for Records Management' means the senior official who has direct responsibility for ensuring that the agency efficiently and appropriately complies with all applicable records management statutes, regulations, NARA policy and OMB policy.

83) 'Supply chain' means a linked set of resources and processes between multiple tiers of developers that begins with the sourcing of products and services and extends through the design, development, manufacturing, processing, handling, and delivery of products and services to the acquirer.

84) 'Supply chain risk' means risks that arise from the loss of confidentiality, integrity, or availability of information or information systems and reflect the potential adverse impacts to organizational operations (including mission, functions, image, or reputation), organizational assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.

85) 'Supply chain risk management' means the process of identifying, assessing, and mitigating the risks associated with the global and distributed nature of information and communications technology product and service supply chains.

86) 'System-specific control' means a security or privacy control for an information system that is implemented at the system level and is not inherited by any other information system.

87) 'Systems security engineering' means a specialty engineering discipline of systems engineering. It applies scientific, mathematical, engineering, and measurement concepts, principles, and methods to deliver, consistent with defined constraints and necessary trade-offs, a trustworthy asset protection capability that satisfies stakeholder requirements; is seamlessly integrated into the delivered system; and presents residual risk that is deemed acceptable and manageable to stakeholders.

88) 'Tailoring' means the process by which security control baselines are modified by identifying and designating common controls; applying scoping considerations; selecting compensating controls; assigning specific values to agency-defined control parameters; supplementing baselines with additional controls or control enhancements; and providing additional specification information for control implementation. The tailoring process may also be applied to privacy controls. (See "overlay" definition.)

89) 'TechStat' means a face-to-face, evidence-based accountability review of an IT investment that enables the Federal Government to intervene to turn around, halt, or terminate IT projects that are failing or are not producing results for the American people.

90) 'Trustworthy information system' means an information system that is believed to be capable of operating within defined levels of risk despite the environmental disruptions, human errors, structural failures, and purposeful attacks that are expected to occur in its environment of operation.

b. Terms that are not specifically defined in this section are assumed to have standard dictionary meanings, or are defined in other OMB policy.

Appendix I to OMB Circular A-130
Responsibilities for Protecting and Managing Federal Information Resources

1. Introduction

Agencies of the Federal Government depend on the secure acquisition, processing, storage, transmission, and disposition of information to carry out their core missions and business functions. This allows diverse information resources ranging from large enterprise information systems (or systems of systems) to small mobile computing devices to collect, process, store, maintain, transmit, and disseminate this information. The information relied upon is subject to a range of threats that could potentially harm or adversely affect organizational operations (e.g., mission, functions, image, or reputation), organizational assets, individuals, other organizations, or the Nation. These threats include environmental disruptions, purposeful attacks, structural failures, human errors, and other threats that can compromise Federal information resources. Personnel at all levels of the Federal Government must understand how to manage information security and protect privacy.

Federal agencies must implement information security programs and privacy programs with the flexibility to meet current and future information management needs and the sufficiency to comply with Federal requirements and manage risks. Emerging technologies and services may continue to shift the ways in which agencies acquire, develop, manage, and use information and technology. As technologies and services continue to change, so will the threat environment. Agency programs must have the capability to identify, respond to, and recover from current threats while protecting their information resources and the privacy of the individuals whose information they maintain. The programs must also have the capability to address new and emerging threats. To be effective, information security and privacy considerations must be part of the day-to-day operations of agencies. This can best be accomplished by planning for the requisite security and privacy capabilities as an integral part of the agency strategic planning and risk management processes, not as a separate activity. This includes, but is not limited to, the integration of Federal information security and privacy requirements (and security and privacy controls) into the enterprise architecture, system development life cycle activities, systems engineering processes, and acquisition processes.

To ensure that Federal agencies can successfully carry out their assigned missions and business operations in an environment of sophisticated and complex threats, they must deploy systems that are both trustworthy and resilient. To increase the level of trustworthiness and resilience of Federal information systems, the systems should employ technologies that can significantly increase the built-in protection capability of those systems and make them inherently less vulnerable. This can require a significant investment in appropriate architectures and the application of systems engineering concepts and principles in the design of Federal information systems.

As Federal agencies take advantage of emerging information technologies and services to obtain more effective mission and operational capabilities, achieve greater efficiencies, and reduce costs, they must also apply the principles and practices of risk management, information security, and privacy to the acquisition and use of those technologies and services. While there are certain security and privacy requirements and associated controls that are mandatory, agencies are required to employ risk-based approaches and decision making to ensure that security and privacy capabilities are sufficient to protect agency assets, operations, and individuals. Such risk-based approaches involve framing, assessing, responding to, and monitoring security and privacy risks on an ongoing basis. Risk-based approaches can also support potential performance improvements and cost savings when agencies make decisions about maintaining, modernizing, or replacing existing information technologies and services or implementing new technologies and services that leverage internal, other government, or private sector innovative and market-driven solutions. These responsibilities extend to the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of Federal information when such information is hosted by non-Federal entities on behalf of the Federal Government. Ultimately, agency heads remain responsible and accountable for ensuring that information management practices comply with all Federal requirements, that information security and privacy programs are appropriately managed, and that Federal information is adequately protected commensurate with the risk resulting from the unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction of such information.

2. Purpose

This Appendix establishes minimum requirements for Federal information security programs, assigns Federal agency responsibilities for the security of information and information systems, and links agency information security programs and agency management control systems established in accordance with OMB Circular A-123, Management's Responsibility for Enterprise Risk Management and Internal Controls. This Appendix also establishes requirements for Federal agency privacy programs, assigns responsibilities for privacy program management, and describes how agencies should take a coordinated approach to implementing information security and privacy controls. Additionally, this Appendix incorporates requirements of statute, such as FISMA (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35), the E-Government Act of 2002 (44 U.S.C. Chapters 35 and 36), the Paperwork Reduction Act (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35), and the Privacy Act of 1974, and responsibilities assigned in executive orders and Presidential directives.

3. General Requirements

a. Agencies shall implement an agency-wide risk management process that frames, assesses, responds to, and monitors information security and privacy risk on an ongoing basis across the three organizational tiers (i.e., organization level, mission or business process level, and information system level).[76]

b. Agencies shall develop, implement, document, maintain, and oversee agency-wide information security and privacy programs including people, processes, and technologies to:

   1) Provide for agency information security and privacy policies, planning, budgeting, management, implementation, and oversight;

[76] NIST SP 800-39, Managing Information Security Risk: Organization, Mission, and Information System View, provides additional information on risk management processes and strategies. See also Section 5.b of this Appendix.

2) Protect information and information systems from unauthorized access, use, disclosure, disruption, modification, or destruction in order to provide for their confidentiality, integrity, and availability;

3) Provide adequate security for all information created, collected, processed, stored, transmitted, disseminated, or disposed of by or on behalf of the agency, to include Federal information residing in contractor information systems and networks;

4) Cost-effectively manage information security and privacy risks, which includes reducing such risks to an acceptable level;

5) Implement a risk management framework to guide and inform the categorization of Federal information and information systems; the selection, implementation, and assessment of security and privacy controls; the authorization of information systems and common controls; and the continuous monitoring of information systems;

6) Implement security and privacy controls, and verify that they are operating as intended, and continuously monitored and assessed; put procedures in place so that security and privacy controls remain effective over time, and that steps are taken to maintain risk at an acceptable level within organizational risk tolerance;

7) Employ systems security engineering principles, concepts, and techniques during the life cycle of information systems to facilitate the development, deployment, operation, and sustainment of trustworthy and adequately secure systems;

8) Implement supply chain risk management principles to protect against the insertion of counterfeits, unauthorized production, tampering, theft, insertion of malicious software, as well as poor manufacturing and development practices throughout the system development life cycle;

9) Implement policies and procedures to ensure that all personnel are held accountable for complying with agency-wide information security and privacy requirements and policies;

10) Ensure that, in a timely manner, agency CIOs and SAOPs are made aware of information systems and components that cannot be appropriately protected or secured and that such systems are given a high priority for upgrade, replacement, or retirement;[77] and

11) Ensure ongoing collaboration between the senior agency information security officer and the SAOP to ensure coordination of security and privacy activities.

c. Agencies that share PII shall require, as appropriate, other agencies and entities with which they share PII to maintain the PII in an information system with a particular NIST FIPS Publication 199 confidentiality impact level, as determined by the agency sharing the PII.

d. Agencies that share PII with other agencies or entities shall impose, where appropriate, conditions (including the selection and implementation of particular security and privacy controls) that govern the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of the PII through written agreements, including contracts, data use agreements, information exchange agreements, and memoranda of understanding.

[77] Until such information systems or components are appropriately dispositioned, agencies are expected to immediately implement interim remediation measures such as limiting access or connectivity.

e. Agencies shall protect Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) and shall apply NIST FIPS and NIST (800-series) SPs, as appropriate. This includes limiting the disclosure of proprietary information to that which is legally authorized, and impose appropriate conditions on use where a continuing obligation to ensure the confidentiality of the information exists.

f. Agencies shall ensure compliance with all applicable statutory, regulatory, and policy requirements and develop and maintain effective information security and privacy programs. This includes using privacy impact assessments and other tools to manage privacy risks.

g. Agencies shall implement policies issued by OMB, as well as requirements issued by the Department of Commerce, DHS, GSA, and OPM. This includes applying the standards and guidelines contained in NIST FIPS, NIST (800-series) SPs, and, where appropriate and directed by OMB, NISTIRs.

4. Specific Requirements[78]

a. Security Categorization

Agencies shall:

1) Identify authorization boundaries for information systems in accordance with NIST SPs 800-18 and 800-37; and

2) Categorize information and information systems, in accordance with FIPS Publication 199 and NIST SP 800-60, considering potential adverse security and privacy impacts to organizational operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.

b. Planning, Budgeting, and Enterprise Architecture

Agencies shall:

1) Identify and plan for the resources needed to implement information security and privacy programs;

2) Ensure that information security and privacy are addressed throughout the life cycle of each agency information system, and that security and privacy activities and costs are identified and included in IT investment capital plans and budgetary requests;

3) Plan and budget to upgrade, replace, or retire any information systems for which security and privacy protections commensurate with risk cannot be effectively implemented;

[78] The requirements in this section represent those areas deemed to be of fundamental importance to the achievement of effective agency information security programs and those areas deemed to require specific emphasis by OMB. The security programs developed and executed by agencies need not be limited to the aforementioned areas but can employ a comprehensive set of safeguards and countermeasures based on the principles, concepts, and methodologies defined NIST standards and guidelines.

4) Ensure that investment plans submitted to OMB as part of the budget process meet the information security and privacy requirements appropriate for the life cycle stage of the investment; and

5) Incorporate Federal information security and privacy requirements into the agency's enterprise architecture to ensure that risk is addressed and information systems achieve the necessary levels of trustworthiness, protection, and resilience.

c. Plans, Controls, and Assessments

Agencies shall:

1) Develop and maintain an information security program plan that provides an overview of the organization-wide information security requirements and documents the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting those requirements;

2) Develop and maintain a privacy program plan that provides an overview of the agency's privacy program, including a description of the structure of the privacy program, the resources dedicated to the privacy program, the role of the Senior Agency Official for Privacy and other privacy officials and staff, the strategic goals and objectives of the privacy program, the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks, and any other information determined necessary by the agency's privacy program;

3) Employ a system life cycle process that incorporates the principles, concepts, methods, and techniques of systems security engineering to ensure the development of trustworthy and resilient information systems;

4) Develop supply chain risk management plans as described in NIST SP 800-161 to ensure the integrity, security, resilience, and quality of information systems;

5) Employ a process to select and implement security controls for information systems and the environments in which those systems operate[79] that satisfies the minimum information security requirements in FIPS Publication 200 and security control baselines in NIST SP 800-53, tailored as appropriate;[80]

6) Employ a process to select and implement privacy controls for information systems and programs that satisfies applicable privacy requirements in OMB guidance, including, but not limited to, Appendix I to this Circular and OMB Circular A-108, Federal Agency Responsibilities for Review, Reporting, and Publication under the Privacy Act;

7) Implement information system security using sound systems security engineering principles, concepts, methods, practices, and techniques;

8) Develop and maintain security plans for information systems to document which security controls have been selected and how those controls have been implemented;

[79] The environment of operation includes the physical surroundings in which an information system processes, stores, and transmits information. Agencies should take the environment into account when selecting, implementing, documenting, and assessing security controls.

[80] Agencies must conduct tailoring activities in accordance with OMB policy.

9) Develop and maintain a privacy plan that details the privacy controls selected for an information system that are in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks, details how the controls have been implemented, and describes the methodologies and metrics that will be used to assess the controls;

10) Deploy effective security controls to provide Federal employees and contractors with multifactor authentication, digital signature, and encryption capabilities that provide assurance of identity and are interoperable Government-wide and accepted across all Executive Branch agencies;

11) Adhere to Government-wide requirements in the deployment and use of identity credentials used by employees and contractors accessing Federal facilities;[81]

12) Designate common controls in order to provide cost-effective security and privacy capabilities that can be inherited by multiple agency information systems or programs;[82]

13) Conduct and document assessments of all selected and implemented security and privacy controls to determine whether security and privacy controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable requirements and to manage security and privacy risks;

14) Conduct and document security and privacy control assessments prior to the operation of an information system, and periodically thereafter, consistent with the frequency defined in the agency information security continuous monitoring (ISCM) and privacy continuous monitoring (PCM) strategies and the agency risk tolerance;

15) Use agency plans of action and milestones (POA&Ms), and make available or provide access to OMB, DHS, inspectors general, and the U.S. Government Accountability Office, upon request, to record and manage the mitigation and remediation of identified weaknesses and deficiencies, not associated with accepted risks, in agency information systems; and

16) Obtain approval from the authorizing official for connections from the information system, as defined by its authorization boundary, to other information systems based on the risk to the agency's operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.

[81] NIST SP 800-116, A Recommendation for the Use of PIV Credentials in Physical Access Control Systems (PACS), provides additional information on the use of PIV Credentials, the Government-wide standard identity credential, in physical access control systems. Physical access controls systems, which include, for example, servers, databases, workstations and network appliances in either shared or isolated networks, are considered information systems.

[82] When common controls protect multiple agency information systems of differing impact levels, the controls shall be implemented at the highest impact level among the systems. If such controls cannot be implemented at the highest impact level of the information systems, agencies shall factor this situation into their assessments of risk and take appropriate risk mitigation actions (e.g., adding security controls, changing assigned values of security control parameters, implementing compensating controls, changing certain aspects of mission or business processes, or separating the higher impact system into its own domain where it can be afforded appropriate levels of protection).

d. Authorization to Operate and Continuous Monitoring

Agencies shall:

1) Designate senior Federal officials to formally authorize an information system to operate and authorize agency-designated common controls for use;[83]

2) Complete an initial authorization to operate for each information system and all agency-designated common controls based on a determination of, and explicit acceptance of, the risk to agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation, and prior to operational status;

3) Transition information systems and common controls to an ongoing authorization process when eligible for such a process and with the formal approval of the respective authorizing officials;

4) Reauthorize information systems and common controls as needed, on a time- or event-driven basis in accordance with agency risk tolerance;

5) Develop and maintain an ISCM strategy to address information security risks and requirements across the organizational risk management tiers;[84]

6) Implement and update, in accordance with organization-defined frequency, the ISCM strategy to reflect the effectiveness of deployed controls; significant changes to information systems; and adherence to Federal statutes, policies, directives, instructions, regulations, standards, and guidelines;

7) Ensure that all selected and implemented controls are addressed in the ISCM strategy and are effectively monitored on an ongoing basis, as determined by the agency's ISCM program;[85]

8) Establish and maintain an ISCM program that:

   a) Provides an understanding of agency risk tolerance and helps officials set priorities and manage information security risk consistently throughout the agency;

   b) Includes metrics that provide meaningful indications of security status and trend analysis at all risk management tiers;

   c) Ensures the continued effectiveness of all security controls selected and implemented by monitoring controls with the frequencies specified in the ISCM strategy;

   d) Verifies compliance with information security requirements derived from organizational missions or business functions, Federal statutes, directives, instructions, regulations, policies, standards and guidelines;

[83] Common controls are authorized for operation in the same manner as system-specific controls.

[84] NIST SP 800-39, Managing Information Security Risk, defines three risk management tiers for managing information security risk within organizations. These include an organization or governance tier, mission or business process tier, and information system tier.

[85] For greater efficiency, the ISCM and PCM strategies may be consolidated into a single unified continuous monitoring strategy. Similarly, the ISCM and PCM programs may also be consolidated into a single unified continuous monitoring program.

e) Is informed by all applicable agency IT assets to help maintain visibility into the security of those assets and the protection of PII associated with those assets;

f) Ensures knowledge and control of changes to information systems that have potential to affect security;

g) Maintains awareness of threats and vulnerabilities that have the potential to affect security, including the mitigation of those threats and vulnerabilities;

9) Develop and maintain a PCM strategy, a formal document that:

a) Catalogs the available privacy controls implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers; and

b) Ensures that the privacy controls are effectively monitored on an ongoing basis by assigning an agency-defined assessment frequency to each control that is sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks;

10) Establish and maintain an agency-wide PCM program that implements the agency's PCM strategy and:

a) Conducts privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks;

b) Identifies assessment methodologies and metrics to determine whether privacy controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks;

c) Maintains ongoing awareness of threats and vulnerabilities that may pose privacy risks; and

d) Monitors changes to information systems and environments of operation that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII;

11) Ensure that a robust ISCM program and PCM program are in place before agency information systems are eligible for ongoing authorization; and

12) Leverage available Federal shared services, where practicable and appropriate.

e. Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems and Programs

The SAOP has agency-wide responsibility and accountability for developing, implementing, and maintaining an agency-wide privacy program to manage privacy risks, develop and evaluate privacy policy, and ensure compliance with all applicable statutes, regulations, and policies regarding the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of PII by programs and information systems. The SAOP shall:

1) Develop and maintain a privacy program plan that provides an overview of an agency's privacy program, including a description of the structure of the privacy program, the resources dedicated to the privacy program, the role of the SAOP and other privacy officials and staff, the strategic goals and objectives of the privacy program, and the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks;

2) Develop and maintain a PCM strategy and PCM program to maintain ongoing awareness of privacy risks and assess privacy controls at a frequency sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks;

3) Conduct and document the results of privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at the agency across all agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks;

4) Identify assessment methodologies and metrics to determine whether privacy controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks;

5) Designate which privacy controls will be treated as program management, common, information system-specific, and hybrid privacy controls at the agency;

6) Review IT capital investment plans and budgetary requests to ensure that privacy requirements (and associated privacy controls), as well as any associated costs, are explicitly identified and included, with respect to any IT resources that will be used to create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII;

7) Review and approve, in accordance with NIST FIPS Publication 199 and NIST SP 800-60, the categorization of information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII;[86]

8) Review and approve the privacy plans for agency information systems prior to authorization, reauthorization, or ongoing authorization;

9) Review authorization packages for information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks, prior to authorizing officials making risk determination and acceptance decisions; and

10) Coordinate with the CIO, the senior agency information security officer, and other agency officials in implementation of these requirements.

f. Incident Detection, Response, and Recovery

It is essential that agencies react appropriately to incidents after employing a risk-based approach to selecting and implementing their security and privacy controls for their information and information systems.

[86] The categorization of information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII will depend on the sensitivity level of the PII, the privacy risks, and the associated risk to agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. Agencies should generally categorize information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII at the moderate or high confidentiality impact level. See Appendix II for additional information regarding the sensitivity level of PII.

Agencies shall:[87]

1) Develop and implement incident management policies and procedures, in accordance with OMB policies and NIST guidelines that address incident detection, response, and recovery. This includes developing and implementing appropriate activities to identify the occurrence of an incident; developing and implementing appropriate activities to take action regarding a detected incident; and developing and implementing the appropriate activities to maintain plans for resilience and to restore any capabilities or services that were impaired due to an incident;
2) Designate sensitive positions and execute commensurate security clearance levels for appropriate agency personnel;
3) Establish clear roles and responsibilities to ensure the oversight and coordination of incident response activities and that incidents are documented, reported, investigated, and handled;
4) Periodically test incident response procedures to ensure effectiveness of such procedures;
5) Document lessons learned for incident response and update procedures annually or as required by OMB or DHS;
6) Ensure that processes are in place to verify corrective actions;
7) Maintain formal incident response capabilities and mechanisms to include notification to affected individuals and adequate training and awareness for employees and contractors on how to report and respond to incidents;
8) Implement formal incident management policies to include definitions, detection and analysis, containment, internal and external notification and reporting requirements, incident reporting methods, post-incident procedures, roles and responsibilities, and guidance on how to mitigate impacts to the agency and its respondents following an incident;
9) Report incidents to OMB, DHS, the CIO, the SAOP, their respective inspectors general and general counsel, law enforcement, and Congress in accordance with procedures issued by OMB; and
10) Provide reports on incidents as required by FISMA, OMB policy, DHS binding operational directives, Federal information security incident center guidelines, NIST guidelines, and agency procedures.

[87] Pursuant to FISMA (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35).

HUD-17-0235-B-000327

g. Contingency Planning[88]

Agencies shall:

1) Develop and test contingency plans[89] for information systems that:
   a) Identify essential missions and business functions and associated contingency requirements;
   b) Provide recovery objectives, restoration priorities, and metrics;
   c) Address contingency roles and responsibilities; and
   d) Address maintaining essential missions, functions, and services despite a disruption, compromise, or failure of information systems.
2) Provide for the recovery and reconstitution of information systems to a known state after a disruption, compromise, or failure.

h. Awareness and Training

Agencies shall:

1) Develop, maintain, and implement mandatory agency-wide information security and privacy awareness and training programs for all employees and contractors;
2) Ensure that the security and privacy awareness and training programs are consistent with applicable policies, standards, and guidelines issued by OMB, NIST, and OPM;
3) Apprise agency employees about available security and privacy resources, such as products, techniques, or expertise;
4) Provide foundational as well as more advanced levels of security and privacy training to information system users (including managers, senior executives, and contractors) and ensure that measures are in place to test the knowledge level of information system users;
5) Provide role-based security and privacy training to employees and contractors with assigned security and privacy roles and responsibilities, including managers, before authorizing access to Federal information or information systems or performing assigned duties;

[88] The Federal Information Security Modernization Act of 2014 (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35) requires each agency to develop, document, and implement an agency-wide information security program that includes plans and procedures to ensure continuity of operations for information systems that support the operations and assets of the agency. Plans related to contingency plans for organizational information systems include, for example, Business Continuity Plans, Disaster Recovery Plans, Continuity of Operations Plans, Crisis Communications Plans, Critical Infrastructure Plans, Cyber Incident Response Plans, Insider Threat Implementation Plan, and Occupant Emergency Plans.

[89] Testing of contingency plans must be consistent with the assessment procedures in NIST SP 800-53A, Guide for Assessing the Security Controls in Federal Information Systems and Organizations. In addition, Homeland Security Presidential Directive 20, National Continuity Directive, requires the establishment and maintenance of an effective national continuity capability. Federal Continuity Directive 1, Federal Executive Branch National Continuity Program and Requirements, provides direction for the further development of continuity plans and programs.

6) Establish rules of behavior, including consequences for violating rules of behavior, for employees and contractors that have access to Federal information or information systems, including those that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII; and

7) Ensure that employees and contractors have read and agreed to abide by the rules of behavior for the Federal information and information systems for which they require access prior to being granted access.

i. Specific Safeguarding Measures to Reinforce the Protection of Federal Information and Information Systems[90]

Agencies shall:

1) Implement a policy of least functionality by only permitting the use of networks, systems, applications, and data, as well as programs, functions, ports, protocols, or services that are necessary in meeting mission or business needs;

2) Implement policies of least privilege at multiple layers – network, system, application, and data so that users have role-based access to only the information and resources that are necessary for a legitimate purpose;

3) Implement a policy of separation of duties to address the potential for abuse of authorized privileges and help to reduce the risk of malicious activity without collusion;

4) Isolate sensitive or critical information resources (e.g., information systems, system components, applications, databases, and information) into separate security domains with appropriate levels of protection based on the sensitivity or criticality of those resources;

5) Implement access control policies for information resources that ensure individuals have appropriate authorization and need, and that the appropriate level of identity proofing or background investigation is conducted prior to granting access;

6) Protect administrator, user, and system documentation related to the design, development, testing, operation, maintenance, and security of the hardware, firmware, and software components of information systems;

7) Continuously monitor, log, and audit the execution of information system functions by privileged users (that ordinary users are not authorized to perform) to detect misuse and to help reduce the risk from insider threats;

8) Prohibit the use of unsupported information systems and system components, and ensure that systems and components that cannot be appropriately protected or secured are given a high priority for upgrade or replacement;[91]

[90] NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems and Organizations, provides information on additional security safeguarding measures.

[91] Includes hardware, software, or firmware components no longer supported by developers, vendors, or manufacturers through the availability of software patches, firmware updates, replacement parts, and maintenance contracts. NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems and Organizations, provides additional guidance on unsupported software components.

9) Implement and maintain current updates and patches for all software and firmware components of information systems;[92]

10) For systems that promote public access, ensure that identity proofing, registration, and authentication processes provide assurance of identity consistent with security and privacy requirements, in accordance with Executive Order 13681,[93] OMB policy, and NIST standards and guidelines;

11) Require use of multifactor authentication for employees and contractors in accordance with Government-wide identity management standards;[94]

12) Develop and implement processes to support use of digital signatures for employees and contractors;

13) Ensure that all public key infrastructure (PKI) certificates used by an agency and issued in accordance with Federal PKI policy validate to the Federal PKI trust anchor when being used for user signing, encrypting purposes, authentication and authorization;[95]

14) Encrypt all FIPS 199 moderate-impact and high-impact information at rest and in transit, unless encrypting such information is technically infeasible or would demonstrably affect the ability of agencies to carry out their respective missions, functions, or operations; and the risk of not encrypting is accepted by the authorizing official and approved by the agency CIO, in consultation with the SAOP (as appropriate);[96]

15) Implement the current encryption algorithms and validated cryptographic modules in accordance with NIST standards and guidelines;

16) Ensure that only individuals or processes acting on behalf of individuals with legitimate need for access have the ability to decrypt sensitive information;

17) Implement data-level protection and access controls to ensure the security of and access to Federal information; and

---

[92] Security-relevant software and firmware updates include, for example, patches, service packs, hot fixes, device drivers, basic input output system (BIOS), and antivirus signatures.

[93] Executive Order 13681, Improving the Security of Consumer Financial Transactions, October 2014.

[94] Pursuant to Homeland Security Presidential Directive 12, Policy for a Common Identification Standard for Federal Employees and Contractors, NIST FIPS 201 describes the initial Government-wide identity management standard for employees and contractors as a smartcard form factor (the PIV card). With the emergence of a newer generation of computing devices and in particular with mobile devices, the use of PIV cards has evolved technically to include other form factors that can be deployed directly with mobile devices as specified in NIST SP 800-157. The PIV credential associated with this alternative is called a Derived PIV Credential. Derived PIV Credentials are based on the general concept of derived credentials in NIST SP 800-63. Issuing a Derived PIV credential to PIV card holders does not require repeating identity proofing and vetting processes. The user simply proves possession and control of a valid PIV Card to receive a Derived PIV Credential.

[95] The trust anchor refers to the Federal PKI root certificate operated by the Federal PKI Management Authority. This root certificate is the trusted source of all Federal PKI certificates. For additional information, refer to https://www.idmanagement.gov and Federal PKI policy.

[96] The encryption of organizational information when in transit over a network and when at rest in storage devices ensures that such information is persistently protected and promotes a defense-in-depth security strategy.

18) Ensure that all Federal systems and services identified in the Domain Name System are protected with Domain Name System Security (DNSSEC) and that all systems are capable of validating DNSSEC protected information.[97]

j. Non-Federal Entities

Agencies shall:

1) Ensure that terms and conditions in contracts and other agreements involving the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of Federal information, incorporate security and privacy requirements and are sufficient to enable agencies to meet Federal and agency-specific requirements pertaining to the protection of Federal information;[98]

2) Provide oversight of information systems used or operated by contractors or other entities on behalf of the Federal Government or that collect or maintain Federal information on behalf of the Federal Government, to include:

   a) Documenting and implementing policies and procedures for information security and privacy oversight, to include ensuring appropriate vetting and access control processes for contractors and others with access to information systems containing Federal information;

   b) Ensuring that security and privacy controls of such information systems and services are effectively implemented and comply with NIST standards and guidelines and agency requirements;

   c) Ensuring that these information systems are included in the agency's inventory of information systems;

   d) Ensuring that the interface characteristics, security requirements, and the nature of the information communicated is documented for each interface between these systems and agency-owned or operated information systems;

   e) Ensuring that procedures are in place for incident response for these information systems including timelines for notification of affected individuals and reporting to OMB, DHS, and other entities as required in OMB guidance;

   f) Requiring agreements (e.g., memoranda of understanding, interconnection security agreements, contracts) for interfaces between these information systems and agency-owned or operated information systems; and

3) Consistent with the agency's authority, ensure that the requirements of the Privacy Act apply to a Privacy Act system of records when a contractor operates the system of records on behalf of the agency to accomplish an agency function;

4) Collaborate with non-Federal entities and other agencies as appropriate to ensure that security and privacy requirements pertaining to these non-Federal entities, such as State, [97] DNSSEC is a critical component of the Internet infrastructure. DNSSEC enables clients to cryptographically verify that each such translation is provided by a server with the authority to do so, and that the translation response from the server was not modified before reaching the client.

local, tribal, and territorial governments, are consistent to the greatest extent possible; and

5) Ensure that terms and conditions of contracts and other agreements include sufficient provisions for Federal Government notification and access, as well as cooperation with agency personnel and Inspectors General.

k. Mitigation of Deficiencies and Issuance of Status Reports

Agencies shall correct deficiencies that are identified through information security and privacy assessments, ISCM and PCM programs, or internal or external audits and reviews, to include OMB reviews. OMB Circular A-123, Management's Responsibility for Internal Controls, provides guidance to determine whether a deficiency in controls is material when so judged by the agency head against other agency deficiencies. Material deficiencies must be included in the annual Federal Managers Financial Integrity Act (FMFIA) report, and remediation tracked and managed through the agency's POA&M process. Less significant deficiencies need not be included in the FMFIA report, but must be tracked and managed through the agency's POA&M process.

l. Reporting

Agencies shall provide performance metrics information and FISMA reports in accordance with processes established by OMB and DHS pursuant to FISMA.

m. Independent Evaluations

Pursuant to FISMA, agencies shall:[99]

1) Perform an independent evaluation of the information security programs and practices to determine the effectiveness of such programs and practices, as further described in statute.[100] The evaluation may include an evaluation of their privacy program and practices, as appropriate. Each evaluation shall include:

a) Testing of the effectiveness of information security policies, procedures, and practices of a representative subset of the agency's Federal information systems;[101]

b) An assessment of the effectiveness of the information security policies, procedures, and practices of the agency; and

c) Separate presentations, as appropriate, regarding information security relating to national security systems.

[100] FISMA (44 U.S.C. § 3555).

[101] Agencies have flexibility in implementing the baseline controls in SP 800-53; however, agencies are required to justify, in their security plans or overlays, any tailoring actions.

5. Discussion of the Major Provisions in the Appendix

This section provides additional information regarding the requirements in this appendix.

a. NIST Standards and Guidelines

NIST standards and guidelines associate each information system with an impact level. The standards and guidelines also provide a corresponding starting set of baseline security controls and tailoring guidance[102] to ensure that the set of security controls in the information system security plan (approved by the authorizing official) and privacy controls in the privacy plan (approved by the SAOP) satisfy the information security, privacy, and mission or business protection needs of the agency.

For non-national security programs and information systems, agencies must apply NIST guidelines unless otherwise stated by OMB. FIPS are mandatory.[103] There is flexibility within NIST's guidelines (specifically in the 800-series) in how agencies apply those guidelines. Unless specified by additional implementing policy by OMB, the concepts and principles described in NIST guidelines must be applied. However, NIST guidelines generally allow agencies latitude in their application. Consequently, the application of NIST guidelines by agencies can result in different solutions that are equally acceptable and compliant with the guidelines.

For legacy information systems, agencies are expected to meet the requirements of, and be in compliance with, NIST standards and guidelines within one year of their respective publication dates unless otherwise directed by OMB. The one-year compliance date for revisions to NIST publications applies only to new or updated material in the publications. For information systems under development or for legacy systems undergoing significant changes, agencies are expected to meet the requirements of, and be in compliance with, NIST standards and guidelines immediately upon deployment of the systems.

b. Risk Management Strategy

Managing risk is a complex, multifaceted activity that requires the involvement of the entire agency—from senior leaders and executives providing the strategic vision and top-level goals and objectives for the agency; to mid-level leaders planning, executing, and managing projects; to individuals on the front lines operating the information systems supporting the agency's missions or business functions. Risk management is a comprehensive process that requires agencies to establish the context in which risk-based decisions are made; assess risk; respond to risk once determined; and monitor risk on an ongoing basis using effective organizational communications and a feedback loop for continuous improvement in the risk-related activities of agencies. Risk management is conducted as an agency-wide activity to ensure that risk-based decision-making is integrated into every aspect of the agency's planning and operations.

[102] Agencies must conduct tailoring activities in accordance with OMB policy.

A key aspect of the risk management process is the development of the risk management strategy. The risk management strategy describes how an agency intends to assess risk, respond to risk, and monitor risk—making explicit and transparent the risk perceptions that agencies routinely use in making both investment and operational decisions. Establishing a realistic and credible risk management strategy requires that agencies identify their risk assumptions, risk constraints, risk tolerance, and priorities and trade-offs. The risk management strategy also includes any strategic-level decisions by senior leaders and executives regarding the management of risk to agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. The risk management strategy guides and informs the use and application of the Risk Management Framework.

c. Risk Management Framework

The Risk Management Framework, as described in NIST SP 800-37, provides a disciplined and structured process that integrates information security and risk management activities into the system development life cycle. The Risk Management Framework requires agencies to categorize each information system and the information processed, stored, and transmitted by each system based on a mission or business impact analysis. Agencies select an initial set of baseline security controls for the information system based on the security categorization and then tailor the security control baseline as needed, based on an organizational assessment of risk and local conditions, as described in NIST SP 800-53. After implementing the security controls, agencies assess the controls using appropriate assessment methods as described in NIST SP 800-53A to determine whether the controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and producing the desired outcome with respect to meeting the security requirements for the system.

The authorization to operate the system is based on a determination of the risk to agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation resulting from the operation and use of the system and the decision by the authorizing official that this risk is acceptable. Subsequent to the authorization decision and as part of an information security continuous monitoring strategy and program, agencies monitor the security controls in the system on an ongoing basis, as described in NIST SP 800-137. Monitoring includes, but is not limited to, assessing control effectiveness, documenting changes to the system or its environment of operation, conducting security impact analyses of the associated changes, and reporting the security state of the system to designated agency officials on an ongoing basis.

An effective implementation of the Risk Management Framework ensures that managing information system-related risks is consistent with the agency's mission or business objectives and overall risk management strategy, and risk tolerance established by the senior leadership through the risk executive function[104] as discussed in NIST SP 800-39. It also ensures that the requisite security and privacy requirements and controls are integrated into the agency's enterprise architecture and system development life cycle processes. Finally, the Risk Management Framework supports consistent, well-informed, and ongoing authorization decisions, transparency of risk management information, reciprocity, and information sharing.

[104] The risk executive function is an individual or group within an agency that helps to ensure that: (i) risk-related considerations for individual information systems, to include the authorization to operate decisions, are viewed from an agency-wide perspective with regard to the overall strategic goals and objectives of the agency in carrying out its missions and business functions; and (ii) managing information system-related risks is consistent across the agency, reflects the agency's risk tolerance, and is considered along with other agency risks affecting its missions or business functions.

d. Security Control Baselines

It is important to achieve adequate security for Federal information and information systems and a consistent level of protection for such information and systems Government-wide. To meet this objective, agencies must select an appropriate set of security controls for their information systems that satisfies the minimum security requirements set forth in FIPS Publication 200. The security controls must include one of the three security control baselines from NIST SP 800-53 that are associated with the designated categorization (impact levels) of their information systems. The security control baselines define the set of minimum security controls for a low-impact, moderate-impact, or high-impact information system and provide a starting point for the tailoring process. Agencies are required to tailor the security control baselines to customize their safeguarding measures for specific missions, business lines, and operational environments—and to do so in a cost-effective, risk-based manner. Tailoring allows agencies to designate common controls; apply scoping considerations; select compensating controls; assign specific values to agency-defined control parameters; supplement baselines with additional controls when necessary; and provide additional specification information for control implementation. Agencies must include a justification, in their information system security plans or overlays, for any tailoring actions that result in changes to the initial security control baselines. Agencies are not permitted to make changes to security control baselines when such changes result in control selections that are inconsistent with security requirements set forth in Federal statutes, executive orders, regulations, directives, or policies.

Agencies may also develop overlays for specific types of information or communities of interest (e.g., all web-based applications, all health care-related systems) as part of the security control selection process. Overlays provide a specification of security or privacy controls, control enhancements, supplemental guidance, and other supporting information as part of the tailoring process, that is intended to complement (and further refine) security control baselines. The overlay may be more stringent or less stringent than the original security control baseline and can be applied to multiple information systems.

All selected security controls must be documented in an information system security plan and implemented. Agencies can use the priority code designations associated with each security control in NIST SP 800-53 to assist in making sequencing decisions for control implementation. This prioritization helps to ensure that the foundational security controls upon which other controls depend are implemented first, thus enabling agencies to deploy controls in a more structured and timely manner in accordance with available resources. Independent evaluations, when conducted, shall focus on the effectiveness of the security controls selected and implemented (as documented in agency information system security plans after all tailoring actions have been completed on the security control baselines) and the justification for any decisions to change the control baselines.

e. Security and Privacy Assessments

Agencies must ensure that periodic testing and evaluation of the effectiveness of information security and privacy policies, procedures, and practices are performed with a frequency depending on risk, but at least annually. However, this general requirement to test and evaluate the effectiveness of information security and privacy policies, procedures, and practices does not imply that agencies must assess every selected and implemented security and privacy control at least annually. Rather, agencies must continuously monitor all implemented security and privacy controls (i.e., system-specific, hybrid, and common controls) with a frequency determined by the agency in accordance with the ISCM and PCM strategies. These strategies will define the specific security and privacy controls selected for assessment during any one-year period (i.e., the annual assessment window) with the understanding that all controls may not be formally assessed every year. Rotational assessment of security and privacy controls is consistent with the transition to ongoing authorization and assumes the information system has completed an initial authorization where all controls were formally assessed for effectiveness. As the transition to ongoing authorization progresses and agency ISCM programs mature, agencies must ensure that assessment frequencies are determined in accordance with NIST SP 800-137.

Security and privacy control assessments shall ensure that security and privacy controls selected by agencies are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and effective in satisfying security and privacy requirements. The risk may change over time based on changes in the threat, agency missions or business functions, personnel, technology, or environments of operation. Consequently, maintaining a capability for real-time or near real-time analysis of the threat environment and situational awareness following an incident is paramount. The type, rigor, and frequency of control assessments, which is established by the agency's risk tolerance and risk management strategy, shall be commensurate with the level of awareness necessary for effectively determining information security and privacy risk. Technical security tools such as malicious code scanners, vulnerability assessment products (which look for known security weaknesses, configuration errors, and the installation of the latest patches), and penetration testing can assist in the ongoing assessment of information systems.

f. Authorizing Official

The authorizing official is a senior agency official or executive with the authority to formally assume responsibility for operating an information system at an acceptable level of risk to agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. Authorizing officials have budgetary oversight for an information system or be responsible for the mission or business operations supported by the system. Through the authorization process, authorizing officials are responsible and accountable for the risks associated with information system operations. Because information security is closely related to the privacy protections required for PII, authorizing officials are also responsible and accountable for the privacy risks that arise from the operation of an information system. Accordingly, authorizing officials must be in management positions with a level of authority commensurate with understanding and accepting such information system-related security and privacy risks.

Since the SAOP is the senior official, designated by the head of each agency, who has overall agency-wide responsibility for privacy, agencies must consider input and recommendations submitted by the SAOP in the authorization decision. Additionally, the SAOP has responsibility for reviewing the authorization package for information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII, to ensure that privacy risks are managed prior to system authorization. In situations where the authorizing official and SAOP cannot reach a final resolution regarding the appropriate protection for the agency information and information system, the head of the agency must review the associated risks and requirements and make a final determination regarding the issuance of the authorization to operate.[105]

Agencies can choose from several different approaches when planning for and conducting authorizations. These include an authorization with a single authorizing official, an authorization with multiple authorizing officials, or leveraging an existing authorization (see Section 6j, Joint and Leveraged Authorizations). Agencies can, at their discretion, include the CIO or the SAOP as a co-authorizing official with a senior agency official who has budgetary oversight for an information system or is responsible for the mission or line of business supported by the system being authorized for operation. Regardless of the approach used, only Federal Government personnel may serve as an authorizing official.

g. Authorization to Operate

The authorization to operate an information system and the authorization of agency-designated common controls granted by senior Federal officials provide an important quality control for agencies. The decision to authorize an information system to operate shall be based on a review of the authorization package and includes an assessment of compliance with applicable requirements and risk to agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. As stated above, the decision to authorize a system, or agency-defined common controls, shall be made by the appropriate authorizing official. Since the information system security plan and privacy plan establish the security and privacy controls selected for implementation, those plans are a critical part of the authorization package and shall form the basis for the authorization, supplemented by more specific information as needed.

In the event that there is a change in authorizing officials, the new authorizing official reviews the current authorization decision document, authorization package, and any updated documents created as a result of the continuous monitoring activities. If the new authorizing official is willing to accept the currently documented risk, then the official signs a new authorization decision document, thus formally transferring responsibility and accountability for the information system or the common controls and explicitly accepting the risk. If the new authorizing official is not willing to accept the previous authorization results (including the identified risk), a reauthorization action may need to be initiated or the new authorizing official may instead establish new terms and conditions for continuing the original authorization, but not extend the original authorization termination date.

h. Ongoing Authorization

Ongoing authorization[106] is a process whereby the authorizing official makes risk determination and risk acceptance decisions subsequent to the initial authorization, taken at agreed-upon and documented frequencies in accordance with the agency's risk tolerance and mission or business requirements. In order to implement an ongoing authorization process, and move from a static, point-in-time authorization process to a dynamic, near real-time ongoing authorization process for information systems and controls, two conditions must be met by agencies. First, the information system or common controls must have been granted an initial authorization to operate by the designated authorizing official. Second, ISCM and PCM programs must be in place to monitor all implemented security and privacy controls with the appropriate degree of rigor[107] and at the appropriate frequencies in accordance with applicable ISCM and PCM strategies, OMB guidance, and NIST guidelines. Ongoing authorization can either be a time-driven or event-driven process whereby the authorizing official is provided with the necessary and sufficient information regarding the near real-time state of the information system and inherited common controls to determine whether all applicable security and privacy requirements have been satisfied and the mission or business risk is acceptable. Effective ongoing authorization requires robust ISCM and PCM strategies and effective operational ISCM and PCM programs.

Agencies must define and implement a process to designate information systems or common controls that have satisfied the two conditions noted in the previous paragraph and are to be transitioned to ongoing authorization. The process includes the means for the authorizing official to formally acknowledge that the information system or common controls are being managed under an ongoing authorization process and accept the responsibility for ensuring that all necessary activities associated with the ongoing authorization process are performed. Until a formal approval is obtained from the authorizing official to transition to ongoing authorization, information systems (and common controls) remain under a static authorization process with specific authorization termination dates enforced by the agency.

i. Reauthorization

Reauthorization consists of a review of the information system similar to the review carried out during the initial authorization but conducted during the operations or maintenance phase of the system development life cycle rather than prior to that phase. In general, reauthorization actions may be time-driven or event-driven. However, under ongoing authorization, reauthorization is typically an event-driven action initiated by the authorizing official or directed by the Risk Executive (function) in response to an event or significant [106] For additional information on Ongoing Authorization and its relationship to initial authorization and reauthorization, refer to NIST Supplemental Guidance on Ongoing Authorization: Transitioning to Near Real-Time Risk Management, http://csrc.nist.gov/publications.

[107] The term rigor is used in conjunction with security control assessments and monitoring. It is typically associated with the application of assessment methods described in NIST SP 800-53A, and in particular, the attribute of depth which addresses the formality and comprehensiveness of the assessment or monitoring activity.

change that increases information security or privacy risk above the previously agreed-upon agency risk tolerance. A significant change is defined as a change that is likely to affect the security or privacy state of an information system.

The reauthorization process differs from the initial authorization inasmuch as the authorizing official can initiate a complete zero-base review of the information system or common controls, or a targeted review based on the type of event or significant change that triggered the reauthorization, the assessment of risk related to the event, the risk response of the agency, and the agency risk tolerance. Reauthorization is a separate activity from the ongoing authorization process, though security- and privacy-related information from the agency's ISCM and PCM programs may still be leveraged to support reauthorization. Note also that reauthorization actions may necessitate a review of and changes to the ISCM or PCM strategy, which may in turn affect ongoing authorization.

j. Joint and Leveraged Authorizations

Agencies are encouraged to use joint and leveraged authorizations whenever practicable.[108] Joint authorizations can be used when multiple agency officials either from the same agency or different agencies, have a shared interest in authorizing an information system or common controls. The participating officials are collectively responsible and accountable for the system and the common controls and jointly accept the risks that may adversely impact agency operations and assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. Agencies choosing a joint authorization approach should work together on the planning and the execution of the Risk Management Framework tasks described in NIST SP 800-37 and document their agreement and progress in implementing the tasks. The specific terms and conditions of the joint authorization are established by the participating parties in the joint authorization including, for example, the process for ongoing determination and acceptance of risk. The joint authorization remains in effect only as long as there is mutual agreement among authorizing officials and the authorization meets the requirements established by Federal or agency policies.

Leveraged authorizations can be used when an agency chooses to accept some or all of the information in an existing authorization package generated by another agency based on the need to use the same information resources (e.g., information system or services provided by the system).[109] The leveraging agency reviews the owning agency's authorization package as the basis for determining risk to the leveraging agency. The leveraging agency considers risk factors such as the time elapsed since the authorization results were produced, differences in environments of operation (if applicable), the impact of the information to be processed, stored, or transmitted, and the overall risk tolerance of the leveraging agency. The leveraging agency may determine that additional security measures are needed and negotiate with the owning agency to provide such measures. To the extent that a leveraged authorization includes an information system that creates, collects, uses, processes, stores, [108] NIST SP 800-37, Guide for Applying the Risk Management Framework to Federal Information Systems, provides guidance on joint and leveraged security authorizations.

[109] Agencies using leveraged authorization information from other (owning) agencies shall ensure that such information is included as part of their own Risk Management Framework to provide the appropriate context for managing risk within the leveraging organizations.

HUD-17-0235-B-000339

maintains, disseminates, discloses, or disposes of PII, leveraging agencies must consult their SAOP. The SAOP may determine that additional measures are required to manage privacy risks prior to leveraging the authorization.

k. Continuous Monitoring

Agencies must develop ISCM and PCM strategies and implement ISCM and PCM activities in accordance with applicable statutes, directives, policies, instructions, regulations, standards, and guidelines. Agencies have the flexibility to develop an overarching ISCM and PCM strategy (e.g., at the agency, bureau, or component level) that addresses all information systems, or continuous monitoring strategies that address each agency information system individually. The ISCM and PCM strategies must document all available security and privacy controls selected and implemented by agencies, including the frequency of and degree of rigor associated with the monitoring process. ISCM and PCM strategies, which must be approved by the appropriate agency authorizing official and SAOP, respectively, must also include all common controls inherited by agency information systems.

l. Critical Infrastructure

Agencies that operate information systems that are part of the critical infrastructure must conduct a risk assessment to ensure that security controls for those systems are appropriately tailored (including the deployment of additional controls, when necessary), thus providing the required level of protection for critical Federal missions and business operations. In addition, agencies must ensure that the privacy controls assigned to critical infrastructure meet applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks. This includes the continuous monitoring of deployed security and privacy controls in information systems designated as critical infrastructure to determine the ongoing effectiveness of those controls against current threats; improving the effectiveness of those controls, when necessary; managing associated changes to the systems and environments of operation; and satisfying specific protection and compliance requirements in statutes, executive orders, directives, and policies required for critical infrastructure protection.

m. Encryption

When the assessed risk indicates the need, agencies must encrypt Federal information at rest and in transit unless otherwise protected by alternative physical and logical safeguards implemented at multiple layers, including networks, systems, applications, and data. Encrypting information at rest and in transit helps to protect the confidentiality and integrity of such information by making it less susceptible to unauthorized disclosure or modification. Agencies must apply encryption requirements to Federal information categorized as either moderate or high impact in accordance with FIPS Publication 199 unless encrypting such information is technically unfeasible or would demonstrably affect their ability to carry out their respective mission, functions, or operations. In situations where the use of encryption is technically infeasible, for example, due to an aging legacy system, agencies must initiate the appropriate system or system component upgrade or replacement actions at the earliest opportunity to be able to accommodate such safeguarding technologies. Authorizing officials who choose to operate information systems without the use of required encryption technologies must carefully assess the risk in doing so, and they must receive written approval for the exception from the agency CIO, in consultation with the SAOP (as appropriate). Only FIPS-validated cryptography is approved for use in Federal information systems covered by this policy.

n. Digital Signatures

Digital signatures can mitigate a variety of security vulnerabilities by providing authentication and non-repudiation capabilities, and ensuring the integrity of Federal information whether such information is used in day-to-day operations or archived for future use. Additionally, digital signatures can help agencies streamline mission or business processes and transition manual processes to more automated processes to include, for example, online transactions. Because of the advantages provided by this technology, OMB expects agencies to implement digital signature capabilities in accordance with Federal PKI policy, and NIST standards and guidelines. For employees and contractors, agencies must require the use of the digital signature capability of Personal Identity Verification (PIV) credentials. For individuals that fall outside the scope of PIV applicability, agencies should leverage approved Federal PKI credentials when using digital signatures.

o. Identity Assurance

Identity assurance is an essential element of an effective information security program. To streamline the process of citizens, businesses, and other partners[110] securely accessing Government services online requires a risk-appropriate demand of identity assurance. Identity assurance, in an online context, is the ability of an agency to determine that a claim to a particular identity made by an individual can be trusted to actually be the individual's true identity.[111] Citizens, businesses, and other partners that interact with the Federal Government need to have and be able to present electronic identity credentials to identify and authenticate themselves remotely and securely when accessing Federal information resources. An agency needs to be able to know, to a degree of certainty commensurate with the risk determination, that the presented electronic identity credential truly represents the individual presenting the credential before a transaction is authorized.[112] To transform processes for citizens, businesses, and other partners accessing Federal services online, OMB expects agencies to use a standards-based federated identity management approach that enables security, privacy, ease-of-use, and interoperability among electronic authentication systems.[113]

[110] "Other partners" may include contractors not subject to the NIST FIPS 201 identity standard.

[111] Pursuant to Executive Order 13681, Improving the Security of Consumer Financial Transactions, agencies making personal data accessible to citizens through digital applications shall require the use of multiple factors of authentication and an effective identity proofing process, as appropriate.

[112] NIST SP 800-63, Electronic Authentication Guidance, provides additional guidance on identity assurance.

[113] The requirements in this paragraph focus on citizens, businesses, and other partners that interact with the Federal Government. For Federal employees and contractors, with long-term access to Federal facilities and information systems, agencies are required to follow Personal Identity Verification requirements in accordance with OMB policy and NIST standards and guidelines.

HUD-17-0235-B-000341

p. Unsupported Information System Components

Unsupported information system components (e.g., when developers or vendors are no longer providing critical software patches) provide a substantial opportunity for adversaries to exploit weaknesses discovered in the currently installed components. Prohibit the use of unsupported information systems and system components, and ensure that systems and components that cannot be appropriately protected or secured are given a high priority for upgrade or replacement. Exceptions to replacing unsupported system components may include, for example, systems that provide critical mission or business capability where newer technologies are not available or where the systems are so isolated that installing replacement components is not an option. For such systems, agencies can establish in-house support, for example, by developing customized patches for critical software components or securing the services of external providers who through contractual relationships, provide ongoing support for the designated unsupported components. Such contractual relationships can include, for example, open source software value-added vendors.

q. Cybersecurity Framework

The Cybersecurity Framework was developed by NIST in response to Executive Order 13636, Improving Critical Infrastructure Cybersecurity. The Framework describes five core cybersecurity functions (i.e., Identify, Protect, Detect, Respond, and Recover) that may be helpful in raising awareness and facilitating communication among agency stakeholders, including executive leadership. The Cybersecurity Framework may also be helpful in improving communications across organizations, allowing cybersecurity expectations to be shared with business partners, suppliers, and among sectors. The Framework is not intended to duplicate the current information security and risk management practices in place within the Federal Government. However, in the course of managing information security risk using the established NIST Risk Management Framework and associated security standards and guidelines required by FISMA, agencies can leverage the Cybersecurity Framework to complement their current information security programs. NIST is responsible for providing guidance on how agencies can use the Cybersecurity Framework and in particular, how the two frameworks can work together to help agencies develop, implement, and continuously improve their information security programs.

r. FISMA Applicability to Non-Federal Entities

FISMA describes Federal agency security responsibilities as including "information collected or maintained by or on behalf of an agency" and "information systems used or operated by an agency or by a contractor of an agency or other organization on behalf of an agency." FISMA requires each agency to provide information security for the information and "information systems that support the operations and assets of the agency, including those provided or managed by another agency, contractor, or other source." This includes services that are either fully or partially provided, including agency-hosted, outsourced, and cloud-based solutions.

Additionally, because FISMA applies to Federal information and information systems, in certain circumstances, its requirements also apply to a specific class of IT that the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. § 11101(6)) did not include, i.e., "equipment that is acquired by a Federal contractor incidental to a Federal contract." Therefore, when Federal information is used within incidentally acquired equipment, the agency continues to be responsible and accountable for ensuring that FISMA requirements are met for such information.

s. Controlled Unclassified Information

The Controlled Unclassified Information program, established by Executive Order 13556, is a system that standardizes and simplifies the way the agencies handle unclassified information that requires safeguarding or dissemination controls, pursuant to and consistent with applicable law, regulations, and Government-wide policies. The program emphasizes the openness and uniformity of Government-wide practices. Its purpose is to address inefficient and confusing processes that have historically led to inconsistent marking and safeguarding as well as restrictive dissemination policies.

6. Other Requirements

Agencies must adhere to all other applicable information requirements such as privacy requirements in accordance with the Privacy Act of 1974, and its implementing OMB guidance; confidentiality protection requirements in accordance with the Confidentiality Information Protection and Statistical Efficiency Act of 2002 (CIPSEA) and its implementing OMB guidance; applicable requirements of statutes, and regulations pertaining to management of Federal records; and other relevant statutes, executive orders, Presidential directives, and policies.

Appendix II to OMB Circular A-130
Responsibilities for Managing Personally Identifiable Information

1. Purpose

This Appendix outlines some of the general responsibilities for Federal agencies managing information resources that involve personally identifiable information (PII) and summarizes the key privacy requirements included in other sections of this Circular. The requirements included in this Appendix apply to PII in any form or medium, including paper and electronic media. Although all of the requirements referenced in this Appendix concern the management of PII, some of the requirements are not solely the responsibility of agencies' privacy programs. The inclusion of shared requirements in this Appendix is not intended to suggest that agencies' privacy programs are solely or primarily responsible for meeting such requirements; however, agencies' privacy programs shall play a key role in meeting requirements that involve PII. This Appendix does not provide a comprehensive account of all the statutory and policy requirements associated with managing PII and protecting privacy. Agencies shall consult law, regulation, and policy, including OMB guidance, to understand all applicable requirements.

The main body of this Circular establishes general policies for Federal agencies managing information resources. Appendix I to this Circular establishes requirements for information security and privacy programs and provides guidance on how agencies should take a coordinated approach when managing Federal information resources. This Appendix and Appendix I are companion documents; it is important to review the appendices together in order to understand the coordination between privacy and security. As noted in the citations, all of the requirements summarized in the tables in this Appendix come from the main body or Appendix I to this Circular.

Previous versions of Circular A-130 included information about the reporting and publication requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974 ("Privacy Act") and additional OMB guidance. This information is being revised and will be reissued in OMB Circular A-108.[115] This Appendix does not extend or interpret the Privacy Act, including agency requirements under the Privacy Act.

2. Introduction

The Federal Government necessarily creates, collects, uses, processes, stores, maintains, disseminates, discloses, and disposes of PII to carry out missions mandated by Federal statute. The term PII, as defined in this Circular, refers to information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, either alone or when combined with other information that is linked or linkable to a specific individual. Because there are many different types of information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, the term PII is necessarily broad. To determine whether information is PII, the agency shall perform an assessment of the specific risk that an individual can be identified using the information with other information that is linked or linkable to the individual. In performing this assessment, it is important to recognize [115] Agencies shall continue to apply the requirements in Appendix I of the 2000 version of Circular A-130 regarding review, reporting, and publication pertaining to the Privacy Act until OMB issues a revised version of those requirements in OMB Circular A-108.

that information that is not PII can become PII whenever additional information becomes available – in any medium and from any source – that would make it possible to identify an individual.

Once the agency determines that an information system contains PII, the agency shall then consider the privacy risks and the associated risk to agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. When considering privacy risks, the agency shall consider the risks to an individual or individuals associated with the agency's creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of their PII. In particular, the agency shall evaluate the sensitivity of each individual data element that is PII, as well as all of the data elements together. The sensitivity level of the PII will depend on the context, including the purpose for which the PII is created, collected, used, processed, stored, maintained, disseminated, disclosed, or disposed. For example, the sensitivity level of a list of individuals' names may depend on the source of the information, the other information associated with the list, the intended use of the information, the ways in which the information will be processed and shared, and the ability to access the information. In addition, when determining the privacy and associated risks, the agency shall also consider the volume of PII. A higher volume of PII about a single individual or multiple individuals may pose increased privacy or associated risks.

3. Fair Information Practice Principles

The Fair Information Practice Principles (FIPPs) are a collection of widely accepted principles that agencies should use when evaluating information systems, processes, programs, and activities that affect individual privacy. The FIPPs are not OMB requirements; rather, they are principles that should be applied by each agency according to the agency's particular mission and privacy program requirements.

Rooted in a 1973 Federal Government report from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare Advisory Committee, "Records, Computers and the Rights of Citizens," the FIPPs have informed Federal statute and the laws of many U.S. states and foreign nations, and have been incorporated in the policies of many organizations around the world. The precise expression of the FIPPs has varied over time and in different contexts. However, the FIPPs retain a consistent set of core principles that are broadly relevant to agencies' information management practices. For purposes of this Circular, the FIPPs are as follows:

a. Access and Amendment. Agencies should provide individuals with appropriate access to PII and appropriate opportunity to correct or amend PII.[116]

b. Accountability. Agencies should be accountable for complying with these principles and applicable privacy requirements, and should appropriately monitor, audit, and document compliance. Agencies should also clearly define the roles and responsibilities with respect to [116] The Access and Amendment principle is included as part of the "Individual Participation" privacy control family in NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems. OMB is including Access and Amendment as a stand-alone principle in this Circular to emphasize the importance of allowing individuals to access and amend their information when appropriate.

PII for all employees and contractors, and should provide appropriate training to all employees and contractors who have access to PII.

c. Authority. Agencies should only create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, or disclose PII if they have authority to do so, and should identify this authority in the appropriate notice.[117]

d. Minimization. Agencies should only create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, or disclose PII that is directly relevant and necessary to accomplish a legally authorized purpose, and should only maintain PII for as long as is necessary to accomplish the purpose.[118]

e. Quality and Integrity. Agencies should create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, or disclose PII with such accuracy, relevance, timeliness, and completeness as is reasonably necessary to ensure fairness to the individual.

f. Individual Participation. Agencies should involve the individual in the process of using PII and, to the extent practicable, seek individual consent for the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, or disclosure of PII. Agencies should also establish procedures to receive and address individuals' privacy-related complaints and inquiries.

g. Purpose Specification and Use Limitation. Agencies should provide notice of the specific purpose for which PII is collected and should only use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, or disclose PII for a purpose that is explained in the notice and is compatible with the purpose for which the PII was collected, or that is otherwise legally authorized.

h. Security. Agencies should establish administrative, technical, and physical safeguards to protect PII commensurate with the risk and magnitude of the harm that would result from its unauthorized access, use, modification, loss, destruction, dissemination, or disclosure.

i. Transparency. Agencies should be transparent about information policies and practices with respect to PII, and should provide clear and accessible notice regarding creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, and disclosure of PII.[119]

4. Senior Agency Official for Privacy

Agencies are required to designate a Senior Agency Official for Privacy (SAOP) who has agency-wide responsibility and accountability for ensuring compliance with applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks. The SAOP shall have a central policy-making role and shall ensure that the agency considers the privacy impact of all agency actions and policies that involve PII. The SAOP's review of privacy risks should begin at the earliest planning and [117] The Authority principle is included as part of the "Purpose Specification" privacy control family in NIST SP 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information Systems. OMB is including Authority as a stand-alone principle in this Circular to emphasize the importance of identifying a specific authority for creating, collecting, using, processing, storing, maintaining, disseminating, or disclosing PII.

[118] In some versions of the FIPPs, the "minimization" principle is referred to under a different name, such as "collection limitation."

[119] In some versions of the FIPPs, the "transparency" principle is referred to under a different name, such as "openness."

HUD-17-0235-B-000348

development stages of agency actions and policies that involve PII, and should continue throughout the life cycle of the information.

The SAOP shall ensure that the agency complies with applicable privacy requirements in statute, regulation, and policy.

5. Agency Privacy Program

In order to manage Federal information resources that involve PII, agencies shall develop, implement, document, maintain, and oversee agency-wide privacy programs that include people, processes, and technologies. Among other things, where PII is involved, agencies' privacy programs shall play a key role in information security, records management, strategic planning, budget and acquisition, contractors and third parties, workforce, training, incident response, and implementing the Risk Management Framework. This Appendix does not provide a comprehensive account of all the statutory and policy requirements associated with managing PII and protecting privacy. Agencies shall consult law, regulation, and policy, including OMB guidance, to understand all applicable requirements.

Agencies' privacy programs are led by the SAOP and are responsible for ensuring compliance with applicable privacy requirements, developing and evaluating privacy policy, and managing privacy risks. At the discretion of the SAOP and consistent with applicable law, other qualified agency personnel may perform particular privacy functions that are assigned to the SAOP. Many of the requirements summarized in this Appendix are shared requirements and are not solely the responsibility of agencies' privacy programs. The inclusion of shared requirements in this Appendix is intended to convey that agencies' privacy programs shall be responsible to the extent that the requirements pertain to the management of PII.

a. General Requirements

Agencies shall have comprehensive privacy programs that ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements, develop and evaluate privacy policy, and manage privacy risks. The following table summarizes many of the general privacy requirements that are set forth in this Circular. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Establish and maintain a comprehensive privacy program.	Agencies shall establish and maintain a comprehensive privacy program that ensures compliance with applicable privacy requirements, develops and evaluates privacy policy, and manages privacy risks.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(a); Appendix I §§ 3(b), 3(f), 4(e).
Ensure compliance with privacy requirements and manage privacy risks.	Agencies shall ensure compliance with all applicable statutory, regulatory, and policy requirements and use privacy impact assessments and other tools to manage privacy risks. Agencies shall cost-effectively manage privacy risks and reduce such risks to an acceptable level.	Main Body §§ 4(g), 5(e)(1)(d), 5(f)(1)(a); Appendix I § 3(a), 3(b)(4), 3(f), 3(g).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Monitor Federal law, regulation, and policy for changes.	Agencies shall monitor Federal law, regulation, and policy for changes that affect privacy.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(c).
Develop and maintain a privacy program plan.	Agencies shall develop and maintain a privacy program plan that provides an overview of the agency's privacy program, including a description of the structure of the privacy program, the resources dedicated to the privacy program, the role of the SAOP and other privacy officials and staff, the strategic goals and objectives of the privacy program, the program management controls and common controls in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks, and any other information determined necessary by the agency's privacy program.	Appendix I § 4(c)(2), 4(e)(1).
Designate a Senior Agency Official for Privacy.	The head of each agency shall designate an SAOP who has agency-wide responsibility and accountability for developing, implementing, and maintaining an agency-wide privacy program to ensure compliance with all applicable statues, regulations, and policies regarding the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of PII by programs and information systems, developing and evaluating privacy policy, and managing privacy risks at the agency.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(b); Appendix I § 4(e).
Ensure coordination between privacy and other programs.	Agencies shall ensure that the SAOP and the agency's privacy personnel closely coordinate with the agency CIO, senior agency information security officer, and other agency offices and officials, as appropriate.	Main Body §§ 4(h), 5(f)(1)(k); Appendix I §§ 3(b)(11), 4(e)(10).
Ensure that privacy is addressed throughout the life cycle of each information system.	Agencies shall ensure that privacy is addressed throughout the life cycle of each agency information system.	Main Body §§ 4(g), 5(a)(1)(c)(i), 5(b)(4); Appendix I § 4(b)(2).
Incorporate privacy requirements into enterprise architecture.	Agencies shall incorporate Federal privacy requirements into the agency's enterprise architecture to ensure that risk is addressed and information systems achieve the necessary levels of trustworthiness, protection, and resilience.	Appendix I § 4(b)(5).
Comply with the Privacy Act.	Agencies shall comply with the requirements of the Privacy Act and ensure that Privacy Act system of records notices are published, revised, and rescinded, as required.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(g).
Conduct privacy impact assessments.	Agencies shall conduct privacy impact assessments in accordance with the E-Government Act and make the privacy impact assessments available to the public in accordance with OMB policy.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(i).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Balance the need for information collection with the privacy risks.	Agencies shall ensure that the design of information collections is consistent with the intended use of the information, and the need for new information is balanced against any privacy risks.	Main Body § 4(i).
Comply with requirements for disclosure and dissemination.	Agencies shall comply with all applicable privacy statutes and policies governing the disclosure or dissemination of information and comply with any other valid access, use, and dissemination restrictions.	Main Body § 5(e)(1)(b)-(d), 5(e)(7)(h).
Maintain and post privacy policies on websites, mobile applications, and other digital services.	Agencies shall maintain and post privacy policies on all agency websites, mobile applications, and other digital services, in accordance with the E-Government Act and OMB policy.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(j).
Provide performance metrics and reports.	Agencies shall provide performance metrics information and reports in accordance with processes established by OMB and DHS pursuant to FISMA.	Appendix I § 4(1).

b. Considerations for Managing PII

Agencies' privacy programs shall maintain an inventory of PII, regularly review all PII maintained by the agency, and comply with applicable requirements regarding the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of PII. In addition, agencies' privacy programs shall impose, where appropriate, conditions on other agencies and entities to which PII is being disclosed that govern the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of the PII. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to the general management of PII. While some requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Maintain an inventory of agency information systems that involve PII and regularly review and reduce PII to the minimum necessary.	Agencies shall maintain an inventory of the agency's information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII to allow the agency to regularly review its PII and ensure, to the extent reasonably practicable, that such PII is accurate, relevant, timely, and complete; and to allow the agency to reduce its PII to the minimum necessary for the proper performance of authorized agency functions.	Main Body § 5(a)(1)(a)(ii), 5(f)(1)(e).
Eliminate unnecessary collection, maintenance, and use of Social Security numbers.	Agencies shall take steps to eliminate unnecessary collection, maintenance, and use of Social Security numbers, and explore alternatives to the use of Social Security numbers as a personal identifier.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(f).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Follow approved records retention schedules for records with PII.	Agencies shall ensure that all records with PII are maintained in accordance with applicable records retention or disposition schedules approved by NARA.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(h).
Limit the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, and disclosure of PII.	Agencies shall limit the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, and disclosure of PII to that which is legally authorized, relevant, and reasonably deemed necessary for the proper performance of agency functions.	Main Body § 5(f)(1)(d).
Require entities with which PII is shared to maintain the PII in an information system with a particular categorization level.	Agencies that share PII shall require, as appropriate, other agencies and entities with which they share PII to maintain the PII in an information system with a particular NIST FIPS Publication 199 confidentiality impact level, as determined by the agency sharing the PII.	Appendix I § 3(c).
Impose conditions on the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of shared PII through agreements.	Agencies that share PII with other agencies or entities shall impose, where appropriate, conditions (including the selection and implementation of particular security and privacy controls) that govern the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of the PII through written agreements, including contracts, data use agreements, information exchange agreements, and memoranda of understanding.	Appendix I § 3(d).

c. Budget and Acquisition

Agencies' privacy programs shall have the resources needed to manage Federal information resources that involve PII. This will require privacy programs to play a key role in the development of the agencies' budget requests, as well as any decisions to acquire or develop information system technologies and services. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to budget and acquisition activities. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Identify and plan for resources needed for privacy program.	Agencies shall identify and plan for the resources needed to implement privacy programs.	Appendix I § 4(b)(1).
Include privacy requirements in IT solicitations.	Agencies shall include privacy requirements in solicitations for IT and services.	Main body § 5(d)(1)(j).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Establish a process to evaluate privacy risks for IT investments.	Agencies shall consider privacy when analyzing IT investments, and establish a decision-making process that shall cover the life of each information system and include explicit criteria for analyzing the projected and actual costs, benefits, and risks, including privacy risks, associated with the IT investments.	Main Body § 5(d)(3), 5(d)(4)(b).
Ensure that privacy risks are addressed and costs are included in IT capital investment plans and budgetary requests.	The SAOP shall review IT capital investment plans and budgetary requests to ensure that privacy requirements (and associated privacy controls), as well as any associated costs, are explicitly identified and included, with respect to any IT resources that will be used to create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII. Agencies shall ensure that agency budget justification materials, in their initial budget submission to OMB, include a statement affirming that the SAOP has conducted the necessary review.	Main Body § 5(a)(3)(e)(ii), 5(d)(3)(e); Appendix I § 4(b)(2), 4(e)(6).
Ensure that investment plans meet the privacy requirements appropriate for the life cycle stage of the investment.	Agencies shall ensure that investment plans submitted to OMB as part of the budget process meet the privacy requirements appropriate for the life cycle stage of the investment.	Appendix I § 4(b)(4).
Upgrade, replace, or retire unprotected information systems.	Agencies shall plan and budget to upgrade, replace, or retire any information systems for which protections commensurate with risk cannot be effectively implemented.	Appendix I § 4(b)(3).
Ensure that SAOPs are made aware of information systems and components that cannot be protected.	Agencies shall ensure that, in a timely manner, SAOPs are made aware of information systems and components that cannot be appropriately protected or secured, and that such systems are given a high priority for upgrade, replacement, or retirement.	Main Body § 5(a)(1)(c)(ii); Appendix I § 3(b)(10).

d. Contractors and Third Parties

Agencies' privacy programs shall ensure that entities that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of information on behalf of a Federal agency or that operate or use information systems on behalf of a Federal agency, comply with the privacy requirements in law and OMB policies. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to contractors and third parties. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Ensure that contracts and other agreements incorporate privacy requirements.	Agencies shall ensure that terms and conditions in contracts, and other agreements involving the creation, collection, use, processing, storage, maintenance, dissemination, disclosure, and disposal of Federal information, incorporate privacy requirements and are sufficient to enable agencies to meet Federal and agency-specific requirements pertaining to the protection of Federal information.	Main Body § 5(a)(1)(b)(ii); Appendix I § 4(j)(1).
Maintain agency-wide privacy training for all employees and contractors.	Agencies shall develop, maintain, and implement mandatory agency-wide privacy awareness and training programs for all employees and contractors.	Appendix I § 4(h)(1)-(2), (4)-(7).
Ensure that the Privacy Act applies to contractors where required.	Agencies shall, consistent with the agency's authority, ensure that the requirements of the Privacy Act apply to a Privacy Act system of records when a contractor operates the system of records on behalf of the agency to accomplish an agency function.	Appendix I § 4(j)(3).
Oversee information systems operated by contractors.	Agencies shall provide oversight of information systems used or operated by contractors or other entities on behalf of the Federal Government or that collect or maintain Federal information on behalf of the Federal Government.	Appendix I § 4(j)(2).
Implement policies on privacy oversight of contractors.	Agencies shall document and implement policies and procedures for privacy oversight of contractors and other entities, to include ensuring appropriate vetting and access control processes for contractors and others with access to information systems containing Federal information.	Appendix I § 4(j)(2)(a).
Ensure implementation of privacy controls for contractor information systems.	Agencies shall ensure that privacy controls of information systems and services used or operated by contractors or other entities on behalf of the agency are effectively implemented and comply with NIST standards and guidelines and agency requirements.	Appendix I § 4(j)(2)(b).
Maintain an inventory of contractor information systems.	Agencies shall ensure that information systems used or operated by contractors or other entities on behalf of the agency are included in the agency's inventory of information systems.	Appendix I § 4(j)(2)(c).
Ensure that incident response procedures are in place for contractor information systems.	Agencies shall ensure that procedures are in place for incident response for information systems used or operated by contractors or other entities on behalf of the agency, including timelines for notification of affected individuals and reporting to OMB, DHS, and other entities as required in OMB guidance.	Appendix I § 4(j)(2)(e).

e. Privacy Impact Assessments

As a general matter, an agency shall conduct a privacy impact assessment (PIA) under section 208(b) of the E-Government Act of 2002, absent an applicable exception under that section, when the agency develops, procures, or uses information technology to create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII.[120] A PIA is an analysis of how PII is handled to ensure that handling conforms to applicable privacy requirements, determine the privacy risks associated with an information system or activity, and evaluate ways to mitigate privacy risks. A PIA is both an analysis and a formal document detailing the process and the outcome of the analysis.

A PIA is one of the most valuable tools Federal agencies use to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks. Agencies shall conduct and draft a PIA with sufficient clarity and specificity to demonstrate that the agency fully considered privacy and incorporated appropriate privacy protections from the earliest stages of the agency activity and throughout the information life cycle. In order to conduct a meaningful PIA, the agency's SAOP shall work closely with the program managers, information system owners, information technology experts, security officials, counsel, and other relevant agency officials.

Moreover, a PIA is not a time-restricted activity that is limited to a particular milestone or stage of the information system or PII life cycles. Rather, the privacy analysis shall continue throughout the information system and PII life cycles. Accordingly, a PIA shall be considered a living document that agencies are required to update whenever changes to the information technology, changes to the agency's practices, or other factors alter the privacy risks associated with the use of such information technology.

In addition to serving as an important analytical tool for agencies, a PIA also serves as notice to the public regarding the agency's practices with respect to privacy and information technology. All PIAs shall be drafted in plain language and shall be posted on the agency's website, unless doing so would raise security concerns or reveal classified or sensitive information. Although PIAs are generally required by law, such as by the E-Government Act of 2002, agencies may also develop policies to require PIAs in circumstances where a PIA would not be required by law.

f. Workforce Management

Agencies' privacy programs shall play a key role in workforce management activities. The SAOP shall be involved in assessing the hiring and professional development needs at the agency with respect to privacy. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to workforce management activities. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

[120] See 44 U.S.C. § 3501 note; Pub. L. 107–347, § 208(b). Section 208(b) of the E-Government Act requires agencies, absent an applicable exception under this section, to conduct a PIA before: (i) developing or procuring IT that collects, maintains, or disseminates information that is in an identifiable form; or (ii) initiating a new collection of information that – (I) will be collected, maintained, or disseminated using IT; and (II) includes any information in an identifiable form permitting the physical or online contacting of a specific individual, if identical questions have been posed to, or identical reporting requirements imposed on, 10 or more persons, other than agencies, instrumentalities, or employees of the Federal Government.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Ensure that the SAOP is involved in assessing and addressing privacy hiring, training, and professional development needs.	Agencies shall ensure that the SAOP is involved in assessing and addressing the hiring, training, and professional development needs of the agency with respect to privacy.	Main Body § 5(c)(6).
Maintain a workforce planning process.	Agencies shall ensure that the CHCO, CIO, CAO, and SAOP develop and maintain a current workforce planning process to ensure that the agency can anticipate and respond to changing mission requirements, maintain workforce skills in a rapidly developing IT environment, and recruit and retain the IT talent needed to accomplish the mission.	Main Body § 5(c)(1).
Develop a set of privacy competency requirements.	Agencies shall ensure that the CHCO, CIO, CAO, and SAOP develop a set of competency requirements for information resources staff, including program managers and information security, privacy, and IT leadership positions.	Main Body § 5(c)(1).
Ensure that the workforce has the appropriate knowledge and skill.	Agencies shall ensure that the workforce, which supports the acquisition, management, maintenance, and use of information resources, has the appropriate knowledge and skill.	Main Body § 5(c)(2).
Take advantage of flexible hiring authorities for specialized positions.	Agencies shall ensure that the CIO, CHCO, SAOP, and other hiring managers take advantage of flexible hiring authorities for specialized positions, as established by OPM.	Main Body § 5(c)(7).

g. Training and Accountability

Agencies' privacy programs shall develop, maintain, and provide agency-wide privacy awareness and training programs for all employees and contractors. In addition, the privacy program shall establish rules of behavior for employees and contractors with access to PII and hold agency personnel accountable for complying with applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to training and accountability activities. Some of the requirements summarized in the table are not solely privacy requirements but may require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Maintain agency-wide privacy training for all employees and contractors.	Agencies shall develop, maintain, and implement mandatory agency-wide privacy awareness and training programs for all employees and contractors.	Appendix I § 4(h)(1).
Ensure that privacy training is consistent with applicable policies.	Agencies shall ensure that the privacy awareness and training programs are consistent with applicable policies, standards, and guidelines issued by OMB, NIST, and OPM.	Appendix I § 4(h)(2).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Apprise agency employees about available privacy resources.	Agencies shall apprise agency employees about available privacy resources, such as products, techniques, or expertise.	Appendix I § 4(h)(3).
Provide foundational and advanced privacy training.	Agencies shall provide foundational as well as more advanced levels of privacy training to information system users (including managers, senior executives, and contractors) and ensure that measures are in place to test the knowledge level of information system users.	Appendix I § 4(h)(4).
Provide role-based privacy training to appropriate employees and contractors.	Agencies shall provide role-based privacy training to employees and contractors with assigned privacy roles and responsibilities, including managers, before authorizing access to Federal information or information systems or performing assigned duties.	Appendix I § 4(h)(5).
Hold personnel accountable for complying with privacy requirements and policies.	Agencies shall implement policies and procedures to ensure that all personnel are held accountable for complying with agency-wide privacy requirements and policies.	Appendix I § 3(b)(9).
Establish rules of behavior for employees and contractors with access to PII and consequences for violating the rules.	Agencies shall establish rules of behavior, including consequences for violating rules of behavior, for employees and contractors that have access to Federal information or information systems, including those that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII.	Appendix I § 4(h)(6).
Ensure that employees and contractors read and agree to rules of behavior.	Agencies shall ensure that employees and contractors have read and agreed to abide by the rules of behavior for the Federal information and information systems for which they require access prior to being granted access.	Appendix I § 4(h)(7).

h. Incident Response

Agencies' privacy programs shall develop and implement incident management and response capabilities. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to incident response. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not solely privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Maintain formal incident management and response policies and capabilities.	Agencies shall maintain formal incident response capabilities and mechanisms, implement formal incident management policies, and provide adequate training and awareness for employees and contractors on how to report and respond to incidents.	Appendix I § 4(f)(1), (7)-(8).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Establish roles and responsibilities to ensure oversight and coordination of incident response.	Agencies shall establish clear roles and responsibilities to ensure the oversight and coordination of incident response activities and that incidents are documented, reported, investigated, and handled.	Appendix I § 4(f)(3).
Periodically test incident response procedures.	Agencies shall periodically test incident response procedures to ensure effectiveness of such procedures.	Appendix I § 4(f)(4).
Document incident response lessons learned and update procedures.	Agencies shall document lessons learned for incident response and update procedures annually or as required by OMB or DHS.	Appendix I § 4(f)(5).
Ensure that processes are in place to verify corrective actions.	Agencies shall ensure that processes are in place to verify corrective actions.	Appendix I § 4(f)(6).
Report incidents in accordance with OMB guidance.	Agencies shall report incidents to OMB, DHS, the CIO, the SAOP, their respective inspectors general and general counsel, law enforcement, and Congress in accordance with procedures issued by OMB.	Appendix I § 4(f)(9).
Provide reports on incidents as required.	Agencies shall provide reports on incidents as required by FISMA, OMB policy, DHS binding operational directives, Federal information security incident center guidelines, NIST guidelines, and agency procedures.	Appendix I § 4(f)(10).

i. Risk Management Framework[121]

Agencies' privacy programs have responsibilities under the Risk Management Framework, which is also covered in Appendix I to this Circular. The Risk Management Framework provides a disciplined and structured process that integrates information security, privacy, and risk management activities into the information system development life cycle. This Circular requires agencies to use the Risk Management Framework to manage privacy risks beyond those that are typically included under the "confidentiality" objective of the term "information security."[122] While many privacy risks relate to the unauthorized access or disclosure of PII, [121] Traditionally, the Risk Management Framework was a framework to help agencies address information security and related risks in the authorization process for Federal information systems. As explained in this Appendix, this Circular integrates agencies' privacy programs into the Risk Management Framework process. NIST has published a suite of standards and guidelines that describe how to implement an agency-wide risk management framework. As of the date of this publication, many of the existing NIST standards and guidelines that detail how to implement an agency-wide risk management framework do not fully address the role of privacy and agencies' privacy programs. In the future, NIST may revise or develop standards and guidelines to further clarify how privacy and agencies' privacy programs are integrated into the Risk Management Framework.

[122] The term "information security," as defined in law and in this Circular, includes three objectives: integrity, availability, and confidentiality. The term "confidentiality" means "preserving authorized restrictions on access and disclosure, including means for protecting personal privacy and proprietary information." See 44 U.S.C. § 3552.

privacy risks may also result from other activities, including the creation, collection, use, and retention of PII; the inadequate quality or integrity of PII; and the lack of appropriate notice, transparency, or participation.[123]

The Risk Management Framework has the following steps:

1) Categorize. Agencies shall categorize each information system and the information processed, stored, and transmitted by that information system based on an assessment of the potential impact that a loss of confidentiality, integrity, or availability of such information or information system would have on agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation.[124] Each information system is categorized at low, moderate, or high impact according to the criteria in NIST standards and guidelines. The SAOP is responsible for reviewing and approving the categorization of information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII.

   The categorization of information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII will depend on the sensitivity of the PII, the privacy risks, and the associated risk to agency operations, agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation. Agencies should generally categorize information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII at the moderate or high confidentiality impact level.

2) Select. Agencies shall select security and privacy controls for each information system. A security control is a safeguard or countermeasure prescribed for an information system or an agency to protect the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of the system and its information. Security controls primarily pertain to security but they can also enhance privacy. Agencies shall select an initial set of baseline security controls for the information system based on the security categorization and then tailor the security control baseline, as needed, based on an assessment of security risk and local conditions.[125]

   A privacy control is an administrative, technical, or physical safeguard employed within an agency to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks.[126] In order to help agencies satisfy privacy requirements and manage privacy risks, NIST has developed a set of privacy controls, based on the FIPPs, in Special Publication (SP) 800-53, Security and Privacy Controls for Federal Information

[123] Refer to the Fair Information Practice Principles in section 3 of this Appendix.

[124] See National Institute of Standards and Technology FIPS Publication 199, Standards for Security Categorization of Federal Information and Information Systems (Feb. 2004), available at http://csrc.nist.gov/publications.

[125] The use of a privacy overlay may assist agencies in effectively selecting and tailoring security controls for information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII.

[126] Privacy risks can include risks beyond those that are typically included under the "confidentiality" prong of the term "information security." Agencies shall use privacy controls to manage all privacy risks associated with PII or an information system, regardless of whether those risks would be considered information security risks.

Systems and Organizations.[127] Agencies are required to use the NIST privacy controls and shall implement a privacy control selection process for information systems. Agencies shall use NIST privacy controls in a manner that is consistent with the agency's authorities, missions, and operational needs.

For privacy controls, the SAOP is responsible for designating which controls the agency will treat as program management, common, information system-specific, and hybrid controls. Privacy program management controls are controls that are generally implemented at the agency level and essential for managing the agency's privacy program. Program management controls are distinct from common, information system-specific, and hybrid controls because program management controls are independent of any particular information system. Agencies shall document program management controls in their privacy program plan.

The other types of controls – common, information system-specific, and hybrid controls – are necessarily implemented, at least in part, at the information system level. Common controls are controls that are inherited by multiple information systems. When a control is inherited by an information system, the control is selected for the information system but the control is developed, implemented, assessed, authorized, and monitored by programs or officials other than those responsible for the information system. Information system-specific controls are controls that are implemented for a particular information system or the portion of a hybrid control that is implemented for a particular information system. Hybrid controls are controls that are implemented for an information system in part as a common control and in part as an information system-specific control.

The determination as to whether a privacy control is a common, hybrid, or information system-specific control is based on context. By assigning privacy controls to an information system as information system-specific, hybrid, or common controls, the agency assigns responsibility and accountability to specific agency programs or officials for the overall development, implementation, assessment, authorization, and monitoring of those controls. Privacy controls designated by the agency as common controls are, in most cases, managed by an agency program or official other than the information system owner. Moreover, privacy controls designated as information system-specific controls may be the primary responsibility of information system owners and their respective authorizing officials. In all cases, the management of privacy controls shall be subject to the coordination and oversight of the SAOP.

3) Implement. Agencies shall implement the security and privacy controls selected for an information system and document how the controls are deployed. Agencies shall develop and maintain security plans and privacy plans for an information system that provide an overview of the security and privacy requirements for the information system and describe the security and privacy controls in place or planned for meeting those requirements. All privacy controls that are selected for an information system shall be documented in the privacy plan for the information system. The security plan and the privacy plan may be separate or integrated into one consolidated document.

4) Assess. Agencies shall assess the security and privacy controls using appropriate methods to determine the extent to which the controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and producing the desired outcome with respect to meeting the security and privacy requirements for the system and managing risks. The SAOP shall conduct an initial assessment of the privacy controls selected for an information system prior to operation, and shall assess the privacy controls periodically thereafter at a frequency sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks. If a PIA is conducted for the information system, the agency may incorporate the initial assessment of the privacy controls into the PIA process.

5) Authorize. Agencies shall authorize an information system prior to operation and periodically thereafter. Authorization of an information system is an explicit acceptance of the risk to agency operations (including mission, functions, image, or reputation), agency assets, individuals, other organizations, and the Nation, based on the implementation of the security and privacy controls. The determination to authorize an information system shall be made by an agency's authorizing official or officials (which may include the SAOP) and shall be based on a review of the information system authorization package, which includes the security plan, the privacy plan, documented assessments of the security and privacy controls, and any relevant plans of action and milestones.

   Authorizing officials are responsible and accountable for the risks associated with an information system. However, since the SAOP is the senior official, designated by the head of each agency, who has agency-wide responsibility for privacy, agencies shall consider recommendations submitted by the SAOP in the decision to authorize an information system. In addition, the SAOP is responsible for reviewing the authorization package for an information system that creates, collects, uses, processes, stores, maintains, disseminates, discloses, or disposes of PII, to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks prior to system authorization.

6) Monitor. Agencies shall monitor and assess security and privacy controls selected for an information system and shall continue to monitor and assess those controls on an ongoing basis. This includes assessing the effectiveness of the security and privacy controls, documenting changes to the information system, analyzing the security and privacy impact associated with the changes, and reporting the state of the system to appropriate agency officials. The type, rigor, and frequency of control assessments shall be sufficient to account for risks that change over time based on changes in the threat environment, agency missions and business functions, personnel, technology, or environments of operation.

   The ongoing assessment of privacy risks and privacy controls is referred to as privacy continuous monitoring (PCM). The SAOP shall develop and maintain a written PCM strategy that catalogs the available privacy controls implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers and ensures that the controls are effectively monitored on an ongoing basis by assigning an agency-defined assessment frequency to each control that is sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks.

In addition, the SAOP shall establish and maintain a PCM program to implement the PCM strategy. The PCM program is an agency-wide program that is responsible for: maintaining ongoing awareness of threats and vulnerabilities that may pose privacy risks; monitoring changes to information systems and environments of operation that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII; and conducting privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and management of privacy risks.

Although the term "privacy continuous monitoring" is new to this Circular, the concept of conducting an ongoing assessment of privacy risks is not new. For many IT systems, agencies are already required to conduct PIAs that involve an analysis of privacy risks throughout the life cycle of the information system and the PII, and the drafting of a living document that is updated whenever changes to the IT or the agency's practices alter the privacy risks associated with the use of the IT.[128] In fact, for IT systems for which a PIA is conducted, agencies may use the PIA as the principal tool to satisfy the requirement to assess the privacy controls for an information system.

The requirement for agencies to implement the Risk Management Framework is described in more detail in Appendix I to this Circular. The following table summarizes the privacy requirements in this Circular that pertain to the Risk Management Framework. While some of the requirements summarized in the table are not exclusively privacy requirements, they may still require the involvement of the agencies' privacy programs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Implement a risk management framework.	Agencies shall implement a risk management framework to guide and inform the categorization of Federal information and information systems; the selection, implementation, and assessment of privacy controls; the authorization of information systems and common controls; and the continuous monitoring of information systems.	Appendix I § 3(a), 3(b)(5).
Review and approve the categorization of information systems that involve PII.	The SAOP shall review and approve, in accordance with NIST FIPS Publication 199 and NIST Special Publication 800-60, the categorization of information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII.	Appendix I § 4(a)(2), 4(e)(7).

[128] Refer to section 5.e of this Appendix for additional information about PIAs.

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Designate program management, common, information system-specific, and hybrid privacy controls.	The SAOP shall designate which privacy controls will be treated as program management, common, information system-specific, and hybrid privacy controls at the agency. Agencies shall designate common controls in order to provide cost-effective privacy capabilities that can be inherited by multiple agency information systems or programs.	Appendix I § 4(c)(12), 4(e)(5).
Implement a privacy control selection process.	Agencies shall employ a process to select and implement privacy controls for information systems and programs that satisfies applicable privacy requirements in OMB guidance, including, but not limited to, Appendix I to this Circular and OMB Circular A-108, Federal Agency Responsibilities for Review, Reporting, and Publication under the Privacy Act.	Appendix I § 4(c)(6).
Develop, approve, and maintain privacy plans for information systems.	The SAOP shall review and approve the privacy plans for agency information systems prior to authorization, reauthorization, or ongoing authorization. Agencies shall develop and maintain a privacy plan that details the privacy controls selected for an information system that are in place or planned for meeting applicable privacy requirements and managing privacy risks, details how the controls have been implemented, and describes the methodologies and metrics that will be used to assess the controls.	Appendix I § 4(c)(9), 4(e)(8).
Identify privacy control assessment methodologies and metrics.	The SAOP shall identify assessment methodologies and metrics to determine whether privacy controls are implemented correctly, operating as intended, and sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks.	Appendix I § 4(e)(4).
Conduct assessments of privacy controls.	The SAOP shall conduct and document the results of privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at the agency across all agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks. Agencies shall conduct and document privacy control assessments prior to the operation of an information system, and periodically thereafter, consistent with the frequency defined in the agency privacy continuous monitoring strategy and the agency risk tolerance.	Appendix I §§ 3(b)(6), 4(c)(13)-(14), 4(e)(3).
Correct deficiencies that are identified in information systems.	Agencies shall correct deficiencies that are identified through privacy assessments, the privacy continuous monitoring program, or internal or external audits and reviews, to include OMB reviews. Agencies shall use agency plans of action and milestones to record and manage the mitigation and remediation of identified weaknesses and deficiencies, not associated with accepted risks, in agency information systems.	Appendix I § 4(c)(15), 4(k).

Responsibility	Description	Citation
Develop and maintain a privacy continuous monitoring strategy.	The SAOP shall develop and maintain a privacy continuous monitoring strategy, a formal document that catalogs the available privacy controls implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers and ensures that the privacy controls are effectively monitored on an ongoing basis by assigning an agency-defined assessment frequency to each control that is sufficient to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and to manage privacy risks.	Appendix I § 4(d)(9), 4(e)(2).
Establish and maintain a privacy continuous monitoring program.	The SAOP shall establish and maintain an agency-wide privacy continuous monitoring program that implements the agency's privacy continuous monitoring strategy and maintains ongoing awareness of threats and vulnerabilities that may pose privacy risks; monitors changes to information systems and environments of operation that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII; and conducts privacy control assessments to verify the continued effectiveness of all privacy controls selected and implemented at the agency across the agency risk management tiers to ensure continued compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks. Agencies shall ensure that a robust privacy continuous monitoring program is in place before agency information systems are eligible for ongoing authorization.	Appendix I §§ 3(b)(6), 4(d)(10)-(11), 4(e)(2).
Review authorization packages for information systems that involve PII.	The SAOP shall review authorization packages for information systems that create, collect, use, process, store, maintain, disseminate, disclose, or dispose of PII to ensure compliance with applicable privacy requirements and manage privacy risks, prior to authorizing officials making risk determination and acceptance decisions.	Appendix I § 4(e)(9).
Encrypt moderate-impact and high-impact information.	Agencies shall encrypt all NIST FIPS Publication 199 moderate-impact and high-impact information at rest and in transit, unless encrypting such information is technically infeasible or would demonstrably affect the ability of agencies to carry out their respective missions, functions, or operations; and the risk of not encrypting is accepted by the authorizing official and approved by the agency CIO, in consultation with the SAOP (as appropriate).	Appendix I § 4(i)(14).

6. Managing PII Collected for Statistical Purposes Under a Pledge of Confidentiality

The Nation relies on the flow of credible statistics to support the decisions of individuals, households, governments, businesses, and other organizations. Any loss of trust in the relevance, accuracy, objectivity, or integrity of the Federal statistical system and its products can foster uncertainty about the validity of measures our Nation uses to monitor and assess performance, progress, and needs.

Given the importance of robust and objective official Federal statistics, agencies and components charged with the production of these statistics are assigned particular responsibility. Specifically, information acquired by an agency or component under a pledge of confidentiality[129] and for exclusively statistical purposes shall be used by officers, employees, or agents of the agency exclusively for statistical purposes.[130] As defined in the Confidential Information Protection and Statistical Efficiency Act of 2002 (CIPSEA), statistical purpose refers to the description, estimation, or analysis of the characteristics of groups, without identifying the individuals or organizations that comprise such groups; it includes the development, implementation, or maintenance of methods, technical or administrative procedures, or information resources that support such purposes.[131] These agencies and components shall protect the integrity and confidentiality of this information against unauthorized access, use, disclosure, modification, or destruction throughout the life cycle of the information. Further, these agencies and components shall adhere to legal requirements and should follow best practices for protecting the confidentiality of data, including training their employees and agents, and ensuring the physical and information system security of confidential information.

[129] The term "confidentiality" can have multiple meanings. For example, in the context of general information security, the term means "preserving authorized restrictions on information access and disclosure, including means for protecting personal privacy and proprietary information." See 44 U.S.C. § 3552. However, for the purposes of section 6 of Appendix II to this Circular, the term "confidentiality" refers to the requirement that "data or information acquired by an agency under a pledge of confidentiality for exclusively statistical purposes shall not be disclosed by an agency in identifiable form, for any use other than an exclusively statistical purpose, except with the informed consent of the respondent." See 44 U.S.C. § 3501 note; Pub. L. 107–347, § 512(b)(1).

[130] 44 U.S.C. § 3501 note; Pub. L. 107-347, § 512(a). There are some narrowly-delineated, authorized, nonstatistical uses of information collected for statistical purposes that are noted in Section 504 of CIPSEA, including providing information to a law enforcement agency for the prosecution of submissions to the collecting agency of false statistical information under statutes that authorize criminal or civil penalties for the provision of false statistical information, unless such disclosure or use would otherwise be prohibited under Federal law.

ADDITIONAL UPDATES

- SOHUD Meetings with Members of Senate Banking and House Financial Services Committees
  - Description: Secretary Carson will be meeting with Senate Banking and House Financial Services Committee members on housing finance reform.
  - POC: Mike Dendas, Senior Advisor for Legislative Affairs; michael.w.dendas@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: Meetings are currently underway.

- Streamlining Administrative Regulations for Public Housing, Housing Choice Voucher, Multifamily Housing, and Community Planning and Development Programs
  - Description: The 2014 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to ease administrative burdens on public housing agencies (PHAs) and certain multifamily owners. HUD issued a proposed rule on January 6, 2015, to implement these statutory changes and to make additional regulatory changes arising out of stakeholder input asking for additional flexibilities in many HUD programs. In addition, the 2015 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to how PHAs determine flat rents in public housing. HUD issued a September 8, 2015, interim rule to implement these changes. This final rule makes changes to the regulatory text as presented in the January 2015, proposed rule, and finalizes the regulatory changes contained in the September 2015 interim final rule.
  - POC: Danielle Bastarache, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policies, Programs and Legislative Initiatives, Office of Public and Indian Housing; danielle.l.bastarache@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The rule was cleared by the Office of Management and Budget on August 31, 2017. The rule was delivered to HUD's Executive Secretariat on September 22, 2017 for final approvals. The next step will be submission to HUD's Congressional authorizing committees for pre-publication review. Publication is anticipated in October.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Rule to Amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards

- Description: This proposed rule would amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards (the Construction and Safety Standards) by adopting recommendations made to HUD by the Manufactured Housing Consensus Committee (MHCC). The National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974 (the Act) requires HUD to publish in the Federal Register any proposed revised Construction and Safety Standard submitted by the MHCC. The MHCC has prepared and submitted to HUD its third group of recommendations to improve various aspects of the Construction and Safety Standards. HUD has reviewed those proposals and has made editorial revisions to several of the proposals. (b) (5)

  As agreed upon, these recommendations are being published here to provide notice of the proposed revisions and an opportunity for public comment.
- POC: Pamela Beck Danner, Administrator, Office of Manufactured Housing Programs, Office of Housing; pamela.b.danner@hud.gov
- (b) (5)
- (b) (5)

- Notice Announcing the Housing Counseling Federal Advisory Committee Appointment of Members and Notice of Public Meeting
  - Description: This notice announces the appointment of the Housing Counseling Federal Advisory Committee (HCFAC) members, gives notice of a one-day meeting and sets forth the proposed agenda of the first HCFAC meeting. The Committee meeting will be held on Tuesday, November 1, 2017. The meeting is open to the public and is accessible to individuals with disabilities.
  - POC: Marjorie George, Housing Program Technical Specialist, Office of Housing Counseling, marjorie.a.george@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The Office of Housing has decided to postpone publication of this notice until November.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Relief from HUD Requirements Available to Public Housing Agencies to Assist with Recovery and Relief Efforts on Behalf of Families Affected by Hurricanes Harvey, Irma, Maria and Future Natural Disasters Where Major Disaster Declarations Might be Issued in 2017
  - Description: This notice advises the public that HUD, as a result of Presidentially declared Major Disaster Declarations (MDD) following Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria has established an expedited process for the review of requests for relief from HUD regulatory and/or administrative requirements for public housing agencies (PHAs) and Tribes or tribally designated housing entities (TDHEs) that are located in Texas, U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Florida, and Georgia. In addition, this notice advises that PHAs, Tribes and TDHEs located in areas covered by MDDs issued during the remainder of 2017 may utilize the flexibilities and expedited waiver process set out by this notice.
  - POC: Shelia Bethea, Office of Field Operations, Office of Public and Indian Housing, sheila.bethea@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The notice is circulating for final HUD approvals prior to publication. Publication is anticipated in October.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Notice of Certain Operating Cost Adjustment Factors for 2018

- Description: This notice establishes operating cost adjustment factors (OCAFs) for project-based rental assistance contracts issued under Section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 and renewed under the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 (MAHRA) with an anniversary date on or after February 11, 2018. OCAFs are annual factors used primarily to adjust the rents for contracts renewed under section 515 or section 524 of MAHRA.
- POC: Carisa L. Janis, Program Analyst, Office of Housing, carissa.l.janis@hud.gov
- Anticipated Date of Action: Publication of the notice is anticipated in October.
- Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Navajo Housing Authority
  - Description: After multiple offers and counteroffer's, Navajo Housing Authority (NHA) has offered to repay $26 million from current funds (HUD's previous offer was $31 million, to be repaid from future funds, over a 5-year period). NHA has appealed the administrative law judge's decision to have NHA return $96M in unspent funds to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. A decision from the 9th Circuit would not be expected until FFY 2018. The Court requested mediation discussions.
  - POC: Andrew Hughes, White House Liaison, andrew.hughes@hud.gov

- HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) Notice
  - Description: Public and Indian Housing published the HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) Notice on September 1, 2017 allowing PHAs partnering with their local VA facilities to register their interest in receiving $40M in new awards (approximately 5,500 new HUD-VASH vouchers).
  - POC: Becky Primeaux, Director, Public Housing Management and Occupancy Division, becky.l.primeaux@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: PHAs must express interest by October 31, 2017. Awards are expected in December 2017.
  - Anticipated Process: Vouchers will be allocated to registered PHAs based on their local need and program capacity.

Rep. Beatty grills HUD Secretary Carson on future of FHA mortgage insurance premiums (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(10/15/2017 10:15 AM, Brena Swanson)
Will HUD ever announce a cut to premiums?

During Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson's hearing before the House Financial Services Committee, Rep. Joyce Beatty, D-Ohio, grilled him on the status of Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance premium cuts.

President Donald Trump suspended the reduction of mortgage insurance premiums within the first hours of his presidency, and since then, very little information has come out on if HUD will reinstate the cuts.

The cuts were previously announced just before the Obama administration left office.

In her questioning, Beatty asked Carson if he reviewed a letter sent to him by her and 20 other members of Congress.

"It was requesting that you follow through on your predecessor's decision to lower these annual premiums, citing the fiscal strength of the fund and histrionically low homeownership," said Beatty. The full clip from the hearing is below.

Beatty pressed Carson on why she would get a response to her letter from someone other than him, noting that a different staffer at HUD sent her a response.

She added that that in her opinion, it didn't answer the question.

Carson responded saying he could answer now, but Beatty turned down the request, asking Carson to respond to her letter instead since she had other questions.

However, during other parts of the hearing, Carson did address the increasing health of the FHA's flagship fund, the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund, ever since HUD announced changes to its reverse mortgage program.

Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson indicated he is open to the idea of moving the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage program out of the FHA Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund to stem future losses.

Testifying before the House Financial Services Committee on Thursday, Carson said the changes the department has made recently – as well as those currently under consideration – will eliminate the program's problems although residual issues may linger.

Carson acknowledged that the HECM program's default rate has been a drain on the MMI Fund even though it is much smaller than the FHA's forward loan portfolio.

The recently revised HECM rules have “stopped the bleeding” in terms of new reverse mortgages, he added.

When Ben Carson expressed support for removing the reverse mortgage program from the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund before Congress last week, he became the most prominent voice in a growing call within the industry.

“I think the secretary is very astute on the subject, and separating it out from the MMI fund would certainly allow for better policymaking overall,” Mortgage Bankers Association president and CEO David Stevens told RMD in an interview.

Including the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage in the MMI fund puts the program — along with the Federal Housing Administration’s larger mortgage portfolio — in a difficult position, Stevens said.

While serving as FHA commissioner, Stevens said the arrival of the annual actuarial report in the fall was always a source of anxiety.

Rep. Maxine Waters: ‘Housing Is a Necessary Human Right’ (CNS News)

Rep. Maxine Waters, used a HUD oversight hearing on Oct. 12, 2017 to slam President Trump. Prominent liberals, Sen. Bernie Sanders among them, insist that health care is a human right, and the same can be said about housing, Rep. Maxine Waters said on Thursday.

Waters, the ranking member of the House Financial Services Committee, was among several African-American Democrats on the committee who blasted HUD Secretary Ben Carson as uncaring and incompetent because he supports the Trump administration’s budget cuts.

"In the face of the immense housing needs in our country, President Trump chose Dr. Ben Carson to serve as the head of the Department of Housing and Urban Development," Waters said in her opening statement at the HUD oversight hearing.

Waters and a few other Democrats complained that Carson supports President Trump’s budget, "Which slashes funding for critical housing programs."

Carson told the committee that "Spending more taxpayer dollars does not necessarily create better outcomes."

"We must constantly evaluate our programs to ensure that we are delivering services effectively and efficiently to HUD’s constituents and responding to today’s challenges with the best practices and technologies," the secretary said. Carson added that he’s working to "Reform our programs and remain careful stewards of taxpayer dollars."

Calif. Democrat Tells HUD Secretary to Get Familiar With Procedure for Removing Trump (CNS News)

A California Democrat urged Housing Secretary Ben Carson to get familiar with a provision in the U.S. Constitution that allows for the removal of a president who is declared "Unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office."

Unable so far to get rid of a president they despise, some Democrats and liberal activists, including those in the media, have raised the possibility of declaring Trump unfit for office.

"Beyond your responsibilities for Housing and Urban Development, you have other responsibilities under the Constitution, along with other Cabinet secretaries, particularly Section 4 of the 25th Amendment," Rep. Brad Sherman told Carson on Thursday as the House Financial Services Committee held a HUD oversight hearing.

"And we all live by this Constitution," Sherman continued: "I - the - Section 4 deals with the possibility that a president is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office. Have you taken the time to get legal counsel to brief you on what your responsibility is, as a Cabinet secretary, under the 25th Amendment?" Sherman asked Carson.

"I have not had any in-depth discussions of that," Carson replied.

"I would urge you to do so," Sherman told Carson. "This amendment was written in the early '60s as a result of what we - life that happens, whether it's the dangers that a president faces, whether it's the health problems a president can face." "I would urge you first to get legal counsel, to know what your responsibilities are, and second, to discuss with other Cabinet officers how you would implement Section 4 of the 25th Amendment."

Sherman's time was up, and Carson did not reply.

Just in time for the end of the federal fiscal year (September 30), the HUD Office of Inspector General (OIG) issued a flurry of internal and external audit reports over the last few weeks on a wide variety of topics. They include:

--CDBG disaster grant administration issues, including criticism of HUD's guidance and oversight on procurement matters. Perhaps not so coincidentally, HUD has just published a new procurement guide for CDBG-DR grantees. The OIG also examined the invoice review process prior to disbursal of CDBG-DR by a grantee.

--A critique of HUD's controls over dispositions of CDBG-funded properties

--Several audits of voucher programs administered by housing authorities, including overall HCV administration issues, HQS standards, and project-based voucher administration

--Findings that HUD did not provide sufficient guidance and oversight in connection with FHA-insured loans to ensure that properties receiving FHA mortgage insurance had access to a sufficient supply of lead-free, safe water

--A remote review of housing authority implementation of flat rents. The OIG only reviewed 60 tenant files but extrapolated information found in this limited review to project that there could be over 10,000 undercharged flat rent tenants nationally.

HUD Finds IGs Recommendations On Water Safety Unwarranted (Inside Mortgage Finance)

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has requested its inspector general to reconsider certain recommendations intended to toughen safety standards for drinking water in FHA-insured properties.

Other lenders or appraisers could interpret imposing stringent requirements on a few FHA lenders wrongly, which could lead to unnecessary water testing simply to avoid future litigation risk, HUD warned in its response to audit findings.

HUD disagreed that administrative action is warranted.

Due to potential unintended consequences, does not believe the imposition of sanctions at this time presents a viable alternative, the department wrote.

While making changes to water-safety standards, HUD said it will train lenders and appraisers to ensure compliance with the revised standards.

Not too many people get the opportunity to go bowling at the Harry S. Truman Bowling Alley in the White House. Even fewer people get to bowl with Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner.

A group of Chai Lifeline Mid-Atlantic children did both during an eventful Tuesday Chol Hamoed trip to the White House.

The children, accompanied by case manager Rivkah Flaum, enjoyed an exclusive VIP tour of The White House. Their day began with a meeting with Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Dr. Ben Carson. The group was inspired by the words of Dr. Carson, who is also a renowned pediatric neurosurgeon.

They then enjoyed a VIP tour of the East Wing and the Office of Vice President. After a delicious lunch break and an excursion to the National Museum of Natural History, the Chai Lifeline group headed back to the White House for bowling at the Harry S. Truman Bowling Alley in the White House.

They were surprised by a visit from Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner, who wished the families a Chag Sameach before returning to their responsibilities.

Federal housing dept. says pair discriminated against families with children

The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development has charged an Altoona couple that owns an apartment building in Greenwood with discriminating against families with children in dealing with potential tenants.

Citing the Fair Housing Act, the regional HUD office in Philadelphia has accused Gregory and Katherine Ellis of refusing to rent units on the 1600 block of East Pleasant Valley Boulevard to a series of “testers” posing as parents of children — while making the same units available to potential testers who said they had no children.

An administrative law judge will hear the case, unless one of the parties wants to move it to federal court, according to a HUD news release.

The judge could award damages to the Fair Housing Partnership of Greater Pittsburgh Inc., the original complainant on whose behalf HUD brought the charges; order injunctive relief; order payment of attorneys’ fees and impose civil penalties “to vindicate the public interest,” according to the news release.

[MD] Our say: Public housing in Annapolis passes a crucial turning point (Capital Gazette, MD)
Capital Gazette
(10/15/2017 6:34 AM, Capital Gazette)
Public housing is often talked about in city elections, but the amount of rhetoric has traditionally been inversely proportional to what the city government can actually do about federally owned and managed properties, or to what the mayor and aldermen are willing to try. Not much changes, unless you count the recurring management problems at the Housing Authority for the City of Annapolis or the way the agency’s properties deteriorate. The status quo is finally crumbling, as can be seen in today’s election primer story on the city’s public housing. Incumbent Mayor Mike Pantelides, using the appointment power that is a mayor’s main leverage on public housing policy, has remade the authority’s board: He has nominated six people to the seven-member panel, and five of them are currently serving. Pantelides ordered rental inspections of public housing units - although there is dispute over whether that has done much to improve conditions.

There’s little dispute that the authority board took a dramatic and significant step last week: It voted unanimously to apply for the Rental Assistance Demonstration program, or RAD. Under this steadily expanding five-year-old federal effort, traditional public housing properties are converted to a project-based voucher system that encourages public-private partnerships. Ownership would be transferred to the Housing Authority, which could borrow money against the property for redevelopment. Under the program’s rules, the occupants are still public housing residents and their rents don’t change. "No loss of units, no loss of families," said Housing Authority Executive Director Beverly Wilbourne. The Housing Authority board has been shying away from such innovations for years, even as the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has pushed them harder and harder - while slicing traditional direct subsidies. The RAD program, as local activist Robert Eades put it, is now the only game in town. The Housing Authority is overdue to start playing it.

Congressman Robert Pittenger (NC-09) on Friday announced the Federal Emergency Management Agency will provide North Carolina with an additional $1,391,675.95 to assist with Hurricane Matthew recovery efforts.
This grant will be provided to the N.C. Department of Transportation to reimburse for debris removal and infrastructure repair projects associated with Hurricane Matthew. NCDOT will be responsible for distributing the money to local governments. "We will knock on every door, and try every avenue, to ensure North Carolina receives full and appropriate funding for Hurricane Matthew recovery," said Congressman Pittenger. "I spoke with HUD Secretary Dr. Ben Carson about visiting North Carolina later this year to view the ongoing recovery needs. The media has moved on, but I haven't, and I am committed to seeing this project through."
To date, $1.28 billion in federal funding has been provided for Hurricane Matthew recovery in North Carolina. Much of that money is released to the State of North Carolina, which is then responsible for distributing to affected counties and municipalities.

[MO] New MO Discrimination Law Not Compliant with Federal Standards (KSFX/KOLR-TV FOX 27 Ozarks First, MO)

(10/13/2017 8:43 AM, Jason Taylor, Missourinet)
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -- The U.S. government says a new controversial discrimination law in Missouri fails to meet federal standards.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, or HUD, has determined that protections under the Missouri Human Rights Act are not in compliance with federal standards in the Fair Housing Act.

In a letter dated July 14th to state Human Rights Commission Director Alisa Warren, the agency cites Senate Bill 43, which Governor Eric Greitens signed into law in late June, as the reason for the shortcoming.

The measure stiffened the threshold for proving discrimination in lawsuits. Under the new law, a practice is unlawful if the protected classification - based on race, color, religion, sex or national origin - is "the motivating factor" in a decision to discriminate. Previously, the protected classification needed only to be "a contributing factor" in order to prove discrimination.

In its letter to Director Warren, HUD said the state Human Rights Act must be restored to Fair Housing Act standards by March 1st, 2018, or Missouri will be suspended from participating in the Fair Housing Assistance Program.

In a statement, Missouri House Minority Leader Gail McCann Beatty claimed the state would lose as much as $500,000 a year in federal funding under the new law.

[OH] Walnut Hills residents win lawsuit against HUD (Cincinnati Enquirer, OH)
Cincinnati Enquirer
(10/13/2017 6:04 PM, Monroe Trombly)
Residents of a Walnut Hills apartment complex won in court Thursday against the federal government. A federal judge has granted the residents of a low-income, subsidized apartment complex a preliminary injunction against the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The ruling allows residents to remain living there with their rental subsidies intact after HUD had initially decided to pull the housing assistance. The decision handed down by U.S. District Judge Timothy S. Black, allows the Alms Hill Apartments to remain in state-court appointed receivership instead of possibly becoming a vacant building, until a new purchaser can be found. A federal lawsuit was filed in September on behalf of residents of the Alms Hill Apartments in Walnut Hills by Legal Aid of Greater Cincinnati, after HUD decided to abate, or in other words, pull federal housing subsidies for over 100 families. Read: Walnut Hills residents face losing their affordable housing from HUD. "Tenants in the City of Cincinnati deserve quality, affordable housing," said Virginia Tallent of Legal Aid. "Judge Black's decision affirms the rights of tenants to fair due process in their dealings with the federal government."

HUD had concluded abatement was necessary after deciding the Alms Hill was unsafe for residents to live in. Once HUD starts the process of ending housing assistance, existing housing leases are automatically terminated. HUD had started to secure funds for relocation vouchers in September. Legal Aid feared abatement would push some residents into homelessness, citing Hamilton County's shortage of 40,000 units of affordable housing according to Xavier University's Community Building Institute. Legal Aid lawyers also argued many landlords not only do not accept the re-location housing assistance vouchers issued by HUD but are also not required to accept the vouchers. HUD argued the Alms Hill Apartments has major health and safety problems citing four failed inspections. The best option for the building, HUD argued, was to relocate residents to other affordable housing. Residents at a September meeting unanimously opposed HUD's findings, arguing Milhaus Management, the receiver, has improved conditions markedly. In his decision, Judge Black wrote that "HUD did not identify any current major threat to health or safety in its briefs, at the September 22, 2017 meeting, nor at oral argument."

The ruling keeps HUD from immediately ending its subsidies — and with them, residents' leases — until state courts rule on the Walnut Hills low-income housing

More than 100 residents living in affordable housing at the Alms in Walnut Hills will get to stay in their homes for now. A federal judge yesterday granted a preliminary injunction that keeps the Department of Housing and Urban Development from pulling out of the building.

U.S. District Court Judge Timothy Black's ruling doesn't end the case, but keeps HUD from immediately ending its subsidies - and with them, residents' leases - until state courts rule on the lawsuit against the federal housing department.

That decision is the latest in a long battle to shore up conditions at the former luxury hotel and several other buildings, which a state court placed in receivership with Indianapolis-based developer Milhaus after city inspections found terrible conditions in the properties under New Jersey-based owners PF Holdings. Despite the receivership, HUD moved in July to pull its Housing Assistance Payments, or HAP contract, from the building after it failed several HUD inspections.

The building failed two inspections following Milhaus' receivership, oddly receiving lower scores than when PF Holdings was in control of the building. Most of those failing scores come from vacant units or areas of the building that don't pose a threat to residents documents related to the case suggest.

HUD did not meet with residents before giving notice it was abating its HAP contract with the Alms. Officials did meet with residents last month, but refused to answer questions or give statements about the Alms and the potential loss of housing in the building.

The abatement triggered a lawsuit from the Alms Residents Association, Legal Aid of Greater Cincinnati and the Greater Cincinnati Homeless Coalition.

CINCINNATI -- A federal judge overwhelmingly sided with the residents the Alms Hill Apartments, granting them a preliminary injunction late Thursday that will allow them to stay in their low-income Walnut Hills apartments.

Four longtime residents sued the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development after the agency announced it would end low-income rental subsidies to the complex, which has a long history of neglect.

Residents worried they would become homeless if forced out of the Alms, because the city of Cincinnati has a severe shortage of low-income housing. U.S. District Judge Timothy Black agreed. "Plaintiffs have demonstrated they will be irreparably harmed … abatement will terminate (their) leases and force (them) to search for another residence in a community with a 40,000-unit shortage of affordable housing," Black wrote in his order granting the preliminary injunction. "In all scenarios, Plaintiffs will have to move. However, because landlords are not required to accept housing vouchers and there is already a shortage of affordable housing in Cincinnati, there is a realistic possibility some of the Plaintiffs will become homeless," Black wrote.

It is a huge victory for the residents of the 200-unit complex that is home to mostly African-Americans, many of whom are disabled or elderly. But it is also a win for the Legal Aid Society of Greater Cincinnati, which filed the lawsuit on behalf of Alms residents, and the city of Cincinnati, which sided with the residents and spoke on their behalf at a federal court hearing last week.

“This is a big deal,” Josh Spring, executive director of the Greater Cincinnati Homeless Coalition, wrote in a press release about Black’s decision.

[OH] Mayor: Neighborhoods staff will focus more on lead safety (Toledo Blade, OH)
Toledo Blade
(10/15/2017 4:35 PM, Lauren Lindstrom)
Ms. Hicks-Hudson clarified on Friday that the city inspectors would not issue the “lead-safe certificates” required by the ordinance passed by City Council last year for every rental property with one to four units built before 1978 and home day care centers. That job was given to private inspectors, who are required to be certified as a lead risk assessor or clearance technician through the Ohio Department of Health.

They would, however, be more attentive to lead issues during inspections and direct homeowners to available grants, education, and other resources, she said.

“Part of the mission of the Department of Neighborhoods is to try to help people stay in their homes and make sure homes are safe and healthy,” she said. “We’re looking at every opportunity to create a lead-safe zone in our city.”

She pointed to a nearly $3 million U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development grant the neighborhoods department received in July that will fund lead-related improvements for Toledo properties. It is open to owner-occupied and rental units built before 1978.

(10/14/2017 6:14 AM, Staff)
Santa Fe County will join a lawsuit against the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development over the federal agency’s alleged breach of a contract that the county says cost it a chunk of an annual housing subsidy. In 2012, the department improperly distributed subsidy payments to hundreds of public housing agencies, according to a county resolution authorizing the county manager to join the lawsuit to be filed with the U.S. Court of Federal Claims. County spokeswoman Kristine Mihelcic confirmed this week the county would join. In 2013, more than 300 public housing agencies brought a suit against the HUD over the alleged breach of contract; the federal claims court this year ordered the plaintiffs were owed more than $136 million, which would average to roughly $450,000 each. The improper distribution of the subsidy affected all public housing agencies across the nation, the county resolution states, but not all joined the first lawsuit, including Santa Fe County. The county’s housing authority, which manages public housing units and housing-choice voucher programs, lost out on $234,000 it should have received from the federal department that year, Mihelcic said.

Hurricane Sandy sprung to life in the central Caribbean on Oct. 22, 2012, more than 1,600 miles from New York, probably not much on any Long Islander’s radar.

It drove north, strafing the eastern edge of Jamaica and Cuba and cutting through the Bahamas, killing dozens along the way. By the time it steamed into the Atlantic Ocean, forecasters said it likely was headed north and west where it would eventually dissipate. Its winds had even started to slow.

But on Oct. 27, it took a startling left turn that would change the course of local history.

When the downgraded storm slammed the shores of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut two days later, it arrived at high tide, creating record storm surges. It also had spread into the largest Atlantic storm by diameter.

The FHA has updated its guidelines for Home Equity Conversion Mortgage for Purchase loans to allow lenders to accept loan applications from borrowers without requiring a certificate of occupancy, as well as prior to completion of HECM counseling.

The change follows the Sept. 19 effective date of the HECM final rule, which the Department of Housing and Urban Development released earlier this year.

The final rule codifies the many policies that are now in place for originating and servicing reverse mortgages, including H4P requirements.

According to the revised guideline, an FHA lender may take an initial HECM loan application either prior to or after the completion of HECM counseling.

HUD Dumps Lender Insight for New Loan Review Summary Report (Inside Mortgage Finance)

The Department of Housing and Urban Development is discontinuing its quarterly newsletter, Lender Insight, with the implementation of FHAs Loan Review System.

The change is aimed at improving both FHAs and lenders quality-control and risk-management operations.

HUD will be publishing a quarterly Loan Review Summary Report to provide a snapshot of the results of FHAs quality-control review of mortgage originations over the preceding 12 months.

According to HUD, the report will include only underwritten loans that were subject to a post-endorsement technical review.

It does not include the results of lenders self-reports or any other loans that were reviewed as part of a lender examination, the agency said.

The report will show the initial rating of all loans, the updated rating six months from the end of the review period, and a final rating.

For older consumers keen to preserve their savings, report offers a helping hand (Tampa Tribune, FL)
Tampa Tribune
(10/13/2017 6:46 AM, Robert Trigaux)
Now that I am officially an "older" consumer — at least based on this report's criteria — I can offer firsthand confirmation that predatory lending and a poorly monitored debt collection industry are both alive and well in Florida.

That's why a 35-page report issued Thursday — Older Consumers in the Financial Marketplace — that looks at financial complaints filed by folks 62 and older to the federal Consumer Financial Protection Bureau resonates more to me now than it might have a decade ago.

The report analyzes specific complaints sent to the CFPB from older consumers nationwide. It's no shock that the 8,469 complaints from older Florida consumers was second in volume only to the 10,986 from California, a state with nearly twice the population of this one.

The CFPB was established in 2011 as a federal response to consumers needing more help dealing with volatile and often unfriendly financial markets and firms. Now that the economy has strengthened and the Dow has rebounded dramatically, trading this past week above 22,000, the Trump administration is eager to do away with or at least sideline the influence of the CFPB via newly proposed legislation.

This report aims, in part, to justify the value and preserve the clout of the CFPB for consumers. But that's a political agenda for another story. The latest report also has valuable insights for older consumers dealing with their financial affairs. Among the report's key findings:

> Mortgages, notably existing mortgages, account for 31 percent of complaints by older consumers.
>
> Among older consumers, 5 percent of mortgage complaints relate to reverse mortgages, loans solely available to older consumers that allow them to use their home equity as security. Understanding reverse mortgages can be tricky. Remember those TV ads with spokesmen like Fred Thompson and Tom Selleck earnestly pitching reverse mortgages? The CFPB has taken action against reverse mortgage companies (including the one featuring these actors) for misleading consumers about risks.

[NJ] Gianficaro: That's no way to treat a veteran (Burlington County Times, NJ)
Burlington County Times
(10/16/2017 5:32 AM, Phil Gianficaro)
A veteran deserves better than this. He deserves better than to be hanging onto his foreclosing home in North Hanover by 93-year-old fingers that bravely yet nervously clutched the sides of his seat during bombing missions in World War II and Korea. He deserves better than to be old, alone, permanently disabled, and perhaps losing his house as well as his hearing.

Walter Perry, disabled Army Air Corps veteran, deserves better than to be told he will be evicted from his home for failure to pay insurance on his property as well as property taxes, thereby violating the conditions of a reverse mortgage he and his late wife secured in 2004, triggering foreclosure last year.

The Burlington County Times reported Perry's painful plight last week, when only an emergency hearing before Judge Kathi Fiamingo at the Olde Courthouse in Mount Holly, at which a 60-day stay of the eviction was granted, prevented county sheriff's officers from reluctantly putting the veteran and all that he owned on the street. His world exploding around him, like so many of those bombing missions on which he flew as a member of the Army Air Corps and Air Force when America needed him most. Reciprocation would only be fair.

The years pass, the memory fades. Information once processed in an instant now lags, like sucking quicksand through a straw. Perry said he didn't realize he was being evicted on Tuesday until just after midnight that day. He claimed he paid his taxes on the reverse mortgage agreement prior to 2010, but court records indicate taxes went unpaid for three of those years. He told the court on Tuesday he couldn't recall if he responded to the foreclosure complaint. From quick to quicksand.

Comes on the heels of Ginnie Mae opening investigation

Roughly one month ago, Ginnie Mae announced that it was launching an investigation into mortgage lenders that were aggressively targeting servicemembers and military veterans for quick and potentially risky refinances of their mortgages.

The investigation came on the heels of a letter from Sen. Elizabeth Warren, D-Massachusetts, who cited a report from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, which covered complaints received from veterans about Department of Veterans Affairs mortgage refinancing.

Warren's letter claimed that there may be lenders "aggressively and misleadingly marketing the refinancing of mortgages backed by the Department of Veterans Affairs, generating fees for themselves at the expense of veterans and American taxpayers."

Now, Ginnie Mae and the VA are launching a task force to "address mortgage refinancing issues" surrounding VA loans.

Ginnie Mae and the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs have teamed up on a new initiative to focus on problems related to mortgage refinancing for retired military personnel. The Joint Ginnie Mae-VA Refinance Loan Task Force is tasked with examining the issues, data and lender behavior related to refinancing and will determine if program or policy changes are required to prevent undue risk being placed on the veterans receiving the refinancing or the taxpayers funding the refinancing. The task force will place a specific focus on aggressive and misleading refinancing propositions identified by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and will address questionable practices including loan churning and repeated refinancing. Ginnie Mae and VA plans to meet with individual lenders that may be engaged in inappropriate refinancing solutions. In a statement, the agencies promised to "continue to work collaboratively until concrete solutions have been implemented to eliminate lender behavior that is unhelpful to veterans and harmful to the American taxpayer."

Ginnie Mae and the VA this week officially announced a joint-agency task force to deal with the loan-churning problem that is triggering faster prepayments in Ginnie mortgage-backed securities pools.

Specifically, the task force will scrutinize aggressive and misleading refinancing offers and address loan churning and repeated refinancings.

It will also examine critical issues, data and lender behaviors related to refinancing loans, as well as determine the kind of policy and program changes agencies should make to ensure VA refi loans do not pose an undue risk or burden to vets and taxpayers.

Both the VA and Ginnie Mae programs work best when market participants use them to provide a benefit to VA borrowers and, ultimately, lower vets costs, officials said.

The task force has begun examining data and information to ensure refi loans provide net tangible benefits to veteran-borrowers.

Ginnie Mae issuers rode a wave of purchase-mortgage lending to deliver $120.46 billion of forward mortgages during the third quarter of 2017, the highest three-month volume for the year, according to a new analysis and ranking by Inside FHA/VA Lending.

Third-quarter volume was up 9.6 percent from the April-June cycle.

The data excluded FHA reverse mortgages and loan amounts are truncated in Ginnies mortgage-backed securities disclosures.

Without those limitations, total Ginnie MBS issuance rose 9.5 percent to $123.37 billion in the third quarter.

Purchase mortgages were the engine behind the growth.

Ginnie issuers securitized $85.35 billion of purchase loans in the third quarter, falling just short of the record $85.41 billion set in the third quarter of last year.

The Mortgage Bankers Association said it is open to a rewrite of homeowner tax breaks as part of a broader reform package, adding to the political momentum in support of a mortgage tax credit.

The MBA position comes days after the National Association of Home Builders broke ranks with the real estate industry to endorse changes to the mortgage interest deduction, a tax break that for decades has been considered untouchable.

"The mortgage interest deduction is important, but if there are other alternatives, we are open to them," MBA President David Stevens told POLITICO. "In isolation, we would fight against modification to the mortgage interest deduction very hard," Stevens said. In the context of broader reform, "We want to remain open-minded and involved in those proposals. If there's a trade-off that gets you ultimately to the same outcome, we're open to it."

In a letter to House and Senate leaders, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and National Economic Council Director Gary Cohn, the MBA said a White House tax framework released last month gives policymakers "a tangible opportunity to pursue alternative homeownership tax incentives - and perhaps target those benefits more efficiently to low- to moderate-income borrowers."

That reform outline would raise the standard tax deduction, making the mortgage interest deduction less valuable to low- and moderate-income homeowners. Fewer of those homeowners would have an incentive to itemize their returns, and more benefits of the tax break would flow to higher-income households.

With mortgage bankers and builders splitting off, the National Association of Realtors is the last big trade group fully committed to defending the $70 billion mortgage interest deduction. The group has 1.2 million members and the country's biggest political action committee, funneling nearly $4 million to candidates this election cycle.

Advocates for increased spending on low-income housing, including the J. Ronald Terwilliger Foundation and the National Low Income Housing Coalition, have taken aim at the mortgage interest deduction as unfairly benefiting wealthier households.

Several fiscal reform groups, including the Simpson-Bowles commission, have endorsed replacing the interest deduction with a tax credit.

The government pays more to rich homeowners than poor renters (Inman Real Estate News)

Housing subsidies are going to wealthy homeowners at nearly twice the rate of low income renters

The United States government spends nearly twice the amount on housing subsidies that favor the rich over the section 8 housing program for low income Americans, a new report finds—$71 billion compared to $29.9 billion in 2015, the report from the website Apartment List found.

As the country heads towards a likely partisan debate over major changes in the tax code, a new report finds the mortgage interest deduction (MID)–which would remain essentially untouched–disproportionately favors affluent Americans. Under President Donald Trump's tax reform plan, the the standard deduction would be doubled, and other itemized deductions would be eliminated.

One reason could be that the richest Americans are far more likely to benefit from MID.

Andrew Woo, director of data science and growth and Chris Salvanti, a housing economist – both at Apartment List – compared federal expenditures on the MID to spending on Section 8 rental assistance programs in the report. They found that MID cost the federal government $71 billion, compared to $29.9 billion funding for Section 8, in 2015.

“While administration officials, lawmakers, industry executives and housing experts fiercely debate the future of the home mortgage deduction, lost in the argument is the fact that the political battle centers on issues relevant primarily to wealthier homeowners, while disregarding the unmet needs of lower income renters,” the report states. “The debate overlooks remedies for the deeply underfunded Section 8 rent subsidy program that helps some of the country’s poorest Americans.”

A main reason that MID benefits wealthier Americans, is simply how often that box is checked on a tax filing.

The report found that 53 percent of high income households took the deduction, while 20 percent of middle-income households and only 11 percent of low-income households received MID or assistance through the federal government’s section 8 program.

High-income individuals are more likely to own more than one home, the report finds, while low income individuals are more likely to file for a standard deduction. If the tax plan doubles the standard deduction or even increases it at all, it becomes likely even fewer low-income individuals will receive MID.

The lopsided percentages are apparent in total expenditures as well, with federal spending on housing averaging $1,549 for high income households, $222 for middle income households and $416 for low income households.

[NY] Housing nonprofits offer downpayment help for first-time homebuyers (Buffalo News, NY)
Buffalo News
(10/13/2017 9:14 AM, Jonathan D. Epstein)
Two housing nonprofits in Buffalo and Rochester have teamed up to offer $1.2 million in downpayment assistance for first-time homebuyers in Erie and Monroe counties.

Under the Project Reinvest: Homeownership program, West Side Neighborhood Housing Services in Buffalo and NeighborWorks Rochester will offer up to $10,500 in no-interest deferred grants to eligible homebuyers to help them buy their first homes in target areas of the two counties. To qualify, homebuyers must earn at or below the area median income for their county, and must be purchasing in a community development financial institution investment area.

“For people whose American dream of owning their own home might have been just out of reach, Project Reinvest Homeownership will give them the opportunity to build wealth and a brighter future,” said Ed Jackson, executive director of West Side NHS.

Interested applicants should contact one of the participating partner lenders, including Evans Bank, Five Star Bank and Northwest Bank in Erie County. Five Star and Northwest, along with Canandaigua national Bank, are the partners in Monroe County.

[NY] Long Island Communities Offer Incentives To First-Time Home Buyers (CBS New York, NY)

(10/13/2017 4:45 AM, Staff)
With thousands of dollars in debt, rising home prices and paychecks that aren’t keeping pace, millennials say they need help to move out of their parents’ basements. As CBS2’s Jennifer McLogan reports, some Long Island communities are now offering incentives to first-time home buyers. Amanda Smith had to find creative ways to afford the biggest purchase of her life - a four bedroom house in Huntington Station. Smith, who advocates for the disabled, and her newlywed husband Kevin, a school teacher, discovered loans and grants that added tens of thousands of dollars to their budgets. "We worked with our mortgage broker early on to find exactly what the best moves were for us, as far as paying off a credit card or a car that we were financing to get the best loan rate and have the lowest monthly payments," she said. Since 2000, home prices on Long Island have risen more than twice as fast as wages.

"For the millennials, especially student loans and things, they are not familiar with how this process works. I think there is a lot of hand holding involved," said Emilia Pizzo, with Daniel Gale Sotheby’s Realty. "And I think getting a preapproval early on in the process is really important." Lenders and not-for-profit groups are trying to help first-time home buyers, like the Dusling family. Additional costs of mortgage taxes and insurance can price millennials right out of the market. "We were able to find the grossest house in the nicest neighborhood and buy it at bottom dollar, because it needed everything," Shaughnessy Dusling said. She and her husband Brett got a loan through the Federal Housing Authority. "The FHA gave us what is called a 203k rehab loan. We tied all of our construction costs into our mortgage," she said. A bill allowing first-time home buyers to create savings accounts that would give them a state income tax deduction, similar to college savings accounts, has passed both houses. The bill, titled First Home Savings Program, is now under review in the governor's office and could become law by December.

[PA] Ryan's big lie (Scranton Times & Tribune, PA)
Scranton Times & Tribune
(10/13/2017 9:38 AM, Scranton Times & Tribune Editorial Board)
House Speaker Paul Ryan hasn't been able to convince many of his members, mostly from big Eastern states, that the tax bill he and President Trump favor would be a boon to the middle class.

That didn't stop him from appearing Wednesday at a right-wing think tank and repeating the lie at the heart of those members' opposition.

According to Ryan, the rest of the country is "propping up profligate, big-government states." The reference is to the federal income tax deductions for mortgage interest and state and local taxes, all of which Ryan's plan would eliminate. In states with personal income taxes and local property taxes, eliminating the targeted deductions would cause chaos for state and local government, the housing market and the economy.

The theory is that the mortgage interest deduction primarily benefits more affluent people, and the local and state deductions enable state and local governments to diminish the impact of high state and local taxes.

The "profligate, big-government states" he's referring to, not coincidentally, are mostly majority-Democratic states.

[PA] Program guarantees 100 new houses in Pittston City (Times Leader, PA)
Times Leader
(10/16/2017 1:14 AM, Tony Callaio)
PITTSTON — Former Pittston City mayor Mike Lombardo announced a new housing initiative to build 100 new homes in Pittston, creating a housing boom that hasn't been seen since the 1960s.

Lombardo, who sits on the city Redevelopment Authority Board, made the announcement of the 100 Houses Initiative at a ribbon cutting ceremony of Stauffer Pointe's new Pittston Patio Ranch home located at Grandview Drive. Stauffer Point is a 180-lot development with 40 lots in Pittston and the remainder in Pittston Twp.

"I want to thank Angelo (Terrana) and Armand (Mascioli) and their families on making a significant investment, not only here in the future of Pittston City, but also with our neighbors in Pittston Twp. and Hughestown. We need to start thinking regionally," Lombardo said. Terrana and Mascioli are co-developers of Stauffer Pointe.

The 100 Houses Initiative guarantees 100 new houses being built in Pittston City over the next four years with 40 of those homes tied into the Stauffer Pointe project.

[GA] Feds: Ga. foreclosure program soaked up admin fees and failed needy (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, GA)

(10/13/2017 2:00 PM, Willoughby Mariano)
A state-run program to save struggling homeowners from foreclosure was so mismanaged that it has awarded only a portion of the $370 million that it was supposed to give to Georgia residents, according to an audit released Friday by a federal watchdog agency.

The Department of Community Affairs was warned by federal watchdogs 25 times in five years that its HomeSafe Georgia program failed to help residents quickly enough. The department "Slow walked" the aid, paying itself $32 million in administrative fees as it turned down worthy applicants, the report by the Office of the Inspector General for the Troubled Asset Relief Program states.

This inaction helped slow the state's housing market recovery after the Great Recession, it said. Other states have already spent all of their assistance funds. The report singled out problems in the Atlanta area, where DCA turned down 6,200 Clayton, DeKalb and Fulton county applicants.

U.S. Rep. John Lewis, who requested the audit, called the results "a shame and a disgrace." "We have all of these dollars that have not been spent in metro Atlanta, in DeKalb and Clayton and Fulton counties," Lewis said.

Department of Community Affairs spokeswoman MaryBrown Sandys defended HomeSafe, saying it spent taxpayer funds responsibly and improved its services over time.

[FL] Which is best, to rent or buy a home? That depends on a host of variables (Herald Tribune, FL)
Herald Tribune.com
(10/15/2017 11:53 AM, Chris Wille)
Website offers free interactive tools that can help in the rent versus buy question

For generation after generation, home ownership stood as one of the pinnacles of the American Dream. There was little if any downside. Properties appreciated in value. Mortgages, for the most part, provided the security of a stable payment without the rental rate and eviction whims of a landlord. Owners enjoyed total freedom to modify and improve their residences.

When the over-inflated real estate market crashed in 2007, home prices nosedived and saddled mortgage-holders with negative equity, i.e. homeowners owed more on their mortgages than the value of the home. Foreclosure and short sales flooded the residential market as homeowners defaulted on residential loans. The rental market looked like a lot safer bet than home ownership. Millions of households that lost their homes turned to leasing a residence.

Impressive real estate market gains signal a healthy comeback. With home prices rising once again and the property inventory low enough to indicate this is a sellers' market with few exceptions, optimism abounds. More than 4,100 mortgage-holders in Sarasota and Manatee counties recouped sufficient equity to overcome their underwater status, a second-quarter report from data source CoreLogic states. But another 13,999 property owners remain upside-down on their mortgages, holding debt from lost home values.

[LA] Louisiana Congressional delegation united in skirmishes over National Flood Insurance Program (Baton Rouge Advocate, LA)

WASHINGTON — After a series of skirmishes over changes to the National Flood Insurance Program, Louisiana's congressional delegation is showing a united front as negotiations heat up on Capitol Hill over a long-term reauthorization of the program.

An emergency package of federal disaster funding, which sailed through the U.S. House of Representatives on Thursday and is now awaiting action in the Senate, has bolstered their hand by defusing a potential showdown over the NFIP's borrowing cap. The bill would wipe away $16 billion of the NFIP's debt, freeing up cash to pay billions of new claims from hurricanes Harvey, Irma, Maria and Nate.

Without the debt forgiveness, the NFIP was hurtling toward insolvency, with its cash reserves exhausted and no permission from Congress to borrow more money. A number of staffers and members of Louisiana's congressional delegation had worried that fiscal hawks on the other side of the bargaining table — who've pushed for substantial changes to the NFIP that would hike rates and limit access to coverage — would use the program's dire financial straits to extract concessions.

Instead, Republican leaders in the House decided to provide debt relief without any strings attached.

[OH] Banking & Finance Its a Scam: Land Contracts on Uninhabitable Houses (Youngstown Business Journal, OH)
Youngstown Business Journal
(10/14/2017 1:26 PM, George Nelson)
YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio - The visual might be comical if it weren't so sad. Behind the disintegrating front porch roof at 226 E. Lucius Ave., on the front door hangs a sign advising that the property has been winterized.

Just a few yards away, a tree grows through an attached trellis.

The house, owned by Vision Property Management, a South Carolina company, provided the backdrop Friday for a news conference to outline legislation introduced by state Rep. Michele Lepore-Hagan to regulate land contracts.

Vision, along with Harbour Portfolio Advisors in Texas and other out-of-town firms, own properties in Youngstown and elsewhere in the Mahoning Valley. Many of these properties are under land contracts that critics say offer predatory terms.

"Companies have swooped into Ohio and other states devastated by the collapse of the housing market, bought homes for pennies on the dollar, inflated the values of the homes, then enticed borrowers into entering into a high-interest, long-term loan that they have little if any chance of ever repaying," Lepore-Hagan said.

"They employ a series of predatory tactics and practices," said Ian Beniston, executive director of Youngstown Neighborhood Development Corp. "They require the occupant - the vendee - to make all of the repairs and they charge interest rates well above market, into the double digits." The companies also inflate the values, selling a property they bought for $3,000 for $30,000.

"These companies are picking up on the wreckage of the foreclosure crisis, buying properties and using unregulated predatory practices to take advantage of people, particularly low-income people," he continued.

"They target minority neighborhoods the most."

Beniston and YNDC brought the issue to Lepore-Hagan's attention.

YNDC, which has repaired homes for low-income homeowners for the past few years, discovered many homeowners who contacted the organization for assistance didn't actually own their properties and were in a land contract, with the property legally still in the company's name.

The problem is throughout the Midwest and beyond, and locally is not confined to Youngstown, Beniston said.

Anyone with critical home-repair issues and a tight budget could be eligible to take advantage of the Housing Rehabilitation Program. The program has loans available for home improvements to income-qualified homeowners. Stipulations include that qualifying properties must be owner-occupied and have enough equity to meet loan guidelines. The maximum amount of a loan through this program is $25,000, and no monthly payments are required. The loan is ultimately repaid from proceeds of the home's sale. An interest rate of 4 percent accrues the first four years, and no interest accrues after that. Applications for a loan may also be received through Garrett Jensen at the Mid-Willamette Valley Council of Governments, 588-6177.City officials note that funds for the program come from a Community Development Block Grant through the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

[CA] Coto de Caza man admits to money laundering and fraud in $2 million home loan scam (Orange County Register, CA)
Orange County Register
(10/13/2017 9:33 PM, Sean Emery)
A Coto de Caza man who promised hundreds of homeowners that he would save their homes from foreclosure before bilking them out of more than $2 million pleaded guilty Friday to money laundering and fraud charges. Kevin Frank Rasher, 46, was sentenced to 12 years in prison after pleading guilty in Orange County Superior Court to 49 counts of money laundering and one count of preparing a false or fraudulent tax return. Less than a month ago, Rasher was sentenced to 8 years in federal prison after pleading guilty to a dozen counts of mail fraud. The two sentences will run concurrently, with Rasher expected to serve his time in federal lockup, Orange County District Attorney's Office spokeswoman Michelle Van Der Linden said. Both state and federal prosecutors say Rasher preyed on more than 500 struggling homeowners by promising to help reduce their mortgage payments. Among the ways in which he reached his victims were video clips posted on YouTube.

Rasher - who at times falsely claimed to be an attorney or an official with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development - convinced his victims to send their payments directly to him. He used his victims' money to bankroll an estimated $20,000 in monthly expenses, federal prosecutors said, including rent on his Coto de Casa home. According to the Orange County District Attorney's Office, Rasher laundered the money through two unnamed financial institutions. At least three of his victims lost their homes, the D.A.'s Office said. During his federal sentencing last month, Rasher apologized to his victims, telling them he was "fully remorseful to all who have had any pain or suffering for my actions." Several victims who attended that hearing said they doubted his sincerity, accusing him of betraying them and causing them to lose homes they had spent a lifetime saving for.

[CT] New Haven residents air concerns to developers over Duncan Hotel sale (New Haven Register, CT)
New Haven Register
(10/13/2017 6:27 AM, Esteban L. Hernandez)
Developers have set a tentative deadline for relocation by Nov. 11, or Veterans Day, which AJ Capital Partners President Timothy G. Franzen said was a "embarrassing and horrific oversight." Some tenants, including Szelest, are veterans.

Szelest said it was "inappropriate" to ask tenants to leave by Nov. 11, to which Franzen later said is a date that could be changed to the following Monday or Tuesday. Szelest has since relocated to a new neighborhood, though he described it as an unsafe place.

"This is unacceptable," Szelest said. "There is no real affordable housing in New Haven now that the Duncan is gone."

Residents repeatedly requested a public hearing on the hotel's sale, which has already been finalized. Developers simply said this was not necessary, though they had requested a meeting with community management teams at Wooster Square and Dwight. AJ Capital is also covering moving expenses and security deposits.

[NH] Rock n Birch Campground set to close in two weeks, but some tenants aren't ready (Concord Monitor, NH)
Concord Monitor
(10/14/2017 6:15 AM, By Leah Willingham)
Seven years ago, Dana Colburn Jr. was in a financial tight spot. He was looking for a place to live, and he said the town of Henniker welfare office suggested Rock 'n' Birch Campground. "They told us, 'There's a cheap place over there. Go and see the owner, Ray, he'll put you up,' " Colburn remembered. "A lot of people who needed it were sent here by the town." Over time, Colburn built a life at Rock 'n' Birch - he made relationships with neighbors, raised a family and planted a sprawling vegetable garden. Now, Henniker officials are telling Rock 'n' Birch tenants they need to leave. The town has argued that Rock 'n' Birch is only zoned as a recreational campground, and not intended for year-round use, an argument the campground's owner, Ray Panetta, has fought for years. In May 2016, Panetta settled with the town and agreed to close the campground from November to April 30. The problem is, many of those who live at Rock 'n' Birch full-time can't afford to live anywhere else and have nowhere to go.

Cindy Estabrook of the New Hampshire Campground Owner's Association said very few campgrounds are open all four seasons. The most popular time for campgrounds to be open, according to the association's website, is May to October. Only 10 of 140 of campground members listed on the N.H. Campground Association website advertised openings during winter months. When people live in a campground year-round, it produces challenges for a town. A campground cannot be used as a personal address, therefore people who reside there full-time are not considered residents; they are technically homeless. If there's a silver lining to all of this, it's that Rock 'n' Birch residents have had some time to prepare, said Stephanie Bray, managing attorney and foreclosure project director for New Hampshire Legal Assistance.

[NY] NIMBYs are killing New York's future (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News
(10/16/2017 5:27 AM, Robert Mascali)
New York has lived through many periods when the future of our city seemed in serious jeopardy. There was the Great Depression of 1929; the city's near insolvency in the 1970s; the tragedy and violence of the terrorist attack of 9/11, and the mortgage disaster of 2008, where homes and jobs were lost, resulting in the Great Recession.

At this juncture of our history in 2017 there is a disease that is quietly spreading among our neighborhoods and our elected officials that could result in tens of thousands of New Yorkers being left with no place to live.

That disease is NIMBYism, the not-in-my-backyard resistance to getting almost anything built in a city that can and must continue to meet the needs of a growing population.

Neighborhoods resist the possibility of new jails that would be needed to close the facilities at Rikers Island. They resist new public spaces. They resist new homeless shelters.

[NJ] Affordable housing focus of Park Ridge debate (North Jersey.com, NJ)
North Jersey.com
(10/13/2017 6:20 AM, Sarah Nolan)
PARK RIDGE – Affordable housing was the pivotal issue at a debate for mayor and council candidates Thursday, but there was little dispute – participants agreed that a top priority should they be elected would be keeping overdevelopment out of Park Ridge in order to maintain the borough's "small-town" charm.

Mayor Keith Misciagna is seeking re-election on the Democratic ticket along with incumbent Councilman Michael Mintz and newcomer Tom Farinaro. The "Park Ridge United" team will face off against Republicans Keri Cooper and Donna Szot for council and incumbent councilman, Richard Bosi, for mayor.

The League of Women Voters moderated the debate Thursday night, posing questions from residents to the candidates, running the gamut from the approved downtown redevelopment project and the town's affordable housing obligations, to taxes and pedestrian safety.

As Park Ridge works to present a plan for affordable housing that the state Superior Court will find acceptable, many questioned the candidates' stance on a proposed agreement for the soon-to-be-vacant Sony property, which the council ultimately voted down earlier this year.

[NJ] Suit: Fort Lee luxury towers need affordable units (North Jersey.com, NJ)

(10/13/2017 6:37 AM, Micahel W. Curley Jr.)
FORT LEE — A housing rights organization is suing the developers of The Modern to make them set aside apartments as affordable housing.

The developers agreed in 2012 to meet any affordable housing obligations stemming from the development of the two towers, but have not yet met those obligations, the suit says.

"It's particularly important because this is one of the biggest luxury housing developments in New Jersey history," said Anthony Campisi, a representative of Fair Share Housing Center, which filed the suit in September.

The two towers stand in sight of the George Washington Bridge, near the Hudson Lights mall and rental complex. They offer luxury apartments near New York City, some of which rent for $7,000 a month, Campisi said.

[PA] 40 years later, N.J. courts, towns still wrestling with 'affordable' housing (Philly.com, PA)
Philly.com
(10/13/2017 6:46 PM, Maddie Hanna)
A six-lane highway lined with strip malls cuts through a patchwork of tamed lawns and suburban houses in Delran, where population has sprouted rapidly in recent decades.

The township, which has close to 17,000 residents in about 6,000 housing units, is nearly built-out with "Less than half a dozen properties" available for multiple new housing units, according to Gary Catrambone, the township council president.

Actually, Delran needs to accommodate more than 700 residences - for low- and middle-income New Jerseyans - contends the Fair Share Housing Center, which has sued the township alleging it is undermining its ability to fulfill the Mount Laurel affordable-housing requirements.

The dispute has been tense in Delran, with one resident complaining at a public meeting, "Next thing you know they're going to say, 'Hey get out of your house, we got a poor person that wants your house.'".

It is a variation of a debate that has played out in hundreds of towns across the state over the Mount Laurel requirements, the subject of decades of New Jersey court cases that required communities to accommodate housing that lower- and middle-income households could afford.

"I don't think anyone would describe affordable housing policy in the state in the last 10 years as reasonable or rational," said Mike Cerra, assistant executive director of the New Jersey State League of Municipalities.

After years without enforcement of those requirements - stalling development of new housing - the New Jersey Supreme Court in a sweeping decision in January ruled that towns had to retroactively act on 16 years of accrued housing needs.

The court's ruling didn't define exactly how many homes each community owed, spurring town-by-town negotiations - and in some cases battles in communities like Delran, among the more than 150 municipalities that have not yet settled for varying reasons.

In a town where the median income is $90,500, the prospect of hundreds of new housing units for lower-income residents generates fears that include new burdens on schools and increased taxes. "If you're a lazy SOB and you don't want to work, you don't deserve squat, period," Bob Gilbert, a Delran resident, told the township council at an August meeting.

Housing advocates say the fight in Delran demonstrates the need for the precedent-setting rulings that began when New Jersey's high court declared the township of Mount Laurel's zoning practices unconstitutional in 1975.

[NC] Why can't we live together? (Durham Herald-Sun, NC

(10/13/2017 10:24 AM, Jesse James DeConto)
When I bought my house in Walltown eight years ago, I had to give up my spot on the waiting list for a subsidized home with the Community Home Trust, formerly Orange Community Housing and Land Trust.

I was working full time for McClatchy Newspapers out of the old Chapel Hill News office on Franklin Street, what is now Topo Distillery. As a reporter, I had covered the development of the eco-friendly condos at Greenbridge, just down the block from my office. Some of those condos were on the market for nine figures, and with a Home Trust subsidy, I could live there for about $150,000. As a single father making about $35,000 a year, the program was tailor-made for someone like me.

Access to cutting-edge energy systems like solar or geothermal are usually unattainable for working-class people, so I was pretty excited. Still, as convenient as those condos would have been to my office, I had found my life shifting to Durham. Most of my friends were here, my future spouse, and Durham offered its own kind of subsidy – that is, the homes were simply cheaper. I mean, I did literally receive a special $30,000 second-mortgage at 2 percent interest through the city's Neighborhood Incentive Program for buying in a lower-income neighborhood. But most of the "subsidy" came from simply living in Durham. My house cost $176,000 and would easily have sold for more than twice that in Chapel Hill or Carrboro.

Scott Seckinger, Southport Financial Services vice president, did not immediately respond to inquiries from the News Journal seeking comment on the potential development of the site. Based on figures from its website, the company has developed, acquired, renovated or managed 183 properties in 19 states since its launch in 1995. The bulk of its assets are in the Southeast.

The website further states that the company has developed more than 90 properties through the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Low-Income Housing Tax Credit. The tax credit helps defray the cost of acquiring, rehabilitating or constructing lower-income housing.

It is unknown if Southport Financial Services intends to build low-income housing, known as Section 8, at the site on West Cervantes Street. Its website indicates its focus has shifted to developments geared toward varying income levels.

"While maintaining a strong focus on developing and rehabilitating government subsidized housing, Southport is also expanding its portfolio of conventional multi-family housing properties in central Florida and throughout select cities in the southeastern United States," the website states.

There are plans to build at least 88 affordable rental apartments on three acres of land at the corner of Lemon Avenue and Ninth Street in the Rosemary District of Sarasota. It's a former housing sight that has been cleared for years. "Not only do we not have a lot of affordable rental housing in greater Sarasota, but we certainly have a lack of it, an acute shortage of it near downtown where many of the jobs are down on the urban core," said William Russell, President and CEO of the Sarasota Housing Authority. Maxwell Garrabrant lives in a development right next to where this new affordable housing would be built. "I think it's a good thing for the community because I know a lot of people that I grew up with they can't even afford to live in this town anymore," said Garrabrant. Rafael Mercado has lived on 7th Street in the Rosemary District for more than a dozen years. He tells us the area has experienced tremendous growth and he says this affordable housing complex would be a welcome addition to the neighborhood.

[TN] Low-Income Housing Tax Credits will allow renovation of two Sneedville apartment complexes (Rogersville Review, TN)
Rogersville Review
(10/13/2017 8:30 AM, Staff)
Tennessee Housing Development Agency has awarded Low Income Housing Tax Credits to a pair of projects that will help improve the quality and extend the availability of existing affordable housing for residents of Hancock County. The allocation represents an investment of approximately $8.9 million in equity in Hancock County over the next decade. The THDA Board of Directors recently approved LIHTC credit awards that will facilitate the rehabilitation of Cumberland View Apartments and Mountain View Apartments, both of which are located in Sneedville. Atlanta-based Hallmark Co. was awarded $287,915 in tax credits over 10-year period to rehabilitate the Mountain View property, while Paladin was awarded $600,000 to redevelop Cumberland View. THDA Executive Director Ralph M. Perrey said the LIHTC program plays an important role in the preservation of affordable housing in Tennessee.

These awards complement Project 95 which was announced in July as a multi-departmental project that combines state and federal resources to create a holistic solution for Hancock County, which for the past number of years has ranked at or near the bottom of Tennessee counties in almost all major economic indicators. Alongside federal and local partners, the State will construct an approximately 17,000-square-foot facility in the Hancock Co. Industrial Park, designed for a call center operation, provide tourism assistance to develop a motorcycle trail, facilitate an anti-drug coalition, assist with workforce development and coordinate a health initiative for the community. The Mountain View property, had its first tax credit allocation awarded in 1990 and was built in 1991. Construction on the renovation is scheduled to start in Jan. 2018 with an expected completion date of Sept. 2018. When complete, Mountain View will feature 45 newly-remodeled units. The Cumberland View Apartments were originally built with HUD financing and placed into service in 1983 as a Section 8-based development. The allocation of tax credits will allow the developer to overhaul the property's 51 units. The property will still accept HUD Housing Choice Vouchers once the renovation work is complete.

[KY] In 12 years, 43,000 renters were evicted from Lexington homes. Why that matters. (Lexington Herald-Leader, KY)

When Victor Johnson went to eviction court in December, he hoped to stop the eviction of his family from the home they had rented on Argyle Drive for eight years.

The landlord had given him an eviction notice earlier that month, alleging the Johnson family had let the Argyle Drive home fall into disrepair. Victor Johnson said he wasn't responsible for the condition of the property.

"I didn't get a chance to speak," Johnson said of his day in court. The judge never saw him when he raised his hand and ruled in favor of his landlord. An eviction notice was entered Dec. 28, court records show. The landlord sold the rental property within months of the eviction.

The Johnsons' eviction was one of 43,725 court-ordered evictions in Fayette County from 2005 to 2016, according to a new report released this week. The Lexington Fair Housing Council's report, titled "Locked Out: Foreclosure, Eviction and Housing Instability in Lexington, 2005-2016," is the first study of evictions that go through Fayette County District Court.

The study found:

--While the number of home foreclosures fluctuated greatly from 2005 to 2016, the number of evictions in Fayette County has remained about the same — an average of 3,463 court-mandated evictions each year for the past 12 years.

--The courts overwhelmingly side with landlords in eviction cases. There were 68,260 filings for evictions during the 12-year time period. In 43,725 of those cases, or 65 percent, the judge sided with the landlord and the tenant was evicted. Tenants won only three cases. A little more than a third of the cases were dismissed before the court date, which likely means the tenant left on their own or paid back rent.

--The average annual rate of eviction in Fayette County is 6.3 percent.

--Few tenants have a lawyer. There is only one legal aid attorney to represent tenants in eviction court for a 15-county area that includes Fayette County.

--Some landlords use the courts to evict tenants more than others. The 10 landlords with the most eviction cases are responsible for more than 20 percent of all evictions over the past 12 years.

--Most evictions likely don't go through the courts. Many Fayette County homeless and housing advocates say the 43,725 court-ordered evictions represent only about a third of the total evictions each year in Fayette County. It's likely that the eviction rate in Fayette County is more than 10 percent, the study suggests.

--Evictions can lead people already struggling to make ends meet deeper into poverty.

Difficult road after eviction

Take the Johnson family. After getting their eviction notice, Johnson and his wife and two daughters moved their possessions into storage units.

Then things got worse.

If it wasn't for a nosy neighbor, Phyllis Myers may have ended up in a homeless shelter after the home she rented for a decade was condemned in 2016.

Myers was pushing a shopping cart filled with jugs of distilled water near North Limestone in June 2016 when a man came up behind her.

Kris Nonn, who coordinates North Limestone Community Development Corporation's affordable housing program, had looked out his window of the community organization's North Limestone office and saw Myers pushing her cart up the street. Nonn was worried and curious: Why would this woman need so much water? So he followed her and asked. "I haven't had water in five months," Myers told Nonn.

Myers had complained to her landlord for months that the plumbing in her Seventh Street home was busted. Although several relatives of her landlord stopped by, the pipes - which Nonn said froze in February and burst - were never fixed. Code enforcement found a host of violations in the home that Myers had shared with her late husband for 10 years. There was no lock on the front door - the Myers used a padlock to lock their door. "I put my foot down on the floor in the bathroom and it went down four inches," Nonn said. Nonn also looked at Myers' heating bills for that winter. "They were sometimes as much as $300 to $500 a month." Her landlord left her a note on her door asking her to leave. "I can't believe I lost this woman her house," Nonn said.

Finding a new home for Myers was no easy task, even for Nonn who builds affordable housing and has extensive experience with city services. Nonn and Myers called a number that is supposed to connect people with needed social services. "They said to go to the Lexington Housing Authority and get on Craigslist and start looking for an apartment," Nonn said. "Phyllis has never been on a computer in her life. She had a phone but she didn't have any minutes left on it. She didn't have a car."

The Lexington Housing Authority was not accepting applications for either public housing or its voucher programs, which tenants can use to pay rent for private rental units. She's on Social Security and receives less than $750 a month. "I didn't know what to do," Myers said.

[TX] As Hurricane Harvey evacuees make Dallas home, what Katrina taught us about how D-FW may change (Dallas Morning News, TX)

Sherrie Miles struggled to corral the kids as they bounced between the pink air mattresses covered with purple sheets that her mother bought them with her last few dollars.

Part of her didn't want to, though. It had been weeks since Zatakyyus, an Energizer bunny of a 3-year-old with a runny nose and a devastating smile, and Nylah, a long-limbed 5-year-old, had been able to play in a home of their own.

The family's new apartment in southern Dallas was tidy but almost empty. Instead of a couch, Miles sat on one of the big bins that had recently held everything she owns, its plastic lid sagging. She started to cry.

For Miles, a 27-year-old Port Arthur native, the Hurricane Harvey-driven floodwaters that swallowed her truck and sent her family to the Kay Bailey Hutchison Convention Center were both overwhelming and cleansing.

Housing pinch

When those migrants showed up, though, they had no place to live because Katrina had destroyed much of the region's affordable housing stock.

Liu said that drove up housing prices not just in New Orleans proper, but in surrounding parishes and nearby metros. "There was a short-term boost even to Baton Rouge's economy," she said. By and large, though, lower-wage workers felt a squeeze, Liu said. New Orleans' housing affordability never recovered.

In the New Orleans metro area, 31 percent of renters were paying more than half of their household income for housing in 2015, according to The Data Center, an organization founded in 1977 to provide leaders in southeast Louisiana with objective information for policymaking. That number was just 22 percent in 2004, before Katrina hit. Now, economists are worried something similar could happen in Harvey's wake.

DALLAS - A neighbor was the first to tell Paige Cane that her landlord had posted an eviction notice on the door of her flooded apartment in Port Arthur.

The 26-year-old was more than 300 miles away with no car, sleeping in a Dallas shelter for evacuees escaping Harvey's floodwaters. The mother of four had no way to get back in the five days the eviction notice gave her to remove her belongings before they would be heaped on the curb.

Rental housing has been a concern in many cities in Texas and Florida after hurricanes Harvey and Irma flooded tens of thousands of homes. Texas renters have complained of difficulties getting out of leases on damaged properties, short timelines for evictions, and trouble finding affordable rentals because landlords have a glut of tenants to choose from. In Florida, advocates worry rebuilding efforts after Irma are forcing out mobile home park residents who rent coveted land in the Florida Keys.

In Texas, housing advocacy groups in Houston, Port Arthur and other hard-hit cities are fielding complaints. Lone Star Legal Aid, which provides free civil legal services to low-income residents in parts of the state, has received nearly 100 complaints from renters since the storm - complaints that can encompass issues dozens of renters have at one complex.

"It's unconscionable, but there were landlords who would not extend the rent deadlines," even as Harvey hit on Aug. 25, days before rent was due for many, said John Henneberger, co-director of the Texas Low Income Housing Information Service.

Texas statutes, which often favor landlords in disputes, require tenants to take landlords to court for rent reductions or lease termination - something that can seem monumental when courthouses are flooded, cars destroyed and incomes lost, Henneberger said.

Florida has no blanket policy governing how late rental payments or evictions should be handled after storms, according to the Florida Apartment Association, which represents owners, developers and property managers for about 600,000 units. An association representative didn't know of any landlords refusing to allow renters to break leases, but that doesn't address renters who want their apartments repaired. "They haven't done anything, not even put a tarp on the roof," said Liliana Caminero, a 54-year-old nurse, who lived in a second-floor apartment in Miami that suffered extensive roof damage. An inspector told her the place was uninhabitable and covered in black mildew, so she was forced to find another rental.

In the Florida Keys, which took the brunt of Hurricane Irma, half of the up to 15,000 residential homes damaged or destroyed were mobile homes.

Jose Fons, advocacy director for Monroe County for the Legal Services of Greater Miami, said landowners have started evicting trailer owners or renters from their lots, saying they are having problems with access to utilities. "There is a fear that some of them will change the use of land," so that they are no longer mobile home parks, said Fons, a concern shared by U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla. "Not all of the trailers are uninhabitable." Fons said landowners are giving tenants short timeframes to remove trailers.

Florida officials have not asked park owners or landlords for leniency, unlike Texas. Houston Mayor Sylvester Turner urged landlords to waive late fees for September and give more time to vacate uninhabitable apartments. At the same time, groups that track rental stock say they've seen a decrease in areas of Houston that stayed dry and an increase in average rents. Texas renters have also complained about landlords demanding rent for unlivable apartments and threatening to keep security deposits or put a mark on the renters' credit reports if they don't pay.

Texas law says either the landlord or the tenant can decide that a space is unlivable because of a flood or fire, but the law doesn't clearly outline what happens if they disagree. As for short timelines for evictions, five-day notices, while allowed, have been applied in ways that don't comply with Texas law, said Rich Tomlinson, litigation director at Lone Star Legal Aid. Landlords cannot move tenants' property without going to court, he said.

The Houston Housing Authority, which provides housing for low-income residents, has had its own issues, including initially charging some residents September rent for flood-damaged apartments before returning the money.

At Clayton Homes near downtown Houston, officials said 112 of 296 units would be demolished because of mold and E. coli. Tenants were given vouchers for private housing because the authority has nothing left. The authority also issued five-day eviction notices to about 150 residents at a senior living apartment building because of floodwater damage. The residents were given more time, but many protested that they didn't want to leave despite damage to electrical and other systems. "This isn't ideal. But it isn't safe," the authority's president, Tory Gunsolley, said.

[KS] Topeka JUMP calls on city council to create affordable housing trust fund (Topeka Capital-Journal, KS)
Topeka Capital-Journal

(10/13/2017 4:27 PM, Angela Deines)
After two years of working with Mayor Larry Wolgast and other city officials, members of a 20-church organization are calling on the Topeka City Council to create a trust fund to address the capital city's affordable housing crisis.

"This is about making what we have bigger," said Shanae Elem, of Topeka JUMP. "A local affordable housing trust fund is local money. It can be used for however our community wants for it to be used, and that's why having a local trust fund is impactful."

About 50 members of Topeka JUMP gathered Friday morning on the steps of the Inward Faith Outreach Ministries, S.W. 7th and Polk, and marched as a group to push for the trust fund, something they said would begin to help the estimated 7,000 families they say are living in "Unstable and unsanitary conditions."

"We know that the mayor and city staff are working to develop a plan, and we do applaud those efforts," said Carol Babcock, a member of Topeka JUMP. "But we requested this plan in 2015. How much longer must we wait?".

Babcock said one out of four eligible Topeka families is receiving rental assistance, and roughly half of the people who pay rent in Topeka are using 50 percent of their income on housing. Thirty percent of one's income is considered the standard percentage to pay for housing and it be considered affordable.

Sweet Divers, of Inward Faith, another member of Topeka JUMP, said the neighborhood just west of downtown where the church is located is overrun with trash and full of substandard housing units whose residents can't afford to live anywhere else. "Our neighborhood has been overlooked far, far too long," said Sweet Divers, another member of Topeka JUMP. "We want justice and we want it now."

[IA] 93-year-old feels bullied by WDM mobile home park manager's long list of demands (Des Moines Register, IA)
Des Moines Register
(10/14/2017 6:25 AM, Lee Rood)
VIDEO. Dorothy Funk strolls up to the door of her double-wide mobile home in West Des Moines in a perky leopard-print ensemble, proudly showing off the cozy living room with white couches and red accents she's kept up since 1977.

Funk says she's "93 going on 66," and enjoyed 39 of the past 40 years she's lived among other seniors in Western Village mobile home park at 2000 Grand Ave. Not 2017, though. This year has been stressful as hell, she said.

Over the summer and fall, the widow has received several notices giving her 48 hours to comply with different orders to do work on her manufactured home and garage. The most recent from park manager Nancy Shelley came late last week and gave Funk until Monday to paint her white home, or at least get the job scheduled. Failure to comply meant risking eviction from the private Wes Des Moines park for those 55 and older. "I know we're seniors, but we still have our brains," Funk complained.

A notice Dorothy Funk received Thursday, Oct. 5, 2017, urged her to paint her home. Failure to comply can result in an eviction notice, the park manager said.

Funk's manufactured home is older, but it is not in bad shape - inside or out. There's dirt splattered around some of the skirting, some faded paint near the side door and cracks in the driveway, but no more than most regular wear and tear on a home.

In 2010, in a yearlong series called "Trapped," I documented some of the worst living conditions you can imagine in mobile home parks across Iowa.The stories underscored how state law affecting mobile home residents is so lopsided, tenants can be - and are - kicked out of the private parks for almost any reason.

The worst problems were in rogue parks owned by a Colorado millionaire, where decrepit and unsafe homes were being sold off to the poorest of the poor. Those who churned through such parks frequently lost their down payments and all the cash shelled out for improvements because the old trailer homes they'd purchased were too frail to move. Park owners would then resell the homes, even though some didn't have legal title. The standards she and the 250 other lot renters in Western Village are being held to are very high - though still at the whim of the park manager, Shelley.

Unaffordable housing

If traffic congestion is a top gripe directed at newcomers, the cost of housing isn't far behind.

For years, metro Denver's housing market has been among the hottest in the country, and it's not clear how soon people can expect to see relief.

Construction has picked up since the Great Recession, but Elizabeth Garner, the state demographer, says there are still fewer new units being built today than in the past.

"Even though people think we're doing a lot of building, it's not as much as we think we are," Garner said. For much of the 1990s and early 2000s, she said, Colorado was building 40,000 to 60,000 housing units a year. In 2016, despite record demand, just 30,000 new units came online.

So far, policy solutions have been scattershot around the state. After a number of municipalities passed similar ordinances at the local level, state lawmakers this year approve a measure aimed at stimulating the state's dormant condominium market, but it's not clear if it alone will have a major impact.

In many cities, efforts are underway to encourage density and create more affordable housing. Denver's long-range planning effort contains prescriptions for both, and city officials hope to raise $150 million for affordable housing through property taxes and a new fee on developers. But housing advocates worry that's not enough to meet the enormous need.

[OR] Downtown Eugene housing and retail project pitched by ex-mayor Brian Obie delayed (Eugene Register-Guard, OR)
Eugene Register-Guard
(10/15/2017 9:30 AM, Elon Glucklich)
The biggest mixed-use commercial-residential project proposed for downtown Eugene in decades has been delayed.

The multi-component undertaking — one portion to be developed by Eugene businessman Brian Obie and the other by Lane County government's Housing and Community Services Agency — was set for a groundbreaking late this year or early next.

But that won't happen, because HACSA has not yet lined up the money for its building.

HACSA wants a one-year extension from Lane County commissioners to start building its 50-unit low-rent apartment complex at Oak Street and East Sixth Avenue, HACSA Real Estate Development Director Steve Ochs said. HACSA may make the formal request in the next few weeks.

Obie said HACSA's delay will prompt him to hold off because he wants to develop in tandem with HACSA.

The housing agency and Obie would each build on county-owned parking lots on either side of Oak Street under 99-year leases they signed with the county in 2013. Those agreements called for both groups to hit a series of milestones in planning their construction, including applying for building permits by December of this year.
HACSA wants commissioners to approve a delay until late 2018 or early 2019 to apply for building permits.

HACSA plans to fund most of the apartment complex's estimated $12.6 million cost through federal low-income housing tax credits, which affordable-housing developers apply for through the state each year.

Eugene Register-Guard
(10/15/2017 9:30 AM, Elon Glucklich)

The council devised the rent-control requirement — a first for Eugene — as a way to provide what it terms "workforce" housing in the face of rapidly escalating rents and a shortage of homes affordable to moderate-income families.

To get the MUPTE tax break, developers can alternatively pay 10 percent of the waiver's value to a city affordable housing fund.

Obie says he needs MUPTE property tax relief from the city, most likely worth several hundred thousand dollars a year on the housing portion of his project, or his endeavor won't be worth the investment.

But capping the rent on 30 or more of his apartment units isn't in his plans either.

Enter Lane County government's public housing agency.

Obie wants his units to qualify for a MUPTE tax waiver by counting a separate 50-unit low-rent apartment complex planned by the Housing and Community Services Agency of Lane County toward his workforce housing requirement. HACSA is planning its project across Oak Street from the Obie property. HACSA builds and manages apartments for low-income residents across Lane County using state and federal funds. HACSA would cap its rents to make them affordable to low-income residents.

Alice Gentry retired into poverty after a lifetime of work as a bank teller, secretary, waitress, retail clerk and more.

She lived in a tent for four months, until winter forced her indoors at the Eugene Mission.

After nine months at the Mission she found a spot at Opportunity Village, an encampment with rudimentary shelters classified by the city of Eugene as sleeping cabins: No heat, no power, no plumbing.

Gentry's $748-a-month Social Security check won't cover the cost of real housing - not until her house in Emerald Village is built.

For the past three years, Multnomah County, the City of Portland and a team of partners have been united in building a more rational, robust and compassionate response to homelessness.

First, we convened A Home For Everyone, setting big goals and expanding our investments in a proven set of strategies: prevention, housing and shelter. Last year, we cemented that partnership, forming the Joint Office of Homeless Services.

Our work is making a difference, even in a painful housing crisis.

We exceeded our initial goals, helping thousands of people stay in their homes or transition to permanent housing. This winter, for the first time, we counted more people in shelter than facing the elements on the streets.

[CA] Hearst sells off part of huge SoMa development to project partner (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)
San Francisco Chronicle
(10/16/2017 4:42 AM, J.K. Dineen)
The deal is the latest chapter in a redevelopment process that started in 2007 when Hearst hired the real estate consulting company CBRE to explore development of a collection of lots that span 4 acres between Howard and Mission streets in the city's burgeoning South of Market neighborhood. In March 2008, Hearst selected Forest City, which was a partner in the development of the nearby Metreon and the expansion of the Westfield San Francisco Centre.

The project Hearst and Forest City came up with, dubbed 5M, is a sweeping reimagining of a transition block between SoMa and downtown San Francisco, a mix of housing, office space and arts. The project includes an acre of open space and 241 units of affordable housing, including an 83-unit, $24.5 million affordable senior housing complex at 967 Mission St.

The plan was opposed by nearby condo owners, who objected to the height of some of the buildings, as well as some neighborhood nonprofit organizations that argued that the $1 billion investment would squeeze out what remains of a working-class enclave of residential hotels and subsidized housing buildings that has long been a center of the Bay Area's Filipino community.

The development won approvals at the city Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors in November 2015. Since then it has been tied up in court. A group of neighborhood opponents sued to block the development, a lawsuit that was tossed out in January and then appealed to the Court of Appeal. There is no date set on when the court will rule on the case.

Fair Housing

[KY] More renters are evicted in this Lexington neighborhood than any other (Lexington Herald-Leader, KY)
Kentucky.com
(10/13/2017 7:58 PM, Beth Musgrave)
Renters in the Winburn area were more likely to be evicted from their homes and apartments than any other area in Lexington, a recent analysis of Fayette County court-ordered evictions over a 12-year period shows.

The Lexington Fair Housing Council's report: "Locked Out: Foreclosure, Eviction and Housing Instability in Lexington, 2005-2016" by Taylor Shelton analyzed eviction filings in Fayette District Court. In addition to finding that landlords overwhelmingly win in eviction court, Shelton also looked at where the 43,725 evictions occurred by U.S. Census tract. Shelton is a research associate with the council and an assistant professor at Mississippi State University.

The Winburn neighborhood in North Lexington had the highest eviction rate for that 12-year period, at 101.2 percent — meaning there were more evictions in that area than rental units. The Winburn neighborhood includes Winburn Drive off Russell Cave Road.

The census tract with the second most evictions is the North Limestone area. It had an eviction rate of approximately 85.9 percent. The North Limestone neighborhood includes Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets.

The report also shows that certain landlords evict more often than others. Landlords with the most evictions during the 12-year period were responsible for 20 percent of all eviction filings, the report found.

That means one landlord that uses court-ordered evictions frequently can dramatically alter or skew eviction rates for an entire census block. The report found that high rates of evictions can be traced to specific blocks of streets. In addition to Winburn, other streets with pockets of high-eviction rates include the Woodhill neighborhood off Richmond Road and Centre Parkway in the Southeastern Hills neighborhood.

"Evictions tend to be isolated in smaller corners of a neighborhood, often a single street or even a single multi-family apartment complex," the report found.

Art Crosby, executive director of the Lexington Fair Housing Council, said some of those landlords are renting to lower income people, tenants with poor credit or those with criminal records who other landlords won't rent to. Those tenants struggle to pay rent and evictions are common. But other landlords use the system, he said. "Others build in evictions as the cost of doing business," Crosby said.

[OH] Mentor to hold fair housing assessment meetings required by HUD, CDBG program (Ohio News Herald, OH)

(10/15/2017 7:51 PM, Ohio News Herald)
The city of Mentor is conducting a series of Assessment of Fair Housing meetings as required by the Department of Housing and Urban Development under its Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing rule.

The assessment is a necessary component of the city's participation in the Community Development Block Grant program.

Public input is sought to complete the assessment of issues surrounding fair housing in the community. The city is opening these meetings to anyone who wishes to participate, including nonresidents, according to a press release.

To make these meetings inclusive, open and available to everyone, the same meeting will be held on three different weekdays, one weeknight and another on a Saturday morning. The intent of this initial meeting will be to open a dialog on what fair housing is and what issues face the Mentor community regarding fair access to housing free from discrimination, the release stated.

[IN] Hackney: Real estate ads ignite uproar (Indianapolis Star, IN)

(10/13/2017 9:38 AM, Suzette Hackney)
It's no secret that Fall Creek Place is experiencing some gentrification, as more businesses open, more upscale houses are built and more affluent individuals and families quickly scoop up the housing stock.

The owners of longtime Indianapolis real estate company Flock Realty found themselves in quite the predicament this week after two questionable ads surfaced with language many perceived as racist and classist.

The ads were placed on the back page of Urban Times, a monthly publication serving Indy's Downtown and neighborhoods such as Fall Creek Place, Herron-Morton and the Old Northside.

The October ad characterizes Fall Creek Place as "once an unseemly place filled with unholy habitats and vice lords." The add continues: "With blessing of the banks, brokers and bureaucrats ZMC Urban Homes began building new homes for the blessed who believed urban living could be holy, hip, righteous, and upscale."

Last month, Flock Realty's ad read, in part, "They said I wouldn't have to mow grass and they'd take care of everything. They didn't warn me about thin walls, late night banging, insomnia, and the smell of cumin, curry, and oregano in the halls. Apt. living is oxymoronic."

Tom Follis, a real estate appraiser and broker in Bellingham, said the local vacancy rate is at 0.0 percent for apartments, duplexes and condos. For single-family homes, the October 2017 vacancy rate is 2.5 percent. Follis blamed the majority of the high housing prices on limited supply and increased demand, although he agreed that some price-gouging exists.

Section 8 refers to the Depression-era federal housing program that offers rental housing assistance to private landlords through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Earlier this month, Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti, along with other elected officials, joined the Housing Authority of the City of Los Angeles to announce the opening of the Section 8 Waiting List Lottery. People will be able to apply online starting at 6:00 a.m., Monday, October 16, 2017, through 5:00 p.m., Sunday, October 29, 2017, by going to HACLA.hcvlist.org. The Section 8 program provides rental assistance to eligible individuals and families by paying a portion of rent directly to private landlords. "Angelenos deserve housing they can afford, no matter their income," Garcetti said. "People who are eligible should apply for the Section 8 rental subsidy program - and we'll keep fighting to build more affordable housing that gives every family the opportunity to find safe, stable places to live." Interested families and individuals can apply online 24 hours a day, seven days a week, during the application period using a smartphone, mobile device or computer with Internet access.

[NY] CB 2 wants more notice on shelters (Queens Chronicle, NY)
Queens Chronicle
(10/13/2017 7:11 AM, Matthew Bultman)
Sunnyside residents are looking for answers after it was revealed the city recently began using a former hotel in the neighborhood to house homeless families.

Representatives from the Department of Homeless Services were peppered with questions during Community Board 2's meeting last week about the use of the Best Western on Hunter's Point Avenue as an emergency shelter space.

Elected officials and board members said they were notified just 24 hours before the hotel, between 38th and 39th streets, started admitting families on Sept. 26.

Councilman Jimmy Van Bramer (D-Sunnyide) said it was "absurd" not to give the community more notice.

Civics earn partial victory in Article 78 lawsuit over homeless hotel

The city is not planning to appeal a court ruling ordering it to turn over documents related to last year's highly controversial planned conversion of the Maspeth Holiday Inn Express into a homeless shelter.

The Sept. 27 ruling, made by Justice Allan Weiss of Queens Supreme Court, stems from an Article 78 case brought against the city earlier this year by the civic Citizens for a Better Maspeth.

Under court order, the Department of Homeless Services must provide CBM with the city's original request for proposals and the response documents from applying companies as it related to the proposed operation the 59-40 55 Road hotel as a shelter.

"It is ordered and adjudged that the petition is granted solely to the extent that respondents are directed to provide petitioner with copies of the Request For Proposals that were received in connection with the proposal to convert the subject Holiday Inn Express to a homeless shelter," Weiss' ruling reads, "and any and all plans submitted along with the RFPs which demonstrate that the space would be a conforming use under the zoning resolution."

City and state lawmakers have taken their turns slamming the city for moving homeless individuals into a Best Western in Sunnyside with no advanced notice.

And now, the area's federal representative is getting his licks in.

In a letter dated Oct. 5, Rep. Joe Crowley (D-Queens, Bronx) blasted Mayor de Blasio and Human Resources Administration Commissioner Steve Banks over the decision to rent out all 82 rooms at the 38-05 Hunters Point Ave. hotel two weeks ago, saying the officials have gone back on their word.

"Despite a litany of promises of greater accountability, including at least 30 days' notice, and increased transparency in the process of siting these emergency shelters, this community finds itself once again blindsided with the last-minute announcement of yet another hotel conversion," Crowley wrote. "While I am deeply sympathetic to the plight of homeless families, your administration has shown a sustained pattern of making promises that you have no intention of keeping."

Tenants living above Comfort Inn said they found out on evening news

Tenants living in the apartments above the Kew Gardens Comfort Inn — where the city is renting 42 rooms and housing homeless individuals in 19 of them — only found out about the move through media reports, according to one resident who spoke at Community Board 9's meeting Tuesday night.

"I myself found out watching the evening news," said Jonathan, who only wanted his first name used. "And then my mother called me to tell me she saw it on the news as well."

According to Jonathan, residents at The Kewl — the name for the apartments above the hotel — have been unable to get in contact with their management company about the situation.

"We know nothing," he said.

The most overcrowded school district in Queens is also the one with the greatest number of homeless students, according to a new report.

School District 24 — which stretches from Ridgewood to Corona — had 4,186 students who were identified as homeless during the 2016-17 school year, according to state data compiled by the New York State Technical and Education Assistance Center for Homeless Students on Tuesday.

That's up from 3,709 in 2015-16.

The second-highest homeless concentration was in SD 27 — which has Richmond Hill to Rockaway — which in the most recent school year had 3,164 and the year prior had 2,870.

The Knicks hit nothing but net by giving a gift to children at a Department of Homeless Services shelter.

Knicks rookie--Frank Ntilikina helped open a new basketball court with the kids at Saratoga Family Inn onThursday.

The Knicks team and the Garden of Dreams Foundation teamed up to make the donation.

The organizations also provided a pizza dinner for the families, a D-J, as well as streetball and basketball performers.

"Homeless kids don't have the opportunity that much to experience things that other children may. The Knicks doing something like this really made them feel special and gave them an opportunity that they probably would had other wise," said Michael Fahy, administrator for Saratoga Family Inn.

More than 200 veterans were able to take advantage of free services offered at the Colonie Elks Club.

Veteran Tina Henderson Arceneau tells News Channel 13 that there is more to this event, however, than just services.

"There's always old vets that can tell you good war stories to the younger vets, and the younger vets can share their experience with them, so it's a day of sharing."

[NY] Homeless Shelters Name Their Own Rates in New York, Audit Finds (New York Times)
New York Times
(10/16/2017 5:00 AM, Nikta Stewart)
Under pressure to shelter close to 58,000 homeless people on a daily basis, New York City has been paying widely varying rates to shelter providers and, until recently, had no set procedure for determining how much to pay, according to a new audit.

The state comptroller's office could not determine whether the city is paying reasonable rates for nearly 750 shelters that have cost the city more than $1.1 billion annually, according to the audit, which looked at a sampling of contracts over a four-year period.

Examining 23 new contracts for shelters, auditors concluded that shelter providers named their own prices with little pushback from the Department of Homeless Services. The rates charged by two comparable shelters might differ by as much as $225 per person per day, according to the audit.

The city's shelter system is a patchwork fashioned out of emergency and necessity, and it has failed to keep up with new demands that emerged, particularly after a rental assistance program was cut in 2011. The city must house every eligible person who seeks help, and there is a daily scramble to shelter thousands.

[NY] De Blasio's Homelessness Struggle (WNYC - New York Public Radio)
WNYC - New York Public Radio
(10/16/2017 5:00 AM, Mirela Iverac)
AUDIO. After winning the mayoral election, Bill de Blasio promised to immediately address the unprecedented homeless crisis underway.

"We have the highest number of people in shelter in the history of this city," he said in December, 2013. "The highest number of people who are homeless in any sense literally since the Great Depression. And it simply can't continue."

At that point, 51,018 New Yorkers were homeless.

As mayor, de Blasio promised to use a different strategy to tackle homelessness. But since he came into office, the number of people in the shelter system has increased by 17 percent. Currently, more than 60,000 people live in shelters. Meanwhile, the Department of Homeless Services' budget has ballooned from $900 million to $1.6 billion.

"This mayor has invested more money than anyone in a very long time in the problem," Lilliam Barrios-Paoli, de Blasio's former Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services, said in a recent interview with WNYC. "I don't think he's gotten the results that he thought or hoped he was going to get."

Suspicions about the new inn only grew as Mayor DeBlasio came under fire for failing to reduce the number of hotels used as homeless shelters, and as several hotels in Sunset Park became shelters — to the consternation of many nearby residents.

But even now that the hotel is finally open and everything appears to check out, so to speak, Maisel said he's still concerned for the what the future holds — if the hotel is not able to sustain a profit over the next few years, its owners could still look to partner with an organization to open up a shelter.

"At this point I'm not worried about it happening in the next year or two, I'm worried about three to four years from now," said Maisel. "It's just a terrible block to put a hotel on. There's no parking, it's a horrible block, you got a sanitation garage and auto repair shops. It's just not a nice block if you're trying to encourage people to come to your hotel. Time will tell — things seem to be working well, I just hope it continues."

The Department of Homeless Services says it is not currently using the Mill Basin hotel as a shelter, has no plans to, and would notify neighbors a minimum of 30 days in advance if it plans to open one, said a spokeswoman for the city agency.

Mayor Dawn Zimmer, Hudson County Executive Tom DeGise, and other officials joined with members of the American Legion on Tuesday for the ceremonial groundbreaking of the American Legion Hoboken Post 107 project. It includes a veteran community center and a six-unit residential building for homeless veterans.

American Legion Post 107 sustained severe damage from flooding during Superstorm Sandy in 2012 and requested a partnership with the city to rebuild its facility. The project is funded through the New Jersey Housing and Mortgage Finance Agency ("NJHMFA"), the Hudson County HOME Funding Consortium, and the City of Hoboken. American Legion Post 107 is also privately raising additional funds to cover furniture, appliances, and other necessities for the veterans who will reside in the units.

The project is located at 308 Second St.

[PA] Suburban Station getting a new stop: A service center for Philly's homeless (Philly.com, PA)
Philly.com
(10/14/2017 12:39 PM, Jason Laughlin)
Staying clean is a problem, Iverson Furtic said, on and off for more than 30 years.

The 51-year-old is talking about the drug use he can't seem to beat, the addiction that keeps returning him to the street. Philadelphia social services set him up with a place in the city's Frankford neighborhood, but the lure of easy drugs nearby proved too powerful. Sitting on a bench along Suburban Station's concourse, Furtic also talked about literally staying clean - how much a person without a home values something as simple as a shower.

Those are among the basic necessities longed for by Philadelphia's estimated 950 people without even temporary shelter, he said - "Somewhere to go where you won't be looked upon like, 'What are you doing here?'".

A few hundred yards away, down a forgotten corridor among Suburban Station's warren of tunnels, the whine of buzz saws and power drills echo. SEPTA workers are erecting the steel skeleton of a $1.4 million service center for the city's homeless - a place designed to offer all the things Furtic said matter to someone living on the streets. The 11,000-square-foot facility is scheduled to be finished by the end of the year. The goal is to have it up and running the first week of January, hopefully in time to provide shelter from winter's worst. "We wanted to do something that would really help the homeless," said Jeff Knueppel, SEPTA's general manager.

Though it has the highest poverty rate among big American cities, Philadelphia has one of the lowest homelessness rates, said Liz Hersh, director of the office of homeless services. The number of people on the street is growing, she said, in large part because of the opioid epidemic. Along with the people without any shelter, Philadelphia has about 5,700 who reside in shelters or temporary housing. "Three-fourths have some kind of substance abuse disorder or mental health problems and very often both," Hersh said.

Other factors contributing to homelessness include the cost of housing and budget cuts. Last winter, the homeless turned to transit centers more than usual due to construction in LOVE Park and the Gallery that left them fewer places to go. Transit stations are obvious havens for homeless people.

The increase in the city's homeless population has, in turn, led to more homeless people in places like Suburban Station during bad weather - as many as 350 in one day, according to a count last winter. It's unusual for a transportation authority to take so active a role in providing an alternative for a city's homeless. "SEPTA is pretty unique in major city transit authorities sort of embracing and stepping up to the challenge of homeless systems," said Laura Weinbaum, a vice president at Project HOME. Officials aren't concerned the service center will attract more homeless people to Suburban Station, Knueppel said; they're there already.

If you're in a city but you live in a van, or a trailer, or a tent, you are considered homeless.

But if you're in the desert or the forest, you're camping.

Rationalizations such as these are what make "Nomadland" such a compelling look at a weirdly camouflaged swath of society that's more entwined around us than we realize.

[SC] For the 18th year, Veterans Affairs provides resources to Charleston-area homeless veterans (Charleston Post & Courier, SC)
Charleston Post & Courier
(10/13/2017 6:12 PM, Mary Katherine Wildeman)
VIDEO. When Nathaniel Sims was young, he had two dreams: Serve in the military and become a teacher. He served in the Army for four years, from 1979 to 1983. Now, he has almost completed his teaching degree. He wants to stay in the area and teach at an elementary or middle school. He just needs a little bit of aid to cross the finish line. "Once I finish my education, I won't need any more help," Sims said.

Sims was hoping to find some of that help at a Veterans Affairs event Friday morning. The local arm of the VA has used the annual event, called Stand Down Against Homelessness, to make a slew of resources available to homeless veterans and veterans like Sims, who are not homeless but need some aid.

Year after year, the numbers of people who come to the event have dwindled The Ralph H. Johnson VA Medical Center's director of mental health, Dr. Hugh Myrick, said. It's a sign the VA is doing its job.

Fewer veterans are homeless today than when the event began, he said. At its height, the VA served 2,400 people at Stand Down. For 14 years, the event was held in the Park Circle neighborhood of North Charleston. For the past four years, it has been held at the Community Resource and Referral Center, also in North Charleston.

On Friday morning, a couple hundred local veterans wandered the booths inside and outside the resource center. They waited in line for haircuts, ate a meal, and picked up outfits from Goodwill and sleeping bags supplied by the VA. Medical staff offered health screenings.

Myrick said the Stand Down event today is more than anything else meant to show what the VA offers every day, year round at the resource center. "You don't have to wait for Stand Down," Myrick said. He said the VA keeps close track of homeless veterans in the area. They often fall into homelessness because of mental illness or substance use issues, along with "just plain bad luck," Myrick said.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development estimated there were 738 homeless veterans in South Carolina in 2016. There were more than 39,000 homeless veterans nationwide, according to HUD.

Since Myrick began at the VA about 20 years ago, staff in the mental health department has increased nearly five-fold to meet the mental health needs of veterans, he said. Younger veterans face "near homelessness" relatively often, Myrick said, but the improvements in help for veterans in need have improved in his time at the VA.

"The changes I've seen are just amazing," he said.

The number of people the VA has helped secure housing in the area has increased, too.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development gives vouchers to veterans to help them afford housing through the VA's Supportive Housing Program. A VA spokeswoman said 649 such vouchers have been given out this year in the local VA's jurisdiction, an increase from 584 in 2016. Of the vouchers given this year, 290 were for housing aid in Charleston.

Walter Scott Jr. receives one of those vouchers to pay for his home in North Charleston. Friday was his third time at the Stand Down event, and he said it was the smoothest he's seen yet. "We just kept moving on down the line," he said.

There are similar Stand Down events in Savannah and Myrtle Beach. Both were in September this year.

[VA] Citing safety concerns, Henrico puts up signs at busy intersections discouraging drivers from giving money to panhandlers (Richmond Times-Dispatch, VA)
Richmond Times-Dispatch
(10/13/2017 5:13 AM, Ned Oliver)
After a legal-minded panhandler successfully challenged the constitutionality of an outright ban on begging for cash on roadways, Henrico County has adopted a new way to curb the practice: placing big signs at busy intersections asking drivers not to give money to people in the medians.

"We were seeing an increasing number of individuals soliciting in the median, which was really creating some public safety concerns," said Brandon Hinton, Henrico's deputy county manager for community services. "We want to make sure nobody gets hurt. And yes, that means by asking folks driving not to give to those that are soliciting in the median."

The county has installed the signs at 10 intersections, mostly along Broad Street and Laburnum Avenue. Hinton said more will go up based on feedback from residents.

The first half of the sign addresses drivers: "Please do not give money to persons in the median." The second half addresses "those who need assistance," offering a phone number — 501-7818 — that connects them with social services and concluding with the words "Henrico County can help."

[FL] 'Florida Project' film portrays life in Kissimmee hotels (Orlando Sentinel, FL)
Orlando Sentinel
(10/15/2017 5:40 AM, Mary Shanklin)
VIDEO. Central Florida's latest portrayal on the big screen shows a darker slice of the tourist-centric region — children growing up living at old Kissimmee area hotels in the shadow of theme parks.

"The Florida Project," named for Walt Disney's vision to remake much of Central Florida, centers on a 6-year-old girl frolicking unsupervised around the grounds of the 1960s Magic Castle hotel where she and her rebellious mother eke out an existence.

"It is neither too graphic or too tame. It's what people actually experience and what people actually go through," said Travis Vengroff, whose company is converting an old hotel on U.S. Highway 192 into apartments and has more than 1,300 rental units for low-income residents mostly in southwest Florida.

"The Florida Project," showing in Orlando and other select cities, touches on an increasingly common way of life in Central Florida. While some Florida school districts have seen declines in the number of homeless students, the number of children living in hotels and motels has grown in Orange and Osceola counties, according to school officials. Those two Central Florida counties lead the state for students who head home to a motel at the end of a school day, according to researchers at the Shimberg Center for Housing Studies at the University of Florida.

[FL] OUR VIEW: First Step must move forward (Daytona Beach News-Journal, FL)
Daytona Beach News-Journal
(10/15/2017 7:29 AM, Daytona Beach News-Journal Editorial)
Get it done right, but also in a timely fashion.

The community's First Step homeless shelter is taking steps in the wrong direction — backward.

In June, the Volusia County Council voted to contribute $2.5 million for shelter construction and infrastructure costs — and, in a major reversal of policy, agreed to give $400,000 per year for shelter operations for the first five years, matching the city of Daytona Beach's commitment.

That was a landmark deal between the city and the county that ended years of stalemate between the two governments on how best to address the homelessness problem. The progress perhaps fueled unrealistic expectations for when the shelter would be completed.

[FL] Daytona beachside church helping homeless under scrutiny (Daytona Beach News-Journal, FL)

People who live south of Main Street say they just want a chance to turn around their struggling neighborhood. The people who hand out free clothes, food and spiritual sustenance every Monday evening at a church in the neighborhood say they just want to help the most vulnerable in Daytona Beach.

DAYTONA BEACH — Inside a small beachside church one evening last week, a few dozen people sat in the heat of a barely air-conditioned sanctuary with a roof so torn apart from hurricanes that bare wooden rafters are exposed.

But it wasn't the musty, stagnant air or spartan building that had the attention of the group, most of whom are homelessness. They were locked on the pastor at the front of the room wearing a T-shirt that said "For Nothing Is Impossible With God" and talking about what they need to do to get to heaven.

"There's no Plan B. You're either saved or unsaved," Pastor Robert Borde warned them.

Most people in the oceanfront neighborhood have probably never watched the distressed congregants bowing their heads in prayer during the hour-long services inside the International Miracle Center at the corner of Fifth and Wild Olive avenues. They've probably also never seen the drifters after the services happily feasting on free dinners in the church's dining hall with its long tables, metal folding chairs and a large picture of Jesus at the front of the simple room.

[OK] Face to face with Tulsa's homeless population, outreach becomes a full-time job for minister (Tulsa World, OK)
Tulsa World

Driving through downtown Tulsa during an afternoon rain storm, Noe Rodriguez parks his white SUV under an interstate overpass and watches in the rear-view mirror as a raggedly dressed man takes off in the opposite direction, briskly walking into the downpour and glancing over his shoulder to make sure Rodriguez isn't following. He gets that reaction a lot. "They aren't necessarily happy to see me," Rodriguez shrugs nonchalantly. "They don't trust me." But he's not here to see the man anyway. Rodriguez has come looking for "Amanda," a gaunt and frail-looking middle-aged woman who lives under a pile of blankets below the northwest corner of the Inner Dispersal Loop. Rodriguez had talked to her the day before and promised to come find her again today. But she doesn't seem to recognize him as he climbs out of his SUV and steps onto the sidewalk, where Amanda is sitting near a muddy puddle next to a giant concrete pillar. "Do you remember me?" Rodriguez asks, but she only stares at him. "You said I could come back today and help you get a birth certificate. Remember?

"Working for the Mental Health Association in Tulsa, Rodriguez has recently begun doing full-time "outreach" — eight hours a day, 40 hours a week, searching the streets of Tulsa and offering to help find homes for chronically homeless individuals. That process often begins with obtaining very basic personal documents. A birth certificate will help Amanda get an ID. And an ID will let her apply for subsidized housing. But first, she has to let Rodriguez help. "Can I fill out this form for you?" he asks, squatting down with an iPad. "How do you spell your last name?" The wind keeps blowing rain across his iPad screen. And to hear Amanda's mumbled answer, Rodriguez has to lean in very close to her face. Fifteen minutes later, he has the information he needs to obtain a birth certificate and promises Amanda that he will check on her again tomorrow. But she lies down without saying "thank you" or even "goodbye." "I don't expect any gratitude," Rodriguez says, climbing back into the SUV. "My 'why' goes deeper than that."

[MN] Twin Cities homelessness: Seniors find themselves on street, in shelters (Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune, MN)
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune
(10/14/2017 7:47 PM, Ed Murphy)

I grew up next to the railroad tracks in the 1960s. Among my earliest memories are trains passing with men in the boxcars or occasionally riding on top. Many, I presume, were heading, if not to greener pastures, then downtown to the flophouses and residential hotels of the Gateway District, known as Skid Row. That was the face of homelessness in that era.

Today, rail cars are sealed and the downtown hotels are long gone, but there are more homeless people than ever. Homelessness has become more democratic, if you will. Families, young people and single women have joined the ranks of the homeless in force.

But, more recently, the face of homelessness is increasingly the face of an adult 55 and older, the fastest-growing segment of the homeless population. With their numbers up some 60 percent in Minnesota since 2009, they now represent one-third of the homeless adult population.

Many homeless seniors never dreamed they would end up like this. Widowhood or estrangement from family often means diminished social connections. Loss of work, due to downsizing, disability or the changing nature of needed work skills, not only robs them of a sense of personal worth, but is financially catastrophic and can lead to lost housing. Their personal safety net, taken for granted through the years, unravels - and thus the spiral to the streets. For most older homeless women and men, this is their first experience on the street, and they are wholly unprepared.

More than just lacking dignity, life for homeless seniors is not healthful. Some 71 percent of older homeless have a chronic physical or mental health condition.

On a recent visit to a large downtown Minneapolis shelter, it became clear what this has meant for the homeless and the agencies that struggle to serve them.

[ND] Bringing them in: Northland Rescue Mission in Grand Forks increases homeless outreach as cold approaches (Bismarck Tribune, ND)
Bismarck Tribune
(10/16/2017 5:18 AM, Andrew Hazzard)
One such resource is currently under construction in Grand Forks. Ground broke last month on La Grave on First, a $8.5 million project aimed at giving chronically homeless people a place to live and access to resources such as job training and counseling. The housing project will be located at the corner of First Avenue South and Walnut Street in Grand Forks.

To live at LaGrave, residents must have been homeless for the last year or four times in the last three years. Plus, they need to have a debilitating disability that could range from an addiction to a mental disability but must prevent someone from functioning adequately in society. Living expenses come to a maximum of 30 percent of a renter's income, according to Terry Hanson with the Grand Forks Housing Authority.

But funding for homeless shelters in North Dakota was cut significantly in the Legislature last year, when shelter grants were moved into the discretionary fund. The Mission has historically received $40,000, or 10 percent of its budget, from the grant. Shirek said that has meant spending more time courting donors and looking for federal grant dollars to keep the Mission viable.

"There's always going to be a need,"Shirek said.

[IL] Homelessness: 'It could be a solvable problem here' (Peoria Journal Star, IL)
Peoria Journal Star
(10/14/2017 5:07 PM, Steve Tarter)
Kevin Nowlan doesn't see more cots in emergency shelters solving the homeless problem in central Illinois. "Permanent housing is the answer," said the Continuum of Care director with the Heart of Illinois United Way, the agency that last year took over management of the region's homeless care program. "We don't have the housing stock for all of the homeless people in the area. That's why we're prioritizing," said Nowlan. The number of people served by the Heart of Illinois Continuum of Care in the past year in Peoria, Tazewell, Woodford and Fulton counties is more than 1,300. The idea is to make sure that homeless individuals in the greatest need for shelter, because of a medical or mental condition, are cared for first, said Nowlan. "We want to identify those who need help the most with everyone sharing the same list," he said, referring to agencies that house the homeless in the Peoria area.

South Side Mission and the Peoria Rescue Mission provide shelter but aren't involved with the assessment system, Nowlan noted. The new system works more efficiently for the individual and agency, alike, he said. Previously, a homeless individual might have to go from one shelter to another, relying on each individual agency to do their own evaluation, said Nowlan. Someone in need of shelter can access the new system by calling 211, the area's information/referral service. A second access point is the emergency shelter at Dream Center Peoria, 714 Hamilton Blvd. Dream Center. Kristy Schofield, Dream Center's housing director, can relate to the families that seek shelter there because she was homeless 22 years ago. Schofield ended up getting help at the YWCA's emergency shelter, then located on Jefferson Street.

Housing in which residents of all ages live together appears to be working at Cannon Place, according to a visiting scholar from England. "Older veterans love having kids around," said Emma Garland of Hull, Yorkshire. "There is mutual respect between the young and old. Once they get to know each other, it works." That interaction is going on at Cannon Place, a 65-unit building for homeless and at-risk veterans and their families. The building is owned by Mercy Housing Lakefront, based in Chicago, and is located at the Veterans Affairs Illiana Health Care System campus. Garland spent Thursday and Friday in Danville talking to veterans at Cannon Place, as well as city housing officials. She's on a one-month trip to the United States as a Winston Churchill Memorial Trust traveling fellow. The trust gives grants to United Kingdom citizens in a range of fields so they can do research overseas.

Garland, who is policy and research officer at Ongo Homes in England, is researching different examples of intergenerational housing projects. Garland visited several Mercy Housing Lakefront properties in the Chicago area before coming to Danville, as well as Hope Meadows in Rantoul, and was impressed with how the ages get along. The concept of intergenerational housing, where people live in a cohesive community, is not well-known in the United Kingdom, she said, and no purpose-built projects exist. Her goal is to show that developing co-housing with shared facilities can invoke a sense of community Garland said she's met many friendly and helpful people during her visits to housing developments in Illinois. She thanked Mercy Housing for letting her meet residents, who were kind enough to share their stories, and to the Danville Housing Authority for giving her insight into the challenges of public housing.

YAKIMA – By Tuesday night, Yakima residents should learn the fate of a homeless encampment operating since March on city-owned land behind the former Kmart building on East Nob Hill Boulevard.

And despite not having locked in a specific building, a short-term winter plan for the homeless will likely also come to light Tuesday.

Transform Yakima Together, the faith-based group running Camp Hope, in August asked the city to consider a long-term lease for the land that would allow construction of buildings that would be more permanent than the tents residents have been staying in.

The council is expected to vote on that lease Tuesday. The proposed agreement would last until Nov. 15, 2020, with an opportunity to renew for two more years. Residents would only allowed to stay at the camp from March 15 through Nov. 15, and all temporary structures, such as tents and portable toilets, must be removed during the winter.

[OR] Portland and Multnomah County will look at pairing housing with services to keep homeless housed (Portland Oregonian, OR)
Portland Oregonian
(10/13/2017 8:14 AM, Jessica Floum)
Portland and Multnomah County next week will vote on setting goals for creating housing opportunities for chronically homeless people who struggle with addiction and mental illness.

The goal would be to add, by 2028, 2,000 additional apartments that include access to physical and mental health care, drug addiction treatment, employment coaching and other social services. City Commissioner Nick Fish served as the city's first housing commissioner in 2009 and has long advocated for City Hall to help increase housing with services.

"It's time for us to be bold ... and invest in a national best practice that gets people off the streets and into recovery with the hope of a productive life," Fish told The Oregonian/OregonLive on Thursday.

About 3,300 of these units already exist in Portland and Multnomah County, funded in part by federal vouchers, the city and county's Joint Office of Homeless Services, nonprofits and health-care providers, said Marc Jolin, the joint office director.

PORTLAND, Ore. — After 10 years of chronic homelessness, Jewell Ramirez couldn't take it anymore.

So she sought help from Catholic Charities. A case manager there helped her fill out a questionnaire, and three days later Ramirez was approved for a tiny home at the newly formed Kenton Women's Village in North Portland.

"I just want to say in my heart how grateful I am to have this opportunity to further myself and to get on with my life for the better," she said Saturday about the opportunity for a better life that the community of 13 other women has given her.

"It's nice to have someone to listen to you – and their kindness," she says, "I just never thought there were people like that."

[OR] Helping Portland's chronically homeless is a choice to save lives: Editorial (Portland Oregonian, OR)
Oregon Live.com
(10/13/2017 7:59 PM, The Oregonian Editorial Board)
As we inch toward another winter, let's recall the grim lesson learned during the relentless cold temperatures and snow storms last December and January: Homelessness in Portland is deadly.

Four people suffering homelessness died in the first, freezing days of 2017. They were among the men and women trying to survive on our streets and struggling with drug addiction, mental illness and other disabilities. Most of these people aren't from out of town, as that tired rumor goes: Here in Portland because they heard how well we treat our homeless.

No, these are the more than 1,200 men and women considered "Chronically homeless" because they've been without permanent housing for at least a year. A good number of this unfortunate group hold Oregon birth certificates and they need more than a shelter bed or extra cash to cover rent to stay on their feet. These Portlanders need sustained help over a long period of time to find success.

Finally, local leaders are moving forward with an aggressive plan to help that happen. As The Oregonian/OregonLive's Jessica Floum reported Friday, Portland City Council will vote next week on a goal to add 2,000 housing options for this specific population over the next 10 years. Called "Permanent supportive housing," the units may be apartments or shared housing that also provide tenants with health care, addiction treatment, job coaching and other social services.

[CA] California declares emergency to fight hepatitis A outbreak (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)

SAN DIEGO (AP) — California Gov. Jerry Brown on Friday declared a state of emergency to combat a hepatitis A outbreak that has claimed 18 lives in San Diego.

Brown said the federally-funded supply of vaccines is inadequate. His proclamation allows the state to buy vaccines directly from manufacturers and distribute them.

The declaration "allows us to move very swiftly," Dr. Gil Chavez, epidemiologist at the California Department of Public Health, told reporters. He said the state would place an order Monday or Tuesday and supplies would reach the state soon after.

California has distributed 81,000 federally-funded vaccine doses since the outbreak began and local jurisdictions have acquired more but the supply is insufficient, Chavez said.

California is experiencing the largest hepatitis A outbreak in the United States transmitted from person to person — instead of by contaminated food — since the vaccine became available in 1996. The state says the majority affected are homeless, using drugs or both.

SACRAMENTO — San Francisco, Berkeley and Oakland will be able to quickly build shelters for homeless people using “extraordinary” powers to bypass regulatory hurdles under a bill Gov. Jerry Brown signed Saturday.

AB932 by Assemblyman Phil Ting, D-San Francisco, creates a pilot program allowing certain cities and counties to suspend state and local building standards for three years when a local shelter crisis is declared so that temporary shelters can be built on publicly owned or leased land. The pilot program, which will run between Jan. 1, 2018, and Jan. 1, 2021, applies to San Francisco, Berkeley, Emeryville, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Diego and Santa Clara County.

Brown wrote in his signing message that the “extraordinary grant of exception should be used wisely and expeditiously” by cities in the pilot program.

“The thousands and thousands of men and women living on our streets are looking to the leaders of these communities for decent shelter and a place of dwelling, not abandonment,” Brown wrote, adding that coupled with other housing bills, the legislation presents “a unique opportunity for creativity and compassion to the growing number of homeless people. Don’t let them down.”

Santa Rosa’s homeless shelters were in "critical need" of food, the city says.

Food normally donated to the city’s shelters has been diverted to fire evacuation shelters leaving pantries close to bare.

"Members of our community who were experiencing homelessness before the fires are in need of food at this time," the city wrote in a Saturday Facebook post. "Much of the food normally donated to the City’s homeless shelters has been diverted to local fire shelters, leaving the homeless shelters in critical need."

St. Vincent de Paul is accepting donations of unprepared foods at its 610 Wilson Street location, 8 a.m.-3 p.m. The food will be distributed to shelters throughout the city.

VIDEO. California Gov. Brown declared a state of emergency Friday because of a hepatitis A outbreak that has killed at least 18 people in the state.

The declaration allows state health officials to buy additional doses of the hepatitis A vaccine to try to halt the outbreak, which is already the nation's second largest in more than two decades. "We have the capacity to use as much vaccine as we can get our hands on," said Dr. Gil Chavez, state epidemiologist with the California Department of Public Health.

The outbreak began in San Diego's homeless community late last year, but has since spread outside the region. Los Angeles and Santa Cruz counties are also now experiencing outbreaks. 581 people in California have been sickened with the liver virus, more than half of whom have ended up in the hospital.

The virus is particularly dangerous, and can be fatal, for people who already have other liver diseases, such as hepatitis B or C. Federal health officials said last week that, even with the ongoing efforts to slow the spread of the disease, California's outbreak could last years. "Vaccinating people at risk of exposure is the most effective tool we have to prevent the spread of hepatitis A," said California Department of Public Health Director Dr. Karen Smith.

The hepatitis A shot is already required for children, but now health officials are recommending it for people who are homeless and drug users. "The general population does not have an increased risk of infection at this time," Chavez said. Hepatitis A is commonly transmitted through contaminated food. The only U.S. outbreak in the last 20 years bigger than California's occurred in Pennsylvania in 2003, when more than 900 people were infected after eating contaminated green onions at a restaurant.

As San Diego moves into a second week of operating a tent city for the homeless in Golden Hill, officials here can look to Seattle to gauge whether such temporary shelters are likely to be helpful.

The answer there appears to be yes.

Seattle was the first city in the country to use public land and public funding to support encampments. There are six there now.

According to an analysis this summer of the first three camps, they've attracted hundreds of homeless people who otherwise would be sleeping on sidewalks, under bridges or in parks.

A Bangor-area woman with extensive experience in housing and planning will begin work later this month as Rockland's community development director. Julie Hashem's hiring was announced Wednesday night, Oct. 11, by City Manager Tom Luttrell at the City Council meeting. She will succeed Audra Caler-Bell, who left in June to be Camden's town manager. Hashem currently serves as external affairs and power sector consultant for energy company Emera Maine. She worked at the Maine State Housing Authority from 2004 until 2012 and from 2000 through 2004 had worked for the Maine State Planning Office. She earned a degree in civil engineering and urban planning at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and earned a master's of business administration in business and public policy at University of California at Berkeley, Haas School of Business.

[ME] Augusta council grapples with former Statler site redevelopment (Central Maine, ME)
Central Maine
(10/15/2017 5:05 PM, Keith Edwards)
The cost of building a new road, and neighbor complaints, drive the discussion of how to make the best use of the riverfront site.

AUGUSTA — Neighbors opposed to the Augusta Housing Authority's proposal to build 34 apartments meant to be affordable to working people on the city-owned former Statler mill site say it could prevent other developers from bringing what they describe as more desirable new development to the riverside site, including condominiums and retail shops or restaurants.

However, a developer of several major area projects, who is not involved in the proposal, says an affordable housing complex could actually help, not hinder, efforts to draw more extensive development to the property that city officials have long sought to have redeveloped.

City councilors, housing authority officials and neighbors to the site discussed the proposal for some three hours Thursday, debating whether the city should strike a tax deal, and provide the land for the site at no cost to the housing authority, to help make the project happen.

Several residents of Maple Street, a residential dead-end street which as proposed would be the only way to and from the new apartments, criticized the project and said the presence of low-income housing on the site could deter those who might bring development to the site the entire community could benefit from, such as cultural offerings, or a brew pub, or who might bring higher-end housing to the spot.

[NH] Van service ends for seniors at Dover Housing Authority (Seacoast Online, NH)

(10/15/2017 6:47 AM, Brian Early)
Low-income seniors who live at the Dover Housing Authority have for years relied on a free service that transported them to medical appointments. That service will cease next month, and community members are trying to fill the gap. The free transportation service has been provided by the Hand-in-Hand Van, which originated from a federal grant. The DHA collaborated with Wentworth-Douglass Hospital to purchase the van more than a decade ago, and the hospital ran the service, said DHA Executive Director Allan Krans. While WDH operated the van, it brought seniors to a variety of medical appointments, even facilities not affiliated with the hospital. While the grant ran out after three years, Wentworth-Douglass continued the program on its own. In July, WDH sent notice to the DHA that it was discontinuing the service on Oct. 15. Dawn Fernald, director of marketing and public relations at WDH, said hospital officials, during a review of its regulations, realized the way the hospital was using the van was probably out of compliance, she said.

[NY] NYCHA to install solar panels at 14 developments, including Queens (NY1-TV, NY)

Five New York City Housing Authority, NYCHA, communities in Queens will be getting solar power. It's part of a city-wide program to bring clean and low cost energy to low to moderate income New Yorkers. During a press conference Thursday, officials at NYCHA said solar power will be installed at 14 developments including Queens Bridge North, Queensbridge South, Pomonok Houses, Carleton Manor and Beach 41st Street Beach Channel Drive. The city's goal is to install 25 megawatts of solar capacity, which would power up to 6,600 households, by 2025. Officials said this large scale effort will be instrumental in meeting the city's goal to reduce greenhouse gas emissions 80 percent by 2050. "[It's] harnessing the scale of the New York City House Authority which is the largest residential landlord in the country- um harnessing our scale to contribute to the reduction of carbon emissions and making our city a healthy and safer place to be," said Shola Olatoye, NYCHA Chair and CEO. The city is currently seeking developers to install the solar panels at the 14 sites by 2019.

The New York City Housing Authority announced today that the agency will invest in a new solar power infrastructure for 14 housing developments throughout the five boroughs.

The announcement, made by NYCHA Chairwoman Shola Olatoye and the Mayor's Office of Sustainability Director Mark Chambers, is just the latest of many initiatives meant to transition the city towards sustainable, clean energy usage. According to a press statement, the "Large-scale program" will provide "Low to moderate-income New Yorkers, including public housing residents, access to clean, low-cost energy throughout the city."

According to Olatoye, the program will not only bring the environmentally friendly power alternative to the city's densest developments, but it will also create jobs in the growing industry of solar power.

A total of four Queens developments are set to receive the installations-Queensbridge North and Queensbridge South in Long Island City, Pomonok Houses in Flushing and Beach 41st Street Beach Channel Drive in the Rockaways.

NYCHA is currently in the process of hiring a developer to install at least 25 megawatts of solar capacity by 2025.

In 2015, Mayor Bill de Blasio, Councilman Donovan Richards and the office of Gov. Andrew Cuomo buoyed a three-story, 5,500 solar panel facility at JFK Airport Park.

The project is currently the largest in the borough, producing 1.8 million kilowatt-hours each year, which is enough to power more than 244 households year-round.

[NY] A dim view of NYCHA's new solar program (Crain's New York Business, NY)

Goal is to power the equivalent of 4% of public housing units in eight years

The Housing Authority will for the first time have a solar-power footprint, though a pinky toe–print might be a more accurate description.

The agency said it will announce today its first "large-scale" solar program, which will provide "low-cost" energy to low- and moderate-income New Yorkers, including public housing residents. By large-scale, it means a program that in eight years from now will supply enough power to serve 4% of its units.

The solar power would go a lot further if Housing Authority tenants had any incentive to conserve it. Very few have meters, which the agency has been hesitant to install because it fears tenants would not adjust their habits and would be walloped by huge bills.
ADVERTISING

But the Housing Authority's own data shows its fears are misplaced. On average, one of its units with meters consumes about 25% as much power as one whose occupants pay the same rent regardless of how much electricity they use. Clearly, tenants adjust. (Crain's editorialized last Earth Day that the most energy-wasting landlord in the city is the city itself. Most of the inefficiency has nothing to do with tenant behavior, but that is no reason not to leave tenants off the hook.)

The housing agency is seeking developers to install solar power at 14 sites as the first step toward a goal of installing 25 megawatts of solar capacity, which would power up to 6,600 households, by 2025. Some perspective: The authority has more than 176,000 apartments.

Shola Olatoye, the chairwoman and CEO of the nation's largest public-housing system, and Mark Chambers, director of Mayor's Office of Sustainability, will unveil the program Friday afternoon on the roof of the New York City Lab School for Collaborative Studies, on West 17th Street in Manhattan.

[NY] Public Housing Residents Ask the Crowd to Fund Sustainability Projects (Next City)

The Rockaway Youth Task Force has a long waiting list of families who want spots in its community garden, but more of those aspiring harvesters might be tending fresh veggies soon thanks to a new crowdfunding effort by the New York City Housing Authority.

"My vision for the organization is to provide young people the tools that they need to advocate for themselves," says Milan Taylor, who founded Rockaway Youth Task Force in 2011 and was born and raised in the Rockaways, a beachside community at the far southern edge of New York City.

Most of the Rockaways was a food desert before Superstorm Sandy hit New York in 2012, and after the storm, access to fresh, healthy foods only got more limited when some retailers didn't recover. "At the same time there's plenty of fast food options around," Taylor says.

Wanting to help residents take things into their own hands, Rockaway Youth Task Force created its first community garden, right across the street from one of the city's largest public housing communities, Ocean Bay (Bayside) Apartments. No one expects the gardens to meet all the participating families' food needs, but Taylor estimates that, on average, each raised bed produces some $500 worth of food per year. What families don't need, they may choose to sell through an onsite community market.

(10/13/2017 6:55 PM, Jacqueline Palochko)
Lehigh Valley school districts and community groups that will see an influx of Puerto Ricans escaping the hurricane-damaged island likely will make changes in procedures and policies to help those families. Friday morning, a large group of community stakeholders from Northampton and Lehigh counties met at Northampton Community College to discuss ways to help families coming from Puerto Rico. School districts, for example, might have to enroll Puerto Rican children who left without their birth certificates, while housing authorities could extend the rules for how long residents can have visitors. The Lehigh Valley could see thousands fleeing Puerto Rico, Jennings said, because of the large number of families of Puerto Rican heritage already here. The most recent U.S. Census figures showed about 64,000 people of Puerto Rican heritage live in Lehigh and Northampton counties.

While schools could see a tremendous impact, housing could be a "nightmare," Jennings said. The Allentown Housing Authority is extending how long a visitor can stay in a resident's home from 14 to 90 days, said Aida Nunez, an authority program director. The 90-day extension could be extended to 180 days if the visitor shows proof of income and proof of children enrolled in school, Nunez said. Jennings proposed three "relocation advocates" - the Hispanic Center in Bethlehem and Casa Guadalupe and the Hispanic American Organization in Allentown. The three will provide families with access to health care, housing, transportation, translators and employment opportunities.

VIDEO. LEHIGH VALLEY, Pa. - The cleanup continues in Puerto Rico.

Bethlehem councilwoman and island native Olga Negron knows thousands of hurricane victims will be coming to the Lehigh Valley. "They're going to need to be connected with everything, especially jobs," Negron said.

Headed by the Community Action Committee of the Lehigh Valley, a cadre of local agencies gathered at Northampton Community College to coordinate plans for Puerto Rican refugees. "You are talking about 10,000 to 20,000 people. You bring that many people into a marketplace , you will have a profound impact on everything," said Alan Jennings of the CACLV.

The Allentown School District says already 37 kids from Puerto Rico have enrolled in the school system and they're ready for more. "The biggest thing families need to know is we do it without a lot of paperwork," said Superintendent Thomas Parker.

Allentown's housing authority has extended the 14-day guest stay for up to 180 days for family and friends form Puerto Rico. "After 90 days if they are working on bettering themselves, finding a job, we can extend and they can request an extension," said Julio Guridy from Allentown City Council.

[MD] Annapolis election focuses on future of public housing (Baltimore Sun, MD)
Baltimore Sun
(10/14/2017 6:56 PM, Chase Cook)
Annapolis public housing is one of the most commonly discussed topics in Annapolis, whether it's an election season or not.

While some of Annapolis' most serious crimes do take place in public housing neighborhoods, the majority of residents don't engage in crime and are often the most vocal in wanting help from police. "Without being overly simple, we want to see public housing survive in Annapolis," said Andre Atkins, a resident of Eastport Terrace and Harbour House.

Residents living in public housing have a hard time transitioning out into homeownership, with some deciding to stay in Annapolis public housing rather than move to Glen Burnie or other more affordable parts of Anne Arundel County. The people who stay deal with poor living conditions as dwindling federal funds make it harder for the Housing Authority of the City of Annapolis to pay for repairs and long-term maintenance.

A high-profile crime or federal chastising puts public housing in the spotlight. A definitive change might be on the horizon, one that has city officials, housing authority leaders and public housing residents excited about the prospects.

The housing authority on Tuesday voted to begin the Rental Assistance Demonstration application process, which would convert all of the authority's units into project-based Section 8 housing. This means the property is no longer traditional public housing, but it still has many of the same protections it had before the transition.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development created the program in 2012 to guarantee federal funding long-term if housing authorities transitioned away from the traditional model.

Mayor Mike Pantelides is running as the first mayor to inspect public housing residences for city rules on rental housing and building a new relationship with the authority and its board. The mayor also has touted the city's job fair initiatives and building a basketball court at Newtowne 20 as examples of his partnership in public housing.

A Richmond man has turned himself in to police in connection with a shooting last week in Gilpin Court in which the victim limped into the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority office.

Rod'Que L. Hoggard-Johnson, 24, of the 200 block of West Charity Street turned himself in Wednesday to the U.S. Marshals Regional Fugitive Task Force. He has been charged with attempted murder and use of a firearm in commission of a felony.

About 9:20 a.m. on Oct. 5, officers responded to RRHA's offices at 901 Chamberlayne Parkway for the report of a person shot in the leg.

Ingram Brown, the agency's director of human resources, used her belt as a tourniquet until medical assistance arrived. The victim was taken to a hospital with a non-life-threatening wound.

[GA] Atlanta housing agency: $120M windfall for developer in disputed deal (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, GA)
Atlanta Journal-Constitution
(10/13/2017 7:53 AM, Willoughby Mariano)
A controversial deal to require the city's low-income housing authority to sell prime parcels of vacant land to a developer would hand them over at a $120 million discount, according to estimates obtained by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

If the sale goes through, it could amount to a king-sized subsidy towards the construction of high-end, market-rate homes, and harm the city's efforts to create more affordable housing, public housing officials and affordable housing advocates said. Atlanta Housing Authority would give up control of one third of its vacant land, or about 100 acres, according to agency estimates, and there is no requirement that affordable housing be built on it.

The 2011 deal between the AHA and Integral Group came under scrutiny in March after the AJC raised questions about its terms. The deal gave Integral several years to exercise options to purchase the properties, and pricing was to be determined by a complicated formula weighted toward values that were years out of date.

Integral Chairman and CEO Egbert Perry told the AJC previously that he intended to sell homes he builds on the land at market prices.

Optioned parcels in hot neighborhoods

The deal now under dispute arranged for AHA to hold the property at the former Carver, Capitol, Grady, and Harris homes tax-free as Integral decided whether to purchase it. The terms specified that sales prices would be based in part on much lower property values that date to when Integral and the AHA first built mixed-income housing on these sites in the late 1990s and 2000s.

AHA demolished nearly all of its public housing projects during those years as part of its nationally recognized, two-decade effort to replace low-income housing through the federal HOPE VI program. It encouraged public housing authorities to form partnerships with private developers to build mixed-income housing.

AHA board members who served at the time of the deal told the AJC that they did not approve the options, and there is no evidence in U.S. Housing and Urban Development documents obtained by the AJC through a Freedom of Information Act request of a 2011 approval.

ATLANTA - A newspaper reports that a deal to require the city's low-income housing authority to sell prime parcels of vacant land to a developer would hand them over at a $120 million discount.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reports that the Atlanta Housing Authority would give up control of one-third of its vacant land - or about 100 acres - if the sale goes through.

That's according to estimates from the housing authority.

The newspaper reports that under terms of the deal, there's no requirement that affordable housing be built on the land.

The property deal has sparked outrage among local affordable housing advocates with the Housing Justice League.

[AR] Conway Housing Authority director believes in 'a hand up' (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, AR)

Mary Boyd of Conway was voted most passionate about her job by the 1997 Faulkner County Leadership Institute Class. Twenty years later, she said she feels just as strongly about the Conway Housing Authority. "The waiting list is over two years for public housing," Boyd said. Boyd is executive director of the housing authority, where she's worked for 32 years. Boyd came to Arkansas in 1981 for her then-husband's job in Morrilton. She became the assistant to the part-time Morrilton mayor, and part of Boyd's responsibility was to oversee Section 8 housing, which is rental-housing assistance through private landlords. A HUD employee inspected the units; they all passed with flying colors, Boyd said. She said the man was impressed, and he told her about an opening at the Conway Housing Authority. She was hires as assistant executive director, and four years later, became the director.

She oversees housing vouchers, two high-rises for the disabled and elderly, tax-credit properties and 154 public-housing units. "The mayor and City Council fought us all the way to the [Arkansas] Supreme Court to get the 74 family units; they didn't want any public housing, 'not in my backyard,'" she said. The Arkansas Supreme Court stated that the city had to allow the units under the Fair Housing Act. Public housing ceased being built in the 1980s, she said, but more housing is needed in Faulkner County. Boyd does not take kindly to the area being called "the projects." These are income-based family units, she said. "When you say Conway Housing Authority, you hear a change in somebody's voice. Come on, come see our place before you denigrate it," she said. In the last inspection, on a scale of 1 to 100, the Conway Housing Authority got a score of 97, she said. The Conway Housing Authority received an award from U.S. Housing and Urban Development for instituting the first police substation in public housing in Arkansas.

Volunteers from the Housing Authority of Bowling Green, the Bowling Green Noon Rotary Club and Independence Bank delivered nearly 50 beds to area families in need. Housing Authority assistant project manager Joyce Johnson said the program began three years ago when Independence Bank approached the authority about starting a Build-A-Bed project in Bowling Green. Build-A-Bed is a program Kentucky AmeriCorps started in 2009 to bring beds to homes that have a shortage or absence of beds, according to the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Service's webpage. The Housing Authority wanted to get involved in the project because of a lack of beds in some of its dwellings, Johnson said. Saturday, volunteers delivered 42 mattresses out of 50 that Tempur Sealy donated. The beds included pillows donated by St. James United Methodist Church and the other parts of a complete bed set like sheets and comforters the Housing Authority purchased with donated funds.

Abraham Williams, the Housing Authority's director, delivered beds to families Saturday, the mattresses filling the bed of the Housing Authority truck he drove. The first home he and a small group of other volunteers delivered to was a house on Clearview Avenue where DeSirea Cross raises her two daughters, ages 2 and 8. Cross said she had been gathering the materials necessary to make beds but didn't have two mattresses yet.
Williams said the first two times the Housing Authority participated in Build-A-Bed, he mainly delivered to families living in Housing Authority homes. This year, the authority is collaborating more with Warren County Public Schools, Bowling Green Independent Schools and agencies like BRADD and Community Action of Southern Kentucky to find families outside the Housing Authority in need of beds. "We were spreading it out this year," he said, adding that due to efforts over the last two years, not many housing authority families still need beds.

The Jefferson City Housing Authority plans to plant nearly 75 trees in a neighborhood after receiving a grant from the Missouri Department of Conservation. The Housing Authority received $10,000 from the MDC Tree Resource Improvement and Maintenance grant program, which provides funding to public schools, nonprofit organizations and government agencies to plant and manage trees. The MDC awarded almost $383,000 to Missouri communities through the program, according to a press release. The Housing Authority will use the $10,000 to plant about 73 trees, including maples, oaks and locusts, on Dulle Street in the spring. "We're just very excited because we think trees will improve the look and feel of the neighborhood and add to the health of the neighborhood," Housing Authority Executive Director Cynthia Quetsch said. "There's plenty of statistics that say that people who live by trees are happier and healthier. It'll also will make the area, especially Dulle Street, look so much better when they are there." On Thursday, the Housing Authority planted trees at the end of the cul-de-sac at Buena Vista Street.

Indigo Sky is one of three gaming properties owned and operated by the Eastern Shawnee Tribe of Oklahoma, which collectively employs approximately 700 people, according to a news release. Employees come largely from this region, including Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas, Caden Chase said.

The tribe's other gaming properties are Outpost Casino, also in Wyandotte, and Bordertown Casino, located near Seneca.

Indigo Sky, which first opened in 2012, now has 244 hotel rooms and features the Red Bud and Sycamore towers, poker, bingo, a fitness center, a pool, three food venues, two bars and 1,275 gaming machines. The tribe has been in the gaming industry for 32 years.

Although the casino has no immediate plans for further expansion, the tribe has received an $800,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that will allow for the construction of a shooting range and training center, to be located on 75 acres of tribe-owned land. It will include a 3,000-square-foot clubhouse, a 12-station sporting clays course, a pistol and rifle range with an earthen berm, a five stand and skeet/trap stations, Caden Chase said.

(10/15/2017 1:12 PM, Elliott Davis)
ST. LOUIS – You Paid For It has learned that the St. Louis City Health Department plans to take the St. Louis Housing Authority to court over the mice infestation problem at the Clinton Peabody public housing complex in South St. Louis.

Health Department investigators found a number of violations at the complex they wanted corrected that's contributing to the problem.

They ordered the Housing Authority to correct them. When that wasn't done Housing Authority Executive Director Cheryl Lovell was notified that her agency was being taken to court.

We have been reporting on this issue for weeks now, ever since the Housing Authority announced that it was bringing in six feral cats to tackle the mice infestation. The Health Department is not endorsing that idea.

The iconic blue flame above the former El Paso Natural Gas Co. building will be turned on. City leaders will reignite the blue flame to initiate the redevelopment of the building, which will house low-income families. This will be the first Housing Authority high-rise in El Paso. The Blue Flame Building is located at the intersection of Texas Avenue and Stanton Street in downtown El Paso. The 17-story building has been vacant for a decade.

[TX] What Forest Green Townhomes residents need to know about mold damage from floodwaters (KPRC-TV NBC 2 Houston, TX)
KPRC-TV NBC 2 Houston
(10/13/2017 7:59 PM, Leigh Frillici)
HOUSTON - Forest Green Townhomes in northeast Houston is the third complex that the Houston Housing Authority has to repair due to damages from Hurricane Harvey.

People will have to move out in order for the Houston Housing Authority to muck, gut and repair the townhomes. "My thoughts are, it's good," said Marilyn Smith, a Forest Green Townhomes resident. "They're helping. That's what we need."

Since Harvey, the HHA has had to repair a total of three complexes. In all, 950 people have to be relocated. "The downside would be my kids having to relocate, withdraw from school, the new faces and things," Smith said.

The HHA said its housing options are dwindling. There was already an affordable housing shortage in Houston and Harvey intensified the problem. So the HHA reached out to housing authorities across the nation to borrow housing vouchers that Forest Green Townhomes residents could use to pay part of the rent at other apartments. Oklahoma City answered the call. So residents are getting ready to move out, so their homes can be cleaned up. "You got to do it," Smith said. "You can't live in mold, mold up to 2 feet in your house."

Here is what Forest Green Townhomes residents need to know:

1. HHA will be on-site to help people fill out applications.
2. Nearly everyone will qualify for the vouchers. What disqualifies people is a recent felony or an increase income.
3. Residents will have first priority to return to Forest Green Townhomes once they are repaired.
4. Residents can also remain at their Section 8 housing, if they like they're new location.
5. HHA will cover moving expenses.

[OK] Cherokee Nation awarded $800K grant to build storm shelters (Tahlequah Daily Press, OK)

Cherokee Nation will install storm shelters in its Head Start campuses after recently receiving an $800,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The above-ground storm shelters will protect nearly 300 toddlers, preschoolers and staff at seven Head Start sites from severe weather and will be used as multipurpose facilities at the centers, as well. An internal notification system for staff is also being implemented during the project. "Ensuring our most valuable resource, our children, are able to stay safe and keep sheltered during a life-threatening storm gives us all a better peace of mind," Deputy Chief S. Joe Crittenden said. "Providing these additional levels of protection is a responsibility we take very seriously at Cherokee Nation. In Northeastern Oklahoma, dangerous weather is an inevitability we must prepare for, and these storm shelters will enable the tribe to offer Cherokee families a better sense of security when it comes to their kids." Cherokee Nation is one of 77 tribes in the U.S. to receive a portion of the $55.2 million awarded by HUD on Sept. 14. The Indian Community Development Block Grants are meant to improve housing conditions and community amenities and to stimulate economic development across Indian Country.

[IL] South Side congregants launch robotics training, plant to generate jobs, hope (Chicago Tribune, IL)

(10/15/2017 6:00 AM, Manya Brachear Pashman)
Trista Bonds, a robotics engineer, once felt a tinge of guilt for helping companies replace factory workers with machines. Living on Chicago's South Side, where industries have come and gone, she saw the debilitating effects of unemployment firsthand - drug abuse, poverty, and crime. So when the pastor of Bonds' 20,000-member congregation asked people in the pews to help empower the community, she embarked on a 10-year journey of recompense. Last week, Bonds and other members of Apostolic Church of God in the Woodlawn neighborhood opened a manufacturing plant on the campus of Chicago State University on the Far South Side, staffed by 25 newly trained and certified apprentices. The social enterprise, dubbed BSD Industries - Building Self Determination - last month began training another 40-plus students to hire at its own factory or help place in manufacturing jobs elsewhere.

When the church last year offered the first 40 training slots to people in the pews, 196 candidates applied. Another 40 started robotics courses last month that will eventually prepare them to do computer-assisted design, program software and run machinery. The program hopes to produce up to 120 professionals a year. The church backed the initiative by giving $100,000 to the Arthur M. Brazier Foundation, the factory's owner. The Chicago Housing Authority also provided a $2 million grant to assist with job training and development for residents and voucher holders, as a way to "Help them on their road to self-sufficiency," a CHA spokesman said. Registered as an LC3, the tax code for social enterprises that redistribute their profits, BSD appeals to socially conscious companies and institutions, Brazier said. By the end of 2018, Brazier said, BSD intends to give more than $2 million to five elementary schools and one high school in Woodlawn and to fully fund the safety initiative of 1Woodlawn, the pastor's communitywide effort to redevelop the neighborhood.

[WI] Invest Health Project connects businesses, city officials to improve housing (Eau Claire Leader-Telegram, WI)

City hopes to draw from other successful efforts

Resources sought

Bettering the health of people living in neighborhoods with significant older, run-down housing is challenging because many factors are involved, said Keith Johnathan, Eau Claire Housing Authority executive director. Local plans call for devising a plan to remodel homes in the Randall Park area that can be improved and to remove those where doing so no longer makes financial sense, he said. The project also intends to increase the number of single-family homes there.

"It is a complicated issue," Johnathan said, noting the effort will require resources in the form of ideas and money.

The recently created tax increment finance district No. 12, which includes Water Street between Second and Eighth avenues and the nearby bicycle/pedestrian trail, would help with financing. It includes $2 million to help pay for the purchase of homes in the Randall Park neighborhood that could be remodeled and sold to homeowners, helping reduce the high rental rate there.

Helene Smiar, president of the Randall Park Neighborhood Association, said she appreciates the TIF money her neighborhood would use to buy and rehab rental homes as they come up for sale with the aim of selling them as owner-occupied units. But she worries it may not be enough.

[UT] Program helps low-income Utah families gain 'essential' online access (Salt Lake City Deseret Morning News, UT)
Salt Lake City Deseret Morning News
(10/14/2017 9:05 AM, Jasen Lee)
For Machelle Lake, giving her four children the best opportunity for academic success has always been a high priority. As a single mother, that's often proved challenging, especially with few financial resources to help pay for a "luxury" like home internet service. A program aimed at helping low-income families and individuals in Utah connect to the online world has provided a means for Lake's family and others take advantage of opportunities made available through ready online access. Lake is one of more than 64,000 Utahns who have enrolled in Comcast's Internet Essentials program, which offers income-qualified households basic high-speed online service for $10 per month. Lake, 50, said she was unemployed when she signed up for the service at her Midvale home, knowing she needed to get connected if she's going to improve her life and those of her children. Machelle Lake said having the $10 internet service improved her family's life significantly by giving them access to various resources and streamlining her household duties.

While considered basic broadband service, 15 Mbps can handle high-capacity usage, explained Dee Knight, Comcast external affairs manager. Noting the growing necessity for broadband access in daily life, Knight said data suggest that 27 percent of Utahns don't have ready access to computers and the internet. Sixty-seven percent of Utah households making $35,000 or less in annual income have broadband internet at home, she said, while 94 percent of households making more than $75,000 per year have internet at home. To broaden its reach, Comcast is offering low-income individuals without children the service as a way to bring internet to more homes statewide, Knight said. The company has teamed with Utah Nonprofit Housing Corp. to expand the Internet Essentials program by providing high-speed online service, low-cost computers and a $10,000 computer lab at the Sharon Garden Apartments, a low-income rental complex at 3354 S. Sue St. Additionally, Comcast is partnering with the Utah Housing Authority and Utah Nonprofit Housing Authority to offer digital literacy training classes to residents living in low-income housing.

Napa Valley Register
(10/13/2017 7:21 AM, Henry Lutz)
A trickle of assessments continued to flow in from the wine industry on Thursday, adding shape to the scope of destruction from the wildfires that have been raging across Napa and Sonoma since Sunday night.

In an update Thursday morning, the Napa Valley Vintners reported 160 of its more than 500 members had checked in with the trade group. A tally stood at 5 physical wineries that had suffered severe losses and 11 others that took damage to their vineyards, wineries or other buildings. A complete roster of those affected was still unavailable Thursday, though reports indicated that in the Atlas Peak area, White Rock Vineyards, Signorello Estate and VinRoc winery had all suffered severe damage.

Others nearby, including Robert Sinskey Vineyards, Darioush Winery, William Hill Estate and Stag's Leap Winery, also reported damage to their properties to lesser extents. Across the valley, in the Mount Veeder region, Segassia Vineyard also reported damage due to the Partrick Road fire. It also appeared vintners in at least one affected region had been able to hold out at their property and as Thursday were still fighting to protect it.

Like many wineries throughout the valley, Tamber Bey remained closed this week during what is normally its peak season for visitors. "We thought this was going to be one of the largest weeks, given our reservation calendar," Waitte said. A silver lining for the winery is that its finished wines are stored in unaffected south Napa. That makes distribution to its wine club possible, which provides more than half of its business. "That side of the business is going OK," Waitte said.

The same could not be said for others, like Brian Arden Winery, which also sits in the evacuated Calistoga area. In a release Thursday morning, the winery noted that while it had recently processed its October shipment, the orders go through a company in Sonoma County that had also been evacuated. The winery also said it would remain closed "Until further notice and at least through the weekend."

With Wednesday's mandatory evacuation of Calistoga, all of the valley's three farmworker housing centers have closed. A spokesperson for the county Housing Authority said it was still unknown whether the Mondavi housing center, located on Silverado Trail near multiple damaged wineries, was itself damaged as of Thursday.

Coal country is finding little relief in Trump's climate actions (Los Angeles Times)

VIDEO. Every morning is filled with anxiety in this hardscrabble town so intertwined with the fortunes of its hulking coal power plant that a drawing of the facility is emblazoned on the community's police force emblem.

Locals look out their windows to see if there are clouds drifting from its massive smokestacks, indicating the plant is still running. If they don't see any, they wonder if plant owners have thrown in the towel for good.

"Everyone gets concerned when they wake up and don't see smoke coming out," said Rob Nymick, manager of the 1,700-resident borough that he says will be economically "crushed" if the plant goes dark.

As the Trump administration dismantles one of the world's most aggressive programs to confront climate change, it is invoking the suffering of communities like this one, where the brawny coal power plant that anchors the local economy teeters on insolvency.

Yet as the Trump administration declares an end to what it calls the "war on coal," Homer City isn't any less under siege.

Comparing the Environmental Impact of Building vs. Buying a Home (PLANetizen)
PLANetizen
(10/13/2017 11:19 AM, Kayla Matthews)
Which is better for the environment: buying an existing home, inefficiencies and all, or paying to build a new home with all the bells and whistles of green building technology?

As the world's human population grows, we're taking a bigger and bigger toll on the environment.

All those people need somewhere to live, and every home uses up land, energy, building materials, and other resources.

As people seek ways to reduce the environmental impact of their homes, they explore a number of different strategies. Green building trends are sweeping the nation, but many wonder if it's eco-friendlier to build a new home or buy and possibly renovate an older one.

The answer is it depends on the attributes of the home you would buy, build, or renovate.

[TX] Texans hit hard by Hurricane Harvey rethink climate change (San Antonio Express-News, TX)
San Antonio Express-News
(10/16/2017 5:00 AM, Claire Galofaro, Associated Press)
PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Jefferson County, Texas, was drowned by more than 60 inches of rain during Hurricane Harvey, which left wide swaths of the county in ruins. Last November, Jefferson flipped from voting Democratic in presidential elections to instead back Donald Trump, who has dismissed the concept of climate change as a hoax and has worked to undo regulations meant to mitigate its damage.

Scientists say climate change doesn't cause hurricanes but that warming and rising seas supercharge those already forming. Some who lost everything in Harvey's floodwaters say they're starting to take the threat of climate change more seriously now, and they want Trump to show more leadership on the issue. But this is a place that depends on the petroleum industry, and others applaud Trump's efforts to reverse environmental policies that they see as harmful.

Here are some of the voices from the rebuilding in Texas.

"IT'S A WAKE-UP CALL"

Greg Gunner slumped down on his front stoop and dropped his head in his hands, feeling for the first time since the flood claimed his home that the weight of his troubles might overwhelm him.

Day after day, he had tried to keep smiling as he pulled up the carpets and tore out the baseboards. Inside the damp house, his 99-year-old grandmother, stricken with Alzheimer's disease, lay in bed in a white nightgown and his 74-year-old mother's joints ached from rheumatoid arthritis.

Street corners around town will get a makeover through Burlington County's Community Development Block Grant program. The municipality will use the $78,000 grant to replace 19 corners, at Lilac Lane and Second Street, Lilac Lane and Third Street, Edgewood Avenue and Third Street, and Walnut Street and Burlington Avenue. Many curbs are either in poor condition or no longer comply with standards set by the Americans With Disabilities Act, according to Township Administrator Richard Schwab. The county receives funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to carry out community development initiatives directed toward neighborhood revitalization, economic development and community services. The township will also use the grant to repair 1,200 feet of sidewalk in the age-restricted Newton's Landing neighborhood.

[PA] Carlisle Borough Council approves letter of support for development (Carlisle Sentinel, PA)
Carlisle Sentinel
(10/13/2017 3:20 AM, Tammie Gitt)
Carlisle Borough Council narrowly approved a request for a letter of support for the proposed development of Phase 2 at the former Carlisle Tire and Wheel site at its Thursday meeting. Cleveland-based PIRHL had requested the letter as part of its application to the Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency for tax credits that the company then sells to investors in exchange for cash equity. Sean Crampsie, Perry Heath, Sean Shultz and Tim Scott voted in favor of sending the letter of support. Robin Guido, Dawn Flower-Webb and Deb Fulham-Winston all voted against issuing the letter. Had the letter not been issued, PIRHL representative Lara Schwager said the company would have to reevaluate its role, but there was a chance the lot located between A and B streets would remain vacant.

The vote came a week after Schwager sparred with council members on issues regarding the ownership of the property and the proposed rental units to be built at the site. Following last week's meeting, Guido said that she was told that Cumberland County Housing and Redevelopment Authority was a part owner of the project about a week earlier, and believed the staff had only been told a few days before that. "The county housing and redevelopment authority makes its money by renting properties to people of lower than average income. If they start selling off their properties they will begin to lose profits. There is no benefit for them to encourage home ownership," Guido said in an email. Guido said she and other council members only agreed to vote for the Phase 1 of the project after it was modified to include the option of home ownership after a 15-year window to satisfy the requirements of the tax credits the project was awarded.

Uniontown Herald Standard
(10/14/2017 7:16 AM, Mark Soroka)
The borough got an unexpected gift from the government Thursday morning. "It was like Christmas in October," said Councilman Larry Celaschi, during Charleroi council's monthly meeting last week. "Today I got word from the Washington County Redevelopment Authority that we were just awarded $95,000 in CDBG money for the coming year. We weren't expecting any funding for 2018. This money will help the borough to move forward with some important projects." Community Development Block Grants provide municipalities with funding for projects such as economic development, public infrastructure, property acquisition and much more. This program is administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Following a vote, council agreed to use $15,000 to $24,000 of that grant money to finish asbestos removal and complete renovations of the third-floor restrooms in the municipal building. Celaschi said the council is considering all options for using the third floor to generate revenue for the borough.

Also during the meeting, Councilman Frank Paterra asked the council to increase funding for the Charleroi Regional Police Department. He wants to see the borough add more police officers this coming year. "We are waging a war against crime in this community. And anytime you go into war, you have to start with the resources to win that war. Charleroi needs more police officers to patrol our streets," he said. Council President Paul Pivovarnik noted that the police board is requesting a 3 to 5 percent increase for the police budget. When Paterra was asked if that would be enough money to expand the police force, he replied that the figure was a conservative estimate.

[NC] Hurricane Matthew: One year later (Greenville Reflector, NC)

Mirtha Serrano thought she had her own little piece of paradise on Stokes Road. She had single-wide mobile home on a big grassy piece of land about 2,000 feet from the Tar River. When Hurricane Matthew brought rain and floods a year ago, and as the Tar River crested at 24.5 feet on Oct. 14, her little piece of paradise disappeared under the muddy waters. A year later, Serrano is among many of people in Pitt County still struggling to get back on her feet, repair her home and get back to normal. Hurricane Matthew caused an estimated $4.8 billion in damage to homes, businesses, public facilities, agriculture and roads in 50 of North Carolina's 100 counties, and damage in Pitt County has been estimated as high as $27 million. Pitt County records show about 250 structures ultimately sustained damage with 50 receiving major damage.

Securing the help for people like Serrano will be a drawn out process because it relies on state and federal funding awarded through a grant process. Earlier this year the General Assembly gave $15 million to the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency to fund the organization's Essential Single Family Rehabilitation Loan Pool Disaster Recovery program. Since the application process opened, 30 people have applied and 15 have met pre-screening requirements. Three applicants have received funding approval, said James Rhodes, Pitt County planning director. The county is partnering with the Mid-East Commission in the application process, Rhodes said, and the city of Greenville is operating a separate Single Family Rehabilitation Loan Pool Disaster Recovery program for its residents. Next week the county will submit an application for a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant disaster recovery program. Like the state grant, the county could receive up to $1 million if approved.

The City of New Bern will officially open a new park honoring local NBA hall of famer Walt Bellamy, Jr. Saturday.

Located at the intersection of Pollock, Jones, and Liberty streets, Walt Bellamy Jr. Park will open to the public during Mumfest weekend. A celebration is scheduled for 1 p.m. today. His childhood home is located just up the street from the new park at 222 Jones Street. Bellamy was a student at West Street/J.T. Barber High School and became a talented basketball player at a young age. He attended college at Indiana University and was the first overall pick in the NBA draft in 1961. He would go on to a 14-year career in the NBA, playing first with the Chicago Packers, who later became the Baltimore Bullets. Bellamy was the starting center on the 1960 U.S. Olympic Team and was later inducted into the NBA Hall of Fame.

Land for the new park was donated to New Bern in 2014 by Margaret Fulcher. The previous year, Pollock Street and the surrounding area were chosen to spearhead the Choice Neighborhoods Initiative, a program funded through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. CNI is designed to help local leaders transform struggling neighborhoods into sustainable, mixed-income communities. The process included planning for the revitalization of the Five Points Area, including improvements to the social, economic and physical fabric of the neighborhood. The creation of Walt Bellamy, Jr. Park was included in the CNI plan. The park is an example of the kind of public-private partnerships often touted by city officials.

Several important decisions will face the Community Redevelopment Agency members at the their next meeting.

They will decide if the downtown district CRA should continue to operate with changes, disband, or continue without the county's participation.

It can only exist if we continue the charade of a strong, upscale real estate market being described as "blighted" so millions in property taxes can be legally used to subsidize real estate projects.

They will also vote on whether to approve another downtown project, Washington Square, after CRA members earlier voted to approve only projects already in the pipeline. Subsidies for two large developments, the North American project and the Envision Credit Union property, were approved at the September meeting.

(10/13/2017 10:16 PM, Carmen Farrish)
VIDEO. If you were a victim of the August flood, by now you've either decided to sell your home, repair it or in the Bankston's case, "As the projections were rising, the rain was continuing to pour and we knew it was going to be bad," said Tanya Bankston. Sharon Karr with FEMA said since distributing about 4,600 MHUs last year, they've seen a decrease in use. FEMA said enough MHUs were installed to build a small city and the deadline to move out and into a more permanent place is about 4 months away, but homeowners do have options. "For those people who through no fault of their own, can't get back into permanent housing, they will be able to stay in their units but they will be paying rent and they will also have a penalty. That's $550 per month," Karr explained. She says rent will be determined by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development and based on the fair market rent rate. Karr also said some eligible homeowners will receive a letter of intent, giving them the option to buy. There are currently about 2,780 families in the MHUs, but with about 13 families a day moving out, FEMA said almost 70% of the occupants are scheduled to be home by the deadline.

Merced Sun-Star
(10/14/2017 9:01 PM, Staff)
A culinary hub for budding chefs and restaurant owners is expected to open in Shreveport as early as March 2018. The $1 million project, the result of a grant awarded to Southern University at Shreveport and a partnership with the City of Shreveport, will bring the commercial kitchen and amenities to 1210 Milam Street - currently a vacant lot. The project aims to help revitalize the Allendale and Ledbetter Heights neighborhoods. The new 5,000-square-foot culinary hub will be built on 2.2 acres and also will host office space, a conference room, cafe and coffee cafe. The purpose of the "Incubator" is to connect new chefs to resources, including a sanitary place to create their culinary masterpieces, according to an eNews letter from Southern University. The kitchen will be open to amateur chefs and restaurateurs to test their skills, learn new techniques and participate in ongoing culinary classes for reasonable fees.

The kitchen incubator is projected to create 32 jobs and bring in more than $3 million in its first phase, according to an economic impact study provided by the City of Shreveport. The Northwest Louisiana Council of Governments and the City of Shreveport received a Choice Neighborhood Planning grant in 2011. After 18 months of public outreach and engagement, the city completed a transformation plan targeting Allendale, Ledbetter Heights and the west edge of downtown, said Community Development Director Bonnie Moore. Moore added that the city and the Housing Authority of the City of Shreveport received a $1 million Choice Neighborhood Planning and Action Activity grant from the US Department of Housing and Urban Development in 2016. The grant was specifically for physical, neighborhood-based activities identified in the Transformation Plan designed to spur redevelopment.

After the Rain: The Lasting Effects of a Hurricane on Home Sales (U.S. News & World Report)
U.S. News & World Report
(10/13/2017 2:23 PM, Devon Thorsby)
It's not just about flooding or a damaged roof – a hurricane in your hometown can impact the housing market for months.
This summer's hurricane season shocked many, as storm after storm hit U.S. soil and caused insurmountable damage to homes, land and commercial property.

Hurricane Harvey made landfall in Texas on Aug. 25 rated a Category 4 hurricane. It brought high winds and flash floods, and continued to wreak havoc for nearly five days. Two locations – Nederland and Groves, Texas – reported more than 60 inches of rain. The Harris County Flood Control District estimates about 136,000 flooded structures, roughly 10 percent of structures the county has on its appraisal record.

On Sept. 10, Hurricane Irma struck the Florida Keys as a Category 4 hurricane, making its way up the state after eventually being downgraded to a tropical storm. Even as a tropical storm, buildings throughout coastal Florida and even inland were damaged from high winds, heavy rains and debris.

While the devastation for Houston and South Florida was extensive, it still wasn't the end for storm destruction on U.S. soil. Puerto Rico suffered the wrath of Hurricane Maria, a Category 5 hurricane that made landfall on Sept. 20. Getting emergency aid to island residents remains a major obstacle, not to mention the manpower required to address the extensive property damage.

The repeated weather hits have put a spotlight on the continued efforts by cities, residents, nonprofit organizations and the Federal Emergency Management Agency to help affected areas recover.

But the hurricanes' destruction doesn't stop at the immediate problems residents faced as they returned to their homes once the winds died down and floodwaters receded. The damage continues as the real estate industry in affected areas came to a screeching halt and continues to see delays in property sales.

Looking specifically at the impact on home sales, closing dates that fell during the hurricane had to be rescheduled. But once each hurricane cleared, everything has had to be re-evaluated. Even for homes that didn't experience damage, lenders have had to push back final approval of mortgages because loan underwriters couldn't get into the office, says Bruce Elliott, a Realtor in the Orlando, Florida, area and president of the Orlando Regional Realtors Association.

"It's because they couldn't get in to do their work, so it's a domino effect along the way," Elliott says.

Homes Are Shrinking in the U.S. (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg

In a reversal of a three-decade trend, U.S. homebuilders are cutting the size of the American home

In a reversal of a three-decade trend, U.S. homebuilders are cutting the size of the American home as margins are being squeezed by a shortage of land and labor. The average floor area year to date of a new house is 2,420 square feet (225 square meters), down from a record high of 2,520 set in 2015, according to a Capital Economics Ltd. analysis of federal data. Before the decline, the typical size had grown by a third since 1990.

America's newest homes are shrinking (Connecticut Post, CT)
Connecticut Post
(10/15/2017 8:42 AM, Akin Oyedele, Business Insider)
New homes being built in the US are getting smaller.

This isn't just about demand for McMansions, the extravagant suburban houses that some buyers are passing over for more practical and modern homes. Rather, it shows that builders are cutting down to provide homes that are both profitable and affordable amid a shortage of inventory, said Matthew Pointon, a property economist at Capital Economics.

The average size of new single-family homes sold in the US peaked in 2015 at 2,520 square feet, Pointon said. Land availability is also responsible; the median lot size for new homes sold last year fell to 8,428 sq. ft., the lowest in 39 years.

Less available land, higher construction costs and higher wages for builders all add up to more prudent building and higher costs for developers.

Republicans Can't Agree on Who Counts as Middle Class (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg
(10/13/2017 7:54 AM, Anna Edgerton)
House Republicans agree with President Donald Trump that they want to cut taxes for the middle class, but who fits that definition is where the consensus stops.

For some GOP members of Congress, a middle income household tops out at $100,000 a year. For others, a family making $400,000 still deserves a break.

Whatever definition they settle on will be central to determining whether the party's tax plan delivers on Trump's most basic promise: a historic middle-class tax cut.

"Our framework ensures that the benefits of tax reform go to the middle class, not to the highest earners," Trump said Wednesday in Pennsylvania. "It's a middle-class bill."

The Finance 202: House GOP may cap state and local tax deduction amid outcry from moderates (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/13/2017 8:59 AM, Tory Newmyer)
Facing a revolt from blue-state Republicans, House GOP leaders are considering scaling back their proposed repeal of the state and local tax deductions.

Ending the break raises an estimated $1.3 trillion to help pay for the party's tax code overhaul. But that would also cost the project a potentially decisive margin of Republican votes from states such as New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, where residents who rely on the deduction would see their tax burden spike.

Although the White House included a proposed repeal in its tax framework in April, President Trump learned only recently that it would pinch some middle-income taxpayers. It angered him, Bloomberg News reports, and he insisted this week that Republicans are "adjusting" the plan. That aligns him with congressional Republicans from two of his home states and beyond, who on Thursday pressed their case with House Ways and Means Chairman Kevin Brady (R-Tex.).

"No decisions have been reached or anywhere close to it, but we're having a really healthy discussion," Brady told reporters Thursday. Republicans from high-tax states who huddled with him expressed some encouragement that they will fend off a full repeal of the deduction, instead probably imposing a cap so all but higher-income earners can continue to claim it.

Brady and Ryan Mulling Big Gamble on Key Tax Deduction (Roll Call)

State and local tax deduction has its fans among rank and file, though

House Republican leaders face many decisions regarding details of a tax overhaul but perhaps none more immediately consequential than whether to roll the dice and try to eliminate the state and local tax, or SALT, deduction.

House Ways and Means Chairman Kevin Brady of Texas and Speaker Paul D. Ryan have made it abundantly clear they'd prefer to get rid of the deduction, which allows taxpayers to deduct what they pay in state and local property taxes and either state income taxes or sales taxes.

But if Brady and Ryan move forward with their plan to cut the SALT break from the code, they risk losing support from Republicans from high-tax states such as New York, New Jersey, California and Illinois, more than enough to sink the bill.

"I still believe that the current state and local tax deduction is double taxation at its worst," Brady said Thursday. "People are taxed locally and then every American — poor, middle-class, otherwise — whether they itemize or not, pays artificially higher federal taxes so some can get a tax break."

AP FACT CHECK: Trump's tax plan is far from the biggest ever (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/16/2017 5:19 AM, Calvin Woodward and Josh Boak, Associated Press)
TRUMP: "I'm giving the largest tax cuts in the history of this country." — comments Tuesday after meeting Henry Kissinger.

THE FACTS: His tax plan is, at most, fifth largest in its estimated cost, says Marc Goldwein of the nonpartisan Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. It could end up being even lower on the ladder historically.

The estimated cost of the tax plan has dropped by half or more since the spring, when only the contours were known. In an analysis in April, Goldwein's group found that the $5.5 trillion plan that was then expected would have been the third largest since 1940 as a share of gross domestic product, behind President Ronald Reagan's package in 1981 and tax cuts enacted in 1945 to phase out revenue generated for World War II. But, citing estimated costs of $1.5 trillion to $2.5 trillion for Trump's plan now, Goldwein said several other historically significant tax cuts also would surpass Trump's: from 2013 and 1964.

TRUMP: "Since the election on November 8th, I've increased the value of your U.S. assets by more than the $20 trillion that we currently owe." — comparing rising values with the national debt, in a speech Wednesday to truckers in Pennsylvania.

THE FACTS: Trump's suggestion that his election is the solitary explanation for higher stock and home prices does not reflect how the economy works. Trump's election and the promise of a tax overhaul certainly helped the stock market at first. But recent gains also reflect better global growth and other factors that are beyond the president's control.

Most Americans' primary asset is their home, and there is little evidence that home values are rising because of Trump's presidency. Much of the increase in home values reflects a dwindling supply of properties on the market relative to demand from would-be buyers. People's net worth has improved because mortgage debt is being repaid, increasing the equity they have in their homes.

Meantime, the International Monetary Fund expects world economic growth will reach a six-year high this year. Three-quarters of the globe is experiencing growth, the first synchronized worldwide upswing in a decade. That's a big boost for U.S. companies that earn much of their money overseas, and a lift for the U.S. stock market.

Americans need an environment that supports building financial security (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/13/2017 10:56 AM, Clitnon Key and Katy Davis)
Millions of Americans are one unexpected expense away from financial distress, as evidenced recently by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's financial well-being survey showing more than 40 percent of U.S. adults have difficulty making ends meet.

The CFPB's findings are consistent with The Pew Charitable Trusts's own research, which finds a third of households have no money they consider savings, and 40 percent do not have the cash on hand to handle a $2,000 expenditure.

As a result, Pew's data show that more than half of people hit with a significant but not uncommon financial shock in 2014 and 2015 — such as a health emergency or losing a job — ended up having trouble meeting their financial obligations.

Yet, most consumers have access to savings accounts, and Pew's data clearly show a strong desire to save. So why are so many people saving so little?

Senate should vacate the harmful consumer banking arbitration rule (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/13/2017 9:30 AM, Keith Noreika)
When the Senate returns from recess, it will have the opportunity to consider vacating the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's final rule related to arbitration agreements. In making that decision, senators must ask whether the rule achieves its intended purpose of increasing compliance with consumer protection laws and improving the treatment of consumers without creating other significant harm and increasing costs.

In my view, the CFPB has failed to provide the data to support that case and failed to disclose the costs to consumers that will likely result from the rule's implementation. Consumers deserve better, and so do small and regional banks. I first raised concerns about the rule shortly after becoming acting U.S. Comptroller of the Currency in June.

As part of our statutorily required consultative role, I had questions about the impact of the rule on the safety and soundness of community banks and its effect on consumers that the CFPB's analysis did not answer. I asked Director Richard Cordray to hold off publishing the rule so that the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency could conduct an independent review of the data and analysis used to develop and support the rule.

Instead, the CFPB pushed ahead. It published the rule on July 10 and only afterward provided the data and analysis for the OCC's review. The bureau's supporting material stated that analysts could not find any evidence to indicate that banning mandatory arbitration agreements would increase costs to consumers.

Wells Fargo profit falls on legal costs (USA Today)
USA Today

VIDEO. The ghosts of financial scandals past continue to weigh down Wells Fargo's present and future.

The U.S. banking giant on Friday reported earnings that badly lagged Wall Street forecasts as Wells Fargo copes with a scandal over millions of unauthorized accounts and investigations of its mortgage practices.

The San Francisco-based company said its quarterly profit dropped 18.6%, an announcement that sent Wells Fargo shares down nearly 3.5% at $53.29 in afternoon trading.

Wells Fargo reported earnings of 84 cents per share on net income of $4.57 billion. The result compared with $5.64 billion, or $1.03 a share, for the same period last year. The outcome also missed the forecasts of $1.03 earnings per share and net revenue of nearly $5.14 billion in a survey of financial analysts by S&P Capital IQ.

Congress takes Wells Fargo, Equifax to task; now it must act (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/13/2017 1:44 PM, Jim Lardner)
Republicans and Democrats have found something they enjoy doing together - raking Wells Fargo and Equifax over the coals.

At a Senate Banking Committee hearing last week, their joint target was Wells Fargo CEO Timothy Sloan, summoned back to explain the sharply increased victim toll and ever-expanding scope of his company misdeeds.

Sloan portrayed Wells Fargo as a humbled company on the path to recovery, but lawmakers of both parties questioned whether a 30-year insider was really the right guy to lead a corporate cleanup. "If you haven't changed the people, it's quite difficult to change the culture," Sen. Tim Scott observed, echoing the sentiments of Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who told Sloan that, "Wells Fargo needs to start over, and that won't happen until the bank rids itself of people like you."

Equifax CEO Richard Smith endured a grilling that was equally bipartisan and considerably more prolonged. Testifying on three successive days before three congressional committees, Smith was repeatedly challenged over the practice of charging consumers to monitor misuse of their credit records and purge errors. "I don't pay extra in a restaurant to prevent the waiter from spitting in my food," Sen. John Kennedy pointed out.

Now what? Will lawmakers actually do anything about the problems they railed against?

Thursday, Rep. Patrick McHenry introduced a bill that would subject the "Big Three" credit bureaus, Equifax, Experian and TransUnion, to regular cybersecurity monitoring and phase out their use of Social Security numbers.

A tougher and more important test of congressional resolve involves the forced-arbitration clauses that both Equifax and Wells Fargo have used for years to stifle consumer complaints and keep illicit practices under wraps.

House Panel's Dodd-Frank Tweaks Won't Add Up to a Big Number (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg.com

(10/13/2017 4:22 PM, Elizabeth Dexheimer)
President Donald Trump promised to do "a big number" on the Dodd-Frank Act. A slate of bills House Republicans will take up Wednesday shows how difficult it is to get anything big through Congress these days.

The House Financial Services Committee is set to consider almost two dozen legislative proposals targeting financial rules. Instead of gutting the Volcker Rule, shutting down the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau or enacting other sweeping overhauls, most would make incremental tweaks.

The piecemeal approach of advancing one-off bills is the latest sign that Republicans don't expect to dismantle rules stemming from the 2008 financial crisis anytime soon, lumping it in with other deferred priorities such as repealing Obamacare and overhauling tax policy. "Everyone's known all along that major financial regulation reform just wasn't going to pass this Congress," said J.W. Verret, a former congressional staffer who is a scholar at the Mercatus Center at George Mason University. "Even bipartisan issues that are coming up this week, even if they do rack up big margins of support in the House, it doesn't necessarily translate in the Senate."

While most of the legislation the House is considering is limited in scope, specific companies and corners of Wall Street could benefit from enactment of certain items.

One measure under consideration would change the criteria for determining whether banks are considered systemically important, potentially freeing regional lenders such as Huntington Bancshares Inc. or firms like American Express Co. from some of the most stringent regulatory oversight. Another bill would make it easier for heirs of wealthy individuals whose money is run by a family office to invest in hedge funds, private-equity firms and other potentially lucrative investments.

One proposal could bring custodial banks like State Street Corp. and Bank of New York Mellon Corp. a reprieve from some capital requirements.

Many of the bills are pieces of the Financial Choice Act, a sweeping Dodd-Frank overhaul that the House passed in June. Representative Jeb Hensarling, the Texas Republican who leads the Financial Services Committee, has said that he hopes the Senate will consider the Financial Choice Act in full, but that he will advance parts of it separately.

Want to be a landlord? These are the top markets this fall for investing in rental homes (CNBC)
CNBC
(10/13/2017 2:05 PM, Diana Olick)
High prices and a tight supply of houses for sale are not exactly the best mix for homebuyers, but they're even worse for investors looking to become landlords. Sure, both tenant demand and rental returns are also high, but if the cost to get in is too high, the math doesn't work.

The good news is, as always, all real estate is local, so while the national picture may look bleak, certain local markets still offer lucrative options.

Texas, which continues to see strong growth in both employment and home construction, appears to be a landlord's dream state.

Three of the top five markets for investors, according to a new ranking by real estate sales and auction company TenX, are in the Lone Star State. San Antonio tops the list, followed by Fort Worth and Dallas.

While home prices are rising fast in Texas, they remain low compared with other hot markets, like most of California. In addition, while Hurricane Harvey did not hit these top cities, the storm exacerbated the state's labor shortage by creating massive reconstruction needs in Houston. Tight labor will reduce new construction in the rest of the state, squeezing inventory and not only pushing home prices higher but also propping up rental demand.

"If you look at our report probably eight or nine of the top 20 markets in terms of housing performance are in either Texas or Florida," said Rick Sharga, executive vice president at TenX. "The Florida markets will be more directly impacted because Irma hit everything, but even in Texas, a lot of the construction and labor and materials and so forth that's been going to build new properties in Dallas and Fort Worth and San Antonio might get diverted to rebuild Houston, and that could have a noticeable impact on home sales and home starts over the next six to nine months."

San Antonio has clocked strong population growth for six years straight, and its payrolls stand at an all-time high. Fort Worth's population has also been rising far faster than the national average. Dallas' economy cooled slightly this year but continues to expand after a recent tech and financial services boom. Home prices there, hovering at more than 50 percent above their pre-recession peak, are still considered affordable with room to grow.

Rounding out the top five are Columbus, Ohio, and Tampa, Florida.

Both offer comparatively low entry costs and high returns. Columbus may seem surprising, given weaker job growth in the Midwest overall, but the city has outperformed its region with both employment and population growth. There's something of a rebirth happening in Columbus, with additional urban developments springing up outside its downtown, luring new companies and workers.

Nevada senators urge mortgage relief for Las Vegas victims

Monday Morning Cup of Coffee takes a look at news coming across HousingWire's weekend desk, with more coverage to come on larger issues.

Every day, it seems there's a new rumor surrounding the apparently looming departure of Consumer Financial Protection Bureau Director Richard Cordray.

The rumors last month were that Cordray was going to announce his resignation and run for Ohio governor simultaneously, during a Labor Day weekend speech at the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO).

The speech happened, but Cordray didn't make any big announcements.

Cordray gave another speech in Ohio a few days later, fueling speculation that he might announce his resignation there. Didn't happen.

Blue Counties Are Losing Residents Thanks to Rising Housing Costs (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg
(10/16/2017 5:00 AM, Prashant Gopal)
More people are leaving "blue" counties, those that lean Democratic, than moving in. But politics aren't the reason -- home prices are.

In the first half of the year, 7.4 percent more people migrated out of blue counties in the U.S. than came in, compared with a 1 percent gain for red, or Republican, areas, according to an analysis by brokerage Redfin Corp. of online home-search data. "Purple" counties -- those with a more balanced mix of party affiliations -- saw a gain of 3.9 percent.

On average, a home in a blue county costs about $360,000, more than 62 percent higher than the typical residence in red counties, Redfin said. "We see a great number of residents moving to red counties where they can afford the lifestyle they want," Redfin Chief Economist Nela Richardson said.

Fed agencies grades slip in "plain writing" (Quad-City Times, IA)
Quad-City Times
(10/13/2017 5:13 AM, Ed Tibbetts)
The federal government got lower grades this year in how clearly it communicates with the public on selected writing samples, according to a new study released Thursday.

The study, the sixth annual by the Center for Plain Language, a Virginia-based non-profit, rates 21 federal agencies on plain writing. And in its "2017 Federal Plain Language Report Card," it said the overall grade was a B. That's about half a grade lower than the previous year. In numeric terms, the center said, the grade fell by 11 percentage points.

Rep. Dave Loebsack, D-Iowa, who helps publicize the report card, said on a conference call the new grades are disappointing. "I will say as a former college teacher, I wouldn't be happy with that. I'm not sure the American public should be, either," he said.

The center rated agencies on Frequently Asked Questions, or FAQ, pages, as well as data infographics.

The Social Security Administration rated the highest with an A+ for its FAQ and a B for its data infographic. The Department of the Treasury got a D+ for its FAQ and a C- for its infographic. Treasury and the Department of Housing and Urban Development were the only agencies that got grades as low as a D+. The center said it hadn't given out anything lower than a C for the past two years.

[FL] Hurricane costs take toll on state budget (Lakeland Ledger, FL)
Lakeland Ledger
(10/13/2017 7:55 AM, Lloyd Dunkelberger)
TALLAHASSEE — Hurricane recovery efforts have already cost the state budget more than $141 million and are likely to increase, the Senate Appropriations Committee was told Thursday.

"The news isn't good," Senate Appropriations Chairman Jack Latvala, R-Clearwater, said. "And I don't think it's fake news either."

The extra spending has been authorized by Gov. Rick Scott in a series of budget amendments, using his emergency powers invoked because of Hurricane Irma last month.

A new tally of the amendments on Thursday included: $25 million for the Florida National Guard; $12 million for food, ice, water and transportation; $36 million for debris removal; $6 million for mosquito control; and $27.6 million related to the operation of the state Division of Emergency Management.

[FL] Housing market at a regulatory crossroads (Herald Tribune, FL)
Herald Tribune.com
(10/15/2017 10:15 AM, Chris Wille)
With home prices and sales continuing to rise across Southwest Florida, the state and the country, the real estate market appears set for a sunny future.

The talk in some quarters, though, brings up worries that another housing bubble could be developing, conceivably bursting into a runaway fire that scorches the economy again.

As unlikely as that is, some powerful political and business interests are bent on repealing some of the regulations on the financial sector that were adopted in the midst of widespread abuses in the banking and investment markets that beget the Great Recession.

September's report by property data aggregator CoreLogic once again reflects a steady climb in housing prices. August figures compared with the same month last year show the national increase at 6.9 percent, Florida at 6.2 percent and Sarasota-Manatee at 3.9 percent. CoreLogic projects Florida's home values will increase 6.6 percent over the next 12 months as the country's rate rises by 4.7 percent. The company's chief economist, Frank Nothaft, said that during the past three years, CoreLogic's national index shows annual price growth from 5 percent to 7 percent. Home values in Florida still stand at 18 percent below pre-recession peaks.

[TN] Is Wall Street upending Nashville neighborhoods? These professors want to know (The Tennessean, TN)
The Tennessean
(10/13/2017 10:52 AM, Mike Reicher)
VIDEO. Wall Street investors have snapped up thousands of homes in Middle Tennessee to convert them to rentals, and observers are wondering what effect they'll have on neighborhoods.

A professor at Tennessee State University has teamed up with another researcher to systematically study the phenomenon.

They want to figure out whether these real estate investment trusts, or REITs, drive up sales prices because of increased competition and worsen the region's affordable housing crisis. In the neighborhoods they target, do fewer people own their own homes? Do REITs increase rents at a faster pace than others? And what type of neighborhoods do the companies pick in the first place?

"More and more there's concern in the community that, as the homeownership rate declines, it's no longer a poor person's or a working poor person's concern. It's a crisis in general," said Ken Chilton, associate professor in the Department of Public Administration at TSU. "We'd like to spark a larger community debate about housing and housing affordability."

[TX] Many students displaced by Harvey, but districts don't see big dip in attendance (Houston Chronicle, TX)
Houston Chronicle
(10/16/2017 12:23 AM, Shelby Webb)
But schools work to welcome many of the displaced

Antwon Patrick started third grade just a month ago, but he's already been enrolled in two schools.

His family's first-floor Houston apartment flooded during Harvey, causing mold concerns. On Sept. 11, the day after his 9th birthday, Patrick began school in Alief ISD's Outley Elementary.

"It's cool because at my old school they didn't have this type of playground," he said. "They just had soccer fields, but here they have slides and everything."

During the height of Hurricane Harvey, school district officials worried enrollments would plummet as thousands of families fled Houston for Dallas, Austin and other drier regions. While many families lost their homes, it seems most relocated within the region and often within the boundaries of their existing school district.

[TX] Distressed Investors Are Already Buying Houston Homes for 40 Cents on the Dollar (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg
(10/16/2017 5:00 AM, Prashant Gopal)
Flooded homes, big money, and hard choices.

Bryan Schild drives through the byways of Houston looking for what could be the investment opportunity of a lifetime: homes selling for as little as 40¢ on the dollar. "We Pay Cash For Flooded Homes $$$$$$$$ Don't fix it, sell it. Quick close," read the signs piled in the back seat of his Ford pickup.

Schild stops by a ranch-style house where 74-year-old Paul Matlock lives with his wife, disabled from multiple sclerosis. Matlock is desperate to leave and is considering Schild's offer of $120,000—half the home's value three weeks earlier. A half-dozen other investors have made offers, one as low as $55,000. "The whole thing makes me feel like there's a bunch of vultures sitting on my back fence," Matlock says. "They're waiting for the dead body to fall over."

It's axiomatic on Wall Street that the time to buy is when fear overtakes greed—when blood (or, in this case, water) is in the streets. Now some are eyeing the billions of dollars in hurricane-ravaged property in Texas and Florida and deciding it may be the time to take out their checkbooks. Investors such as Schild figure they can buy low, either fix up and flip the houses or rent them out for several years, and unload them later, doubling their money or more.

Those kinds of bets have often paid off. Buyers who snapped up co-ops and office towers when New York was near bankruptcy in the 1970s made a killing. More recently, companies including Blackstone Group LP and other marquee names bought foreclosed homes after the 2008 financial crisis and are sitting on billions in potential gains.

[AZ] Tiny home trend slow to grow in Arizona, but developers plan new projects (Tucson Arizona Daily Star, AZ)
Tucson Arizona Daily Star
(10/13/2017 5:15 AM, Jesse Stawnyczy)

PHOENIX – Tiny housing has been a hot topic the past few years, with shows such as "Tiny House Hunters" and others appearing on HGTV and tiny house communities popping up across the country.

The trend has flourished in densely populated cities such as New York and Seattle. Some smaller communities – such as Spur, Texas – have embraced the movement as well.

Despite the growth, the trend has struggled to gain a significant foothold in Arizona. One tiny house builder said his company has built 10 tiny houses since 2015, and most of those went out of state. In terms of more permanent micro-housing communities, such as "container" and studio apartments, there are only a handful of examples in the Phoenix metro area.

Tiny housing, sometimes referred to as micro-housing, generally refers to a house or small living space that is typically more than 300 square feet but less than 500 square feet, according to the Urban Land Institute.

EAST CHICAGO — Light fixtures free of PCB components and drinking water fountains with lead-filtering systems will be installed at two of the city's schools, including one building where students from the USS Lead Superfund site were transferred last year, officials said.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency conducted visual inspections but did not test light fixtures to assess which might contain polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, the agency said. PCBs are potentially carcinogenic and can cause a wide range of adverse health effects.

EPA said it decided to replace fixtures at the new Carrie Gosch Early Learning Center and Block Middle School based on age and type of ballasts in use.

Heritage Environmental Services LLC agreed to install the new energy-efficient, PCB-free lighting and drinking water fountains with lead-filtering systems as part of a legal settlement unrelated to the city, EPA said.

[CO] Improved code would help home and business owners save money (Colorado Springs Gazette, CO)
Colorado Springs Gazette
(10/13/2017 6:42 AM, Jim Riggins)
El Paso County has the opportunity to save home and business owners substantial sums of money, and pour millions of dollars into the local economy if they follow the lead of counties all across the U.S. and adopt a modern energy code for new building construction. However, the local Housing and Building Association (HBA) is fighting hard to gut and weaken the new code with local amendments.

The Pikes Peak Regional Building Department (PPRBD) which serves all of El Paso county, currently operates under the 2009 International Energy Conservation Code (IECC). Having passed on adopting the 2012 IECC, PPRBD is now working to adopt the 2015 IECC. This code is a national effort and the culmination of years of building science analysis, field studies, and input of numerous stakeholders, including the home building industry. In a cold weather climate zone such as El Paso County where greater than 40 percent of building energy goes to space heating, the life cycle cost savings are large, and demonstrated with real world data of regions that have adopted the new code. Additionally, given the tight relationship between building efficiency, comfort and safety, the 2015 IECC enhances comfort and improves indoor air quality. Further, an improved code provides a significant contribution to Colorado Springs Utilities' energy efficiency goals, which keeps utility rates lower for ratepayers. It also helps the region meet the goals for sustainable energy and other topics set forth in the region's guiding document: Looking to Our Future - Pikes Peak region 2030.

However, what seems like an obvious path to providing more affordable, comfortable and healthy housing and commercial businesses is being challenged by the Housing and Building Association (HBA) due to the added cost of construction to comply with the code, and PPRBD is set to adopt the HBA amendments that seriously degrade the code. This focus on the initial cost of construction, ignores the significantly reduced cost of ownership for the home and building owners.

(10/13/2017 9:15 AM, Russ Wiles)
VIDEO. Amazon's search for a second home to complement its Seattle headquarters has prompted all sorts of cities to enter the competition. The ultimate winner will land up to 50,000 high-paying jobs, a corporate giant on the cutting edge of innovation and huge bragging rights that could lead to more business expansions and startups.

Amazon has specified a few key criteria in the search. Its wish list includes a metro area of at least 1 million people located in a state with a stable, business-friendly environment. The retailing and e-commerce leader also would like to set up shop in a place with a solid educational system, ample technical talent nearby, good roads, mass-transit capabilities and a major international airport.

What the company hasn't specified is moderate housing prices for the employees it will relocate and the staff it will hire. But it's hard to see how home values won't factor into the equation, especially given the recent jump in prices in the Seattle-Tacoma metropolitan area.

[CA] California wildfires: Housing markets will likely feel devastating effects for years (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)
San Francisco Chronicle
(10/13/2017 10:48 AM, Clare Trapasso, Realtor.com)
The wildfires ravaging Northern California's wine country will make the housing crunch even worse—it could take up to a decade to go back to normal.

Late Sunday evening, Russel Lee was relaxing on his deck in Santa Rosa, CA, drinking a glass of wine. Then he smelled the smoke. He checked the local police scanner app on his phone and learned that wildfires blazing out of control were moving in on his four-bedroom townhouse in Northern California's Sonoma County.

The 63-year-old real estate agent and his wife, an artist, dug out their three cat carriers and frantically began packing some clothes, valuables, and important paperwork. At around 1 a.m., the police came banging on the door, yelling: "Get out now!" The Lees made it to a makeshift emergency shelter at the local veterans center, along with some folks who hadn't had time to change out of their bathrobes and slippers before fleeing.

Their home was burned to rubble, and they lost nearly everything—including one of their beloved cats, Alya, who refused to get into her carrier in time. His wife's artwork, much of which she had already sold online, was all destroyed along with the antique furniture that had been in his family for generations. The couple are now living in their motor home parked on their friend's driveway.

But despite their devastating losses, Lee and his wife know they were lucky.

The wildfires ripping through California have at least 20 different names, in 10 different counties.

The Tubbs Fire in Sonoma County. The monster Atlas Fire in nearby Napa County. The Cascade Fire in rural Yuba County.

And because this is California, with its diverse populations and wildly contrasting geography, the paths to recovery will be a whole lot different, too, according to experts on natural disasters. The survivors who are likely to struggle the most, study after study shows, are the people already struggling: the poor, the disabled, the elderly and children.

Even with financial assistance – and that is iffy – the ability to readily regroup may be out of reach for many Californians displaced by the terrible fires of 2017.

After the fires had roared through, Sonoma County Sheriff Rob Giordano drove through the wreckage of Santa Rosa's Larkfield-Wikiup neighborhood.

Twisted beams and garage doors crumpled like old newspapers had replaced street after street of tidy homes. The hubcaps from charred cars had melted into rivulets of gleaming aluminum that pooled in the gutters.

"I don't even think I understand what the damage toll is going to be, and I have a better handle on it than most," Giordano told The Times on Friday. "Santa Rosa will be a different planet. There is so much to rebuild. It will absolutely change the community."

Thousands of other Santa Rosa residents also struggled Friday to come to grips with the magnitude of their losses from a firestorm — among the state's most devastating — that has coursed through California wine country since Sunday night, causing at least 34 deaths and damaging thousands of buildings.

VIDEO. Ethan de Seife and Laura Holtan moved to California's Sonoma County from Vermont last year with their newborn son, two cats and a dog in tow, immediately running up against a harsh reality: the state's housing market is expensive, and inventory-starved.

It took the couple a month of scouring online listings and vetting properties before they secured a four-bedroom house to rent for $2,800 a month in the Hidden Valley neighborhood of Santa Rosa.

Now, they have to start again -- while picking up the pieces of a life reduced to rubble. De Seife and Holtan awoke in the middle of the night on Oct. 9 to the smell of smoke and were soon evacuated as fire roared toward the area, ultimately burning down their house. The family is bunking with friends south of San Francisco and weighing offers of assistance while trying to determine a more permanent living plan, which may ultimately mean leaving the state.

"There's nothing off the table," said De Seife, 44. "If we can't get any of these things going, we might just go."

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — Nathalie and Michael Internicola had about 15 minutes to grab what they could as the flames roared toward their house, and it wasn't much: Some clothes, passports, their phones. They are grateful to be alive, they said, but as for what comes next and how and where they might rebuild their lives, they don't have a clue.

"We're staying with friends as long as they will have us; then we don't know," said Ms. Internicola, 51, whose home in Santa Rosa burned to the ground, along with about 60 others in their neighborhood. "We are desperately looking for a house we can rent, but there's just nothing available, because there are so many people displaced."

Though some of the fires in Northern California, the deadliest on record in the state, had been partly contained by Sunday afternoon, others were still raging. At least 35 people have died, and the count is likely to rise as the search for victims continues.

But for people like the Internicolas who escaped in time but lost their homes, the journey is just beginning. And the daunting implications of starting over, multiplied by thousands, are rippling through the state. About 100,000 people have been evacuated from fire zones, and some 5,700 houses and buildings have been destroyed.

[PR] Electricity, Water and Shelter Issues Plague Older Adults in Puerto Rico (U.S. News & World Report)
U.S. News & World Report
(10/13/2017 2:04 PM, Lisa Esposito)
Hurricane relief efforts are underway to deliver health care and provisions.

The doctor's office closed on Tuesday. The electricity went down around 11 a.m., making it impossible to see any more patients, says Dr. Helen Rosa, a geriatrician and family practitioner in Plaza Las Americas, a major shopping area in San Juan, Puerto Rico. "We have elevators but if we don't have electricity, patients can't come up," she says.

Without electricity, there's no working air conditioning for patients in their 80s and 90s. Electronic health records fade in and out. When Rosa can't prescribe electronically, patients who call her office - assuming phone service is available - can't obtain refills for needed medications. As older patients do their best to deal with the devastation three weeks after Hurricane Maria, it's no wonder they're stressed out, Rosa says. Ongoing power shortages affect every aspect of their lives, amplified by health, frailty and mobility issues. "Today, patients I saw had to go 10 floors down in the building where they live because they do not have electricity," she says.

Usually, her practice offers extended hours to accommodate family caregivers who can only bring in patients after work. If not, she says, at least one of her patients may need to go to the hospital if her condition worsens. "We want to get medical offices that give specialty and primary care up and running, so hospitals don't get this overflow of patients who, to begin with, should not be there." "But as a doctor I can tell you, we need electricity so we can take care of our patients." Many older patients need access to medications for chronic health conditions like diabetes.

Last week, Direct Relief, a humanitarian medical aid organization, shipped about 16,000 doses of insulin to Puerto Rican public health agencies.

Since Hurricane Maria hit the island, the relief organization has been shipping emergency health kits via FedEx, including diabetes supplies, antibiotics and medications to treat high blood pressure and asthma.

In addition to pills, inhalers and injectable drugs, many older Americans rely on nutritional products like Ensure to maintain their health.

Just returned from Puerto Rico, Taugher says he found "a very challenging situation. The magnitude of the storm really touched every part of the island." As he and a fellow team member assessed the situation in areas including San Juan, Mayagu00fcez and Aguadilla, they saw drastically reduced cell service, and severe fuel and power shortages.

TOA BAJA, Puerto Rico (AP) — Arden Dragoni and his family lost everything when Hurricane Maria ravaged across Puerto Rico last month. Only a few walls of their wooden home still stand. Their clothes, furniture, other household goods and their old car are ruined.

Dragoni, his wife Sindy, their three children and dog Max are now living at a shelter set up inside a school in this town on Puerto Rico's northern coast. He supported the family doing construction work, but his employer is out of business, leaving him and his family without a source of income.

They are among the more than 5,000 people who lost their homes and are now living in temporary shelters across the U.S. territory in areas still mostly without electricity or water three weeks after the storm.

The people in the shelters mostly lost their homes to floodwaters, which were particularly bad in communities such as Toa Baja, west of San Juan. Murky water surged through houses and apartments, carrying away appliances and destroying everything inside.

Dear Principals for Housing, PIH, CPD, FHEO, OGC and CIR,

I wanted to make sure you have received a copy of this letter from the National Housing Law Project (NHLP), regarding the implementation of RAD and to let you know that the Office of Recapitalization is developing a status report for internal HUD use on the items raised in the letter, as a precursor to determining how to respond.

The letter arrived the evening before four HUD staff (from Housing, CPD and FHEO) appeared at the NHLP conference to discuss RAD. At the conference, I also had a hallway conversation with a staffer from Rep. Waters' office. It was clear the staffer was very aware of the letter as she has a close relationship with the key point person on RAD at NHLP.

As some of you are relatively new to working with RAD, please know that RAD has extremely rigorous resident protections in place and the RAD program's requirements regarding relocation, right of return, transparency, fair housing and many other issues are more stringent than applied to other HUD programs. In the last several months, we have also stood up new monitoring and enforcement measures to back recently enhanced resident protection requirements. PD&R is also mid-stream in a major evaluation of the program, including its impact on residents, and GAO is nearing completion of its own review of the program.

None of the issues described in the letter are new issues. Many of NHLP's concerns were specifically addressed by the RAD Fair Housing, Civil Rights and Relocation Notice issued in November, 2016, which resulted in a drop-off in problem situations as PHAs become familiar with the clearer, and more stringent, requirements. One of NHLP's points was addressed several weeks ago, and several are being addressed in the RAD completion review protocols which we are rolling out later this month. NHLP regularly provides suggestions on the balance between the benefits and regulatory burdens of potential RAD requirements and this letter is a compilation of their feedback from the last year or so.

Recap will take the lead in organizing the response, but I wanted to make sure you are aware of the letter in case it comes up in your work. Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Tom

Re: Concerns with the Rental Assistance Demonstration (RAD) Program

Dear Secretary Carson:

The National Housing Law Project (NHLP) writes to express concerns with the implementation and expansion of the Rental Assistance Demonstration (RAD) program and its impact on both low-income families and the nation's affordable housing stock.

NHLP is a legal advocacy center focused on increasing, preserving, and improving affordable housing; expanding and enforcing the rights of low-income tenants and homeowners; and increasing housing opportunities for protected classes. Our organization provides technical assistance and policy support on a range of housing issues to legal services attorneys and other advocates nationwide. In addition, NHLP hosts the national Housing Justice Network, a vast field network of over 1,000 community-level housing advocates and tenant leaders, many of whom practice in jurisdictions that have converted properties to RAD, are in the processing of converting properties to RAD, or wish to convert properties to RAD.

We support the goal of the RAD program to preserve affordable housing and address the $49 billion backlog of public housing capital needs, but we are troubled that the RAD program has nearly quadrupled in size over the last five years without any evaluation of its impact on tenants. The program has significant implementation challenges that have had drastic consequences for residents and the long-term preservation of affordable housing. These challenges are not limited to a few select owners or housing authorities, but are reflective of problems facing RAD conversions across the country and result from limited guidance and oversight in the program.

RAD cannot be a complete substitute for adequate funding of the public housing program, and it must be adequately implemented, monitored, and evaluated before further expansion occurs. HUD must take a more proactive role to enforce tenants' rights and prevent the loss of affordable housing.

Defining Success in the RAD Program

We urge HUD to reconsider how it defines the success of the RAD program. Currently, HUD claims that the RAD program has been successful because of (1) the number of RAD properties that have officially converted, (2) a reduction in HUD's processing times between RAD application and closing, and (3) the amount of money "leveraged" for construction investments. While these may be important indicators of success, they lack clarity and do not consider the impact of the RAD program on low-income tenants, the quality of the rehabilitated RAD-converted housing, or the future preservation of the property as affordable housing. The latest HUD-commissioned RAD evaluation (conducted by Econometrica, Inc.) focused only on the amount of funding leveraged by the RAD program. By the report's own admission, it did not look at the impacts of the RAD program on tenants. In fact, the report made several troubling findings that impact tenants, including:

- PHAs often sought to use RAD as an opportunity to remove their properties from the statutory and regulatory control of the public housing program, and
- PHAs are not necessarily proposing their neediest projects for RAD conversion and may be choosing the projects with the least amount of capital needs to convert the properties more quickly to RAD.

We remain concerned about these findings, among others, because a key purpose of the RAD program is to "preserve and improve public housing properties and address the $26 billion dollar [in 2011] nationwide backlog of deferred maintenance." According to HUD, there have been many successful "on-paper" RAD conversions that have not proposed any rehabilitation or construction at the property. This is likely an indication that RAD is being used to change the regulatory framework for the property, but not actually address deferred maintenance. HUD must develop comprehensive criteria to assess whether PHAs are adequately assessing and addressing the physical needs of the RAD-converting property. The end result for tenants may be the same physical conditions but fewer rights. In addition, HUD must develop measures to assess the impact of RAD on low-income families and the long-term affordability of the property, before determining that any one RAD conversion, or the program in its entirety, is a success.

Impact of the RAD Program on Low-Income Tenants

NHLP works closely with legal services attorneys and tenant advocates across the country who report problems with the local implementation of the RAD program. The current challenges in RAD conversions often detrimentally impact low-income tenants. We highlight the most common implementation issues below and urge HUD to consider broad policy changes to prevent their future occurrence.

A. Transparency Before, During, and After the RAD Conversion

Tenants and advocates are routinely denied access to documents and plans related to RAD conversions, or are not provided the information in a timely manner. This creates a barrier to effective engagement in the RAD conversion and limits oversight of the program.

In order to effectively understand local RAD conversion plans and ensure enforcement of tenants' rights, advocates often need access to key RAD conversion documents, including:

HUD-17-0235-B-000445
1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000
1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

- The PHA's RAD application sent to HUD,
- Front-end civil rights reviews by HUD identifying any potential fair housing or civil rights concerns,
- RAD tenant relocation plans, and
- Post-conversion findings of noncompliance by HUD.

In addition, failure to provide the documents results in advocates having to commit significant resources to preparing and submitting FOIA requests (and state public records act requests, as applicable) for basic information regarding a particular RAD conversion. FOIA requests can be costly, including search costs ranging from $21 to $75 an hour and an additional fee for copies. Although these requests are subject to a fee waiver pursuant to 40 C.F.R. 2.107, the waiver is routinely denied, resulting in high costs to already under-resourced legal aid offices plus lengthy waits for documents that are needed immediately for effective representation. Consequently, tenants are unable to make informed choices and exercise their rights.

Regarding post-conversion transparency, HUD has only recently committed to collecting data from 90 randomly selected RAD-converted properties to "to conduct preliminary compliance reviews of completed RAD conversions to better carry out oversight of relocation and verify construction activity." While we are encouraged by this initial step by HUD, it remains unclear what factors specifically HUD will be reviewing and whether this information will be publicly accessible. Since the RAD program was created five years ago, HUD has not proactively collected any data from RAD-converted properties to ensure compliance with federal law, regulations, and RAD-specific rights. HUD should make this data available and, in addition, address how it plans to proactively monitor the rest of the 225,000 RAD units nationwide.

B. Tenant Education of RAD Conversion Plans

Prior to submitting a RAD application, a housing authority is required to conduct at least two meetings with residents and provide an opportunity for comment. HUD requires that these meetings include a discussion of, at a minimum:

- whether the conversion will include a transfer of assistance,
- plans to partner with an entity other than an affiliate or instrumentality of the PHA if such partner will have a general partner or managing member ownership interest in the proposed project owner,
- changes in the number or configuration of assisted units or any other change that may impact a household's ability to re-occupy the property following repairs or construction,
- a de minimis reduction of units which had been vacant for more than 24 months at the time of RAD application, and
- the scope of work.

The RAD Notice (HUD Notice 2012-32, REV-3) requires that the PHA also have one additional meeting before HUD executes the HAP contract. Therefore, HUD only requires three meetings with residents between the time that the PHA is considering RAD and the time the property officially converts under RAD. Based on our experience and the experience of our partners, three meetings is entirely inadequate to explain the changes that residents will experience as the property converts, and to discuss the often complex options presented at the time of conversion.

In some cases, PHAs include only the information that is required by HUD, which leaves out important topics including temporary tenant relocation, whether the conversion will be to project-based vouchers or project-based rental assistance, how the PHA plans to maintain an interest in the property after the RAD conversion, and key tenant rights provided by the RAD program (i.e. right to remain, grievance procedures, prohibition on re-screening existing tenants). In other cases, PHAs do not even present the minimum amount of information as required by law. In either case, advocates nationwide report that resident meetings fail to capture the true impact of the RAD conversion on residents and their families.

Advocates also report accessibility issues with respect to the tenant engagement meetings. We have seen PHAs host meetings during work hours or at inconvenient times for residents, at hard-to-reach locations off-site, and in violation of applicable civil rights and language translation requirements.

HUD must take stronger action to ensure that these meetings educate residents before allowing the RAD conversion to proceed. HUD should (1) carefully review tenant comments and the PHA's responses, which PHAs are required to submit to HUD, (2) require more than three tenant meetings prior to a HUD conversion and (3) educate PHAs about the importance of having effective meetings that are accessible, informative, and provide an adequate opportunity for tenant participation.

C. Tenant Relocation

Often a RAD conversion involves temporary relocation of tenants to allow for construction or repair of the property. PHAs are required to participate in a planning process and take specific steps to minimize the adverse impact of relocation on tenants. This includes: 1) tenant relocation assistance; 2) certain relocation notices; 3) relocation advisory services; and 4) decent, safe, and sanitary temporary housing allocated on a non-discriminatory basis. The HUD RAD Fair Housing and Relocation Notice (HUD Notice 2016-17) also requires a written relocation plan if temporary relocation is anticipated to last more than 12 months and strongly encourages a written relocation plan for temporary relocation anticipated to last less than 12 months.

Despite these clear mandates, inadequate relocation policies are commonplace. NHLP and its local partners have seen the following problematic tenant relocation practices with respect to RAD:

- PHAs and owners failing to provide tenants with adequate notice as required by law (30- or 90-day notices).
- PHAs and owners failing to provide the required relocation advisory services. Specifically, some PHAs and owners simply provided a list of subsidized housing in the community, without meeting with residents individually to assess their needs and identify specific units and landlords who will accommodate the temporarily relocated tenants.
- PHAs and owners failing to create adequate written relocation plans, or failing to comply with their own written relocation plans.
- Owners failing to provide the same alternative housing options to similarly situated tenants, and situations where the temporary housing provided is uninhabitable or an inadequate size for the family, in violation of the Uniform Relocation Act and RAD requirements.

Additionally, we have seen PHAs and owners misjudge the need for temporary relocation, resulting in the loss of heating during extreme winter months, tenants living without windows, inoperable elevators, lack of plumbing, and significant construction dust and debris within tenants' units. Such occurrences put the health and safety of the residents at risk and fail to ensure that tenants are living in decent, safe, and sanitary units. At the very least, HUD should collect relocation data about the property conditions and number of returning tenants for all RAD-converted properties nationwide so it can assess the impact of the RAD program on low-income tenants.

1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000
1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

D. Tenant Organizing

Federal statutes and HUD guidance give RAD tenants the right to "establish and operate a tenant organization for the purpose of addressing issues related to their living environment, which includes the terms and conditions of their tenancy as well as activities related to housing and community development." Federal regulations also provide that tenants and non-tenant tenant organizers have the right to engage in tenant organizing activities related to establishing or operating a tenant organization, such as distributing leaflets, contacting residents, and convening regularly scheduled resident organization meetings. While such rights already exist for tenants in PBRA properties, the RAD Notice explicitly extends these rights to RAD PBV tenants. Additionally, RAD tenants have the right to receive $25 per occupied unit per year from the owner for tenant participation activities. At least $15 per occupied unit per year must be provided to the "legitimate resident organization" at the property.

Owners of RAD properties frequently interfere with tenant organizing activities. We have heard of many instances where PHAs and owners have explicitly impeded or prohibited tenant organizing efforts, including:

- Interfering with the distribution of leaflets;
- Interfering with meetings and elections (including demanding that the property manager attend tenant organization meetings);
- Threatening to have non-tenant tenant organizers arrested for organizing tenants; and
- Failing to give tenant organizations the funds that should be made available to them.

RAD conversions create a critical need for tenant organizing so tenants can better understand the impact of the RAD conversion, hold the owner accountable to federal law and RAD requirements, and assist in planning for temporary tenant relocation and other important issues. HUD must take appropriate steps to prevent these egregious practices from continuing.

E. Tenant Re-Screening

When properties are converted through RAD, current households cannot be subject to re-screening, income eligibility determinations, or income targeting. Current households must be grandfathered in for conditions that occurred prior to conversion, but are subject to any ongoing eligibility requirements for actions that occur after conversion.

Despite these clear protections, RAD tenants are routinely re-screened at the time of conversion for income, criminal history, credit, and other requirements, especially in properties that will be utilizing low-income housing tax credits. For example, tenants have been expressly told that they are "over-income" for a RAD-converted building or that they will only be "grandfathered in" for a finite amount of time. This has resulted in evictions and monetary buy-out packages that force tenants to move from the property, despite their right to remain after conversion. Additionally, advocates have had to challenge PHA proposals that seek to: rescreen temporarily relocated tenants for activity that occurred prior to conversion; terminate temporarily relocated tenants' leases for alleged lease violations that occur during temporary relocation but have no formal, official judicial determination; and rescreen all tenants who are moving back in after the property has been rebuilt or rehabilitated.

1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000
1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

Without adequate HUD oversight or enforcement, the burden has fallen upon local tenants and their advocates to ensure that RAD tenants are not unlawfully denied access to, or evicted from, their housing. HUD should more proactively monitor RAD-converting properties nationwide and collect data about tenants' right to return and whether that right is being impeded by local RAD policies.

F. Long-Term Preservation

The preservation of affordable housing is the fundamental goal of the RAD program. The RAD Notice generally requires one-for-one unit replacement, but provides for exceptions that result in the loss of units during conversion, including: (1) if the unit has been vacant for more than 24 months at the time of RAD application, and (2) if reducing the total unit number will allow the PHA to more effectively or efficiently serve assisted households through either reconfiguring apartments (e.g., converting efficiency units to one-bedroom units) or facilitating social service delivery.

These exceptions are at odds with the goals of the RAD program. First, the reason a unit is vacant for more than two years is often because it is in need of rehabilitation. Permitting PHAs to eliminate these units allows PHAs to leave habitability issues unaddressed, while reducing the overall number of affordable housing units in local communities. Additionally, the second exception is vague and does not set any standards or factors that the PHA must meet when avoiding its one-for-one replacement obligation. HUD should eliminate these exceptions and provide more oversight of the unit replacement process to meet the RAD program's goals.

Additionally, HUD requires PHAs to maintain an interest in the RAD-converting property that will be owned by a for-profit entity and utilizes low-income housing tax credits. In the RAD Notice, HUD states that the PHA can maintain an interest in the property after the RAD conversion via the following methods:

- The PHA, or an affiliate under its sole control, is the general partner or managing member;
- The PHA retains fee ownership and leases the real estate to the tax credit entity pursuant to a long-term ground lease;
- The PHA retains control over the leasing of the Covered Project, such as exclusively maintaining and administering the waiting list for the Covered Project, including performing eligibility determinations complying with the PHA Plan;
- The PHA enters into a Control Agreement by which the PHA retains consent rights over certain acts of the Project Owner (including, for example, disposition of the Covered Project, leasing, selecting the management agent, setting the operating budget and making withdrawals from the reserves) and retains certain rights over the Covered Project, such as administering the waiting list; or
- Other means that HUD finds acceptable, in its sole discretion.

Only the first two methods will preserve the long-term affordability of the property. The other methods

HUD-17-0235-B-000449
1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000

fail to retain meaningful long-term oversight of for-profit owners. PHAs that maintain an interest using the other methods will lack sufficient oversight over the property, likely resulting in a departure from the accountability inherent to the public housing program.

The preservation of the quality of the housing stock is also a concern to tenants and housing advocates. In some RAD conversions, newly rehabilitated and rebuilt housing has significant safety and maintenance needs a short time after the RAD conversion. This is usually due to poor workmanship and mismanagement, as well as inadequate preliminary assessments of the scope of work needed for the property. This creates significant impacts on the health and safety of the residents. Accordingly, HUD must adopt procedures to prevent these issues.

G. Resident Leases and House Rules

Tenants in RAD-converted properties are bound by new leases and house rules, which are required to be effective as of the date of the HAP Contract. All RAD PBRA properties must use the required HUD PBRA Model Lease, and both RAD PBV and PBRA properties must include required language about lease termination notification and grievance procedures. A key protection that is required to be included in the lease and implemented in practice is that tenants cannot be evicted unless there is good cause to do so.

However, some owners have failed to adopt appropriate lease provisions, such as termination and grievance procedure language, require that tenants sign new leases that become effective as of the effective date of the HAP Contract, and provide copies of the new lease and house rules to tenants. Owners have also attempted to evict tenants without good cause and with notices that fail to give a sufficient reason for termination.

Despite the requirements in the RAD Notice, HUD has failed to collect house rules from owners during the conversion process. As a result, tenants and advocates report that owners and PHAs are adopting house rules that are unreasonable and infringe upon tenants' civil rights. HUD should collect and review house rules for all RAD-converting properties in order to properly oversee the RAD program and prevent illegal and unreasonable house rules from going into effect.

H. Resident Grievance Procedures

Pursuant to the RAD authorization statute, RAD tenants are entitled to the same rights that they possessed in the public housing program, including the right to a grievance procedure to dispute any action or inaction by the owner. As noted above, the RAD house rules also must contain specific language about tenants' grievance procedure rights.

Despite these important mandates, numerous tenants have been denied their right to a grievance procedure. Owners have routinely failed to include references to the grievance procedure in the house rules. As a result, owners have evicted, and attempted to evict, tenants without access to, or notice of their right to, a grievance procedure. While our network has attempted to intervene in these cases, access to a legal services attorney is not always possible, given geographic and resource constraints. HUD must take the necessary steps to ensure that RAD tenants do not continue to be deprived of their legal right to basic due process.

I. Fair Housing and Civil Rights

As reiterated in HUD Notice 2016-17, RAD properties remain subject to fair housing and civil rights laws, including the Fair Housing Act, Section 504, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA). Additionally, RAD properties must comply with the 1964 Civil Rights Act which provides that Limited English Proficient (LEP) persons be provided with translation services so they can have meaningful access to housing programs.

We have seen explicit violations of fair housing and civil rights laws in many different contexts. Such incidents include express familial status discrimination, failure to provide reasonable accommodations to tenants with disabilities, and failure to provide translation services to LEP individuals. Other examples include concentrating disability-accessible units in RAD properties and failing to adopt emergency transfer plans which allow survivors of domestic violence to move rapidly to escape life-threatening situations. HUD must take appropriate steps to educate owners of their civil rights obligations and enforce federal law.

J. Transfer of Assistance

RAD transfers of assistance allow subsidized housing assistance to be transferred to a property in a different location. Such transfers have enormous impacts on tenants' lives and raise significant fair housing and accessibility concerns. Despite the fact that HUD is required to complete a front-end civil rights review of RAD transfer of assistance conversions, we remain concerned about issues that are not captured by such a review. For example, HUD Notice 2016-17 states that if the transfer of assistance to a new site is a "significant distance" from the converting property, then tenants will have the right to an assisted unit within a reasonable distance of their former public housing residence. We have seen first-hand during RAD conversions how the vagueness of such a requirement negatively impacts tenants' ability to exercise their rights.

In transfers of assistance nationwide, tenants are being told they must move a significant distance away from the public housing property. Such transfers will have a devastating impact on tenants, since they will be moved far from their friends, families, workplaces, churches, schools, and medical providers. HUD should modify its policy on RAD transfers of assistance to better protect tenants, especially as PHAs and owners seek to move tenants away from developing areas of opportunity.

K. Choice Mobility

RAD tenants may exercise choice mobility rights and request tenant-based rental assistance 12 months (PBV) or 24 months (PBRA) after the RAD conversion. Choice mobility allows RAD-converted tenants to be placed at the top of the local PHA's waiting list for tenant-based rental assistance and move to any private market unit where a landlord will accept the assistance.

Unfortunately, we have encountered PHAs who are unfamiliar with choice mobility rights and have not adopted policies and procedures to allow RAD tenants to exercise their choice mobility rights. As a result, PHAs and owners fail to inform residents of these rights. Even when tenants are aware of the right to tenant-based assistance, PHAs and owners present significant barriers to obtaining it. HUD should publish guidance on choice mobility in the RAD program, so that PHAs and owners understand their obligations. In turn, tenants will have better access to choice and mobility post-RAD conversion.

L. Section 3 Enforcement

RAD properties are subject to Section 3 of the Housing and Urban Development Act, which requires that recipients of HUD financial assistance for housing and community development provide job training, employment, and contracting opportunities for low- or very-low income residents in connection with projects and activities in their neighborhoods. The Section 3 regulations set forth goals and priorities for hiring public housing tenants, homeless individuals, Youthbuild, and other very low-income residents and contracting goals for businesses owned by these individuals. The RAD Notice makes clear that Section 3 applies to all RAD work, including any new construction that is identified as part of the RAD conversion.

Yet, because HUD has consistently failed to enforce Section 3 requirements, the benefits of the Section 3 program have not been realized. RAD conversions present a unique opportunity to enforce Section 3 requirements and to provide job training, employment, and contracting opportunities for local residents and HUD must do more to ensure that PHAs and owners are fulfilling their Section 3 obligations.

M. RAD Component 2

RAD Component 2 tenants, who live in Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation, Rent Supplement, or Rental Assistance Payment programs converting to project-based vouchers or project-based rental assistance, have very few tenant protections. Unlike Component 1 properties, there is no requirement that RAD Component 2 HAP Contracts be renewed at the end of each term, which puts the long-term preservation of the property at risk. In Component 2, there is no RAD Use Agreement that will be attached to the land title, ensuring long-term affordability of the property in perpetuity. The fair housing and relocation protections described in HUD Notice 2016-17, such as relocation plans, do not apply to Component 2 properties. Component 2 tenants also have no choice mobility rights if they are in RAD PBRA properties. Additionally, there are very few resident education requirements for tenants undergoing a RAD Component 2 conversion. HUD has determined that certain rights, guidance, and procedures were essential and necessary for the Component 1 program. Thus, HUD should do more to ensure similar procedures and rights for Component 2 tenants, where possible.

NHLP and our local partners have experienced many significant challenges related to the implementation and oversight of the RAD program. We strongly urge HUD to take a more proactive approach to ensure that tenants' rights are not violated during the RAD conversion process. Such action and evaluation is especially necessary prior to any further expansion of the RAD program. I can be reached at 415-432-5706 and SRoller@nhlp.org should you wish to talk further about our concerns.

CPD correspondence staff brought this to me this morning and I spoke with Mike Dendas about it. The redacted portions appear to relate to the Rebuild by Design competition. There is no one left in CPD who had a direct hand in the competition and the person who I suspect prepared the response left about three months ago. Would have to try and find his materials. Once the RBD competition was complete it was handed off to our cdbg dr team for funding. We can discuss further when you have time.

Stephanie and Linda,

This letter to the Secretary identifies Section 3 compliance issues with RAD, Krista and I haven't had a chance to discuss it, we are meeting early next week, but I wanted to share it with you both because you are diving in on Section 3. You can see from the CC line that it went to some of our career staff as well as to OSEC.

Re: Concerns with the Rental Assistance Demonstration (RAD) Program

Dear Secretary Carson:

The National Housing Law Project (NHLP) writes to express concerns with the implementation and expansion of the Rental Assistance Demonstration (RAD) program and its impact on both low-income families and the nation's affordable housing stock.

NHLP is a legal advocacy center focused on increasing, preserving, and improving affordable housing; expanding and enforcing the rights of low-income tenants and homeowners; and increasing housing opportunities for protected classes. Our organization provides technical assistance and policy support on a range of housing issues to legal services attorneys and other advocates nationwide. In addition, NHLP hosts the national Housing Justice Network, a vast field network of over 1,000 community-level housing advocates and tenant leaders, many of whom practice in jurisdictions that have converted properties to RAD, are in the processing of converting properties to RAD, or wish to convert properties to RAD.

We support the goal of the RAD program to preserve affordable housing and address the $49 billion backlog of public housing capital needs, but we are troubled that the RAD program has nearly quadrupled in size over the last five years without any evaluation of its impact on tenants. The program has significant implementation challenges that have had drastic consequences for residents and the long-term preservation of affordable housing. These challenges are not limited to a few select owners or housing authorities, but are reflective of problems facing RAD conversions across the country and result from limited guidance and oversight in the program.

RAD cannot be a complete substitute for adequate funding of the public housing program, and it must be adequately implemented, monitored, and evaluated before further expansion occurs. HUD must take a more proactive role to enforce tenants' rights and prevent the loss of affordable housing.

Defining Success in the RAD Program

We urge HUD to reconsider how it defines the success of the RAD program. Currently, HUD claims that the RAD program has been successful because of (1) the number of RAD properties that have officially converted, (2) a reduction in HUD's processing times between RAD application and closing, and (3) the amount of money "leveraged" for construction investments. While these may be important indicators of success, they lack clarity and do not consider the impact of the RAD program on low-income tenants, the quality of the rehabilitated RAD-converted housing, or the future preservation of the property as affordable housing. The latest HUD-commissioned RAD evaluation (conducted by Econometrica, Inc.) focused only on the amount of funding leveraged by the RAD program. By the report's own admission, it did not look at the impacts of the RAD program on tenants. In fact, the report made several troubling findings that impact tenants, including:

- PHAs often sought to use RAD as an opportunity to remove their properties from the statutory and regulatory control of the public housing program, and
- PHAs are not necessarily proposing their neediest projects for RAD conversion and may be choosing the projects with the least amount of capital needs to convert the properties more quickly to RAD.

We remain concerned about these findings, among others, because a key purpose of the RAD program is to "preserve and improve public housing properties and address the $26 billion dollar [in 2011] nationwide backlog of deferred maintenance." According to HUD, there have been many successful "on-paper" RAD conversions that have not proposed any rehabilitation or construction at the property. This is likely an indication that RAD is being used to change the regulatory framework for the property, but not actually address deferred maintenance. HUD must develop comprehensive criteria to assess whether PHAs are adequately assessing and addressing the physical needs of the RAD-converting property. The end result for tenants may be the same physical conditions but fewer rights. In addition, HUD must develop measures to assess the impact of RAD on low-income families and the long-term affordability of the property, before determining that any one RAD conversion, or the program in its entirety, is a success.

Impact of the RAD Program on Low-Income Tenants

NHLP works closely with legal services attorneys and tenant advocates across the country who report problems with the local implementation of the RAD program. The current challenges in RAD conversions often detrimentally impact low-income tenants. We highlight the most common implementation issues below and urge HUD to consider broad policy changes to prevent their future occurrence.

A. Transparency Before, During, and After the RAD Conversion

Tenants and advocates are routinely denied access to documents and plans related to RAD conversions, or are not provided the information in a timely manner. This creates a barrier to effective engagement in the RAD conversion and limits oversight of the program.

In order to effectively understand local RAD conversion plans and ensure enforcement of tenants' rights, advocates often need access to key RAD conversion documents, including:

HUD-17-0235-B-000468
1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000
1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

- The PHA's RAD application sent to HUD,
- Front-end civil rights reviews by HUD identifying any potential fair housing or civil rights concerns,
- RAD tenant relocation plans, and
- Post-conversion findings of noncompliance by HUD.

In addition, failure to provide the documents results in advocates having to commit significant resources to preparing and submitting FOIA requests (and state public records act requests, as applicable) for basic information regarding a particular RAD conversion. FOIA requests can be costly, including search costs ranging from $21 to $75 an hour and an additional fee for copies. Although these requests are subject to a fee waiver pursuant to 40 C.F.R. 2.107, the waiver is routinely denied, resulting in high costs to already under-resourced legal aid offices plus lengthy waits for documents that are needed immediately for effective representation. Consequently, tenants are unable to make informed choices and exercise their rights.

Regarding post-conversion transparency, HUD has only recently committed to collecting data from 90 randomly selected RAD-converted properties to "to conduct preliminary compliance reviews of completed RAD conversions to better carry out oversight of relocation and verify construction activity." While we are encouraged by this initial step by HUD, it remains unclear what factors specifically HUD will be reviewing and whether this information will be publicly accessible. Since the RAD program was created five years ago, HUD has not proactively collected any data from RAD-converted properties to ensure compliance with federal law, regulations, and RAD-specific rights. HUD should make this data available and, in addition, address how it plans to proactively monitor the rest of the 225,000 RAD units nationwide.

B. Tenant Education of RAD Conversion Plans

Prior to submitting a RAD application, a housing authority is required to conduct at least two meetings with residents and provide an opportunity for comment. HUD requires that these meetings include a discussion of, at a minimum:

- whether the conversion will include a transfer of assistance,
- plans to partner with an entity other than an affiliate or instrumentality of the PHA if such partner will have a general partner or managing member ownership interest in the proposed project owner,
- changes in the number or configuration of assisted units or any other change that may impact a household's ability to re-occupy the property following repairs or construction,
- a de minimis reduction of units which had been vacant for more than 24 months at the time of RAD application, and
- the scope of work.

The RAD Notice (HUD Notice 2012-32, REV-3) requires that the PHA also have one additional meeting before HUD executes the HAP contract. Therefore, HUD only requires three meetings with residents between the time that the PHA is considering RAD and the time the property officially converts under RAD. Based on our experience and the experience of our partners, three meetings is entirely inadequate to explain the changes that residents will experience as the property converts, and to discuss the often complex options presented at the time of conversion.

In some cases, PHAs include only the information that is required by HUD, which leaves out important topics including temporary tenant relocation, whether the conversion will be to project-based vouchers or project-based rental assistance, how the PHA plans to maintain an interest in the property after the RAD conversion, and key tenant rights provided by the RAD program (i.e. right to remain, grievance procedures, prohibition on re-screening existing tenants). In other cases, PHAs do not even present the minimum amount of information as required by law. In either case, advocates nationwide report that resident meetings fail to capture the true impact of the RAD conversion on residents and their families.

Advocates also report accessibility issues with respect to the tenant engagement meetings. We have seen PHAs host meetings during work hours or at inconvenient times for residents, at hard-to-reach locations off-site, and in violation of applicable civil rights and language translation requirements.

HUD must take stronger action to ensure that these meetings educate residents before allowing the RAD conversion to proceed. HUD should (1) carefully review tenant comments and the PHA's responses, which PHAs are required to submit to HUD, (2) require more than three tenant meetings prior to a HUD conversion and (3) educate PHAs about the importance of having effective meetings that are accessible, informative, and provide an adequate opportunity for tenant participation.

C. Tenant Relocation

Often a RAD conversion involves temporary relocation of tenants to allow for construction or repair of the property. PHAs are required to participate in a planning process and take specific steps to minimize the adverse impact of relocation on tenants. This includes: 1) tenant relocation assistance; 2) certain relocation notices; 3) relocation advisory services; and 4) decent, safe, and sanitary temporary housing allocated on a non-discriminatory basis. The HUD RAD Fair Housing and Relocation Notice (HUD Notice 2016-17) also requires a written relocation plan if temporary relocation is anticipated to last more than 12 months and strongly encourages a written relocation plan for temporary relocation anticipated to last less than 12 months.

Despite these clear mandates, inadequate relocation policies are commonplace. NHLP and its local partners have seen the following problematic tenant relocation practices with respect to RAD:

- PHAs and owners failing to provide tenants with adequate notice as required by law (30- or 90-day notices).
- PHAs and owners failing to provide the required relocation advisory services. Specifically, some PHAs and owners simply provided a list of subsidized housing in the community, without meeting with residents individually to assess their needs and identify specific units and landlords who will accommodate the temporarily relocated tenants.
- PHAs and owners failing to create adequate written relocation plans, or failing to comply with their own written relocation plans.
- Owners failing to provide the same alternative housing options to similarly situated tenants, and situations where the temporary housing provided is uninhabitable or an inadequate size for the family, in violation of the Uniform Relocation Act and RAD requirements.

Additionally, we have seen PHAs and owners misjudge the need for temporary relocation, resulting in the loss of heating during extreme winter months, tenants living without windows, inoperable elevators, lack of plumbing, and significant construction dust and debris within tenants' units. Such occurrences put the health and safety of the residents at risk and fail to ensure that tenants are living in decent, safe, and sanitary units. At the very least, HUD should collect relocation data about the property conditions and number of returning tenants for all RAD-converted properties nationwide so it can assess the impact of the RAD program on low-income tenants.

1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000

D. Tenant Organizing

Federal statutes and HUD guidance give RAD tenants the right to "establish and operate a tenant organization for the purpose of addressing issues related to their living environment, which includes the terms and conditions of their tenancy as well as activities related to housing and community development." Federal regulations also provide that tenants and non-tenant tenant organizers have the right to engage in tenant organizing activities related to establishing or operating a tenant organization, such as distributing leaflets, contacting residents, and convening regularly scheduled resident organization meetings. While such rights already exist for tenants in PBRA properties, the RAD Notice explicitly extends these rights to RAD PBV tenants. Additionally, RAD tenants have the right to receive $25 per occupied unit per year from the owner for tenant participation activities. At least $15 per occupied unit per year must be provided to the "legitimate resident organization" at the property.

Owners of RAD properties frequently interfere with tenant organizing activities. We have heard of many instances where PHAs and owners have explicitly impeded or prohibited tenant organizing efforts, including:

- Interfering with the distribution of leaflets;
- Interfering with meetings and elections (including demanding that the property manager attend tenant organization meetings);
- Threatening to have non-tenant tenant organizers arrested for organizing tenants; and
- Failing to give tenant organizations the funds that should be made available to them.

RAD conversions create a critical need for tenant organizing so tenants can better understand the impact of the RAD conversion, hold the owner accountable to federal law and RAD requirements, and assist in planning for temporary tenant relocation and other important issues. HUD must take appropriate steps to prevent these egregious practices from continuing.

E. Tenant Re-Screening

When properties are converted through RAD, current households cannot be subject to re-screening, income eligibility determinations, or income targeting. Current households must be grandfathered in for conditions that occurred prior to conversion, but are subject to any ongoing eligibility requirements for actions that occur after conversion.

Despite these clear protections, RAD tenants are routinely re-screened at the time of conversion for income, criminal history, credit, and other requirements, especially in properties that will be utilizing low-income housing tax credits. For example, tenants have been expressly told that they are "over-income" for a RAD-converted building or that they will only be "grandfathered in" for a finite amount of time. This has resulted in evictions and monetary buy-out packages that force tenants to move from the property, despite their right to remain after conversion. Additionally, advocates have had to challenge PHA proposals that seek to: rescreen temporarily relocated tenants for activity that occurred prior to conversion; terminate temporarily relocated tenants' leases for alleged lease violations that occur during temporary relocation but have no formal, official judicial determination; and rescreen all tenants who are moving back in after the property has been rebuilt or rehabilitated.

1663 Mission St. Suite 460 San Francisco, CA 94103 | 415.546.7000
1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

Without adequate HUD oversight or enforcement, the burden has fallen upon local tenants and their advocates to ensure that RAD tenants are not unlawfully denied access to, or evicted from, their housing. HUD should more proactively monitor RAD-converting properties nationwide and collect data about tenants' right to return and whether that right is being impeded by local RAD policies.

F. Long-Term Preservation

The preservation of affordable housing is the fundamental goal of the RAD program. The RAD Notice generally requires one-for-one unit replacement, but provides for exceptions that result in the loss of units during conversion, including: (1) if the unit has been vacant for more than 24 months at the time of RAD application, and (2) if reducing the total unit number will allow the PHA to more effectively or efficiently serve assisted households through either reconfiguring apartments (e.g., converting efficiency units to one-bedroom units) or facilitating social service delivery.

These exceptions are at odds with the goals of the RAD program. First, the reason a unit is vacant for more than two years is often because it is in need of rehabilitation. Permitting PHAs to eliminate these units allows PHAs to leave habitability issues unaddressed, while reducing the overall number of affordable housing units in local communities. Additionally, the second exception is vague and does not set any standards or factors that the PHA must meet when avoiding its one-for-one replacement obligation. HUD should eliminate these exceptions and provide more oversight of the unit replacement process to meet the RAD program's goals.

Additionally, HUD requires PHAs to maintain an interest in the RAD-converting property that will be owned by a for-profit entity and utilizes low-income housing tax credits. In the RAD Notice, HUD states that the PHA can maintain an interest in the property after the RAD conversion via the following methods:

- The PHA, or an affiliate under its sole control, is the general partner or managing member;
- The PHA retains fee ownership and leases the real estate to the tax credit entity pursuant to a long-term ground lease;
- The PHA retains control over the leasing of the Covered Project, such as exclusively maintaining and administering the waiting list for the Covered Project, including performing eligibility determinations complying with the PHA Plan;
- The PHA enters into a Control Agreement by which the PHA retains consent rights over certain acts of the Project Owner (including, for example, disposition of the Covered Project, leasing, selecting the management agent, setting the operating budget and making withdrawals from the reserves) and retains certain rights over the Covered Project, such as administering the waiting list; or
- Other means that HUD finds acceptable, in its sole discretion.

Only the first two methods will preserve the long-term affordability of the property. The other methods

HUD-17-0235-B-000472

1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

fail to retain meaningful long-term oversight of for-profit owners. PHAs that maintain an interest using the other methods will lack sufficient oversight over the property, likely resulting in a departure from the accountability inherent to the public housing program.

The preservation of the quality of the housing stock is also a concern to tenants and housing advocates. In some RAD conversions, newly rehabilitated and rebuilt housing has significant safety and maintenance needs a short time after the RAD conversion. This is usually due to poor workmanship and mismanagement, as well as inadequate preliminary assessments of the scope of work needed for the property. This creates significant impacts on the health and safety of the residents. Accordingly, HUD must adopt procedures to prevent these issues.

G. Resident Leases and House Rules

Tenants in RAD-converted properties are bound by new leases and house rules, which are required to be effective as of the date of the HAP Contract. All RAD PBRA properties must use the required HUD PBRA Model Lease, and both RAD PBV and PBRA properties must include required language about lease termination notification and grievance procedures. A key protection that is required to be included in the lease and implemented in practice is that tenants cannot be evicted unless there is good cause to do so.

However, some owners have failed to adopt appropriate lease provisions, such as termination and grievance procedure language, require that tenants sign new leases that become effective as of the effective date of the HAP Contract, and provide copies of the new lease and house rules to tenants. Owners have also attempted to evict tenants without good cause and with notices that fail to give a sufficient reason for termination.

Despite the requirements in the RAD Notice, HUD has failed to collect house rules from owners during the conversion process. As a result, tenants and advocates report that owners and PHAs are adopting house rules that are unreasonable and infringe upon tenants' civil rights. HUD should collect and review house rules for all RAD-converting properties in order to properly oversee the RAD program and prevent illegal and unreasonable house rules from going into effect.

H. Resident Grievance Procedures

Pursuant to the RAD authorization statute, RAD tenants are entitled to the same rights that they possessed in the public housing program, including the right to a grievance procedure to dispute any action or inaction by the owner. As noted above, the RAD house rules also must contain specific language about tenants' grievance procedure rights.

Despite these important mandates, numerous tenants have been denied their right to a grievance procedure. Owners have routinely failed to include references to the grievance procedure in the house rules. As a result, owners have evicted, and attempted to evict, tenants without access to, or notice of their right to, a grievance procedure. While our network has attempted to intervene in these cases, access to a legal services attorney is not always possible, given geographic and resource constraints. HUD must take the necessary steps to ensure that RAD tenants do not continue to be deprived of their legal right to basic due process.

1025 Vermont Ave., N.W. Suite 606 Washington, D.C. 20005

I. Fair Housing and Civil Rights

As reiterated in HUD Notice 2016-17, RAD properties remain subject to fair housing and civil rights laws, including the Fair Housing Act, Section 504, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA). Additionally, RAD properties must comply with the 1964 Civil Rights Act which provides that Limited English Proficient (LEP) persons be provided with translation services so they can have meaningful access to housing programs.

We have seen explicit violations of fair housing and civil rights laws in many different contexts. Such incidents include express familial status discrimination, failure to provide reasonable accommodations to tenants with disabilities, and failure to provide translation services to LEP individuals. Other examples include concentrating disability-accessible units in RAD properties and failing to adopt emergency transfer plans which allow survivors of domestic violence to move rapidly to escape life-threatening situations. HUD must take appropriate steps to educate owners of their civil rights obligations and enforce federal law.

J. Transfer of Assistance

RAD transfers of assistance allow subsidized housing assistance to be transferred to a property in a different location. Such transfers have enormous impacts on tenants' lives and raise significant fair housing and accessibility concerns. Despite the fact that HUD is required to complete a front-end civil rights review of RAD transfer of assistance conversions, we remain concerned about issues that are not captured by such a review. For example, HUD Notice 2016-17 states that if the transfer of assistance to a new site is a "significant distance" from the converting property, then tenants will have the right to an assisted unit within a reasonable distance of their former public housing residence. We have seen first-hand during RAD conversions how the vagueness of such a requirement negatively impacts tenants' ability to exercise their rights.

In transfers of assistance nationwide, tenants are being told they must move a significant distance away from the public housing property. Such transfers will have a devastating impact on tenants, since they will be moved far from their friends, families, workplaces, churches, schools, and medical providers. HUD should modify its policy on RAD transfers of assistance to better protect tenants, especially as PHAs and owners seek to move tenants away from developing areas of opportunity.

K. Choice Mobility

RAD tenants may exercise choice mobility rights and request tenant-based rental assistance 12 months (PBV) or 24 months (PBRA) after the RAD conversion. Choice mobility allows RAD-converted tenants to be placed at the top of the local PHA's waiting list for tenant-based rental assistance and move to any private market unit where a landlord will accept the assistance.

Unfortunately, we have encountered PHAs who are unfamiliar with choice mobility rights and have not adopted policies and procedures to allow RAD tenants to exercise their choice mobility rights. As a result, PHAs and owners fail to inform residents of these rights. Even when tenants are aware of the right to tenant-based assistance, PHAs and owners present significant barriers to obtaining it. HUD should publish guidance on choice mobility in the RAD program, so that PHAs and owners understand their obligations. In turn, tenants will have better access to choice and mobility post-RAD conversion.

L. Section 3 Enforcement

RAD properties are subject to Section 3 of the Housing and Urban Development Act, which requires that recipients of HUD financial assistance for housing and community development provide job training, employment, and contracting opportunities for low- or very-low income residents in connection with projects and activities in their neighborhoods. The Section 3 regulations set forth goals and priorities for hiring public housing tenants, homeless individuals, Youthbuild, and other very low-income residents and contracting goals for businesses owned by these individuals. The RAD Notice makes clear that Section 3 applies to all RAD work, including any new construction that is identified as part of the RAD conversion.

Yet, because HUD has consistently failed to enforce Section 3 requirements, the benefits of the Section 3 program have not been realized. RAD conversions present a unique opportunity to enforce Section 3 requirements and to provide job training, employment, and contracting opportunities for local residents and HUD must do more to ensure that PHAs and owners are fulfilling their Section 3 obligations.

M. RAD Component 2

RAD Component 2 tenants, who live in Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation, Rent Supplement, or Rental Assistance Payment programs converting to project-based vouchers or project-based rental assistance, have very few tenant protections. Unlike Component 1 properties, there is no requirement that RAD Component 2 HAP Contracts be renewed at the end of each term, which puts the long-term preservation of the property at risk. In Component 2, there is no RAD Use Agreement that will be attached to the land title, ensuring long-term affordability of the property in perpetuity. The fair housing and relocation protections described in HUD Notice 2016-17, such as relocation plans, do not apply to Component 2 properties. Component 2 tenants also have no choice mobility rights if they are in RAD PBRA properties. Additionally, there are very few resident education requirements for tenants undergoing a RAD Component 2 conversion. HUD has determined that certain rights, guidance, and procedures were essential and necessary for the Component 1 program. Thus, HUD should do more to ensure similar procedures and rights for Component 2 tenants, where possible.

NHLP and our local partners have experienced many significant challenges related to the implementation and oversight of the RAD program. We strongly urge HUD to take a more proactive approach to ensure that tenants' rights are not violated during the RAD conversion process. Such action and evaluation is especially necessary prior to any further expansion of the RAD program. I can be reached at 415-432-5706 and SRoller@nhlp.org should you wish to talk further about our concerns.

    - Anticipated Date of Action: Meetings are currently underway.

- Streamlining Administrative Regulations for Public Housing, Housing Choice Voucher, Multifamily Housing, and Community Planning and Development Programs
    - Description: The 2014 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to ease administrative burdens on public housing agencies (PHAs) and certain multifamily owners. HUD issued a proposed rule on January 6, 2015, to implement these statutory changes and to make additional regulatory changes arising out of stakeholder input asking for additional flexibilities in many HUD programs. In addition, the 2015 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to how PHAs determine flat rents in public housing. HUD issued a September 8, 2015, interim rule to implement these changes. This final rule makes changes to the regulatory text as presented in the January 2015, proposed rule, and finalizes the regulatory changes contained in the September 2015 interim final rule.
    - POC: Danielle Bastarache, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policies, Programs and Legislative Initiatives, Office of Public and Indian Housing; danielle.l.bastarache@hud.gov
    - Anticipated Date of Action: The rule was cleared by the Office of Management and Budget on August 31, 2017. The rule was delivered to HUD's Executive Secretariat on September 22, 2017 for final approvals. The next step will be submission to HUD's Congressional authorizing committees for pre-publication review. Publication is anticipated in October.
    - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Rule to Amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards
  - Description: This proposed rule would amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards (the Construction and Safety Standards) by adopting recommendations made to HUD by the Manufactured Housing Consensus Committee (MHCC). The National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974 (the Act) requires HUD to publish in the Federal Register any proposed revised Construction and Safety Standard submitted by the MHCC. The MHCC has prepared and submitted to HUD its third group of recommendations to improve various aspects of the Construction and Safety Standards. HUD has reviewed those proposals and has made editorial revisions to several of the proposals. (b) (5)

    As agreed upon, these recommendations are being published here to provide notice of the proposed revisions and an opportunity for public comment.
  - POC: Pamela Beck Danner, Administrator, Office of Manufactured Housing Programs, Office of Housing; pamela.b.danner@hud.gov
  - (b) (5)
  - (b) (5)

- Notice Announcing the Housing Counseling Federal Advisory Committee Appointment of Members and Notice of Public Meeting
  - Description: This notice announces the appointment of the Housing Counseling Federal Advisory Committee (HCFAC) members, gives notice of a one-day meeting and sets forth the proposed agenda of the first HCFAC meeting. The Committee meeting will be held on Tuesday, November 1, 2017. The meeting is open to the public and is accessible to individuals with disabilities.
  - POC: Marjorie George, Housing Program Technical Specialist, Office of Housing Counseling, marjorie.a.george@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The Office of Housing has decided to postpone publication of this notice until November.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Relief from HUD Requirements Available to Public Housing Agencies to Assist with Recovery and Relief Efforts on Behalf of Families Affected by Hurricanes Harvey, Irma, Maria and Future Natural Disasters Where Major Disaster Declarations Might be Issued in 2017
  - Description: This notice advises the public that HUD, as a result of Presidentially declared Major Disaster Declarations (MDD) following Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria has established an expedited process for the review of requests for relief from HUD regulatory and/or administrative requirements for public housing agencies (PHAs) and Tribes or tribally designated housing entities (TDHEs) that are located in Texas, U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Florida, and Georgia. In addition, this notice advises that PHAs, Tribes and TDHEs located in areas covered by MDDs issued during the remainder of 2017 may utilize the flexibilities and expedited waiver process set out by this notice.
  - POC: Shelia Bethea, Office of Field Operations, Office of Public and Indian Housing, sheila.bethea@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The notice is circulating for final HUD approvals prior to publication. Publication is anticipated in October.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Notice of Certain Operating Cost Adjustment Factors for 2018
  - Description: This notice establishes operating cost adjustment factors (OCAFs) for project-based rental assistance contracts issued under Section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 and renewed under the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 (MAHRA) with an anniversary date on or after February 11, 2018. OCAFs are annual factors used primarily to adjust the rents for contracts renewed under section 515 or section 524 of MAHRA.
  - POC: Carisa L. Janis, Program Analyst, Office of Housing, carissa.l.janis@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: Publication of the notice is anticipated in October.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Navajo Housing Authority
  - Description: After multiple offers and counteroffer's, Navajo Housing Authority (NHA) has offered to repay $26 million from current funds (HUD's previous offer was $31 million, to be repaid from future funds, over a 5-year period). NHA has appealed the administrative law judge's decision to have NHA return $96M in unspent funds to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. A decision from the 9th Circuit would not be expected until FFY 2018. The Court requested mediation discussions.
  - POC: Andrew Hughes, White House Liaison, andrew.hughes@hud.gov

- HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) Notice
  - Description: Public and Indian Housing published the HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) Notice on September 1, 2017 allowing PHAs partnering with their local VA facilities to register their interest in receiving $40M in new awards (approximately 5,500 new HUD-VASH vouchers).
  - POC: Becky Primeaux, Director, Public Housing Management and Occupancy Division, becky.l.primeaux@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: PHAs must express interest by October 31, 2017. Awards are expected in December 2017.
  - Anticipated Process: Vouchers will be allocated to registered PHAs based on their local need and program capacity.

Secretary: HUD is here to help South Floridians (Miami Herald, FL)
Miami Herald
(10/7/2017 6:37 PM, Secretary Ben Carson)
In the past four weeks, the people of Florida have demonstrated their spirit is far tougher than any hurricane, including Irma, one of the most powerful storms ever recorded.

Our fellow Americans in the Sunshine State are standing tall, exhibiting their resolve to recover, rebuild, and thrive in the wake of nature's recent wrath. But they are not alone. They have backup.

At the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), hundreds of men and women are working to ensure safe, affordable housing for those affected by the disaster.

We are going to give them an ear in Miami, the Florida Keys, and all the affected areas, and a voice in Washington.

Before Irma made landfall, many HUD employees volunteered to go to Florida to serve immediately as a partner to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and assist individuals and families in need of our resources.

I will be visiting Florida in the coming weeks to monitor our progress, talk with residents, and ensure HUD is providing everything we can to support the rebuilding effort.

This is personal for us, too.

As part of the response, recovery, and rebuilding efforts, HUD's primary job is to use the best data available to ensure disaster recovery funding is targeted to the hardest hit areas.

We will put our knowledge, experience, and expertise to work in coordination with state and local authorities. In the months and years ahead, HUD will play a central role in Florida's integrated efforts to rebuild lives and communities.

I am in touch with Gov. Rick Scott and his staff, and we are currently helping to locate vacancies to move vulnerable residents into safer housing.

We are working closely with FEMA and shelters around the state to ensure they have the resources they need to serve displaced Floridians, and ultimately help these families find longer-term housing.

We are also providing special mortgage relief through the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). HUD has already granted a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures for FHA-insured properties in disaster-affected areas.

In addition, we offer loan forbearance and loan modifications for borrowers struggling to make payments in disaster-affected areas.

We also make available specific mortgage products for those impacted by disasters. Some homeowners whose properties were destroyed or damaged may be eligible for 100 percent financing through HUD's Section 203(h) program.

This will enable them to rebuild or buy another home. In addition, homeowners can use Section 203(k) FHA insurance to refinance an existing mortgage into a new mortgage that covers the cost of repairs.

You can learn more about these programs and services on HUD's website.

HUD is part of the process of recovery, providing the information and commitment, now and in the years to come.

Trump's Billionaire Cabinet Members DeVos and Ross Fly Private Jets While Ben Carson Flies Commercial (Newsweek)
Newsweek
(10/8/2017 1:39 PM, Graham Lanktree)
Several wealthy Trump administration officials are being investigated for using costly private jets on the American taxpayer's dime when they could have flown on commercial airlines for cheaper.

The investigations have also revealed a divide between the rich, and the ultra-rich in President Donald Trump's cabinet, which is the wealthiest in modern U.S. history.

Billionaires such as Education Secretary Betsy DeVos and Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross pay for private jets with their own cash while Ben Carson, a retired millionaire neurosurgeon and Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, flies commercial.

Inspectors general have launched at least five investigations across various departments in recent weeks probing Cabinet and other Trump officials who used charter or military flights that cost taxpayers millions. Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price resigned September 29 after he cost the government $500,000 for use of private charters and military jets.

After Politico revealed the nature of Price's trips last month, White House Office of Budget Management Director Mick Mulvaney instituted new rules requiring prior approval to use government planes.

In comparison to this, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Carson, a retired neurosurgeon with a net worth of $26 million who used to sit on the boards of Costco and Kellogg, has escaped the private flights controversy.

"For official HUD business, the secretary has only flown commercial," Raphael Williams, communications director for the department, tells Newsweek.

"The only exception has been when he's flown with the president on Air Force One," Williams says.

Treasury Secretary Cleared of Criticism He Misused Flights on Military Transport (Government Executive)
Government Executive
(10/6/2017 1:43 PM, Charles S. Clark)
After weeks of media coverage suggesting he unnecessarily used military transport for travel, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin on Thursday got a clean bill of health from the department's inspector general. Following a review of seven questioned flights that was twice-expanded in September, Treasury Inspector General Counsel Rich Delmar on Oct. 4 wrote to IG Eric Thorson he sees "no violation of law in these requests and uses. Getting approval from appropriate White House officials to designate the trips as White House Support Missions places them out of the purview of OMB Directive A-126 and otherwise applicable limitations in the Federal Travel Regulation," Delmar wrote.

In a separate development, the Housing and Urban Development Department shot down suggestions that family members of Secretary Ben Carson are accompanying him on official business at taxpayer expense. Carson's wife Candy and one of his sons, investment firm founder Ben Carson Jr., have been seen on road trips with the secretary and at HUD headquarters, as reporters have noted. HUD Spokesman Jerry Brown told Government Executive on Friday that none of the travel costs of Candy Carson and Ben Carson Jr. are paid for by HUD, adding that at least 10 media outlets have already sent Freedom of Information Act requests for documentation on the question.

[NJ] Audit: New Brunswick Housing Authority did not always follow procedures (My Central Jersey, NJ)
My Central Jersey
(10/6/2017 4:49 PM, Mike Deak)
After an audit, the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development has cited the city's Housing Authority for what Mayor James Cahill says "may have been a technical violation." In a report issued Sept. 28, HUD found that the Housing Authority "did not always administer its operating and capital funds" in accordance with HUD regulations. HUD is recommending that future federal capital funds for the authority be reduced "as a penalty" for the violations. HUD also recommended that the Housing Authority provide documentation showing that $1 million paid for goods and services was "reasonable," provide procurement training for staff members, improve its financial controls and reimburse HUD $139,423 for funds that were expended after federal deadlines. The review centered around funds spent after superstorm Sandy in 2012, including $274,021 in 2014 to replace a generator and $277,956 in 2015 to replace a repair a roof. Cahill said the Housing Authority has begun submitting documentation to HUD for review.

"We trust that at the conclusion of the review of this information, while there may have been a technical violation related to the timely expenditure of funds, given the sensibility of installing an emergency generator in a public housing project in the wake of Superstorm Sandy, and the need for the Housing Authority to incur additional management fees related to the demolition of the former Hoffman Pavilion Senior Housing facility and the environmental remediation required there, the actions of the Housing Authority will be found to have been appropriate," Cahill said. John Clarke, the Housing Authority's executive director, told the HUD that many of the issues raised in the audit arose from the "substantial damage" suffered in Sandy. Clarke wrote that staff members expended "Considerable time and effort" to ensure that residents were safe and dealing with the storm damage. Clarke also said that missing the deadline for spending the money for the generator was due to the contract being late and a policy of not issuing a check until the goods were delivered. Clarke also wrote HUD that it had approved the management fees for the demolition project.

[NC] Pittenger: Robeson in line for $71M from HUD (St. Pauls Review, NC)
St. Pauls Review
(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, St. Paul's Review)
LUMBERTON — Robeson County is in line to receive as much as $71 million of the nearly $237 million in U.S. Housing and Urban Development money that has been allocated to North Carolina for rebuilding homes destroyed by Hurricane Matthew.

The $237 million represents three funding authorizations, two of which the state hasn't yet applied for, Jamie Bowers, a spokesman for U.S. Rep. Robert Pittenger, whose 9th Congressional District includes Robeson County, said Friday.

The $71 million designated for Robeson County is included in $198 million secured in December 2016 and released to the North Carolina Office of Emergency Management in August, Bowers said. The $198 million has not been released by Emergency Management to the individual counties, including Robeson, Cumberland, and Bladen, to help with the building of homes.

An additional $6.1 million in HUD funding was approved in May. Pittenger helped secure a further $32 million in July following conversations with HUD Secretary Dr. Ben Carson, according to Bowers.

[NC] Hurricane Matthew: One year later ---- County, state officials work for more funding for recovery (Goldsboro News-Argus, NC)
Goldsboro News-Argus
(10/9/2017 9:47 AM, Steve Herring)
Wayne County has been awarded nearly $26 million thus far to assist with Hurricane Matthew recovery efforts.

It will not be enough, county officials have said.

Meanwhile, Rep. John Bell of Goldsboro will chair the state House Select Committee on Disaster Relief. Rep. Jimmy Dixon of Mount Olive is also on the committee.

Possible additional state funding for property buyouts, river dredging and reservoirs could be among the issues the committee will take up.

Bell said one of his questions is why the level of federal disaster funds is lacking in the state.

The committee will be updated on the Disaster Recovery Acts of 2016 and 2017 and also study the state's infrastructure and regulations as they pertain to flood relief and study a proposed recommendation to prevent future flooding in eastern North Carolina.

Public meetings will be held as well.

Earlier this month-- almost a year to the date that Hurricane Matthew struck -- the county was awarded $16.94 million over the next two years through the state Community Development Block Grant-Disaster Relief program that is funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. It could be eligible for up to a total of $25.4 million over the next three years.

[NC] State accused of dragging feet in doling out Matthew relief money (WRAL-TV CBS 5 Raleigh, NC)
WRAL-TV CBS 5 Raleigh
(10/7/2017 4:43 AM, Staff)
VIDEO. Raleigh, N.C. — A year after Hurricane Matthew inundated southeastern North Carolina, political recriminations continue to pour in over the handling of federal relief funds.

Republican 9th District Congressman Robert Pittenger on Thursday said Gov. Roy Cooper's administration is dragging its feet in releasing $237 million in federal Housing and Urban Development funds already approved to help people repair and rebuild flooded homes. "This is incredibly frustrating, but much more so for families in Robeson, Cumberland and Bladen (counties) who are still awaiting promised help to rebuild their homes," Pittenger said in a statement.

The state Division of Emergency Management has had close to $200 million of the HUD funds since August and hasn't filed the necessary paperwork to get the remainder of the money, he said.

Cooper, a Democrat, and state Emergency Management Director Mike Sprayberry on Friday disputed Pittenger's statements. Sprayberry said North Carolina has met or beaten every deadline for each step required to draw down the federal dollars, adding that more than $100 million has already been released to counties affected by the hurricane. "We have awarded funding to four counties – Edgecombe, Cumberland, Robeson and Wayne – as of last week," he said. "Now, they have to work hard to make sure that their plans are going to meet the requirements. So, the process is underway."

Federal housing grants require assessments, Sprayberry said, and state and federal officials are working together to finish those quickly, especially for hard-hit communities such as Princeville. "The assessment has started, and it should be completed sometime in November," he said. "So, we're hoping the assessment goes well and that those funds will be able to be released at that time."

Cooper said the damage from Matthew amounted to about $4.8 billion, a figure that doesn't account for the toll the storm took on displaced families and businesses. "For victims, help cannot come fast enough, but one thing I know is that Congress has to step up and do significantly more to help people," he said.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency this week released another $100 million in hurricane recovery aid to North Carolina after temporarily freezing the funds to ensure the agency had enough money to meet emergency needs in Texas and Florida after hurricanes Harvey and Irma, respectively.

(10/9/2017 11:54 PM, Rosalia Fodera)
MARION COUNTY, S.C. (WPDE) — Marion County is still recovering from Hurricane Matthew with hundreds of families still not back home.

Monday, the county's Long Term Recovery Group hosted a celebration of life to review their first year of recovery.

Margaret Tart is one of the many still waiting to start rebuilding. Her Marion County home was destroyed in Hurricane Matthew.

"I lost everything," Tart said.

She's not alone though. Others are in the same situation.

"Out of the 100 percent of homes that were destroyed, I would say we're probably at 15 percent," Senator Kent Williams said.

Tart doesn't have the money to rebuild her home so she's waiting to hear if she'll get any of the the $52 million dollars from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

"HUD keeps reassuring me, 'Ms. Margaret we haven't forgotten about you,'" Tart said.

VIDEO. MARION COUNTY, SC (WMBF) - The Marion Long-Term Recovery Group observed the one-year anniversary of Hurricane Matthew by hosting "A Celebration of Survival" event Monday afternoon.

The organization formed in December 2016 after Marion County was hit hard from the flooding of Matthew. Chairman Michael Blue wanted to give local and state leaders, along with residents, an update and a celebration of the progress of the county so far.

Blue said he doesn't want the recovery efforts to ware off and the $52 million federal grant awarded in January is not going to cover all the needs.

"The grant that has been talked about so much primarily provides for construction and the infrastructure of the home, but as far as bedding, the actual tables, chairs, those kind of things are secondary, so those things are needs here in Marion County," said Blue.

The South Carolina Palmetto Disaster Recovery said there are 622 open cases in Marion County and the office of Housing and Urban Development is projected to help a total of 800 households impacted by Hurricane Matthew.

[VA] T.K. Somanath column: Solution to improve housing options for low income families in the City of Richmond. (Richmond Times-Dispatch, VA)
Richmond Times-Dispatch
(10/10/2017 5:11 AM, T.K. Somanath, CEO of the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority)
Our nation's public housing program has been underfunded for many years. This fact is most evident in larger urban areas like Richmond, where the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority (RRHA) serves extremely low-income households and where the majority of public housing developments are now entering their fifth, sixth, seventh, and, in some cases, eighth decade of development life. Without any substantive capital improvement funding these properties will continue to experience accelerated deterioration of their building systems and equipment. Maintenance servicing alone will not be sufficient to sustain these properties as a viable resource for low-income families in the foreseeable future. RRHA's and HUD's own assessments indicate that Richmond's public housing portfolio has over $150 million in capital needs. A significant portion of the older public housing developments are in need of replacement with new construction or top-to-bottom rehabilitation.

This situation is not just evident at RRHA, but is endemic across the country, with the nation's public housing stock in need of $30 billion in repairs, and an estimated 10,000 units are being lost on an annual basis due to maintenance issues. As far back as 1992, Congress' National Commission on Severely Distressed Public Housing called for annual capital appropriations to be increased to $4 billion per year, with an additional $1 billion per year to be targeted over 10 years toward the larger public housing sites nationwide. Twenty-five years ago, this commission forecast the deterioration of older public housing developments if adequate capital funding was not provided. Instead, HUD funding for public housing was undermined by sustained — and at times, aggressive — budget cuts. The current HUD budget proposals are no exception and are in every respect worse than in previous years. President Trump's fiscal year 2018 proposal to cut annual capital funds from $1.9 billion to $600 million and to cut operating funds by $500 million is the latest indication of the bleak prospects for future public housing funding.

Like any responsible public agency, RRHA must work with the funding it has to provide the best possible operating services to ensure that residents have decent and safe housing in which to live. Nevertheless, RRHA faces daunting challenges in assuring the continued viability of its larger developments, which house thousands of residents. When the public housing funding and regulatory platform no longer offers a sound method for assuring the future viability of properties, it is time to find another platform and approach.

[FL] Prospective owner to spend millions on Eureka Gardens, other properties (WJXT-TV CBS 4 Jacksonville, FL)

Company seeking $90 million in bonds for purchase of four apartment complexes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - The prospective owner of Jacksonville's Eureka Gardens apartment complex plans to spend nearly $22 million on construction in order to rehabilitate units at the troubled property on the Westside, according to a city document.

Eureka Gardens is one of several federally-subsidized apartment complexes in the city owned by the Global Ministries Foundation, based in Memphis, TN. The I-TEAM started investigating Eureka Gardens and its owners in the fall of 2015, after residents complained of unsafe and unsanitary conditions.

The I-TEAM discovered problems like mold, crumbling staircases, gas and carbon monoxide leaks. The complex still received a passing inspection score from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in 2016, before failing its HUD inspection this year.

A bill introduced to the Jacksonville City Council last month would authorize the Jacksonville Housing Finance Authority to issue up to $90 million in bonds to finance The Millennia Companies' purchase of Eureka Gardens, along with three other GMF-owned complexes: Moncrief Village, Southside Apartments and Washington Heights. The bill is due to have its second reading before the council Tuesday night.

[TN] Developer of Alton Park senior homes wants to give back to her community (Chattanooga Times Free Press, TN)
Chattanooga Times Free Press
(10/10/2017 1:25 AM, Yolanda Putman)
A local business owner has started a senior community in the inner-city neighborhood where she once lived.

"Sometimes you need something to let people know you are doing something," says Sharon Kelly, who grew up on West 46th Street, less than two miles from the Lee Avenue senior housing community she owns.

Last month she hosted the ribbon-cutting for three new homes, marking the latest residential development in Alton Park.

These are made possible by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the city of Chattanooga, Lee Street Developers and Infinite Construction, says Kelly.

If all goes as anticipated, the three homes are the first of seven planned in a $450,000 development project.

Kelly expects to know by the end of the year if HUD will provide funding for the remaining houses.

The three new houses sit next to Sharon's Senior Villa, the 25-bed assisted-living facility that Kelly opened in May 2001.

[MO] HUD to monitor progress to rid mice from Clinton-Peabody public housing (Fox 2 Now St. Louis, MO)

(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Elliott Davis)
ST. LOUIS - New developments in our investigation of the mice infestation at the Clinton-Peabody public housing project

The You Paid For It teams calls on HUD officials in Washington to lend the St Louis Housing Authority a helping hand to solve the problem.

We had asked Housing Authority Executive Director Cheryl Lovell if she planned to get help from HUD that funds her agency since she has tried and failed to solve the problem.

Lovell said she had no such plans and didn't need HUD's help.

Lovell's last idea was to bringing in six feral cats to get rid of the mice, but that was not sanctioned by the St. Louis City Health Department.

After Lovell told us she wasn't sure she could solve the problem, You Paid For It decided to light another fire under the housing authority by alerting HUD in Washington to the problem. Not only did we alter HUD, we sent our inquiry all the way to the HUD Secretary Ben Carson.

A HUD spokesperson called Elliott Davis a short time later with a pledge to monitor closely what the Housing Authority is doing and get the problem solved.

The St. Louis Health Department is also on the Housing Authority to get the problem solved.

300 tenants live in Clinton-Peabody and about 7 of the 31 buildings are overrun with mice.

The Housing Authority says the problem has lasted for months. But tenants dispute that, saying they've been dealing with the mice infestation for years.

[LA] -10: Ten Things to Know in New Orleans this Week: STR-ing up trouble (New Orleans Gambit Weekly, LA)
New Orleans Gambit Weekly
(10/10/2017 5:44 AM, New Orleans Gambit Weekly)
6. STR-ing up trouble

A complaint lodged by housing advocacy group Jane Place Neighborhood Sustainability Initiative (JPNSI) alleges two downtown buildings violate federal housing rules for converting its units into short-term rentals (STRs). According to the city's short-term rental database, more than half of the units at the Maritime Building on Common Street and more than a quarter of the units in the Saratoga Building on Loyola Avenue are registered as STRs, most of which can be rented out year-round under the city's commercial STR designation.

Both properties have mortgages backed by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). According to HUD requirements, properties that have received HUD assistance can't use units as transient rentals or hotel units. New Orleans' municipal short-term rental laws, however, don't have similar restrictions.

In a letter to HUD's New Orleans office, associate regional counsel Bam Viloria Gressett, JPNSI requests "HUD immediately investigate these violations and issue a cease order."

[IL] A Town's Dilemma—Find a Savior, or Just Move On (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(10/9/2017 12:32 PM, Shibani Mahtani)
Cairo, Ill., already hurting, faces rapid population loss as HUD closes complexes

CAIRO, Ill.—This once-thriving town, at the confluence of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, doesn't have a grocery store or gas station. A Subway sandwich shop, the only fast-food chain here in recent years, closed last year.

The town's troubles are coming into sharp relief as the Department of Housing and Urban Development, unable to find a private developer to join as a partner, is pulling the plug on two housing developments here.

Local officials say the town is likely to lose about a fifth of its 2,300 residents, taking with them the income they earn outside the city as well as government benefits like Medicaid and pulling children from the schools.

In a place as down on its luck as Cairo, "closing public housing like this is the equivalent of losing the major employer in town and all the jobs and opportunity related to it," said Jenny Schuetz, a fellow at Brookings Institution's Metropolitan Policy Program who studies housing policy.

State officials are pushing for a new river port terminal to bring back jobs, but the town, located in the state's poorest county, finds itself confronting a daunting possibility that its existence is at stake.

"I've told the younger people, take your [housing] voucher and get out of Cairo," said Paul Lambert, who has lived in Cairo for 38 years. "There's nothing for you here."

Cairo highlights the dilemma faced by struggling towns across the country that are losing population to bigger metropolitan areas. After a certain point these towns must decide whether there is enough left to fight for—and governments must decide whether limited resources would be better spent elsewhere.

"I don't see an obvious way to turn [Cairo] around," said Aaron Renn, a fellow at the Manhattan Institute. "It is more like problem-management mode at this point."

Cairo was once an important port because of its location on the two mighty rivers at Illinois's southern tip, but its population has dwindled by 85% since the 1920s as river traffic moved elsewhere. Racial riots in the 1960s and '70s led to the flight of most white-owned businesses.

HUD announced this spring that it would close the Elmwood and McBride public housing projects, forcing more than 200 families to find new homes. Built in the 1940s, the housing developments, which HUD took over in 2016, had fallen into extreme disrepair over the years with many apartments infested with mice, roaches and mold.

Despite months of petitions from residents, HUD says it won't be building new housing in Cairo, citing the absence of an interested private partner.

"It is hard to attract a private developer to a town that is not rebounding as fast as people want it to," said Jereon Brown, a HUD spokesman. HUD instead will be providing residents with "tenant protection vouchers," a form of rental housing assistance that families can use to move elsewhere.

For most residents, this will mean relocating to larger towns at least a hundred miles away.

[IL] U.S. Rep. John Lewis says HUD 'should lend a helping hand' to rebuild public housing in Cairo (The Southern, IL)
TheSouthern.com
(10/8/2017 7:11 AM, Molly Parker)
WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. John Lewis, one of the "Big Six" organizers of the Civil Rights Movement and an American icon, said this past week that he was troubled to hear of the housing crisis in Cairo, where he spent the summer of 1962 organizing young people to integrate businesses and a recreational center as a field secretary for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

"It bothers me very much," Lewis, D-Ga., said of learning recently that Housing and Urban Development is relocating about 400 people from two failing public housing complexes, and that at least some families who want to remain in Cairo may have to move to other communities because the federal government does not plan to rebuild in the city.

Lewis said the government "must help" rebuild Cairo. Lewis said that as he sees it, that means HUD providing for replacement housing in the city.

The 77-year-old Georgia congressman said he recalls clearly the efforts he and others led in Cairo 55 years ago. He was 22 that summer, and had just participated as one of the 13 original members of the Freedom Rides challenging the segregation of interstate buses.

"I think the government should lend a helping hand to rebuild the housing because they participated in the destruction of the housing," Lewis said, in a brief interview with the newspaper last week.

"People should have a clean, safe and decent place to live."

The 75-year-old complexes known as Elmwood and McBride are no longer considered safe. Past local managers of the Alexander County Housing Authority have been accused of failing to perform even basic routine maintenance at the properties that house almost entirely black families while spending generously on their own benefits, excessive travel, and questionable contracts, legal settlements and retirement deals.

Though HUD officials knew about brewing problems with ACHA management practices dating back to at least 2010, according to records obtained by the newspaper, the federal agency continued to send millions of dollars to the local housing authority while doing little to hold officials accountable.

HUD has been roundly criticized for abdicating its oversight responsibility, though the agency has never detailed what happened. The Southern Illinoisan has filed numerous Freedom of Information Act requests to HUD seeking information about why corrective action was not taken sooner. Those requests are pending.

Federal housing officials announced at an April 10 meeting in Cairo that they would begin moving people from Elmwood and McBride because they are no longer safe. HUD is providing every family with a tenant protection voucher, which subsidizes rent paid to a private landlord, but some people are upset that they cannot remain in Cairo because of a shortage of affordable housing. In response to past calls by citizens and city leaders that HUD rebuild housing in Cairo, federal housing officials have said they cannot because the economic conditions there make it impossible to attract a private developer to partner with the government. HUD says it is no longer in the business of developing public housing solely with federal taxpayer dollars.

Asked about Lewis' remarks, HUD spokesman Jereon Brown declined comment on behalf of the agency.

The HUD Office of Inspector General is presently conducting a review, at the request of Illinois U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin and Tammy Duckworth, of who knew what at HUD, when they knew it, and why they did not act sooner to protect the health and welfare of Cairo's families.

In a statement, Duckworth said she is pleased to hear Lewis' remarks of concern for the citizens of Cairo. "When John Lewis is on your side, it's a pretty good sign you're doing something right — Cairo's residents should be proud," she said.

[IL] U.S. Rep. John Lewis, an American icon of the Civil Rights Movement, reflects on the 1962 summer he spent in Cairo (The Southern, IL)
TheSouthern.com
(10/8/2017 7:12 AM, Molly Parker)
CAIRO — In the summer of 1962, a 22-year-old John Lewis and other young African-Americans knelt in prayer on the sidewalk in front of a "whites only" recreational facility as part of a peaceful demonstration effort aimed at integrating businesses and other public places in Cairo.

Danny Lyon, a Brooklyn native and then-University of Chicago student who hitchhiked to Cairo that summer, captured the poignant moment with Lewis, who would go on to become a longtime U.S. congressman from Georgia and American hero and icon of the Civil Rights Movement.

The image of the spiritual protest was shared around the nation throughout the 1960s as a poster with the words "Come let us build a new world together" inscribed at the bottom.

It came to symbolize a movement for racial reconciliation rooted in Christian brotherhood and Gandhi's philosophy of nonviolence — the principles upon which the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. founded a movement and inspired countless people to action. That includes Lewis, who became a close friend to King and influential leader of the Civil Rights Movement in his own right.

Recently, that photo circulated widely again, this time on Twitter, as it was originally posted by Lewis, and then shared thousands of times by the congressman's social media followers. Though, with the countless retweets, there was little mention of Cairo, where it was taken — and where decades of civil rights violations against black residents of two public housing complexes has culminated in a current-day housing crisis. But more on that later.

After meeting Lewis in Cairo, and the two becoming friends, Lyon would go on to capture on film some of the most harrowing moments of the Civil Rights Movement with Lewis making sure Lyon, a white man, had the access he needed to do his job. In doing so, Lyon also played a part in helping to fortify a movement by gaining the nation's attention as his photographs spread.

For this and many other reasons, Cairo served a larger role in the Civil Rights Movement than just the historical footnote it often receives suggests.

[IN] USS Lead, EPA reach agreement to study groundwater, soil contamination (Northwest Indiana Times, IN)

(10/8/2017 1:50 AM, Sarah Reese)
EAST CHICAGO - One of the companies responsible for polluting the city's Calumet section will investigate groundwater contamination throughout the Superfund site bearing its name, and soil contamination at its former factory property under an agreement with the U.S. EPA effective Wednesday.

USS Lead will perform a remedial investigation and feasibility study, with work set to begin in spring, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. An EPA spokeswoman said the agency entered into the agreement with USS Lead on Sept.

Residents had been pushing EPA to expedite a groundwater study for the USS Lead Superfund site, but EPA's announcement this week was met with reservation. "We have concerns about USS Lead leading the RI/FS process, because we know from experience that financial considerations lead responsible parties to drag out the study process or cut corners," said Debbie Chizewer, an attorney at Northwestern University Pritzker Law School's Environmental Law Clinic. "EPA has a mission to protect public health and the environment and should be the lead on analyzing the human and ecological risks and developing the possible plans for remediation," she said.

Chizewer, who represents the East Chicago Calumet Coalition Community Advisory Group, said the CAG "Will be keeping a close eye on this process and pushing for protection of the entire Superfund site."

2 groundwater studies planned

EPA employees said at a community meeting in September they planned to begin two studies related to groundwater at the Superfund site.

The first, a study of whether groundwater could be contaminating residents' basements, is being funded with government money and is not subject to the agreement with USS Lead, EPA said. The agency said it will begin seeking residents this fall to participate in the study. The second, a wider remedial investigation and feasibility study, will be led by USS Lead but will require EPA approval, according to the agreement. USS Lead must submit its list of qualified contractors, subcontractors, consultants and laboratories, and designate a project coordinator within 30 days of the effective date.

The remedial investigation will involve collecting data to characterize site conditions, determine the nature and extent of contamination and assess the risk to human health and the environment. USS Lead contractors also will conduct testing to evaluate potential treatment technologies. Several cleanup alternatives will be evaluated as part of the feasibility study, which must use permanent solutions and alternative treatment and resource-recovery technologies to the maximum extent practicable, the agreement said.

[IN] NAACP To Help East Chicago Residents Test For Lead (Indiana Public Media)
Indiana Public Media
(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Nick Janzen)
The NAACP will teach East Chicago, Indiana residents how to use lead testing kits this week. The training comes as residents continue to cope with lead contaminated soil and water.

The Calumet neighborhood in East Chicago is part of a federal toxic waste cleanup site contaminated with lead and arsenic. The neighborhood is also having a problem with lead leaching out of drinking water service lines.

The NAACP is partnering with Indiana State University and the Union of Concerned Scientists to teach residents how to use kits to test for lead in soil, air, and water. The NAACP's Denise Abdul-Rahman says it will also help school-aged children cope with a legacy of lead contamination.

"[It will] peak their consciousness and awareness," Abdul-Rahman says, and "give them tools, and to teach them some forms of empowerment."

Abdul-Rahman says the training is necessary because of a systemic failure of government at all levels to protect some of Indiana's most vulnerable residents.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency continues to remove lead contaminated soil from the neighborhood. And the Department of Housing and Urban Development recently approved the demolition of a lead contaminated housing complex which was forcibly evacuated over the last year.

[TX] How much has been raised for Harvey relief – and how's it being spent? (Texas Tribune, TX)
Texas Tribune
(10/6/2017 1:13 PM, Morgan Smith)

Between the federal government, the Red Cross and private charities, billions of dollars will be spent to help Hurricane Harvey victims in Texas. The Tribune is tracking how it's spent.

After Hurricane Harvey dumped up to 50 inches of rain on parts of southeast Texas and caused historic flooding, an outpouring of financial support and charitable contributions has flowed to Harvey-related causes. Almost a month and a half later, floodwaters have receded, leaving Texans in 39 counties to clean up rotting debris and destroyed homes. An estimated 1,100 people remained in eight different emergency shelters around the state earlier this week, and 62,304 Texas residents are still living in FEMA-paid hotel rooms. Two weeks after the category 4 storm made landfall, Congress approved a $15 billion federal aid package. Donors have given hundreds of millions more to the Red Cross and a host of Harvey relief funds: one started by Houston Texans star JJ Watt has pulled in $27 million, while the Rebuild Texas Fund, spearheaded by the Michael and Susan Dell Foundation, has raised $70.7 million.

"We are in that period where everyone is saying nice things and patting everyone on the back saying we understand your pain, we understand your needs, and sooner or later that's going to get back to dollars and how those are spent," Harris County Judge Ed Emmett said at a recent legislative appropriations meeting.

So how exactly is that money being used? Here's an overview of what's been spent at the state and federal level — and what hasn't.

Federal Funding: $15 billion

While lawmakers are expected to approve more money for disaster relief - Texas leaders on Thursday requested another $18.7 billion - the state won't get the full $15 billion because the money will be divided among the states and territories hit by hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria. About half of the money has gone to FEMA, which generally helps disaster victims take care of more short-term needs like food, water, medical care and temporary housing. The other half of the federal relief money flows through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to help finance long-term rebuilding. It's intended to fill in the gaps after individuals or government agencies have exhausted all other sources of relief. "We are the long-haul type responding agency, we aren't the first responder," said Brian Sullivan, a spokesman for the department. None of the $7.4 billion the department has received from Congress has arrived in Texas yet, and it will be a while until it does because of a complicated process of assessing needs and developing a spending plan that must be approved by multiple layers of government.

[TX] Officials have no details on housing relief (Victoria Advocate, TX)
Victoria Advocate
(10/9/2017 4:57 AM, Marina Riker)
After Hurricane Harvey, state and federal officials wanted to find new ways to help Texas' communities. They came up with several programs, including one that would fix apartment buildings and another to more permanently repair homes.

Government officials touted the relief programs as the first of their kind, designed to let local officials to take the lead.

But two weeks after the programs were announced, local officials don't have exact details about when Victoria residents could see help. Hundreds of people have been kicked out of damaged apartments, while others don't have the money to fix homes.

"It's kind of frustrating," said County Judge Ben Zeller. "But we're still waiting to get those answers and the details."

At the city level, Polasek said officials would consider waiving fees for trailer or RV parks used for temporary housing. Opening the city's RV park near Riverside Park also could be an option once repairs to the property are finished.

Meanwhile, Julie Fulgham, who oversees development for the city, said she was planning to talk with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development about long-term housing programs. But she didn't have details about temporary housing relief such as trailers for people who lost homes.

"It's like nobody knows what is going on," Fulgham said. "And I think it's because they're trying to develop the programs."

[KS] Renovations coming to many properties in Wichita (KNSS-AM 1330, KS)

(10/8/2017 10:32 AM, KNSS-AM 1330)
Up to $60 million is coming to public housing in Wichita and that means complete renovations for all public housing properties.

In 2012, the US Congress created the ability for public housing authorities to begin using private funding in addition to government funding. The United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) designed a program called the Rental Assistance Demonstration program.

In February, the Wichita City Council approved the Wichita Housing and Community Services Department's submission of four applications to be part of the Rental Assistance Demonstration program.

On Saturday, Wichita Housing and Community Services Department Director John Hall said that the applications have been accepted. Each of the city's 352 single family homes and multi-family units will be completely renovated.

The entire project should take between 18 months to two years

VIDEO. WICHITA, Kan. (KWCH) Up to $60 million is coming to public housing in Wichita and that means complete renovations for all public housing properties.

"That's good news!" one resident of Greenway Manor says to John E. Hall, the Wichita Housing and Community Services Department Director.

"Yes, yes, yes!" he replies.

Greenway Manor is just one of two high rise buildings that coupled with two other garden style buildings make up the city's public housing for multi-family units. The authority also has 352 single family homes across the city. Every one will see a top to bottom renovation.

"This is the first time we've been able to do this," Hall said.

In 2012, the US Congress created the ability for public housing authorities across the country to begin utilizing private funding in addition to government funding. From there, the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) designed a program called the Rental Assistance Demonstration (RAD) program.

Back in February, the Wichita City Council approved the Wichita Housing and Community Services Department's submission of four applications to be part of the RAD program.

Saturday, Hall said, he's announcing the applications have been accepted.

"This is one of our high rise buildings and it's for the elderly," Hall said as he stands in Greenway Manor. "So what the residents here will be able to see is a completely renovated building. So the elevators system, for example, will be completely brand spanking new. The flooring, the walls, we're going to basically take everything down and rebuild it more or less. We'll leave the structure itself here but we'll do a complete restoration of the building."

Hall said the entire project should take between 18 months to two years. He said the Wichita Housing Authority is still in very early stages of planning and has to take many steps before the renovations can happen. But he's moving quickly.

As for tenants, they'll go elsewhere during the renovations. But Hall said that'll all be taken care of.

[MN] West St. Paul apartment owner sued over bias against Army vet, his support dog (St. Paul Pioneer Press, MN)
St. Paul Pioneer Press
(10/10/2017 1:22 AM, Nick Ferraro)
The owner and manager of a West St. Paul apartment complex are accused of discriminating against an Army veteran by not allowing him to keep his emotional-support dog.

The veteran filed a complaint with U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in 2015 alleging that Westview Park Apartments denied his request to keep the dog and that by doing so discriminated against him in violation of the Fair Housing Act. The complaint was amended in September to include owner James Tilsen and rental manager Deborah Brookins.

The veteran, who served tours of duty in Iraq and Afghanistan, receives disability benefits from the Veterans Benefits Administration for his major depressive disorder and also suffers from anxiety and post-traumatic stress disorder, according to an administrative charge HUD filed last month. His name has been redacted from the document.

The owner denied discriminating against the veteran and question the validity of his request.

Allowing people with disabilities to have assistance animals that perform work or tasks or provide disability-related emotional support is considered a reasonable accommodation under the Fair Housing Act, according to HUD.

The veteran moved into the apartment in February 2015 on a one-year lease and in August of that year asked the complex to permit him to have an emotional support dog. He provided a letter from "Sutherland Counseling," supporting his need for the animal, along with his own written statement describing his symptoms and need for the animal, according to HUD. He adopted the dog, a great Dane-golden retriever mix.

[AZ] The Most Wasteful Government Agency You've Never Heard Of (Reason Magazine)
Reason Magazine
(10/6/2017 2:08 PM, Christian Britschgi)
The Navajo Housing Authority brags on its website that it is "the largest Indian housing authority in the country", managing 8,500 housing units across Navajo nation in the southwestern American states of Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico. The NHA is also probably the most wasteful and scandal-ridden governmental entity in the United States today. Multiple media reports, governmental audits, and one investigation by the Office of Senator John McCain describe an agency that has received over $1.6 billion from the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Indian Housing Block Grant program, while delivering projects over-budget, years-delayed, or unfinished. According the NHA's 2011 estimates, the authority needs to build some 34,000 homes and significantly repair another 34,000 to address the Navajo reservation's chronic housing problems, something it says will cost nearly $9 billion.

Since 1998, NHA has received an average of $95.6 million a year from HUD to address these needs. Over the past decade, NHA has spent $803 million of program funds, and built 1,010 housing units in that time. That works out to about $723,000 for each new housing unit, or about the median home price in ultra-expensive Seattle. To top it all off, the NHA now has to pay back some $26 million to HUD for ten housing developments that it promised to build, but never completed, according to a settlement reached in September and first reported by AZCentral Wednesday. "The settlement follows years of costly and time-consuming litigation," said HUD spokesperson Elena Gaona in a statement to Reason, saying that the $26 million was the "largest enforcement action" ever taken against a recipient of IHBG funds. "The agreement will allow HUD and Navajo Housing Authority staff and members to focus on meeting the housing needs of Navajo families," Gaona says.

Caldwell Screws up Again: Lapsed housing funds fuel despair

Here we go again. Unfortunately.

The city's fumbling of federal funds that could have helped with affordable housing has caused it to lose nearly $2.4 million in federal HOME money, and is putting another $7.5 million at risk. The failure to use these funds in a timely manner is galling enough, given Hawaii's homeless and housing crisis — but doubly so, coming a mere year after the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) warned the city against its dysfunctional handing of federal grants.

In a scathing Aug. 26, 2016, audit, HUD's Inspector General took the city to task for questionable practices involving the acquisition of apartment complexes intended to boost the city's inventory of affordable rentals. Those practices put $15.9 million at risk, and after months of back and forth, the city conceded to repay the federal agency $1.45 million….

This time around, millions of federal dollars lapsed, despite allocations being good for five years…..

In explaining the delays in spending the HOME and CDBG funds, city Managing Director Roy Amemiya cited missed deadlines due to working with private-sector partners.

[AK] With focus on hurricanes, erosion-threatened Alaska villages wonder if they'll get any help from Trump (Alaska Dispatch News, AK)
Alaska Dispatch News
(10/9/2017 4:56 AM, Nathaniel Herz)
As the federal government has turned its attention to hurricane recovery in the Southeast and Puerto Rico, residents of coastal Alaska villages are also facing the threat of flooding and erosion from fierce fall storms, amplified by rising sea levels and thawing permafrost.

But the government hasn't provided the same assistance to endangered Alaska villages as it has to Texas and Florida. And now a federal whistleblower is claiming that the Trump administration has halted progress in Alaska.

More than a 'little bit of attention'

Clement, the whistleblower, doesn't dispute that career employees at federal agencies are still functioning under the status quo.

The problem now, he said, is that unlike during Obama's second term, there's no one in Washington prodding the different federal agencies that coastal villages rely on for money to support relocation and climate change adaptation.

There's no dedicated stream of federal cash large enough to pay a village's full relocation costs, or their costs of protecting existing roads and buildings from climate impacts. Instead, they have to apply for individual grants from agencies like the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"This is not the kind of issue where you can just pay a little bit of attention and see if you can redirect a million dollars," Clement said. "Federal agencies are not empowered to move resources until D.C. gets behind it."

One member of Alaska's congressional delegation, GOP U.S. Sen. Dan Sullivan, said in a prepared statement through a spokesman that he's pushing legislation to ease relocation for erosion-threatened villages, such as by speeding up federal permitting. But he also argued that the Obama administration never followed through on its own promises to assist remote Alaska villages.

Issuers can combine hurricane exposure for relief aid: Ginnie Mae (National Mortgage News)
National Mortgage News

(10/6/2017 12:47 PM, Brad Finkelstein)
Ginnie Mae mortgage-backed securities issuers can aggregate their portfolio's exposure to areas hit by the three recent hurricanes to qualify its disaster relief program. Through pass-through advances from Ginnie Mae, issuers get delinquency and default relief for securitized loans in areas where the president declared a major disaster. "It makes an adjustment to our MBS guide's long-standing requirement that 5% of an issuers' book needs to be in a disaster-affected area in order to qualify for short-term liquidity assistance from us," said Ginnie Mae Acting President Michael Bright in a press release. "Today's change allows issuers to meet this 5% requirement using their collective exposures to Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria. While we cannot alter the core, fundamental requirements for issuers in our program, these adjustments recognize that last month's confluence of disasters requires some extraordinary measures."

Mortgage exec pleads guilty to defrauding Ginnie Mae (Mortgage Professional America)

(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Francis Monfort)
The president and founder of the now-defunct mortgage company Mortgage Security has plead guilty to charges that he defrauded Ginnie Mae of about $2.5 million.

Robert Pena pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and six counts of wire fraud.

The charges stem from Mortgage Security contracts with Ginnie Mae to pool eligible residential mortgage loans and then sell Ginnie Mae-backed mortgage bonds to investors. Under the contract, Pena's company would service the loans in the pools it created and was required by Ginnie Mae to provide regular reports about the pools.

Starting in 2011, Pena began to divert the money he received from borrowers. He deposited high-dollar, loan-payoff checks into bank accounts unknown to Ginnie Mae and diverted borrowers' escrow funds and mortgage insurance premiums. Pena then used those funds for personal and business expenses.

The scheme resulted in total proceeds of $2.5 million, which Ginnie Mae had to pay to investors whose investments it had guaranteed. In addition, Pena also provided false reports about the loan pools in an attempt to cover up his scheme.

The statutes under which Pena was charged provide for a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, three year of supervised release, and a fine of $250,000 or twice the gross gain or loss.

US Senior District Court Judge Mark Wolf scheduled sentencing for Jan. 5, 2018.

Robert Pena, president of the now-closed Mortgage Security Inc. in Falmouth, Mass., admitted to six admitted to six counts of wire fraud and one count of conspiracy in federal court in Boston. According to Acting U.S. Attorney William Weinreb, "Beginning in 2011, Pena began diverting money that borrowers were sending to Mortgage Security Inc. Pena also attempted to cover up his scheme by providing false reports to Ginnie Mae about the status of the loans MSI was servicing." Pena used those funds for personal and business expenses, and also diverted borrowers' escrow funds and mortgage-insurance premiums for his own use. Pena, 68, will be sentenced on Jan. 5 and faces up to 20 years in prison.

OMB Director Mulvaney calls for canceling NFIP's $16 billion debt (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(10/6/2017 4:33 PM, Brena Swanson)
The strength of the National Flood Insurance Program was put to the test after the devastating destruction from Hurricane Harvey, Irma and Maria, and unfortunately, it failed to hold up.

In a letter to the president, Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney stated, "The recent hurricanes have inflicted projected losses of $16 billion. As a result, by the latter part of this month, the NFIP will have fully exhausted its financial resources and will be unable to pay claims."

Mulvaney continued: "Put plainly, the NFIP is not designed to handle catastrophic losses like those caused by Harvey, Irma, and Maria. The NFIP is simply not fiscally sustainable in its present form. To be sure, the NFIP requires immediate financial relief to fulfill its obligations to its policyholders, but the program must also be reformed to place it on a sound financial footing and to enable the private market for flood insurance to expand".

Heading into hurricane season earlier this year, the NFIP already was not on stable footing. Flood insurance, whether it's private or the national flood insurance program, has long struggled to gain attention over the years.

The devastating destruction of the recent hurricanes pushed the urgency for a solution to the program to the surface.

A budget neutral way to help low-income Americans pay for their rent or mortgage (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/9/2017 11:03 AM, Diane Yentel)
The tax proposal released by Republican leaders leaves out one way to spur economic growth and help Americans struggling to meet their rent or mortgage: directly reforming the mortgage interest deduction and reinvesting the savings into affordable rental housing for those with the lowest incomes.

The mortgage interest deduction (MID) is a $70 billion tax write-off that primarily benefits higher income households. Experts across the political spectrum agree that the MID is a wasteful use of resources that does not incentivize homeownership. Instead it encourages higher levels of debt, increases costs for everyone, and mostly benefits those with high incomes who do not need federal assistance to live in a stable home.

Lowering tax rates for millionaires and corporations without addressing the affordable housing crisis should be a non-starter. If our leaders are serious about boosting the economy and helping families thrive, they should use savings from tax reform to increase the supply of housing for those who need it most.

According to research from my organization, the National Low Income Housing Coalition, every state and community – rural, suburban, and urban – has a severe shortage of affordable rental homes for people with the lowest incomes. Nationally, there are only 35 homes affordable and available for every 100 extremely low income renters. A full-time worker earning minimum wage can afford a modest, one-bedroom apartment in only 12 counties.

As a result, 71 percent of the lowest income households –seniors, people with disabilities, families with children struggling to get by—pay more than half of their limited incomes on rent and utilities, with little left over for other basic needs, like food, health care, or savings for retirement or their children's education. These families are at a high risk of eviction, which destabilizes families and communities, and, in worst cases, results in homelessness.

Editorial: Scrap the mortgage interest deduction (Chicago Tribune, IL)
Chicago Tribune
(10/6/2017 7:58 PM, Editorial Board)
Home ownership is commonly regarded as a big part of the American Dream. But most adults know that pursuing some dreams can be too expensive to justify. The mortgage interest deduction, a subsidy to homebuying, is one of those. Curtailing or abolishing it should be a big part of any serious tax reform.

The real American dream is more about the broad prosperity and ample opportunity that derive from strong economic growth than it is about purchasing a house. Many Americans rent their dwellings, and the housing crash that helped cause the Great Recession made them glad they did. Some homeowners ended up in foreclosure. Many others found themselves trapped in homes that were worth less than they owed.

The deduction encourages home ownership by letting buyers deduct the interest they pay each year on their mortgages. But at this point, economists believe, it doesn't have much net effect. That's because the tax break has inflated home prices, largely if not entirely offsetting the benefit.

Economists generally oppose the deduction, because it gives Americans an incentive to put their money into houses rather than other investments that would yield higher returns. It encourages people to buy more expensive homes and to take on more debt than they otherwise would. It drains money from other sectors of the economy and maximizes the impact of housing downturns. Again, the crash of 2008 was an awful lesson.

The deduction also robs the Treasury of tax revenue — a gaudy $70 billion a year. This is money that could be used to finance a simpler, more efficient tax code with lower rates. If the deduction remains intact, any attempt at reform will be limited in scope and value.

Middle-class homeowners may bridle at the idea of losing their biggest tax break. But most Americans get little or no benefit from the mortgage interest deduction. About 70 percent of filers can't make use of it, because they don't itemize their deductions.

4 Common Misconceptions Stopping Millennials from Owning a Home (U.S. News & World Report)
U.S. News & World Report
(10/6/2017 11:44 AM, Marietta Rodriguez)
Millennials have the same home ownership dreams as everyone else, but are confused about what it takes to get there.

The Truth About Weak or Bad Credit

The No. 2 obstacle cited by millennials for not buying a home is bad credit (behind lack of down payment), but just over half (56 percent) of all consumers have received a copy of their credit report and score in the past year. The rest of consumers have little idea of their credit profile.

Moreover, even if a millennial has less than perfect credit there are mortgage products available that can help him buy a home. These products have FICO credit score hurdles as low as 600, although most set the bar at 620 or higher.

Working with a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development-approved housing counselor to identify down payment assistance programs and mortgage products that are open to borrowers with a ding on their credit is a first step to truly knowing if weak or bad credit will prevent a millennial from buying a home.

Homebuying finances Should you rent or buy a home? (CNN)
CNN
(10/9/2017 11:02 AM, Sarah Szczypinsk, The Motley Fool)
Homeownership was once the cornerstone of the American Dream, but times are changing. More U.S. households are renting today than at any point in the last 50 years, according to a Pew Research Center analysis.

For many people, the comforts of home include a well-funded bank account -- and in some circumstances, renting can be more financially savvy than buying.

Ask yourself these questions as you make long-term housing decisions. You might find that renting is the better option.

1. How long do you plan to stay?

Whether renting or buying a home is the best financial choice usually comes down to one thing: timing. Finding an affordable home (and later making a profit on it) depends heavily on how long you plan to keep the property.

According to Zillow, for instance, the current home listing price in Bothell, Washington, is $698,448, and the average rental price is $2,500. Assuming a 20% down payment on a home purchase or a 5% annual increase in rental price, you'd need to own the home for at least two years before it becomes the better option.

Fannie Mae: Boomers won't own their home free and clear before retirement (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(10/6/2017 4:34 PM, Kelsey Ramírez)

While outright homeownership increased among Baby Boomers after the last recession, they still lag previous generations, and may never catch up, according to the Fannie Mae Economic and Strategic Research Group's latest Housing Insight Series.

At one end of the spectrum, older generations such as Baby Boomers criticize Millennials for waiting longer than their generation to buy a home, however even Boomers are failing to keep up with the pace set by the generation before them.

Baby Boomers are much less likely to own their home outright, that is - without a mortgage, than the generations before them, and probably won't be able to catch up before reaching retirement age.

"The leading edge of the large Baby Boom generation has reached retirement age with a greater likelihood of carrying housing debt, raising concerns about their retirement financial security," Fannie Mae's report stated. "The oldest Boomers, who were aged 65 to 69 in 2015, were 10 percentage points less likely to own their homes outright than were pre-Boomer homeowners of the same age in 2000.".

Outright homeownership picked up after the Great Recession, and the younger end of the generation is more likely to be close to previous generations with their rate of outright homeownership.

The chart below, which uses data from U.S. Census Bureau and the 2000 Census and American Community Survey, shows 26% of Baby Boomers aged 50 to 54 in 2015 owned their home outright, compared to 22% of homeowners of the same age in 2000. [Editorial note: CHART at source]

Despite this uptick, even the youngest Baby Boomers will likely not be able to pull up their outright homeownership rates to the level of previous generations. The relatively high incidence of housing debt among Boomer homeowners has the potential to strain their retirement finances.

USA Today
(10/9/2017 6:18 PM, Susan Shain)
3. Look into first-time homebuyer programs

Does 20% seem totally out of reach? It might be time to look into programs for first-time homebuyers. Here are two you might not have considered.

FHA loans: With the backing of the Federal Housing Authority, first-time homebuyers with credit scores of 580 or above might be able to put as little as 3.5% down. For buyers with credit scores from 500 to 579, that number jumps to 10%.

USDA loans: If you're buying a home in a rural area and meet credit and income requirements, you could purchase a home with no down payment through USDA loans.

You also could look into first-time homebuyer grants, which can significantly reduce the cost of a house.

One of the biggest national programs (besides VA loans for veterans) is Good Neighbor Next Door from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. With this grant, law enforcement officers, emergency medical technicians, firefighters, and teachers in "revitalization areas" can receive up to 50% off the list price of a home.

Mortgage Forgiveness and CEO Pay (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg
(10/6/2017 9:40 AM, Matt Levine)
Mortgage relief.

After the mortgage crisis, JPMorgan Chase & Co. entered into various mortgage settlements for eye-popping headline amounts. But these amounts consisted mostly not of cash paid to the government, but of "consumer relief," in which JPMorgan could get credit for forgiving or modifying mortgages in order to help struggling homeowners. Yesterday David Dayen reported at The Nation that some of JPMorgan's consumer relief came through the odd but efficient expedient of forgiving other people's loans: JPMorgan would sell mortgages to someone else, then it would "forgive" the mortgage and claim credit for the settlement, and then the someone else would say, hey, what the heck, why do you get to forgive a mortgage that I own?

Now, this is bad. It's bad for the someone else who bought the mortgages: In this story, it's mostly a guy named Larry Schneider, who bought $156 million of JPMorgan mortgages for $200,000 (!), only to see JPMorgan drag its feet on the paperwork and forgive some of the mortgages that he'd already bought. (JPMorgan also collected some payments on those mortgages after it sold them, and told Schneider that it couldn't forward the payments "because of an internal accounting practice that was 'not reversible,'" which I may try out as an excuse for not paying my mortgage sometime.) It's bad for the homeowners: They got letters from JPMorgan saying that their mortgages were forgiven, but then later they found out that in fact their mortgages were not forgiven because JPMorgan didn't own them in the first place. (At least in some cases, when JPMorgan found out about the error, it bought back the mortgage and really did forgive it.) And it's bad for the justice of the mortgage settlement: If JPMorgan is getting credit for forgiving mortgages it didn't own, then it is not really being punished for its misdeeds, but putting the costs of them on innocent third parties.

[NY] GLYNN: Collins predicts compromise in tax issue (Niagara Gazette, NY)

(10/6/2017 7:18 AM, Don Glynn)
An area congressman has been in the national spotlight for his firm stand on the sweeping tax code changes proposed in Washington.

Rep. Chris Collins, R-Clarence, whose 27th District includes a section of Niagara County, said Tuesday he still is optimistic that some accommodation will be made for the state and local tax deductions so it (SALT) won't be repealed.

Collins told a reporter he believes that a compromise will be reached that would not penalize the middle-income taxpayers in high-tax states (e.g. New York). He added that House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy had assured him of that outcome.

In those states where taxpayers generally get hit the hardest, some federal lawmakers have warned that their constituents would be paying more if the SALT deduction is wiped out. In filing their state and local taxes, nearly 35 percent of New York residents now claim those taxes on their federal returns.

MINE HILL TWP. – Morris Habitat for Humanity plans to return before the planning board next month with a new, improved plan for its proposed 4-unit affordable housing project on Randall Avenue.

Blair Schleicher Bravo, CEO of the Randolph Township-based non-profit agency, said Sunday a meeting with Mayor Sam Morris and Engineer Paul Sterbenz was "productive," and expected the re-submitted application to be heard by planners on Monday, Nov. 6.

Bravo said the self-contained subdivision will contain four single family homes that will be "repositioned to face the driveway."

The new design, however, will allow the project to keep one of two existing homes on the property as was initially planned.

Greenview Drive in south Jackson is full of abandoned, boarded-up houses and they continue to deteriorate. Habitat has acquired 31 of the abandoned properties on Greenview drive. The street with the rundown reputation is transforming. Thanks to HUD and the city of Jackson, no profit sales with zero interest loans make it possible. "We help them become financially literate, we teach them how to do home repairs," said Executive Director Merrill McKewen. "We work with them on how to be part of a neighborhoods association and they truly own this home and they begin to care about this street." With the keys to the 4 new houses, the families have mortgages and pay taxes and insurance.

A former director of a Nevada nonprofit dealing with distressed housing and six others have been indicted in federal court on bribery-related charges, the U.S. Department of Justice announced Thursday.

The 14-count indictment unsealed Wednesday in Las Vegas accused the six other defendants with bribing 50-year-old Sergio Barajas, a former director of community development for the National Community Stabilization Trust in exchange for influence within the organization.

They were identified as Alan Cassell, 47, of Chula Vista, California; Elena Millner, 40, of Boerne, Texas; Benjamin Stuelke, 35, of Anaheim, California; Art Acosta, 55, and Michelle Acosta, 33, both of Anaheim Hills, California; and Ernesto Garcia, 45, of Upland, California.

All seven were charged with conspiracy to commit bribery and bribery involving programs receiving federal funds, according to a news release. The release said Stuelke and Garcia were also charged with bank fraud.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development Office of Inspector General is continuing to investigate the case.

Three Anaheim residents and a Chino man are among seven defendants facing bribery allegations tied to a Nevada nonprofit created to deal with the national housing foreclosure crisis. According to an indictment unsealed this week at a federal courthouse in Las Vegas, Anaheim residents Benjamin Stuelke, 35, Michelle Acosta, 33, and Art Acosta, 55, are facing fourteen felony counts, including conspiracy and bribery concerning programs receiving federal funds. The indictment centers on the National Community Stabilization Trust, a Nevada-based nonprofit created in 2008. Sergio Barajas, 50, of Chino, served as director of community development for the nonprofit and was tasked with helping oversee more than $10,000 in federal grants the organization received each fiscal year between October 2010 and September 2015. Federal prosecutors allege Stuelke, Art Acosta and other co-defendants paid Barajas more than $300,000. In return, the indictment alleges, they received hundreds of foreclosed homes and made millions from reselling the residences. The indictment comes after an investigation by the Office of the Inspector General for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

[OR] Spurred by rising rents, Latinos buy thousands of homes in Portland, suburbs (Portland Oregonian, OR)

Yareli Flores was 10 when her family came to Portland from Mexico. She, her mother and two brothers lived in a Northeast Portland apartment and struggled to get by. Buying a home wasn't within reach, she says.

In May, Flores, now 32 with a 1-year-old daughter of her own, bought her first home — a three-bedroom just east of the Portland city line in the Centennial School District. There's a yard and good grocery stores nearby. No landlord to answer to. Owning the home, she says, is a special feeling.

Flores' new neighborhood has seen an increase in Latino-owned homes in recent years. It's a rare area in which the homeownership rate for Latinos is on par with that for whites. The Census Bureau pegs both at about 67 percent.

The rise in Latinos buying homes in areas like Centennial is part of a larger trend: Amid Portland's affordable housing crisis, Latinos have managed to buy a lot more homes around the metro area.

[CA] Judge Rejects Orange County Mortgage Swindler's Request For Leniency (Orange County Weekly, CA)

(10/9/2017 6:26 PM, R. Scott Moxley)
Orange County white collar swindler Kevin Frank Rasher hoped he'd receive a punishment of no more than 41 months in prison for defrauding 516 financially-distressed Southern California homeowners, but U.S. District Court Judge Josephine Staton didn't believe that requested time fit the crime.

Inside the Ronald Reagan Federal Courthouse in Santa Ana, Staton ordered Rasher, a 46-year-old resident of upscale Coto de Caza, to spend 97 months in federal custody and then undergo supervised probation for three more years upon his release.

That punishment represents the maximum possible punishment according to sentencing guidelines available to the President Barack Obama-appointed judge, who agreed at a Sept. 29 hearing with U.S. Department of Justice prosecutors that Rasher's financial crimes targeted particularly "vulnerable victims" and thus deserved a greater loss of freedom.

Using Youtube and Internet sales pitches from 2011 to March 2016, the defendant claimed he could reduce peoples' mortgage payments, directed targets to send monthly checks to him as a middleman negotiator for modified deals and, instead of working with lenders, deposited more than $2.4 million of those funds into his personal bank accounts.

Part of Rasher's ruse involved falsely portraying himself as a licensed attorney as well as an official with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and using HUD in the name of one of his fraudulent websites, according to DOJ officials.

[PR] Helping Puerto Rico will take time (Miami Herald, FL)
Miami Herald
(10/6/2017 9:11 AM, Staff)
More than two weeks after Hurricane Maria made landfall in Puerto Rico, Congress and the Trump administration still don't seem to realize the magnitude of the disaster or what it will take to restore normal conditions on the stricken U.S. territory. The response has been slow and the level of relief has been inadequate. President Trump hardly improved things in a brief visit to the island last week. He told local officials they should be "very proud" that hundreds of people didn't die after Hurricane Maria as they did in "a real catastrophe like Katrina." Puerto Rico is experiencing an all-too-real catastrophe, a nightmare for nearly all of the 3.5 million American citizens on the island. Most of them are living in squalid conditions with no immediate prospects for improvement. Relief is being parceled out in small doses because of logistical challenges and the overwhelming needs.

The day after the president's remarks, the death toll rose from 16 to 34 and was expected to keep going up. But it's not about the body count. It's the scale of this awesome disaster and the off-the-mainland location that makes previous relief and recovery efforts seem easy by comparison. Maria inflicted sweeping devastation on Puerto Rico.

It's a humanitarian crisis, a public health crisis, a financial crisis, a housing crisis, and much more. Mr. Trump and his Cabinet must make it clear that this is an emergency requiring a sustained effort on the part of every relevant agency of government. That includes the Defense Department to provide security, FEMA to lead individual aid efforts, the FAA to ensure air transportation safety, HUD to offer temporary housing and shelter, and so on down the line.

Affordable Housing

As high earners push up rents, fewer options for others (CBS MoneyWatch)
CBS News
(10/6/2017 5:15 AM, Rachel Layne)
The rent for many Americans is still too damn high, according to a new analysis of 53 metropolitan areas.

Nationally, 46 percent of households, or more than 12 million families and individuals, were "rent-burdened" in 2015, New York University's Furman Center said in the report. A rent-burdened household is defined as one in which more than 30 percent of income (before taxes) goes toward paying the rent.

The percentage of Americans who are spending more on rent has risen sharply in recent decades. In 2000, 36 percent of households were considered rent-burdened, while the latest figure is nearly twice the rate from 1970, when about a quarter of households struggled, according to the analysis, which is based in part on the most recent available federal data.

Although the share of rent-burdened households has dipped 1.2 percentage points from 2012, that drop may not represent good news for most renters. Here's why: The study shows that growing numbers of better-educated, higher earners are choosing to rent instead of buying a home, especially in faster-growing cities. That changes the overall income profile of who is renting.

The Rich Are Driving Up the Rent (Bloomberg)
Bloomberg
(10/6/2017 5:15 AM, Patrick Clark)
Renting in the U.S. is getting more affordable—because the renters are getting wealthier. Where do you fit in?

Following the Great Recession, the cost of rental housing took a growing bite out of U.S. household budgets, as increasing demand for rental units pushed up prices. Now the share of households considered burdened by high rents is falling, according to a report from New York University's Furman Center for Real Estate & Urban Policy.

That's good news. But the dynamics driving improved affordability are a mixed bag.

One reason for the shift is that wealthier families are increasingly likely to rent, allowing landlords to raise prices without raising the risk that their tenants won't pay. As the chart shows, the number of households that spend 30 percent of their income on rent (considered cost-burdened) and the share that spend half their income on rent (considered severely cost-burdened) are still historically high.

Twenty-one percent of households earning at least 120 percent of the area median income rented in 2015, up from 15 percent in 2006; families with children and households where at least one member has a bachelor's degree also became more likely to rent over the course of the decade.

[ME] Belfast's push to boost apartments, control short-term rentals concern Airbnb hosts (Bangor Daily News, ME)

(10/9/2017 8:52 AM, Nick McCrea)
Faced with a critical shortage of year-round rental units, Belfast officials are weighing a series of sweeping changes to boost the number of apartments in the city, but one of those concepts, still in its early stages, has raised concerns among some of the city's Airbnb hosts.

Airbnb is a web-based service that allows people to rent a place to stay directly from "hosts" who own the property. Other websites, such as HomeAway, offer similar vacation rental services.

Belfast is home to more than 60 Airbnbs, ranging from oceanside cottages and stately former sea captain homes to spare bedrooms and renovated basements at the host's house. One listing features a secluded one-room yurt with an outhouse.

The nightly rental rate for these rooms often fall well below those of area hotels, especially during the busy summer tourist season. The bulk of Airbnbs in Belfast fall between $50 and $140 per night, according to listings.

[MA] Peabody Properties awarded $16.8 million toward construction of 98 Essex (New England Real Estate Journal)

Full-service real estate and property management firm Peabody Properties has received a commitment from the state Department of Housing and Community Development in the amount of $16.8 million toward construction of a new family housing project. The Haverhill project award, presented by governor Charlie Baker, is one of 25 projects in 17 communities statewide to receive housing subsidy funds and additional state and federal tax credits; in total the Baker-Polito administration and the DHCD have committed a total of $72 million for the creation, rehabilitation, and preservation of 1,970 housing units across the Commonwealth, including 402 units reserved for very low-income families and families making the transition out of homelessness. To be known as 98 Essex, the new project is being constructed through the partnership of Peabody Properties, Inc. and the Affordable Housing and Services Collaborative, Inc.

It will entail the adaptive reuse and historic renovation of the former Shoe and Leather Associates building located at 98 Essex St.; the building is also situated within both the L.H. Hamel Leather Company Historic District and the city's Downtown Smart Growth Overlay District. When completed, 98 Essex will feature 62 affordable and workforce housing apartments, with 7 apartments reserved for households earning less than 30% of the area median income, and six apartments at workforce/market rate. Total cost of the Haverhill project is estimated at $25 million; in addition to the recently awarded $16.8 million from DHCD, 98 Essex will be funded by the city, the North Shore Consortium and the Massachusetts Housing Authority.

[NY] Here's How Trump's Tax Plan Might Hurt New York City (DNAinfo New York, NY)

(10/6/2017 11:11 AM, Amy Zimmer)
MANHATTAN — Many New Yorkers — except perhaps the superrich like Donald Trump and his family — may not fare exceptionally well under the president's proposals to cut taxes, most experts agree.

However, it's hard to understand the potential impacts of Trump's plan, which is little more than an outline, leaving many details to be filled in by Congress.

The framework states it "extends economic opportunities to American workers, small businesses, and middle-income families," but New Yorkers could suffer if the Trump administration follows through on its plan to remove deductions for state and local income and property taxes from federal tax returns.

Critics have said this plan rehashes Reagan-era trickle-down economics. Supporters believe the cuts will help grow the economy.

Watchdogs warn that the city's affordable housing plans could be in jeopardy because of cuts to tax-exempt bonds that finance such projects. Many worry that budget reductions would follow the tax cuts, which means that services, from the subways to children's health care, could suffer even more.

[NY] Thousands slam Mayor de Blasio's affordable housing plan in City Hall rally (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News
(10/8/2017 5:32 PM, Erin Durkin)
Thousands of senior citizens, NYCHA residents, teachers and church parishioners turned out in the pouring rain Monday to call out Mayor de Blasio for falling short on his pledge to make housing in the city affordable to New Yorkers.

Congregants from churches around the city, organized by the Metro Industrial Areas Foundation, packed the block outside City Hall to push the mayor to get behind their own plan — which includes building 15,000 apartments for seniors on vacant NYCHA land.

"We will be confrontational with the mayor. We will be wherever he shows up," said Rev. Daryl Bloodsaw of the First Baptist Church of Crown Heights, Brooklyn.

De Blasio was invited to the rally, but was marching at the time in the Columbus Day parade — where he was met by boos from parade goers over his refusal to rule out removing a statue of Christopher Columbus at Columbus Circle.

As elected officials and candidates march in the annual Columbus Day parade on Monday, a separate gathering of members of church congregations, senior centers, schools, and homeowners associations will convene outside City Hall to present an affordable housing plan that they believe is a viable alternative to Mayor Bill de Blasio's current program. The coalition of Metro Industrial Areas Foundation and East Brooklyn Congregations plans to lead 5,000 people in the rally on Monday to push the mayor to adopt their proposal. "Monday is about a plan that we have vetted and that we think is the right plan for the city," said coalition leader Reverend David Brawley, the pastor of St. Paul Community Baptist Church, in a phone interview Friday. Brawley and his partners recently confronted de Blasio about their plan at a town hall in East New York, just after having presented the plan to him three days prior, at which time the mayor said he had already said he hoped to have an answer by the time of their Columbus Day rally and was sticking to that answer.

The proposal hits on key criticisms of the de Blasio administration's approach to affordable housing: that it doesn't go far enough, especially with regard to the poorest and neediest New Yorkers. The proposal envisions creating 15,000 units of senior housing on underutilized NYCHA land and vacant city-owned lots within four years. That, in turn, would free up space in NYCHA developments to house 50,000 people who currently sit on waitlists or live in shelters, according to the plan, which includes detailed development costs and financing mechanisms for deeply affordable housing, including more city subsidies. Aside from the housing plan, the advocates will also push the city to criminally prosecute predatory landlords. The coalition is also calling for "top-to-bottom rehabilitation" of NYCHA developments to ensure that public housing residents live in quality homes.

Thousands turned out in the rain Monday for a march and rally on City Hall to demand Mayor Bill de Blasio address their concerns over affordable housing and gentrification.

Community-based and church organizations like East Brooklyn Congregations and Metro IAF were among the lead organizers of the rally, voicing concerns about the mayor's affordable housing plan and long-held fears of displacement from typically low-income neighborhoods. The group was also joined by City Comptroller Scott Stringer and Rep. Hakeem Jeffries.

But the main thrust of speakers were religious and community leaders from the neighborhoods who they say are the most threatened by rising rents and rapid development.

"New York City needs leaders who have creativity, who have commitment and who have courage," said Rev. Patrick O'Connor, head pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Jamaica. "When we met with the mayor of the city of New York, the mayor ringed his hands and told us he wasn't sure there was much he could do. Do you believe him?"

Thousands of New Yorkers rallied in the rain outside City Hall Monday afternoon calling for more affordable housing for senior citizens.

The protest was coordinated by Metro Industrial Areas Foundation, a coalition of city churches. Metro IAF says they suggested a plan to Mayor Bill de Blasio that would transform underutilized public housing areas into 15,000 affordable apartments for senior citizens - but the mayor would not consider the plan.

"The comptroller has told us it would work, but the mayor won't talk to us," said Brother John of St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Public Advocate Letitia James also attended the protest.

"To have the mayor just reject it out of hand and not give them serious consideration is really a disrespect to all these men and women of faith," she said.

Thousands came together at City Hall on Monday, calling on Mayor Bill de Blasio to build more affordable housing and punish slumlords.

More than 5,000 people demonstrated, many of whom said the mayor needs to fulfill a campaign promise from four years ago to increase access to safe affordable housing.

Some said they are forced to pay about 30 percent of their income to live in substandard conditions.

"We're here today from a community of people in churches fighting for our rights and what he promised us. You can't promise and not follow through," said one demonstrator.

[NY] Holding de Blasio to his affordable housing promise (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News

(10/8/2017 6:27 AM, Harry Siegel)
Four years ago, New Yorkers elected Bill de Blasio mayor after he told a two-cities tale about too many of us being priced out of our homes and hometown.

One term in, rents are still rising even as he's on pace to fulfill his hugely ambitious promise to save or create 200,000 affordable units over 10 years. As de Blasio glides to reelection - talking about being open to new ideas, but not yet walking that walk - New Yorkers are still being priced out, and ever further out. Bed Stuy, Bushwick, Brownsville.

"What de Blasio is doing hasn't yet stabilized neighborhoods," Rev. David Brawley of St. Paul Community Baptist Church in East New York told me earlier this week. "Where there's a fire, the only thing you want to know is: 'Did my house get saved?'".

"A fire commissioner doesn't get a pass for saying how much water he used, and how hard he tried. It should be no different with what's happening to our city, and our homes."

Brawley had been telling me about the hour-long meeting he'd attended the previous Friday with de Blasio, along with a dozen other leaders of Metro-IAF, the group founded by community organizer Saul Alinsky and with a legendary pedigree of actually building affordable housing here.

That pedigree goes back decades - to when abandonment and arson had left the city littered with lots and land - and includes the Nehemiah houses first proposed by planner and builder I.D. Robbins in his Daily News column. The group was at Gracie Mansion to try and reset its relationship with this mayor, who's hewed to a more political, top-down and perhaps less constructive left-wing model of 10-year plans and grand pronouncements accompanied by exhausting lists of co-signers meant to demonstrate overwhelming support. It's a style that often leaves actual builders looking in from the outside, and community members irritated by official pronouncements of progress even as their rents keep rising.

The Islip Town Board last week approved the first-ever LGBT senior citizen housing complex in the New York metro area.

The proposed 70,000-square-foot, $30 million development will bring 75 rental apartments to a 2-acre site on the corner of Park Avenue and Mechanicsville Road in Bay Shore, just down the block from the Bay Shore Long Island Rail Road station. The project, first pitched four years ago, has a new developer, Levittown-based D&F Development, which is working in concert with the Long Island LGBT Network and the Long Island Housing Partnership.

The apartments will be restricted to people, aged 55 and over, who meet the income eligibility requirements with annual incomes of roughly $35,000 to $85,000. Consisting of mostly one-bedroom apartments and a few two-bedroom units, rents will range from $1,000 to $1,600 per month.

The four-story complex will feature a new 8,000-square-foot LGBT community center on the ground floor, replacing the existing 4,200-square-foot community center that's been in Bay Shore for the last 15 years.

CITY OF NEWBURGH – Seven years ago, Maurice Diggs walked four miles from his home on Liberty Street in the City of Newburgh to the construction site for Mason's Ridge, the New Windsor affordable-housing development where Libolt & Sons served as general contractor.

At the time, he had been jobless for two years while trying to support two children. He was told to come back the next day and begin work as a laborer.

"I was in desperate need of work," said Diggs, who has been with Libolt & Sons ever since.

Creating jobs for other Newburgh residents desperate for work is one goal of a Newburgh Community Land Bank-driven project taking shape in Newburgh's East End.

Affordable-housing developer RUPCO is turning 15 long-vacant properties into dozens of affordable apartments, and using Libolt as general contractor.

Greater Jamaica President Hope Knight believes the apartment complex and the shopping space will bring new residents and consumers to the area.

"Our goal for the development of the site is to facilitate a project that addresses the needs of the community, creates jobs and brings activity to the eastern part of the district," Knight said. "We are confident that BRP and Wharton will create a project that will support the growing population and volume of daily shoppers that is at an all-time high."

This is the second development project for the real estate firm BRP in Jamaica. The company's co-founder and managing partner, Meredith Marshall, is already in the process of building a private affordable housing and mixed-income apartment complex called "The Crossing at Jamaica Station." It cost $407 million and is across from the AirTrain Station at 93-01 Sutphin Blvd., Jamaica, according to GJDC.

The 773,000-square-foot project will have 669 units and is projected to create 4,000 construction jobs before it is completed in 2019, according to GJDC.

"Jamaica is primed to be a premier hub in Queens — combining housing, retail and transportation — and we are pleased to support its continued development with our second Jamaica project," Marshall said. "We are working closely with the Greater Jamaica Development Corporation, helping to bring needed mixed-income, affordable housing to the area. This project will strengthen our relationship and ensure we are developing in Jamaica based on the needs of the community."

[NY] Downtown Brooklyn's BRIQ Nears Completion and Launches Affordable Housing Lottery (CityRealty, NY)

As Downtown Brooklyn's BRIQ (237 Duffield Street) nears completion, an affordable housing lottery has launched for 22 units in the 23-story, 105-unit rental. One studio, 18 one-bedrooms, and three two-bedrooms are open to applicants earning 60% of the area median income. The deadline is Thursday, November 30, and our blog 6sqft has more information about the lottery here.

When BRIQ is completed, apartments above the 21st floor will have terraces. Building amenities will include bike storage and a laundry room. The building is located around the corner from the Hoyt Street subway stop, as well as a short walk away from the Jay Street MetroTech and DeKalb Avenue stops for an easy commute.

BRIQ is the latest in a wave of recent residential and commercial development in Downtown Brooklyn. City Point Brooklyn, the neighborhood's largest shopping center and host to Trader Joe's, Alamo Drafthouse Cinema, and DeKalb Market Hall, recently opened a block away. Across the street, Offerman House (249 Duffield Street) just started leasing from $2,725/month (net effective). Hub (333 Schermerhorn Street), Brooklyn's tallest residential building, will open soon.

Deal Guarantees Property Will Remain Affordable Housing for Next 30 Years

Purchasing Polyclinics Apartments marks the sixth transaction to preserve affordable housing that Standard Communities says it has closed this year without using public funds, totaling 1,025 apartment homes. Its parent company, Standard Property Co., owns more than 50 retail spaces and 10,000 residential units across the county, more than 7,000 of which are maintained as affordable housing.

Originally built as a hospital in the 1930's, the 11-story, 164,285-square-foot building was converted to multifamily units in 1979 and is comprised of one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments.

Of the 151 units at the building, 150 will be kept for low-income families. Those units will be covered under the U.S. Department of Housing's (HUD's) project-based Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments contract, which caps tenants' rental payments to 30 percent of their income. Standard Communities said in a release that the U.S. Department of Housing (HUD) assisted with many aspects of the transaction.

"Providing the tools that leverage private capital to preserve affordable housing represents the kind of effective public-private partnership that Secretary Carson and this administration have championed," noted Lynne Patton, HUD regional administrator for New York and New Jersey. "[The deal] will guarantee 150 affordable units in one of the nation's most expensive rental markets for years to come."

The four-story building sits on a quiet street in Brooklyn, across from a church and an arts school. Eight apartments, front and back, two on each floor.

The building, near the boundary of Clinton Hill and Bedford-Stuyvesant, has gone through incarnations as a rental, then a tenant-run cooperative, then a rental again. The most recent change brought a handful of new tenants, lured not by a landlord seeking to profit off the neighborhood's gentrification, but by the promise of affordability.

The building is a small part of what Mayor Bill de Blasio has called the most ambitious affordable housing plan in the city's history. Its eight apartments are counted toward Mr. de Blasio's goal of preserving or creating 200,000 units of housing in which rents are regulated by 2024.

For much of his first term in office, Mr. de Blasio, a Democrat, has made affordable housing a centerpiece of his agenda — highlighting it in his State of the City addresses and calling it the No. 1 issue on the minds of New Yorkers. In July, he heralded a numeric accomplishment: 77,651 units financed so far.

Alison Jackson was disappointed.

Jackson, 42, was at the Landmark Loew's Jersey Theater on a recent Saturday morning to ask candidates seeking the Ward C City Council seat about their plans to make Jersey City more affordable. A student advisor at a New York City university who lives on Tonnelle Avenue, Jackson said the prices at many of the new developments in Journal Square would force her to shell out more than 50 percent of her income on rent.

After hearing from the council hopefuls, she told The Jersey Journal their answers showed they do not understand the enormity of the affordability problem facing the city and don't seem to have plans to address it.

"I understand they're politicians and can't commit to anything. I know they need to make comprises, yada yada," she said. "But I was a little disappointed that they couldn't give me a concrete answer on what's happening right now, because that told me they're not fully familiar with what the current situation is."

TRENTON--New affordable housing in New Jersey has long been planted, in large part, in communities where there are poor people.

But in a major change, the Christie Administration has begun steering more funding for low-income projects beyond just the urban neighborhoods of the state's largest cities.

Earlier this summer, the Housing and Mortgage Finance Agency awarded $39.8 million in tax credits for low-income housing projects, earmarking 60 percent of those funds for proposed developments beyond Newark and Camden, officials said.

The credits, which will help finance 2,178 new housing units for working families, senior citizens and residents with special needs, were awarded to 29 projects in 14 counties across the state.

[SC] Affordable housing: The ultimate stabilizer for families (Greenville Online, SC)
Greenville Online

Greenville has experienced significant growth in the last few decades and most recently in the last 10 years. As a result of public and private leadership, Greenville has become stronger, more vibrant and more prosperous.

These changes have positioned Greenville as a transformational leader as it has accomplished what few American cities ever do. In light of these significant achievements, Greenville's evolution has surfaced a set of issues which is exacerbating the quality of life for those living in poverty.

The growing popularity of downtown Greenville is placing increased pressure on low wealth residents as neighborhoods experience rapid gentrification. Rising home prices and rents are pushing individuals and families out of the city center. This leads to a complex set of challenges known as the social determinants of health. Economic stability, education, food, environment and health care, influence health outcomes such as life expectancy , mortality, morbidity, including health status and health care costs.

The availability and affordability of housing plays an important role in stabilizing lives. Housing is an indicator of well-being, mental and physical health. Stable affordable housing reduces stress, improves health outcomes and frees up money for essentials such as food, transportation and health insurance. An abundance of research on neighborhoods, housing and health indicates that once stabilized in affordable housing, costs to health care systems are lower and primary care visits increase. Emergency department visits go down, as well, indicating that integrated health services are a key driver of health care outcomes.

Tim Keating, Boeing's senior vice president of government operations, said the company's investment in Liberty Hill will continue to offer STEM education to North Charleston area students, "who, one day, will be STEM-ready and qualified candidates to meet the needs of the growing South Carolina business sector."

With the agreement signed and workforce development in place, organizers will focus on the next component, affordable housing, Rivers said. The community has more than 240 vacant tracts, he said. About 160 homes are owner-occupied, and another 100 are lived in by non-owners.

"Frankly, that sets Liberty Hill up to be gentrified, and that's what we are concerned about," Rivers said. "So when these schools become the kind of schools we know they will be, people will want to live on Liberty Hill. But they won't be able to afford it, if we don't intervene now."

North Charleston and North Charleston Housing Authority currently have few affordable housing programs, but Rivers said they have shown interest in his group's plans.

"Our vision is to transform Liberty Hill with affordable housing so the people who live here can stay here, in good, decent safe housing," Rivers said.

[NC] If you build teacher housing, will they come to Durham and stay? (Raleigh News & Observer, NC)
Raleigh News & Observer
(10/9/2017 6:48 AM, Greg Childress)
DURHAM - For Deja Young, the rent for an apartment near The Streets at Southpoint is a bit of stretch on her beginning teacher's salary of about $35,000.

Young, a first-year math teacher at Southern School of Energy and Sustainability, pays about a $1,000 a month for a one-bedroom apartment in the bustling Southpoint area. That's about $25 per month above the area's $975 average for a similar apartment.

There are less expensive places to live in Durham, but for the recent N.C. Central University graduate who prefers to live alone, it's hard to put a price on feeling safe.

"Finding affordable housing in Durham is a little challenging if you want to live alone," Young said.

[FL] Editorial: No real winner in city-county battle for affordable-housing money (Tampa Bay Times, FL)
Tampa Bay Times
(10/9/2017 10:22 AM, Tampa Bay Times Editorial)
Now there's a winner in a fight over federal resources between city and county affordable-housing interests. But the fight was so misguided to begin with that the results amount to a pyrrhic victory. At least the tax credits at stake will remain in Hillsborough County. And people who need help finding a home they can afford will have 144 more options once a housing project is completed just east of Interstate 75 in the community of Mango near Riverview.

But in the process, the rift that has opened between Tampa and Hillsborough County poses a threat much broader than the benefits to be realized from this single, new, $25 million housing project.

Cooperation between the two is what's called for to improve the odds of landing federal resources to help close the huge local gap between supply and demand in affordable housing.

But prospects for cooperation seem to be slipping away.

The Tampa Housing Authority was set to receive the tax credits in question to put toward a $50 million, 200-unit project that would serve, in part, to replace some of the public housing demolished to make way for the sweeping West River redevelopment project on the northwest edge of Downtown Tampa.

Alina Agamy was looking for a house to rent near downtown Nashville when she discovered Walden Village, a neighborhood of affordably priced new homes in the heart of the city.

Instead of renting, Agamy and Justin McCormick together bought a 1,400-square-foot townhome in Walden Village, where prices have ranged from the low $200,000s to the $300,000s.

The neighborhood of 34 townhomes and single-family houses is adjacent to Trevecca Nazarene University. The campus is south of downtown along Lafayette Street.

"I knew I wanted to live near downtown," said Agamy, who previously rented an apartment near Vanderbilt.

[KY] New nonprofit plans to restore five shotgun houses near Cave Hill Cemetery (Louisville Courier-Journal, KY)
Louisville Courier-Journal
(10/8/2017 2:29 PM, Sheldon S. Shafer)
There is a major new player with some strong financial wherewithal on the Louisville historic preservation scene.

And the new nonprofit agency, Vital Sites, unveiled its first major undertaking Monday morning at a news conference in the 1200 block of East Broadway.

That is where Vital Sites has targeted five vacant shotgun houses that date to the 1890s for renovation and reuse as affordable housing.

Vital Sites will focus on partnering with individuals and other groups to redevelop abandoned or neglected spaces. The new organization has absorbed Preservation Louisville, a long-standing local nonprofit committed to preservation causes, and the Louisville Preservation Fund that dates to 2012 when it formed to support the redevelopment of the Whiskey Row block on Main Street.

Mayor Greg Fischer said Monday that the nonprofit will help address the problems of abandoned properties and the need for affordable housing. He called the effort to save the five shotgun houses "a beautiful example of people working together."

[IL] Illinois awards $22M in tax credits for affordable housing (Washington Times, DC)
Washington Times
(10/8/2017 6:32 PM, Associated Press)
CHICAGO (AP) - Illinois has awarded more than $22.5 million in federal tax credits to help fund 20 new affordable housing developments.

The Illinois Housing Development Authority says the credits will generate about $258 million in private capital to finance 1,442 apartments for low- to moderate-income families, seniors and people with disabilities.

Developers receive the credits then sell them to investors. That generates equity to reduce construction and operating costs. The savings are passed along to renters in the form of lower rents.

Three of the affordable housing developments will be in Chicago. Others are slated for locations in the Chicago suburbs as well as Virginia, Mendota, Arcola, Altamont, Paris, Greenfield, Urbana, Bloomington and Champaign.

A local nonprofit is planning to redevelop a former school on the southeast side of Grand Rapids.

Inner City Christian Federation, or ICCF, in partnership with Madison Square Christian Reformed Church, plans to redevelop the building at 415 Franklin St. SE for mixed-used purposes.

Plans for the 72,000-square-foot site include community and office space for nonprofit social services on the ground floor, plus 40 units of affordable housing on the second and third floors.

The building most recently housed the Kent County Department of Human Services and previously home to Grand Rapids Christian High School.

Grand Rapids officials approved the $15-million project plan on Sept. 26

[IN] Residents raise health concerns (The Republic, Columbus, IN)

Residents at a Columbus senior apartment complex want federal housing officials to investigate what they believe is mold continuing to grow in some top-floor apartments and a utility closet, even after the complex owners said they have fixed the problem.

About 75 people live in Central Park Place Apartments, 1500 13th St., which was built about four years ago and has 60 apartments for people age 55 and older.

The building is owned by the Miller-Valentine Group, which has offices in Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio.

In late August, one of the residents, Lora Sites, was told a resident on the third floor of the complex entered what is called an environmental room, which has a furnace and other mechanicals and a trash chute to drop trash bags to the basement.

As the residents were putting garbage bags in the chute, they noticed a smell and saw "Black stuff" on the wall near the furnace, Sites said. More investigation determined that a similar substance was around bathroom registers in some of the apartments and some of the registers were dripping water in addition to being covered with the substance, she said.

Most people originally had thought it was mildew, but now are concerned that it is mold, Sites said. "A lot of people are sick and going to the doctor," she said.

The residents have contacted the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development with their complaints, Sites said, but have not heard back whether the agency will investigate conditions at the apartment complex. Many of the residents have federally subsidized rent payments for the complex, she said.

[TX] Plan to turn Old Mercy Hospital into affordable housing falls through (Laredo Morning Times, TX)
Laredo Morning Times
(10/5/2017 6:44 AM, Julia Wallace)
As of Wednesday, the City of Laredo's consideration in turning the Old Mercy Hospital into affordable housing is no longer on the table. At their Sept. 5 meeting, City Council trepidatiously voted to enter into a memorandum of understanding with the owners of the old hospital to conduct a site analysis and appraisal of the blighted building to determine its potential use for low-income housing units. Council also voted to file a temporary restraining order to compel the property owners to mitigate the building's wide-ranging nuisance issues. That injunction should be filed within the week, according to the City Attorney's Office. The site analysis would have been conducted in joint effort with the Laredo Housing Authority, which took the lead in modifying the proposed memorandum of understanding, Deputy City Manager Cynthia Collazo said at Wednesday's Old Mercy Ad Hoc meeting. The city and the LHA agreed to give Chendo Carranco, who owns the old hospital, until Sept. 30 to sign the memorandum of understanding.

[TX] Some renters feel 'no choice' but to leave apartments (Galveston County Daily News, TX)
Galveston County Daily News
(10/8/2017 6:11 AM, Matt Degrood and Samantha Ketterer)
Texas law gives several protections to apartment renters whose homes were flooded in Hurricane Harvey, but many landlords for the first time are using special provisions to make residents leave on short notice, legal experts said.

"If someone's apartment is totally uninhabitable, the law says the landlord or the tenant can terminate the lease," said Richard Tomlinson, director of litigation for Lone Star Legal Aid's Houston office. "The most common lease is the Texas Apartment Association lease, which says you have to provide a five-day notice."

The law hasn't changed recently, but is being used in ways not often seen before, some legal experts said. "What we are finding is that a lot of landlords for the first time have been exercising their rights under this. They'll give tenants notice and say they have five days to dispose of all of their materials and get out."

Hurricane Harvey made landfall Aug. 25 in Rockport, about 200 miles south of Galveston County. It dumped more than 50 inches of rain in some parts of this county, swelling creeks and bayous and flooding an estimated 20,000 homes in the county and devastating parts of Houston. The storm severely damaged many apartment complexes in the region. A survey of about 2,600 complexes in the area showed more than 14,800 apartments sustained damage from Hurricane Harvey, said Suzy Hartgrove, spokeswoman for ApartmentData.com.

Connie Shown, who lived in Ebbtide Apartments, 100 Market St., in Galveston, was told by owners to move because of damage from Harvey, she said. Shown said the damage - some leaks in the hallway - was present before the storm. Shown and her roommate didn't know their rights as renters, but after contacting attorneys, the two were surprised to hear there wasn't much they could do, she said. "We didn't have a choice," Shown said. "They have the right to terminate our lease. It's so bad when people can do people like that."

After multiple requests for comment, apartment managers at Ebbtide declined to speak on the record about the situation.

While having a limited time to move everything out of an apartment is difficult for anyone in the immediate aftermath of a hurricane, the situation is especially dire for elderly residents, Tomlinson said. "It's been really hard for them to find alternative housing anywhere near where they currently live," Tomlinson said. "Moving fragile residents is hard on them. I fear for their safety if forced to move really quickly, especially if it's involuntary. It's the nature of the beast right now. It will hopefully get better with time, but that could be months."

[TX] Gentrification, rising rents put squeeze on more Austin households (Austin American-Statesman, TX)
Austin American-Statesman
(10/10/2017 1:58 AM, Dan Zehr)
The pressures of gentrification and rising rents grew faster and spread farther in Austin than in comparable metro areas around the country, setting off ripple effects that could raise health care costs and undermine the quality of education for residents throughout the region, according to the authors of a report due out Tuesday.

Researchers at the Urban Institute, a nonprofit research organization, found that almost half of Austin renters were "burdened" by their housing costs in 2015, an increase from 41 percent in 2000.

The situation deteriorated even further for the metro area's low- and middle-income households, or those that earned between 50 percent and 120 percent of the area median income (or $38,400 to $92,160 a year for a four-person household in 2015).

The number of Austin's low- and middle-income households that spent at least 30 percent of their income on rent rose to 25 percent in 2015, up from 9 percent in 2000.

[ND] Historic Mandan school being turned into affordable housing (Houston Chronicle, TX)
Houston Chronicle

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — An historic former school in Mandan is being transformed into affordable housing.

The building through its history has served as the city's high school, its junior high, an elementary school and a sixth-grade academy. It closed in 2009, and earlier this year was listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Bismarck Tribune reports that The Commonwealth Companies, of Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin, finalized its purchase of the property in late September. The building is now undergoing asbestos abatements and interior demolition.

The $6.2 million project will create 39 units of affordable housing known as Historic Apartments on 4th. Mandan's Business Development Director Ellen Huber says renovation should be in full swing after Thanksgiving.

The Elliot Apartments, one of the last low-income apartment buildings in downtown Des Moines, could be converted into market-rate units after a fire closed the building last summer.

That has housing advocates calling for Des Moines leaders to create a policy that preserves affordable housing units in the city.

More than 40 Elliot Apartments residents were displaced in June 2016 when the building at 219 Fourth St. caught fire. No one was hurt, but the fire damaged apartments and neighboring Fong's Pizza.

The Elliot has been vacant since, leaving its residents who paid modest rents with few places to turn.

St. Anthony city manager wants council to reject project over density issues.

The latest twist in the sale and closure of St. Anthony's only mobile home park has the city manager pushing for City Council members to reject the plan pitched for its redevelopment.

The high-density plans include 97 units of affordable housing to replace the mobile homes lost from the park's June 30 closure.

But in what is being described as an abrupt turn of events, City Manager Mark Casey is now recommending that the city reject the 712-unit project that's spread over about 17 acres, citing density concerns. The matter will be presented to the council at its 7 p.m. meeting Tuesday.

In an Oct. 5 letter to city leaders, Casey says the proposed 41.4 units per acre exceeds what's called for in St. Anthony's most recent comprehensive plan — 25 to 40 units per acre.

Effort from both public and private sectors will be needed to impact the costs of regional housing

Last month two events in the region celebrated the rise of the tiny home.

Portland's fifth annual Accessory Dwelling Tour featured 24 striking "granny flats," that clearly aren't just targeted to grannies anymore. Following on the heels of that event was the Tiny House Living Festival at the Clark County Event Center. The recent ruling on Accessory Dwelling Units (ADU) by the Vancouver City Council on Aug. 7 has made ADUs a hot topic in local politics as well.

We applaud the city for taking a step to increase the housing supply. However, ADUs are one small tool in the toolbox to impact housing affordability. Vancouver loosened some design requirements and eliminated restrictions on owner-occupancy and on-site parking as methods for encouraging ADUs.

For some context we can look across the river where ADUs have been aggressively pursued as part of Portland's urban growth planning. Portland did not really see ADU permits take off until 2010 when they waived System Development Charges (SDC). In 2016, Portland issued 616 permits for ADUs, which is 20 times the average number issued prior to 2010. Total number of ADUs in Portland currently is around 1,900, which is less than 1 percent of single-family residential properties in the city.

VIDEO. On Wedneday, the Portland City Council extended its declared "housing emergency" and renter protection rule.

That rule, championed by Commissioner Chloe Eudaly, requires landlords to pay relocation cost to renters they evict without cause or who have to move as the result of a rent increase of 10 percent or more.

More than 30 renters, housing advocates and landlords testified how a lack of affordable rentals and the rules meant to abate the affordable housing crisis have affected them. Here's what a few had to say:

Former state representative Shemia Fagan reminded the council that homelessness touches many in the community, including her mother.

[CA] This AIDS nonprofit lost a political battle over housing and development. Now it's fighting a new way (Los Angeles Times)
Los Angeles Times
(10/6/2017 8:27 AM, Emily Alpert Reyes)
When the AIDS Healthcare Foundation waged an unsuccessful campaign this spring to crack down on "mega projects," affordable housing developers argued its ballot measure would hurt poor renters and thwart sorely needed construction.

Now the huge nonprofit is getting into affordable housing itself, saying it can provide it quicker and cheaper than such groups.

"The current model does not work," said its top executive, Michael Weinstein. "It takes too much time. It costs too much money. And in a lot of cases, it excludes the people that need the most help."

AHF is forming a new division called the Healthy Housing Foundation and has already purchased a skid row building in an effort to provide apartments for hundreds of poor tenants. It is also buying a Hollywood motel and says it plans to break ground on hundreds of new units next year in Florida.

OAKLAND (BCN) - Ground was broken Friday on a $53 million, 110-unit affordable and market-rate housing development at Oakland's Coliseum BART station in a buoyant ceremony marked by cheers and three standing ovations.

Coliseum Connections, a transit-oriented development, is being built just a stone's throw from the station, on the grounds of its former parking lot. The development is expected to be completed in Dec. 2018, according to Michael Johnson of UrbanCore Development, the project's developer.

The project will include 55 units that will be affordable to households whose incomes fall between 50 and 60 percent of the area's median income. These rents will fall between $980 and $1,400 per month. The other 55 units will be market rate housing, renting for $1,800 to $2,200 a month.

As BART trains whizzed past on tracks only about 100 feet away, a crowd of about 200 celebrated the development, a coup for the long-maligned neighborhood of the Coliseum known as "deep East Oakland."

[CA] Labor got higher wages in California's housing deal. Will affordable homes still be built? (Sacramento Bee, CA)
Sacramento Bee
(10/9/2017 6:14 AM, Angela Hart)

After a decades-long battle with California's building industry, developers who want to fast-track housing production – especially in cities that have not built enough housing to keep pace with rising demand – will be required to pay higher wages and benefits to construction workers beginning Jan. 1.

Five of 15 housing bills signed into law by Gov. Jerry Brown this year include so-called prevailing wage rules for employers and contractors to pay laborers higher wages and benefits for new construction projects.

The requirements, reached after more than a year of negotiations between powerful labor groups and state Democratic lawmakers, represent the biggest expansion of union-backed pay mandates for construction workers since the late 1990s.

"As we saw, labor is a very powerful voice in California," said state Sen. Scott Wiener, D-San Francisco. His Senate Bill 35, seen as key to addressing California's housing crisis, also includes the most far-reaching prevailing wage mandates.

CHARLOTTE, NC - To developer Kelvin Young, his planned "tiny house" community in northwest Charlotte will create an affordable place for first-time home buyers or for people downsizing.

But to neighbors, Young's Keyo Park West is a threat to their property values. They are asking City Council to stop it.

"We have been hanging out there for 60 years in Coulwood," said Robert Wilson, who lives a half-mile from Young's planned tiny house neighborhood off Cathey Road near Paw Creek Elementary. "All of a sudden this little building started coming up and no one knew what it was. Then it started looking like a house."

Young's Keyo Park West would have 56 tiny houses if built out, with the smallest homes – 500 square feet – selling for $89,000. The median home price in Charlotte is about $190,000.

Housing crunch

The number of Los Angeles County residents who could afford a single-family home in Los Angeles County has trended downward since the first quarter of 2012, when California Association of Realtors data showed 51 percent of county residents could afford to buy a house. As of the second quarter of this year, the affordability rate for Los Angeles County stood at 28 percent. The rate was an even lower 21 percent for neighboring Orange County.

Gov. Jerry Brown signed a package of 15 housing bills in late September that his office touted as a means to increase home construction and to improve affordability. The new legislation includes the likes of S.B. 2, which creates a new tax on real estate documents to finance affordable housing projects; S.B. 3, which calls for a public vote on a $4 billion housing bond; and S.B. 35, which in some cases limits local governments' abilities to deny permission for new multifamily developments.

Some public comments made during Wednesday night's meeting came from people worrying that SB 35 would amount to a free-for-all for developers. Long Beach staffers are still reviewing how the new legislation, along with other laws, may affect planning and development.

Homebuilding up and down the state has not yet rebounded to pre-recession levels, according to the California Homebuilding Foundation. Officials permitted some 113,000 single-family and multifamily units to the state's housing stock in 2007, the year when the bust began.

[CA] Paso mayor writes to Supervisor Peschong on affordable housing (San Luis Obispo New Times Weekly, CA)

(10/9/2017 4:08 PM, Peter Johnson)

The city of Paso Robles will ask the San Luis Obispo County Board of Supervisors to consider dedicating an annual portion of city-generated property taxes to help fund affordable housing projects in Paso.

On Oct. 3, the Paso City Council unanimously authorized the submittal of a formal letter to SLO County 1st District Supervisor John Peschong, which was signed by Mayor Steve Martin, making the request.

Paso asks that the county earmark "up to 5 percent of the property taxes collected each year from property owners in the city of Paso to support the development of low-income housing in this city."

"The time has come for the city and county to effect real change in the inventory and cost of housing," a draft of Martin's letter reads. "These funds represent the 'tipping point' for organizations such as the Paso Housing Authority, Habitat for Humanity, People's Self-Help Housing, and others to finance desperately needed housing."

[NJ] EDITORIAL: Is N.J. structurally racist? (Asbury Park Press, NJ)
Asbury Park Press
(10/6/2017 5:30 PM, Editorial)
Hurricane recovery efforts, President Trump's petulant tweets and the massacre in Las Vegas have dominated the news in recent days, sucking up most of the oxygen in newsrooms and relegating some important stories to the back pages.

One such story was the release of a report by the Anti-Poverty Network of New Jersey calling on policymakers and concerned citizens to address what it believes to be structural racism permeating the state's institutions, resulting in racial injustice and economic inequality.

The 131-page report, "The Uncomfortable Truth: Racism, Injustice and Poverty," doesn't break much new ground in cataloging racial and ethnic disparities. It underscores the vast differences in the poverty rates among blacks, Hispanics and non-Hispanic whites in all age categories. It notes that the poverty rate for blacks is more than twice that of whites and even higher for Hispanics, and that 6.4 percent of non-Hispanic whites were living below the poverty limit, compared with 17.4 percent of blacks and 18.6 percent of Hispanics.

What sets this report apart from others on race and poverty is that it connects the dots on the impact of state policy in the areas of housing, immigration, voting rights, school funding and health care, and provides a comprehensive blueprint for tackling the problems. It rightly traces many of those problems to housing and school segregation.

The report, in the works for two years, offers dozens of recommendations, many of them controversial, as Renee Koubiadis, APN's executive director, conceded at a press conference announcing the report's release. "Not everyone who participated agreed with all findings," she said. "Some feel the report goes too far and may feel uncomfortable with that. Others may feel it does not go far enough."

The report made five major recommendations:

--Make addressing structural racism an explicit public priority.
--Require racial impact statements for all state legislation and rulemaking with potential disparate impacts.
--Require data collection and dissemination by race/ethnicity and socioeconomic status.
--Reinstitute the public advocate.
--Strengthen the Division of Civil Rights.

While the report's main thesis — that the correlation between poverty and race is "undeniable" — may prompt some to dismiss the report out of hand, it would be a mistake to do so. The report's authors addressed that concern early on: "Although it may appear we have put racism behind us, and some may even subscribe to the belief that we live in a new color-blind post-racial America, this is hardly the case. ... In reality, racism operates along a wide and complicated spectrum. The spectrum includes active, explicit prejudice and varying levels of preferential treatment, but the more fundamental characteristic is access to power and opportunity. When different racial or ethnic groups have different levels of access to power and opportunity, whether the reasons for that difference come from prejudice, or history, or any number of other factors, racism is operating."

A series of recommendations are made in each of the major categories the report addresses: housing, economic justice and employment, criminal justice, legal protection, youth and children, and health, hunger and mental health. There is a lot to chew off. But special attention should be paid to the recommendations regarding fair housing, exclusionary zoning and racial segregation in the schools. Recommendations for the latter include working toward racial and socioeconomic integration, consolidating school systems, improving and expanding inter-district public school choice and integrating classrooms within school districts. All are essential to closing the racial achievement and income gaps.

[MD] Discriminatory housing practices are alive and well in Maryland (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/6/2017 6:10 PM, William C. Smith Jr.)
In Maryland, the majority of severely rent-burdened people are single mothers and overwhelmingly people of color. According to data from the American Community Survey analyzed by Enterprise Community Partners, almost 32 percent of the state's renters are severely housing-cost-burdened, meaning they pay more than 50 percent of their income on rent. (Typically, families pay 30 percent or less on housing costs.) These families are teetering on the line of instability and are just one illness, one unexpected expense, one preschooler getting suspended from school, one missed day of work away from homelessness.

Federal programs such as Housing Choice Vouchers (formerly called Section 8) and low-income housing tax credits were designed to respond to this lingering crisis. The Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development administers programs that ensure access to affordable housing, including Partnership Rental Housing and Rental Housing Works. While these innovative programs have had a profound effect, only slightly more than a quarter of eligible very-low-income households have access to affordable housing units. This has left thousands of working families in peril. Waiting lists for vouchers are in the tens of thousands across the state, with seven jurisdictions reporting more than 66,000 families on waiting lists.

Despite the dearth of affordable housing and the affordability crisis, the Trump administration has proposed $173 million in cuts to affordable housing and community development programs in Maryland. Even more confounding is that Maryland law permits discriminatory housing practices.

Under Maryland law, landlords and property owners can discriminate against an individual on the basis of his or her source of income, including money from any lawful employment and any government assistance, such as Housing Choice. This willful blindness to a framework of law perpetuates and excuses discrimination against low-income people. Policies of this ilk hark back to the days of redlining and other methods that prevented people of color and low-income families from gaining access to jobs, good schools and other opportunities vital to upward mobility.

The good news is that jurisdictions such as Montgomery County, Frederick County, Howard County, Frederick and Annapolis have laws that make discrimination based on source of income illegal.

[MN] Renting and the Law: Can landlord fine tenant for keeping an emotional support animal? (Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune, MN)
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune
(10/6/2017 4:41 PM, Kelly Klein)
Q: I have a registered emotional support animal, my cat, Shadow. I also have a doctor's note to show landlords who may question why I need my cat. My current landlord said that my cat needs to be out immediately, and that I have to pay $300 in fines and $100 a day for every day my cat is still living with me. They threatened eviction, but when I talked to their office, they said that I need to come down to fill out paperwork so they can reach out to my doctor about this situation. Am I still liable for the fines?

A: A landlord must consider a reasonable accommodation to allow an emotional support animal or an assistance animal if the animal is needed because of a person's disability. Since you have registered your cat as an emotional support animal and also have a doctor's note, you have done nothing wrong and aren't liable for any fines. A fine of $100 a day is most likely illegal; it is considered a liquidated damages clause, which needs to be a reasonable forecast of the landlord's damages and cannot be an excessive penalty. A court would likely determine that estimated damages amounting to $100 a day for each day your cat lives in your apartment are not reasonable and cannot be charged, especially since a landlord cannot charge for an emotional support animal. Although landlords may not charge a pet deposit or pet fees for an emotional support animal, they may require tenants to pay for damages caused by the animal, just as all tenants are responsible for damages that they or their pets cause.

It sounds like your landlord didn't know the law on emotional support animals before issuing the fine, and now is OK with your cat living with you. If your landlord attempts to collect a fine from you, you should let him know the fine is illegal and you will not be paying it. Your landlord may try to withhold the amount from your security deposit. Again, this is not permitted because a landlord may withhold only actual damages. If your landlord does withhold an amount as a penalty, you should consider bringing an action in conciliation court.

[TX] As subsidized housing spreads in San Jacinto, most fail reviews (Amarillo Globe-News, TX)
Amarillo Globe-News
(10/8/2017 1:22 AM, Staff)
It's not the reports of drug use in the San Jacinto neighborhood that bother Chad Conner the most. It's not the periodic violence or even the 86 registered sex offenders living within a mile of the charity that Conner started.

It's the housing.

From Conner's vantage point as the founder of Acts Community, a faith-based nonprofit at 202 S. Louisiana St., San Jacinto's low concentration of homeowners is the largest obstacle preventing it from being a generally thought of as a desirable neighborhood.

Just 31 percent of houses or condominiums in San Jacinto are inhabited by their owners, according to City-Data, a website that compiles Census and privately sourced statistics. Couple that with the fact that nearly half of neighborhood homes were built before 1940, and Conner says cases of neglect become common.

"The thing that would be the absolute best is if more people owned homes and (fewer) people rented," Conner said. "What you see, more than anything, is there are people who own 50 houses over here and they don't care who lives in them as long as they get paid. There's no background check, no nothing … so the quality of tenant that person will be isn't what the neighborhood needs."

Acts feeds and offers social services to San Jacinto residents, some living in squalor. Warped floors, caved-in ceilings, lack of indoor plumbing and pest infestations are common problems, Conner said.

Several Acts clients receive rental assistance from federal Housing Choice Vouchers, formerly known as Section 8 housing. The vouchers are administered through the City of Amarillo's Community Development department, which has an estimated $9.1 million in federal Housing and Urban Development funding for the program projected in the 2017-18 budget, according to a copy of the budget.

With about 1,400 households expected to receive assistance from that money in the coming year, that averages out to about $542 per house each month, though the amount allocated to each qualified renter varies based on the needs of the family, said City of Amarillo Housing Administrator Kelley Shaw.

Community Development employees inspect each property where tenants receive federal assistance before they start living there, and the department follows up at least once per year to assess the conditions of the property.

Shaw said his department is adequately funded and able to give thorough inspections as needed based on the federal funding it's receiving through the HCV program, which has increased in recent years. HCV funding was up about 14 percent in this year's budget from the approximately $8.6 million in fiscal year 2016-17.

"We've got a thousand people on our waiting list right now," he said. "Hopefully the assistance we get from the federal government will continue. We could always use more funding."

But as the number of homes needing inspection has swelled 44 percent from 900 to 1,300 over the last three years while city manpower to inspect the homes remains unchanged, Housing Choice Voucher recipients such as Grace Dunagan are concerned the city isn't doing enough to stay on top of derelict properties.

The door to Dunagan's backyard has a 2-inch gap at the bottom, which gives mice an avenue into her duplex. She claims to have passed out twice last summer when her faulty air conditioning gave out, and that a board covering a leak in her ceiling isn't preventing water from getting through. Yet every year, she said, city inspectors approve the property with minimal or no changes.

"HUD don't give a s---" Dunagan said. "They don't care. I tell them and it's like talking to a wall."

Shaw acknowledged there's work to do to improve housing, but said his department has been making progress.

He said the housing branch of Community Development has one full-time inspector but uses two part-timers from other HUD programs.

Landlords who fail inspections — more than 1,000 did last year — get 10 days to repair their properties. In Shaw's year and a half as housing administrator, he said, only one property has been declared unlivable.

[WA] If you think it's tough to find a place to live, try being poor (Bellingham Herald, WA)
Bellingham Herald
(10/9/2017 4:41 AM, Robert Mittendorf)
While many Whatcom County renters and first-time home buyers are feeling pinched as the cost of housing goes through the roof, the area's poorest residents know that it's nearly impossible to find a place to live that they can afford.

Mothers fleeing domestic violence with their children, the elderly, military veterans, disabled people and the working poor – who all depend on "Section 8" housing assistance – are increasingly seeing their budgets strained or are unable to use the aid that they qualify to receive. That's partly because local rents are rising above what assistance will pay for, but also because some landlords refuse to accept Section 8 recipients as tenants, even though their rent is guaranteed.

"It's overwhelming," said Brittany Nicholl, case manager lead at the Opportunity Council, which serves homeless and low income people through several programs. She and others at the Opportunity Council work directly with people who receive housing vouchers to pay their rent.

"It's definitely tougher," said John Harmon, executive director of the Bellingham/Whatcom County Housing Authorities. "It hasn't been this bad here since I've been here, and that's 30 years. It's the toughest market I've ever seen."

A judge allowed former Guam Housing and Urban Renewal Authority legal counsel Mark Smith to travel off-island so long as his trips are for work and he provides the U.S. probation office with his itinerary before he leaves. Smith was indicted in March and ordered not to leave the island without the court's permission as a condition of his pre-trial release. Smith and his friend Glenn Wong were indicted on federal charges of fraud, money laundering and other crimes in connection with alleged conflicts of interest related to properties Smith owned that he rented under federal Section 8 program. The Section 8 program is administered locally by GHURA. Smith in 2011 was GHURA's legal counsel. "As GHURA's legal counsel who formulated policy or influenced decisions with respect to the programs, Smith was prohibitedfrom receiving directly or indirectly any Section 8 on any rental properties he owned or controlled," the indictment states.

Why so many veterans go hungry — and VA's new plan to fix it (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/9/2017 8:20 AM, Caitlin Dewey)

When Greg Stegall left the Navy at 30 years old, he found himself utterly adrift: a single dad with no degree, no clear plans for the future and a short résumé in a down job market. Struggling to find work, Stegall put his son in a boarding school for poor children and asked his parents for money and food.

Nearly 30 years later, Stegall — now 58 — oversees a program at a Pennsylvania food bank that delivers meals to hungry veterans. But he still regularly sees other vets in similar situations.

Military advocates have long warned that certain groups of veterans suffer extreme rates of hunger. Those include veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan — 27 percent of whom have struggled to put food on the table.

Now, in a first-of-its-kind program, the Department of Veterans Affairs will screen all vets who visit its health-care facilities for hunger, asking them whether they've struggled to afford food in the past three months. That's welcome news to Stegall and other advocates, who say vets are especially hard to reach because they're often unwilling to seek help.

Any program that tries to engage hungry vets will "make a positive impact in their lives," Stegall said.

Veterans' hunger has long flown under the policy radar, in part because it varies widely between generations and regions. Overall, multiple studies have found that all veterans' rates of both poverty and food insecurity are lower than those in the general population.

But there are pockets of vets who experience hunger often. People with disabilities and mental illnesses are far more likely to be food insecure, according to data from the Department of Agriculture. An estimated 39,000 veterans were homeless in 2016, which can make it difficult to access food.

Byron Williams: Twenty reasons to really support the troops (Winston Salem Journal, NC)
Winston Salem Journal
(10/9/2017 6:34 PM, Byron Williams)
I have a simple request. The next time the nation embroils itself in one of its "I Support the Troops" litmus test discussions, I want you to think of the number 20. No, it's not commemorating the legacy of NFL great Barry Sanders.

Twenty reflects the average number of veterans who commit suicide daily. Every 72 minutes, America loses a veteran by his or her own hand. That's three deaths during an average NFL game, and at least one during the pregame show. It averages more than 7,400 veteran suicides annually.

According to the Military Suicide Research Consortium, mental-health rates have risen 65 percent in the military since 2000. Because of issues ranging from PTSD and depression to readjustment challenges and sleeping problems, veterans are twice as like as the civilian population of committing suicide, according to a 2013 Los Angeles Times report.

Over 57,000 veterans are homeless on any given night according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Unemployment is much higher among post-9/11 veterans than the general population, according to the Department of Labor.

[MA] At Boston Public Library, a new outreach position for the homeless (Boston Globe, MA)
Boston Globe
(10/6/2017 9:58 PM, Danny McDonald)
Boston has hired a full-time outreach manager who will provide help to the homeless who are drawn to "The spaces and resources of the Boston Public Library," City Hall announced Friday.

The new director, Mike Bunch, is an existing outreach case manager social worker at Pine Street Inn, a South End-based nonprofit that helps more than 1,900 homeless people daily, and previously worked with shelter and treatment providers in Austin, Texas, according to a statement from Mayor Martin J. Walsh's office.

His position, according to the statement, "Will work as part of a team providing assessment, crisis intervention and intensive case management services," and will be based out of the Boston Public Library's central branch in Copley Square.

The post is being funded through the city's Department of Neighborhood Development and the Boston Public Library, and managed in partnership with Pine Street Inn. "The investment in this newly created position and the resources being made available by our dedicated library staff join a range of citywide resources already helping to support and aid our homeless population in and around our libraries and across the city," said Walsh in the statement. "These efforts directly support the BPL's mission of serving everyone."

[VT] Homeless campers face eviction, full shelters (Burlington Free Press, VT)
Burlington Free Press
(10/6/2017 3:49 PM, Jess Aloe)
The half-dozen campers who have made a wooded city lot their home for the past few months face a Tuesday deadline after police raised safety concerns - even as campers, advocates and even police employees say the city's shelter system is stretched to the max.

Last week, Nick Walls said he had been stressed and worried about what would happen ever since two officers visited the Sears Lane camp in mid-September and thumb-tacked a plastic-laminated sign to a tree telling campers they would have to move their campsites off the property by Oct. 10.He and his partner, Ashley Baker, were hoping to get an apartment elsewhere in Vermont with some family assistance, and he said he had put his name on a waiting list at Anew Place, a Burlington long-term transitional housing shelter.

Other campers have moved their tents, looking for other places to sleep in the city. "It's wrong, what the city is doing," Walls said. She said she just wanted the city to give them a chance. She also called on Burlington residents to stand up for the people in the camps.

"My understanding is that there isn't really any capacity at any of the shelters," said Lacey-Ann Smith, the Burlington Police Department's community affairs liaison. In her role, Smith does outreach to campers throughout the city. She said that while she thought clearing a camp is a better temporary solution for avoiding potential violence than doing nothing, "It's far from a perfect system."

Because of the stretched capacity of local shelters, and the barriers to housing many campers face, Smith said she expects many of the people who will be displaced from Sears Lane to end up finding a new place to camp.

Burlington's year-round shelters also have high criteria, like sobriety, Smith pointed out, which some people who prefer camping may not be able to meet.

The city has rented out all Best Western rooms; areas pols upset

It's a plot that has repeated itself over and over again in Queens over the last year: The city rents out rooms in a neighborhood hotel to house homeless individuals and area officials lambaste the move.

That familiar scene played out in Sunnyside last Tuesday, as the Department of Homeless Services rented out all 82 rooms at the Best Western Hotel at 38-05 Hunters Point Ave. And as expected, lawmakers did not take too kindly to what they called a disappointing lack of advanced notification.

"I am outraged and disappointed to learn that yet another hotel in Queens has been converted into a homeless shelter," Assemblywoman Cathy Nolan (D-Long Island City) wrote in a Sept. 29 letter to Mayor de Blasio. "I do not feel that our community was given adequate notice, nor time to prepare for this development.

"My office received no notification as to which company will be managing the shelter, nor for how long the shelter will be operating," she continued.

Koslowitz, civic decry the usage of the Comfort Inn as a new shelter

The Department of Homeless Services has rented out 42 rooms at the Comfort Inn at 123-28 82 Ave. in Kew Gardens, just across the street from Borough Hall.

Councilwoman Karen Koslowitz (D-Forest Hills) told the Chronicle in a Monday interview that undomiciled men were moved into the hotel on Saturday.

That was just hours after DHS and the Mayor's Office told her about the plan on Friday afternoon, just before the Yom Kippur holiday began at sunset.

"I asked them how could they do this. They called me right before a religious holiday," Koslowitz said referring to the one of the holiest days on the Jewish calendar. "You call me right before a holiday that I observe so I can't do anything about it? That's not right.

[NY] Homeless Placed in New Hotel Sites Despite City's Pledge to Phase Them Out (DNAinfo New York, NY)

(10/9/2017 10:15 AM, Ben Fracetenberg)
MIDTOWN — The city is still using commercial hotels to house homeless New Yorkers, despite a pledge last year to phase them out following a fatal stabbing at a homeless hotel.

The de Blasio administration has said its first priority is to end the use of "cluster housing" as it also opens new stand-alone shelters across the city.

In recent weeks, homeless shelters have popped up at hotels in Williamsburg, Sunnyside and Kew Gardens, to the dismay of some neighbors and elected officials who say they were given little warning about the plans. The Department of Homeless Services says the sites are necessary to shelter residents and families who would otherwise have nowhere to go.

While Mayor Bill de Blasio has pledged to phase out the use of hotel shelters by 2023, the city is focused first on eliminating its use of "cluster sites" — apartments located in private buildings that the city rents as shelter space — while also opening 90 new homeless shelters citywide in the coming years.

GLENS FALLS — Kim Cook stood amid a forest of 2-by-4s on the main floor of the planned Open Door Mission at 224-226 Warren Street last week and talked about the future.

"This is the first phase, and we will have it done in time for the Nov. 15 opening date for the Code Blue shelter," she said.

Cook, the Open Door director, said the new site will be ready if the temperature falls below the prescribed minimums that night.

"We will have the new water main done, and we will have the sprinklers in, and that's what we need in order to open Code Blue."

Cook, whose group is in its fourth year of providing winter housing for the homeless on cold or snowy nights, is also looking forward to the day when the soup kitchen, currently on Lawrence Street, can move to the Warren Street site and be in a much larger and much more comfortable location, eventually with more housing and a one-year program to help people get out of the cycle of homelessness.

HOBOKEN -- Mayor Dawn Zimmer, Hudson County Executive Tom DeGise, State Senator Brian Stack, and other dignitaries will join with members of the American Legion for the ceremonial groundbreaking of the American Legion Hoboken Post 107 project that includes a veteran community center and a six-unit residential building for homeless veterans.

The American Legion Post 107 sustained severe damage from flooding during Superstorm Sandy in 2012 and requested a partnership with the City of Hoboken to rebuild its facility. This partnership involved the creation of six residential units in a new, elevated space that would protect the American Legion from flooding at the ground level.

The American Legion Post 107 retained Monarch Housing, a non-profit affordable housing developer, to secure six project-based vouchers for homeless veterans and obtain project financing through federal grants. This project is being funded through the New Jersey Housing and Mortgage Finance Agency ("NJHMFA"), the Hudson County HOME Funding Consortium, and the City of Hoboken. The American Legion Post 107 is also privately raising additional funds to cover expenses such as furniture, appliances, and other amenities for veterans who will reside in these units.

It will take place at 308 Second Street (near corner of Willow Avenue) Tuesday, October 10 at 11 a.m.

A new after-school drop-in center for teens in Scranton plans to open in a few weeks.

The nonproft NEPA Youth Shelter organization will operate the drop-in center on the second floor of the Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Human Services Building, 541 Wyoming Ave.

The drop-in center will be for teens — age 14 to high school seniors — "looking for a safe space to hang out and have some fun," its website says.

With about 7,000 square feet of space in several rooms, the center will have spots for homework, tutoring, activities, games, dining, relaxing and a clothing exchange for teens with limited wardrobes, said NEPA Youth Shelter Executive Director Maureen Maher-Gray.

[PA] Two family suites added to Bucks County Emergency Homeless Shelter (Levittown Bucks County Courier Times, PA)
Levittown Bucks County Courier Times
(10/9/2017 6:12 AM, Joan Hellyer)
Dozens of area volunteers were up and working before dawn Saturday to give local families in need some new, temporary spaces to rebuild their lives.

The approximately 100 volunteers spent much of the day building a 600-square-foot addition onto the Bucks County Emergency Homeless Shelter in Bristol Township. The addition houses two family units, each measuring about 140 square feet, project coordinator Franco D'Andrea said. Up to four people can stay in each unit.

The family suites will give the shelter some flexibility in accommodating people in various family structures, such as a father with a young daughter, or a mom with an adult disabled son, a Family Service Association of Bucks County spokeswoman said. FSA, a nonprofit social service agency, runs the temporary housing facility at 7 Library Way off New Falls and Woodbourne roads.

The shelter, which last year served 316 people, including 125 children, has had to turn families away because its standard configuration includes a family dorm for women and children and a separate dorm just for men, FSA spokeswoman Nicki Bedesem said.

[PA] NOAH tackles public awareness of homelessness in Carlisle (Carlisle Sentinel, PA)
Carlisle Sentinel
(10/8/2017 10:46 AM, Joseph Cress)
Jill Bartoli saw the need firsthand as a volunteer donating her time at an overnight shelter in the Carlisle area. The Carlisle resident remembers the mother who tried to comfort a child who was crying because he had a cold. "The woman was walking the floor until after midnight," said Bartoli, recalling how hard it was for most anyone to sleep camping out in the host church. "There are people caught up in the flood of homelessness," she said. "NOAH has an ark that can help them." Short for New Options for Affordable Housing, NOAH is a coalition of Carlisle area residents who are determined to not only move the homeless into housing, but to connect them with a network of services that help the needy achieve personal independence. NOAH volunteers will be on street corners in downtown Carlisle and in local shopping centers from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Monday. They will be trying to raise awareness of the plight of homelessness in the community.

The coalition started about a year ago as a group of residents concerned that, while homelessness has decreased across much of the nation, it was on the rise in Pennsylvania. Homeless people are drawn to the Carlisle area because of its role as the Cumberland County seat and the accessibility to social service agencies. NOAH organizers have developed a mission statement and an approach strategy to help the most vulnerable obtain sustainable, permanent housing and independent living. To accomplish this goal, the group has formed teams of volunteers who will serve as mentors and workers lending their advice and expertise toward helping the homeless. "There are not enough ways to get people off the street," said Carlisle resident Pat LaMarche, an advocate for the homeless. While there are programs for the needy, there are people who don't fit within the classifications to receive federal assistance, LaMarche said. The low-wage working poor with bad credit and seniors on minimal Social Security may get on a waiting list for public housing, but are unlikely to get off that list, she said. In allocating services, the federal department of Housing and Urban Development assigns every person who applies for public housing a level of vulnerability depending on their circumstances.

VIDEO. Homeless service providers and private landlords came together for a recent networking session to build relationships to combat the District's housing crisis.

The D.C. Interagency Council on Homelessness Landlord Outreach Work Group holds monthly meetings and organizes events like this meet and greet to ultimately create a central network of housing units to expedite placement of people who receive housing assistance.

"It's a partnership," said Adam Maier of Pathways to Housing D.C. "We've got to work together." Maier and his team have created more than 100 partnerships with area landlords that now rent to Pathways clients, according to the organization's website.

Melissa Robinson, who co-chairs the ICH Landlord Outreach Work Group, described the event as an opportunity to build and sustain connections. Robinson hopes conversational interactions like this can break down stigmas around what it means to be homeless and what programs are in place to end homelessness in the city.

[GA] Opinion: Better mental health is key to solving more than just mass shootings (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, GA)
Atlanta Journal-Constitution
(10/6/2017 1:13 PM, Kyle Wingfield)

We could also do a lot easier, which may be the main reason little has been done on this front. If we need motivation to tackle such a thorny and far-reaching problem, we can find it beyond the issue of violence.

Clearly, mental illness is at the heart of many suicides. It's also one of the leading problems among the chronically homeless: In 2014, the Treatment Advocacy Center estimated one-third of America's homeless suffered from untreated, serious mental illnesses. The knock-on effects reach into our jails, where many homeless Americans wind up, and our hospitals. A constant refrain from Georgia's struggling rural hospitals is the challenge they face dealing with mentally ill persons who aren't being treated regularly.

This has been a particular source of shame for Georgia over the years. The AJC's 2007 series which revealed scores of unnecessary deaths in the state's mental hospitals led to a federal investigation and, eventually, a settlement between the state and the Justice Department. Years later, improvement has been marginal.

Answers aren't simple. What is most needed may be public resolve and insistence on progress.

Clearing of land town officials say has been a gathering place for homeless people and a dumping ground for debris -- close to Jupiter High school and town hall -- is expected to begin Monday, Oct. 9.

The town is paying Wantman Group Inc. from West Palm Beach $18,350 to clear the property. The weekday clearing, which starts Monday, is expected to take about 30 days.

Trucks will not be hauling debris between 6:30-7 :30 a.m. and 2:15-2:45 p.m. to avoid interfering with traffic to and from Jupiter High School.

Traffic is not expected to be closed along Indiantown Road while the work is being done, according to Jupiter records.

[FL] Volusia shelter might not open until summer 2018 (Daytona Beach News-Journal, FL)
Daytona Beach News-Journal
(10/9/2017 6:26 PM, Eileen Zaffiro-Kean)
At the beginning of this year, city officials were hopeful a shelter could be open before December, but now that looks impossible.

DAYTONA BEACH — The new homeless shelter planned to be built west of Interstate 95 could open next spring. But it could take until late next summer to swing open the shelter doors for the first time.

The timeline depends on the decision of city commissioners mulling whether to build a structure with a durable fabric roof that could be put up in three to six months, or to opt for a building with a traditional roof that will take nine months to complete.

Neither option sounds fast enough for people who had hoped for a shelter to be open this fall.

"I'd like to see something built yesterday," said South Daytona Mayor Bill Hall, who serves as secretary of the First Step Shelter Board. "I was hoping we could have it done before the first of the year."

Every day, we have the opportunity to make a difference in someone's life, and Melanie Kiihnl strives to do that daily in White County.

Kiihnl was named the new program director at Jacob's Place Homeless Mission in Searcy on May 1.

Before moving into the position, she was recruiting manager and marketing director for Harding University's Master of Business Administration program.

"I saw an ad for the position and felt pulled by God to investigate," she said.

While she was hired to help with fundraising, outreach and public speaking, she said, she is now taking on case management, interviewing clients and helping clients work through the Jacob's Place ladder program.

[MO] Restoration House Stl Opens New Office Downtown Serving Homeless And At-Risk Youth (St. Louis Today, MO)
St. Louis Today
(10/7/2017 10:32 AM, Emily Lacroix)
Restoration House STL is opening a new office space in downtown St. Louis to serve youth and young adults who are homeless or at-risk of homelessness.

The downtown office is located at 210 N. 17th Street, Suite 105, at the intersection of 17th and Olive. The new location will serve as an intake center to assess the specific needs of the clients they serve. Here they will be able to get access to basic needs such as food, clothing, and hygiene items along with a variety of case management services.

Mr. Tim Needham is the Executive Director of Restoration House STL and will be leading the way in the downtown office. "We chose this location because it is centrally located to other resources for individuals who are homeless and at-risk, and it's a great place to expand our reach and meet the needs of our St. Louis community," says Mr. Needham. "Our goal at Restoration House is to make sure that no youth or young adult is homeless without a place to feel safe. We want to end youth homelessness, and this space will allow us expand our services to reach a broader base of at-risk youth."

Restoration House STL also has plans in the works for the future to expand into multiple locations across the Metropolitan St. Louis area. These facilities will function as drop-in-centers, where kids will be able to take showers, do laundry, and feel safe and secure.

Reporter Jesse Bogan "spent much of 24 hours with (homeless man James K.) Turner to better understand the availability of emergency shelter in St. Louis." His conclusion was "Weeks before cold weather sets in, Biddle House appears to be booked."

While I appreciate that the article raises awareness of the struggles homeless people face in our community, it should not be news to anyone that we lack resources to meet all the needs we see every day. The beds at Biddle were filled days after it opened in August last year, and they have remained so.

The United Way, which manages the Housing Helpline that was mentioned in the article, reports that in 2016 the helpline received 14,165 calls requesting shelter. Of those, 1,407 calls were referred to shelter, and 12,758 were told that there was no shelter available. That means for 90 percent of the calls seeking shelter, the answer was "no."

St. Louis has many fine nonprofit agencies doing amazing work with people who are homeless, mentally challenged, physically disabled and wrestling with addiction. We know that the cold weather is coming. And we know that we do not have the resources to help every person who knocks on our doors. I believe that working together, we can do better.

[AR] Bethlehem House focus groups look at giving strategies (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, AR)
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette
(10/9/2017 10:16 AM, Arkansas Democrat-Gazette)
CONWAY — A 20-year-old likely has different motivations to give to a nonprofit than a 50-year-old does, and Bethlehem House in Conway is gathering focus groups to find out how to market to all ages.

The impetus is to raise more money to replace the dwindling Housing and Urban Development grants and their potential impact on the shelter, said Judi Lively, executive director of the homeless shelter.

“We know that funding for transitional housing with HUD is decreasing greatly,” Lively said. “Nationally, HUD has taken focus off transitional housing to focus on permanent, supported housing or rapid rehousing,” she said.

Lively said that in 2014, HUD gave $325.5 million in grants nationally for transitional housing. In 2016, that number fell to $108 million.

In Conway, the homeless shelter’s HUD grant has dropped from $221,000 to $199,114 the past couple of years, Lively said.

[AR] Arkansas homeless shelter cancels plans to open center over complaints from residents (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, AR)
Arkansas Online
(10/8/2017 11:01 AM, Kenneth Heard)
JONESBORO - A week after announcing plans to convert a former nursing home into a homeless shelter and mental-health crisis center, Jonesboro officials now say they won’t open the facility because of objections from residents who live near it.

The Homeless Ministries of Jonesboro’s board of directors decided Thursday evening to scrap plans for the center.

Murl Smith, director of the nonprofit organization, announced with city leaders Sept. 29 that Reliance Health Care Inc. donated its 24,700-square-foot Ridgecrest Health Care nursing home for use as a homeless shelter.

Craighead County Sheriff Marty Boyd said the former 83-bed facility also could be used as a place to house up to 16 mental-health patients. When opposition to the plan arose, the organization changed its plans. "After meeting with residents of the North Church Street community and hearing the concerns and opposition to any type of homeless ministry in this area, it has become clear that this property is no longer a viable location," the board said in a statement released after Thursday’s meeting.

Jonesboro Superintendent Kim Willbanks said she was concerned about the plans because the school district’s Math and Science Elementary School is near the proposed facility. Willbanks was out of town Friday and not available for comment. Assistant Superintendent Karleen Sheets said she could not comment about the homeless shelter. "We have homeless students in all our schools," she said. "We will continue serving and taking care of our kids."

Board member Danny Pridmore did not return telephone messages Friday.

"I am saddened by our inability to secure a facility to serve our homeless population," Jonesboro Mayor Harold Perrin said in a statement Friday. "Nothing affects a family’s hope for the future like being evicted from their home, so we will continue to work for our homeless."

Perrin said the facility would not be a "Halfway house" that endangers neighborhoods. "They want to be Christian brothers and sisters to our less fortunate residents in their time of need," he said in the statement.

[MO] New record: More than 1,700 SPS kids were homeless or displaced last year (Springfield News-Leader, MO)
Springfield News-Leader
(10/8/2017 10:08 AM, Claudette Riley)
VIDEO. A year ago, Springfield native O’Brien St. James Daniels was moving out of her rented house in a Kansas City suburb when she learned the new place she planned to lease was no longer available.

The single mom, who had been working full time and taking college classes, suddenly felt stranded. With no family nearby, Daniels and her young son moved into a $300-a-week extended-stay hotel.

"I just ran out of resources because everything happened at the same time. I didn't have a Plan B," said Daniels, 31. "It was brutal. It got so overwhelming. A year ago, I decided 'Let's go back to grandma's.'"

Daniels retreated to her hometown, hoping for a fresh start. She squeezed a bed and all her belongings into the dining room of her grandma's tiny home in northeast Springfield. She enrolled her son at Sequiota Elementary and found work.

Through the school, she learned she was not alone.

A total of 1,700 Springfield students, including Daniels' son, were identified as homeless or temporarily displaced during the 2016-17 year. The number, a new record, was nearly double the 900 students identified the prior year.

The federal McKinney-Vento Act defines homelessness broadly in the school setting. It applies to students who are "doubled up" with another family or individual — like Daniels and her son — and those couch-surfing, living in hotels and emergency shelters, as well as those sleeping in tents, cars or on the streets.

[MO] SPS hires social workers to help homeless families (Springfield News-Leader, MO)
Springfield News-Leader
(10/8/2017 10:08 AM, Claudette Riley)
VIDEO. Hired a year ago, Springfield Public Schools' first full-time homeless liaison quickly realized she needed help.

Lynn Schirk applied for and was recently awarded a federal grant through the McKinney-Vento Act that will provide $450,000 over three years to support the growing number of students who lack a "Fixed, regular and adequate nighttime residence." "With the amount of need, I learned there was no way I could adequately provide for these families on my own," she said. "The No. 1 thing the grant is being spent on is two full-time social workers."

In September, the district hired social workers Michala Boehm and Ashley Reed to work with families referred to Schirk's Office of Students in Transition. They are stationed at the Bentley Administrative Center.

Mike Dawson, chief learning officer, said they will offer intense case management to families struggling with generational poverty and prolonged homelessness. He said they will help families access community resources. "Now we are meeting students where they are at," he said.

The federal grant was awarded to 10 Missouri school districts this year. This is the first year that Springfield was a recipient. Schirk said families referred to the social workers typically lack the resources to quickly figure out how to find stable housing. "They need somebody that is able to make weekly contact with them and will work with them to set goals, identify what barriers they are truly experiencing and then develop a plan to address each of the barriers."

A social worker might help a family navigate affordable housing programs and access social services aimed at creating greater financial stability. "Their primary role is to provide supportive services to our families that need it most and offer additional services that are beyond my role," she said. "That is incredible now that we have those people."

[MO] SPS mission: Find and help every homeless student (Springfield News-Leader, MO)
Springfield News-Leader
(10/8/2017 10:08 AM, Claudette Riley)
Springfield Public Schools is on a mission to find every student who is homeless - even if they don't know they meet the definition.

The broad definition, under the federal McKinney-Vento Act, includes any student who lacks a "Fixed, regular and adequate nighttime residence."

Lynn Schirk, who oversees the district's Office of Students in Transition, avoids using the word because families can find it off-putting. "The word 'homeless' creates a barrier," she said. "It creates a negative connotation and it conjures all these images in our head.".

Schirk, homeless liaison, said a portion of the 1,700 students who met the definition in the 2016-17 year lived in shelters and slept in cars, parks, and abandoned buildings. She said the overwhelming majority of families were "Doubled up," meaning they moved in with an individual or family on a temporary basis after losing permanent housing of their own. The loss may be due to fire, the end of a relationship, or eviction after being laid off. "It's very important to recognize that number reflects students who are doubled up and students whose parents are hospitalized or incarcerated," she said.

There are also teens who "Couch surf" - moving between the homes of various friends and acquaintances - after being kicked out by their parents or running away from home because they no longer feel safe, physically or emotionally. A significant number of those students are LGBTQ.

[IN] How Lafayette is helping its homeless veterans (Lafayette Journal and Courier, IN)

(10/6/2017 2:48 PM, Joseph Paul)
To most Lafayette residents, cooler evenings and crimson-colored trees mean fall is in full swing. For those experiencing homelessness, the change in season is a warning sign that winter and its cold, hard nights are just around the corner. Many barriers exist between adequate, affordable housing and Lafayette's homeless population, particularly those who are veterans, said Jennifer Layton, executive director of LTHC Homeless Services, also known as Lafayette Transitional Housing Center. October marks the fifth year the local non-profit has administered Supportive Services for Veteran Families, a U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs program aimed to help service members over those barriers, which include substance abuse, a lack of employment and chronic health issues, Layton said. LTHC Homeless Services recently received nearly $200,000 to continue the program locally for another year. Nationwide, the VA awarded $343 million in grants to 288 local non-profits, according to a news release. Through the program, the agency over the last four years has served 261 homeless veterans and their families, comprising roughly 10 percent of all its clients, Layton said. Michelle Reynolds, executive director of Lafayette Housing Authority, said veterans are assigned additional points that move them up the agency's waiting list for Section 8 vouchers. At least 28 chronically homeless veterans in Lafayette also are housed through the Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing program, Reynolds said.

Some of the concerns in the neighborhood have resulted from the times clients are released in the morning from Brighter Days, and the time they may return, beginning at 6 p.m. daily. There have been complaints of some clients cutting through private property to reach the shelter, which officials have tried to alleviate by asking clients to enter off Center Street, behind the facility.

Love Chapel has several picnic tables which clients may use during the day as necessary, he said. The Columbus Housing Authority has talked with Brighter Days about clients hanging out in Pence Place Park, but Jackson said the shelter can't tell clients they can't visit a public park.

"They are allowed to hang out there," he said.

The camper allegation stems from a locksmith business near Brighter Days where an old camper is on the property and a client attempted to get into it, Jackson said. When the client couldn't get in, he slept underneath it, which was reported to Brighter Days staff and dealt with, Jackson said.

Finding a solution to help those who do not want to follow the rules but still need shelter is a continuing problem, he said.

[AZ] No deaths from hepatitis A outbreak in Maricopa County (Washington Times, DC)

(10/8/2017 4:31 PM, Associated Press)
PHOENIX (AP) - Public health officials in metro Phoenix say a hepatitis A outbreak linked to 17 deaths in San Diego has been contained in Arizona.

Arizona officials believe the local outbreak was mainly confined to homeless people in Maricopa County, The Arizona Republic reported.

The county recorded only 15 known cases and no deaths, and officials have detected no new Arizona cases since the end of May.

Officials believe the virus, which is spread through contact with an infected person's feces, circulated because of crowding and poor hygiene among homeless people in Maricopa County.

Maricopa County public health officials say a hepatitis A outbreak linked to 17 deaths in San Diego has been contained in Arizona, with only 15 known cases and no deaths.

While California struggles with an outbreak that prompted San Diego County to declare a public health emergency, Arizona officials believe the local outbreak was mainly confined to homeless people in Maricopa County. Officials have detected no new Arizona cases since the end of May.The San Diego outbreak, mainly affecting homeless people and drug users, has killed 17, hospitalized 337 and infected 481 people. Cases also emerged in Los Angeles and Santa Cruz counties.

Public health officials say the Maricopa County outbreak was tied to one person who traveled from San Diego to Maricopa County earlier this year. Follow-up testing confirmed the viral strain matched the San Diego cases and had spread mainly among people who used services from a homeless campus from mid-February through the end of May.Public health officials continued to monitor the outbreak, but have detected no new cases linked to the California outbreak, according to Sally Ann Iverson, a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention epidemic intelligence services officer assigned to Maricopa County and Arizona.

Neither the Maricopa County Department of Public Health nor the Arizona Department of Health Services broadly notified the public about the outbreak.

[WA] Hey City Council: Turning homeless people into criminals is wrong and doesn't help the cause (Tacoma News Tribune, WA)
Tacoma News Tribune
(10/7/2017 4:54 AM, Matt Driscoll)
The Tacoma City Council doubled down on its emergency response to the city's homelessness crisis the week.

Its narrow-minded and stubborn insistence on criminalizing homelessness as part of that effort seriously risks overshadowing any good that might be achieved through the city's three-phase approach to addressing the crisis. If the goal is to help people get off the streets, and make Tacoma safer for all residents and business owners, it won't work.

First, the good: In a unanimous vote, council members extended a declaration of a public emergency related to homelessness until the end of the year. The declaration, which allows the city flexibility in contracting, permitting and budgeting, dates to May and was scheduled to expire this month. It's a key component of the ongoing approach to mitigate the health and safety effects of homelessness on individuals and the community, allowing for important steps to be taken quickly. Mayor Marilyn Strickland and council members Robert Thoms, Marty Campbell, Joe Lonergan, Conor McCarthy, Ryan Mello, Keith Blocker, Anders Ibsen and Lauren Walker Lee also extended the city's temporary ban on camping on public property, which dates back to July and makes the offense a misdemeanor.

Keep in mind, this at a time when the Dome District stability site is full, with a waiting list. The same generally holds true for all other shelters in the city as well. The city continues to crack down on people living in their cars, in some cases families down to their last sole possession, just trying to stick together.

The law, which didn't need to be extended since it was passed with no expiration date, includes provisions that ratchet up fines, depending on how many times an individual has been cited, going from $50 for the first offense, to $100 for the second and finally to $250 for three or more.

The combined approach has been described as a tough love.

[OR] Solving Portland's homeless crisis requires a bolder approach: Guest opinion (Portland Oregonian, OR)
Portland Oregonian
(10/8/2017 1:11 PM, Dr. David Bangsberg)
When I grew up in Portland, homeless people were largely limited to "skid row" along West Burnside.

When I trained as a young doctor at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital in North Harlem, New York City's largest homeless shelter was across the street. Homelessness, along with HIV and new strains of drug resistant tuberculosis spread through New York City. These synergistic epidemics were accelerated by deinstitutionalization of the mentally ill during the crack and heroin epidemics combined with a fragmented and difficult-to-access health care system.

When I moved to San Francisco to train as an HIV specialist, I encountered a new type of homelessness, the "marginally housed." The number of "marginally housed" was more than twice the number of people who lived on the street. They alternated between couch surfing, low-cost single-room occupancy hotels and other informal living settings. Many but not all suffered from addiction, past life trauma and mental illness.

Now as a daily Portland bike commuter, I see an increasing number of homeless people in nearly every neighborhood, living under our bridges and spilling into streets. While this may look like the homelessness I've seen before, emerging data suggest it is different.

[OR] Homelessness Compounds Health Challenges for Transgender Portlanders (The Lund Report)
The Lund Report
(10/7/2017 2:46 AM, Thacher Schmid)
In her 31 years, Willow Paloma has had many identities: train-hopping hobo, Buddhist, activist, herbalist, self-described "crusty punk" and "queer separatist." But one part of her identity never changed, even while raised as a male. She's female. Paloma's among what may be Portland's fastest-growing group of homeless people: transgender and non-binary persons. Its numbers have tripled in two years amongst adults, and it's at its high-water mark amongst youth. Part of the growth, experts say, is in migration due to Oregon's expanded coverage of transgender health services and passing in June of additional protections. "Portland really is considered somewhat of a Mecca for trans youth," said Jenn Burleton, Executive Director of TransActive Gender Center. This year's "point in time" homeless count identified 59 transgender and non-binary homeless persons in Multnomah County. Data from organizations serving homeless youth is at its high point in tracking transgender identity for 13 years: 46, or 6 percent of the total. There are 1.4 million transgender individuals in the United States, the UCLA's Williams Institute says - and an estimated one in five has experienced homelessness.

It's not known how many youth are transgender, but as many as 40 percent of the nation's 1.6 million homeless youth are LGBTQ. Dennis Lundberg, Executive Director of Janus Youth, the point of entry for the shelter system that serves 700 homeless Portland youth 14 to 24 each year, says Portland has an even higher portion of LGBTQ youth than that. "The number in the homeless youth continuum is close to 50 percent being LGBTQ identified," Lundberg said. As recently as 2015, Federal Housing and Urban Development guidance for point-in-time homeless counts in the U.S. used different categories: "Transgender" and "Transgender." The 2017 count changed it to "Transgender" and "Don't identify as male, female, or transgender," or non-binary.

Brooke Stephens envisions the Campus of Hope as a one-stop shop for homeless services – a place to live, mental health help, job training and even a cafeteria.

It's a vision in its earliest stages. Stephens' group, Placer Rescue Mission, is studying an 8-acre plot of land in south Placer County. But the incipient plan has already drawn the ire of some south Placer residents who believe the proposal is oversized and would draw homeless people from throughout the region to their streets.

Though no official proposal has gone before the county's Board of Supervisors, initial plans call for a 231-bed campus across from the Santucci Justice Center in the unincorporated county west of Rocklin's city border. The beds would be located in micro-units of housing, interim housing, a mental health unit and recovery treatment beds. A Placer count in January found 663 homeless people throughout the county.

“A lot of what we’ve heard (in opposition), there seems to be a lot of misinformation out there,” Stephens said. “Some of the things they’ve taken issue with are things we won’t be doing or aren’t the way we’re set up.”

[CA] To slow deadly hepatitis outbreak, paramedics will now provide vaccinations to the homeless (Los Angeles Times)

(10/6/2017 12:54 PM, Paul Sisson)
Paramedics are the newest troops in the fight against San Diego’s ever-growing hepatitis A outbreak.

A letter signed this week by the director of the state Emergency Medical Services Authority temporarily expands state laws that govern paramedics, granting them emergency powers to “vaccinate at-risk populations in response to the outbreak.”

Dr. Kristi Koenig, director of the San Diego County Emergency Medical Service, requested the temporary scope of practice expansion on Sept. 20 and said Wednesday night that she received approval in the mail Tuesday.

Paramedics will be able to deliver hepatitis A doses only under the supervision of nurses and only at special events created to inoculate those who are at high risk of infection, including homeless residents, drug users and those with liver disease or compromised immune systems.

[CA] Homeless families increasingly leaving SF for stability in other cities (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)

(10/9/2017 9:30 AM, Jill Tucker and Kevin Fagan)
The walls of Jamahl Mackey’s two-bedroom apartment in Sacramento are bare except for a framed poster of San Francisco and a third-grade school portrait of his son. There isn’t a lot of furniture — a couch, a kitchen table, chairs, just the essentials. But it’s home.

A little over a year ago, after he was laid off from a solar company, home for the single father and his son was a Mitsubishi Galant parked on a rotating list of San Francisco streets, or occasionally a relative’s couch or a motel if there was enough cash. Parking under streetlights, he promised his son he would make things better.

When Mackey reached out to San Francisco aid workers for help, he never imagined what that phone call would bring: a new life outside the city.

But he and his son, 8-year-old Jamahl Jr., are among an increasing number of families leaving behind the city they love to find stability and affordable rent elsewhere, with San Francisco’s blessing and financial support. It’s an approach to fighting homelessness that echoes across costly communities around the Bay Area.

[CA] Homeless numbers grow at Santa Rosas Doyle Park (Santa Rosa Press Democrat, CA)
Santa Rosa Press Democrat
(10/8/2017 8:26 PM, Paul Payne)
The sprawling oaks and green grass of Santa Rosa’s Doyle Community Park have beckoned Carol Cranston and her dog Bingo almost every day for the past seven years.

Now, the oasis in the middle of the city between two gurgling creeks is calling out to the homeless.

Over the past few months, transient numbers have swelled, alarming neighbors and others who fear the park is being ruined by a segment of the population that’s monopolizing picnic areas by day and camping at night.

“They are starting to take over,” said Cranston, a retired teacher who lives on nearby Sheridan Drive, as she walked near a group lounging on the lawn. “We don’t want these people in this park.”

Critics blame the surge on the city’s handling of its homeless population, estimated at 1,900. They believe many were driven to Doyle when officials in August rousted 42 people living in one of the largest encampments near Farmers Lane. And they expect more will come when the city closes a second haunt at the Sixth Street freeway underpass by Oct. 16.

[CA] Water board reports highlighted health risk before hepatitis outbreak (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)

San Diego officials were informed repeatedly of the dangers of disease-carrying runoff from homeless encampments into area waterways, as far as a decade before the current hepatitis A crisis spurred action.

Typical of the volumes of reports is a 2015 city plan for Mission Bay, which cited hepatitis research in setting priorities for officials regarding environmental quality.

“The issues raised by transient encampments are socio-economic by nature,” the city Transportation and Storm Water report said. “Addressing the sources of homelessness requires coordination with law enforcement, social services, and the legal community. Therefore, it has been designated as an uncontrollable source.”

A U-T Watchdog review of public records shows state water regulators and city officials produced nearly a dozen studies in the decade before this year’s outbreak, reports and policy documents highlighting the link between homeless camps and human waste-tainted water.

[CA] An outbreak waiting to happen: hepatitis A marches through San Diego’s homeless community (PBS NewsHour)

(10/8/2017 1:47 PM, Usha Lee McFarling)
SAN DIEGO — The hepatitis A outbreak now roiling this well-heeled, coastal city may have had its roots in a baseball game — when the city cleaned up for the 2016 All-Star Game by pushing its homeless out of the touristy areas downtown and into increasingly congested encampments and narrow freeway onramps just east of downtown. The lines of tents stretched for blocks.

At the same time, the city was locking and removing bathrooms to help control the rampant drug and prostitution trade they’d spawned. Hepatitis A is transmitted through contact with feces from an infected person, and in close, unsanitary conditions, the highly contagious virus can spread explosively. So it was only a matter of time, experts say, before cases would surge among the homeless.

“I’m not so much surprised it occurred, but surprised it didn’t occur earlier,” said Dr. Robert Schooley, who chairs the division of infectious diseases at the University of California, San Diego, and currently serves as an informal health adviser to the city’s mayor. “In some ways, it was the perfect storm.”

Today, the tents are gone. There are clusters of newly installed portable toilets open and guarded 24 hours a day. More than 60 new hand-washing stations dot the city. Workers in hazmat suits spend mornings spraying bleach onto streets and sidewalks. Armies of nurses walk through encampments and even into riverbeds and canyons to offer the highly effective hepatitis A vaccine to homeless people. And on Monday, the first city-sanctioned homeless camp — with 200 four-person tents, security, showers, and bathrooms — is slated to open in a parking lot near Balboa Park.

PLANetizen
(10/8/2017 4:31 PM, James Brasuell)
A new plan in San Francisco aims to reduce the city’s chronically homeless population 50 percent by December 2022. Other goals include ending family homelessness and eliminating large, long-term tent encampments.

The city of San Francisco has announced a "Five-Year Strategic Framework" that sets ambitious targets to reduce homelessness by 2022.

Kevin Fagan reports on the new plan, calling it San Francisco’s most ambitious homelessness strategy in a decade. The thinking on the plan is too bundle all the city’s homeless strategies to better coordinate services.

"That coordination will come through what he has dubbed the Homelessness Response System, which will tie together the 15 independent databases now being used to track homeless people through housing, medical and other services," according to Fagan.

The plan will also expand the Moving On Initiative and calls for 1,367 new supportive housing units.

[CA] Napa to pay landlords who accept homeless tenants (Napa Valley Register, CA)
Napa Valley Register
(10/6/2017 7:12 AM, Howard Yune)
Low-cost housing is historically scarce in Napa - and fewer owners are willing to accept rental vouchers from some of those most in need of shelter. Faced with a shortage both of supply and of willing partners, the city will begin offering cash incentives to landlords opening their rental properties to Napans without homes or at risk of losing them. The assistance program also is intended to match needy tenants to those with available housing, provide funds to cover damage to dwellings, and offer some funding to landlords between tenants. The support program won unanimous approval Tuesday from the city Housing Authority, which includes the five members of the City Council. Napa's Housing Authority offers rental assistance through the Section 8 program, in which federal funds pay for vouchers that low-income tenants use to pay landlords.

The city's minuscule vacancy rate and the resulting high rents have left fewer property owners willing to take such vouchers - particularly from those they believe can't afford to pay for damage to the property, according to Lark Ferrell, city housing manager. "One of the themes that came up was that a Section 8 tenant is perceived as a higher risk than a market-rate tenant," she told the council. "We don't have the money to help everyone that's in our program - that would take millions of dollars." Instead, Napa will devote a more modest sum of $200,000 directly to landlords willing to rent to homeless people, with the hope of housing about 75 additional tenants. The Housing Authority will refer recently homeless renters to Abode Services, which in July took over Napa County's shelters and transient services from Community Action Napa Valley with a new emphasis on quickly moving clients into permanent housing. Abode is to aid clients in finding available rental dwellings, serve as a go-between for new tenants and landlords, and manage a 24-hour hotline for property owners taking part in Section 8, said Ferrell.

BOULDER CREEK >> After sleeping in her car for the past 30 months, 50-year-old Debra Rivers soon will move into a new home with her husband and two children thanks to Veteran Affairs Supportive Housing vouchers and the All-In Landlord Partnership.

The partnership is a new a program that incentivizes landlords to rent to people coming out of homelessness. In return for accepting government-subsidized housing vouchers, landlords receive help from program volunteers to maintain and beautify their properties with painting and minor repairs. Saturday the partnership hosted its first "Spruce Up" event, a cleanup day to help Boulder Creek landlords Terry and Patrick Phillips prepare their space for the Rivers family to move in.

After serving in the military as a mechanic, Rivers' husband suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder and the family lived in a housing facility designated specifically for the mentally ill.

According to Rivers, the family stopped sleeping at their apartment because they were kept awake by other residents with "More serious conditions," and they eventually left the facility and became homeless. Rivers' family has been divided by its homelessness, as her children now live with their grandparents. "It makes me so happy to have my children back," Rivers said of the family moving into their new home. "We will finally be reunited as a family."

[CA] Goal reached: 1,000 homeless veterans receive housing (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(10/7/2017 4:44 AM, Gary Warth)
Although the original deadline was missed, San Diego's Housing Our Heroes initiative has hit its goal of helping 1,000 homeless veterans secure rental housing.

"It's fantastic news," Mayor Kevin Faulconer said. "We're getting people housed and getting them off the street."

San Diego Housing Commission President and CEO Rick Gentry said Friday that 1,007 veterans had found secure housing under the initiative announced by Faulconer in March 2016, and 200 other veterans are in the pipeline for housing.

The initiative was launched as one of several steps the city has taking recently to tackle the homeless population. Three large industrial tent structures that will shelter about 250 homeless people each are planned to be installed by the end of the year, and on Monday a city-sanctioned homeless encampment will open to about 200 people in response to a hepatitis A outbreak that has left 17 people dead and afflicted more than 500. While the goal for veterans has been reached and the original initiative completed, Faulconer and Gentry said the effort will continue and be expanded to include non-veterans.

Gentry said he expects an additional 1,000 homeless people to be housed within the next 15 months using the formula created by Housing Our Heroes. Just how many homeless veterans are left in the city isn't clear. The annual count of homeless people taken in January found 1,054 homeless veterans in the county. In all, the county had 9,116 homeless people, with 5,619 in San Diego.

The Housing Our Heroes initiative focused on just the city of San Diego and one area of National City and was launched before the most recent count was taken. Jonathan Herrera, Faulconer's senior adviser on homelessness coordination, estimated there still are about 500 homeless veterans in San Diego. When funding for the two-year, $12.5 million initiative was announced in March 2016, Faulconer said 1,000 veterans would be housed in a year. "My goal was 1,000 people off the street," Faulconer said Friday.

Gentry took some responsible for missing the initial goal. After the program was launched, Gentry said people were spinning their wheels for a few months, but learning important lessons. The first important lesson involved helping homeless people use vouchers to find homes, Gentry said.

The opening of San Diego's first city-sanctioned homeless camp site is back on track for a Monday opening.

Bob McElroy, president and CEO of the Alpha Project, had said earlier Friday that the opening would be delayed a day because tents that had been purchased might not arrive in time.

After an online San Diego Union-Tribune story appeared announcing the delay, McElroy said he heard from the mayor's office that the site still should open Monday by using rented tents.

Mayor Kevin Faulconer on Wednesday announced plans to open the site at a city public works yard near Balboa Park. McElroy said he and other organizers have been working to get everything in place in time for the opening, which originally was scheduled for Monday. McElroy said wash stations, restrooms and other amenities at the site will be in place soon, and rented tents will be in place by the time people start arriving at 7:30 a.m. Monday.

As of Friday, details about transporting people to the site still were being worked out, but McElroy said the plan is to give priority to seniors, the disabled and families with children. He also said the Alpha Project will coordinate with the San Diego Police Department's Homeless Outreach Team, the county's Psychiatric Emergency Response Team and other providers to pick up clients from Rachel's Women's Center, the Neil Good Day Center and other locations to shuttle them to the site.

Huffington Post
(10/6/2017 4:30 PM, Carolyn Jones, EdSource)
Since 2014, the number of homeless children in California has jumped 20 percent.

Alison is only 14 but she knows what she wants to be when she grows up: A surgeon. It's not easy to study, however, when you're so exhausted and hungry you can barely get through 9th-grade biology.

An immigrant from Colombia, Alison is one of more than 200,000 K-12 students in California considered homeless because they lack stable housing. Like most of those students, she lives with her family in a home shared with other families - in her case, two other families. "I go to school every day because I like school, but sometimes I can't concentrate," said the Santa Maria teenager whose district reports nearly a third of its students are homeless.

Since 2014, the number of homeless children in California has jumped 20 percent. That's just over 3 percent of the enrolled K-12 students, more than twice the national rate, but the actual numbers are almost certainly higher.

Schools rely on parents to report their housing status, but shame, fear of deportation or the government taking away their children discourage many parents from truthfully answering the housing questionnaire - typically given to all families at the beginning of the school year. By law, schools are required to identify and help homeless students, using state and federal funds to provide school supplies, extra tutoring, transportation to school or whatever else students need to succeed.

An EdSource analysis shows that more than a quarter of California schools report no homeless students at all and provide no services - despite the fact that homeless students live in nearly every community of California, experts say. "The rate of youth homelessness in California is unconscionable," said Shahera Hyatt, director of the California Homeless Youth Project, a state agency. "Part of it is we've gotten better at counting our homeless students, but there's no question the housing crisis is playing a role. Housing is a fundamental need, and this crisis needs to be taken more seriously. The human and economic cost is great."

Most of California's homeless children, 86 percent in 2015, are not homeless in the traditional sense, state data show. They live with their families and have a roof overhead, but share living quarters with other families because they can't afford their own residence. These families tend to move frequently, and the constant noise hinders attempts to study or sleep. And privacy in the bathroom? Forget it.

"When you're living like that, you're embarrassed to go. So you hold it," Alison said.

In school, homeless children face daunting challenges, and need social services and academic help perhaps more than any other subgroup. Faced with extreme poverty, stress and, like Alison, just plain exhaustion, those children are far more likely to struggle academically and drop out of school than their peers.

VIDEO. Dozens of women, ranging from mothers with young children to seniors with walkers, arrived at the city's first sanctioned homeless camp Monday with a mixture of trepidation, anxiety and hope.

"How are you doing?" asked one of the workers from the Alpha Project, the nonprofit running the campsite, to a woman who had recently arrived.

"I'm a little scared," said the woman, who gave her name only as Dawn. The worker gave her a reassuring hug and let her know everything would be all right.

Others arrived with smiles, with some saying they saw the day as a turning point.

"I think it's great that I get a second chance in life," said Terrie Woolever, 58, a San Diego native. "I thought of suicide a lot. When I came here today, I was surprised. I was happy. Everything changed."

[HI] Modular homes from Japan to house Hawaii homeless families (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)

HONOLULU (AP) — Structures that were intended to provide emergency housing for tsunami survivors in Japan will instead provide shelter for homeless families in Hawaii.

Volunteers assembled a number of the modular homes on Sand Island in Honolulu on Saturday after materials for 30 of the structures arrived from Japan last week, Hawaii News Now reported.

The new community, known as the Kahauiki Village, will house people who have been in transitional shelters and are waiting for long-term housing.

"We are on schedule, and we couldn't be more excited to start preparing these homes for families that are so appreciative of the opportunity to live in safe, dignified, affordable housing," said Duane Kurisu, a coordinator of the project.

[ME] City subcommittee recommends tax deal for Augusta housing proposal opposed by neighbors (Central Maine, ME)
Central Maine
(10/6/2017 5:47 PM, Keith Edwards)
A committee of city councilors voted Friday to recommend the city give a tax deal to a controversial Augusta Housing Authority proposal to build 34 units of affordable rental housing on the city-owned former Statler mill site. Several neighbors of the proposed development site, which would be accessible through a residential neighborhood on dead-end Maple Street, have spoken against it, citing their fear it would bring additional traffic and disruption. The developer and the housing authority director both said the project on the former mill site, which the city has renamed Kennebec Lockes, probably would not happen without a tax increment financing, or TIF, agreement with the city to help finance it. The property is not taxed now because it is owned by the city, nor would the housing authority, a nonprofit corporation, normally be charged property taxes if it owned the property.

A TIF is necessary, developer Kevin Bunker said Friday, both to help bring funding for the project and to help an application for tax credits score well enough to be selected in a highly competitive process for affordable housing projects. The housing authority would form a for-profit entity for the project, to be eligible for tax credits, then seek to sell those tax credits to provide around $4.7 million of the estimated $6 million project cost. To get those tax credits, the project must outscore what are expected to be numerous competitors for affordable housing tax credits. Bunker said having a TIF in place with the local municipality is a key piece needed for the project to score well enough to be awarded tax credits. To move forward, the project also would need a favorable vote by the full City Council, both on the proposed TIF deal and on whether to give, or lease for little or no money, the land to the housing authority, which is independent of the city.

[ME] Housing proposal at former Statler mill site elicits neighbors' worries (Central Maine, ME)

(10/5/2017 1:05 PM, Keith Edwards)
What Augusta Housing Authority officials see as an opportunity to develop quality affordable housing for working people on a former mill site the city wants to have developed is seen by many of the site's Maple Street neighbors as an unwanted development that will bring traffic, crime and other safety problems to their quiet neighborhood on a dead-end street. Some landlords see it as unwelcome competition from the public sector and say authorities are overstating the need for more housing in Augusta. About 40 people attended a "neighborhood meeting" hosted by the housing authority Wednesday. Many of them criticized the housing authority's proposal to build 34 units of rental housing on a corner of the city-owned former Statler mill site that would be reached via Maple Street. Residents said the proposed Augusta Housing Authority development would bring too much traffic to the narrow residential street, disrupt their neighborhood and put low-income housing in an isolated spot that they say would bring increased crime.

Kevin Bunker, a developer who worked on a housing development project with the housing authority at the former Hodgkins Middle School building in Augusta, agreed with resident Joyce Grondin when she said the site is not a safe place for children now. He said infrastructure would be added to the site, if the proposed project moves forward, to make it safe. Amanda Bartlett, executive director of the housing authority, said the authority's development that converted the Hodgkins building into Hodgkins School Apartments demonstrated that occupied housing not only doesn't add to crime in a neighborhood, it prevents it, because criminals shy away from occupied spaces. She said before the old school was converted to housing, it was a target of vandals; but as soon as construction started there, all that illegal activity came to a halt. She said neighbors of the Hodgkins site had similar concerns about the effect on their neighborhood, but now that is built and occupied, they have expressed no complaints.

[CT] Goal of public housing relocation in New London draws near (New London Day, CT)
New London Day
(10/8/2017 8:09 AM, Editorial Board)
While progress continues toward relocating residents from the Thames River Apartments, challenges remain and will continue to need the attention of New London Mayor Michael Passero and his administration.

Last week the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development notified the New London Housing Authority that it would sanction the disposal of the property in its role as public housing.

Now the authority can move forward with seeking Section 8 vouchers, providing rental subsidies that the more than 300 residents can use to find alternative housing. Credit goes to Mayor Passero for the attention he has given this issue. Soon after his 2015 election, he recognized it was critically important to address the situation before it became so bad that the high-rises were condemned and what to do with the tenants became an emergency.

This is how The Day and its editorial board expected things to work when it pushed for a strong-mayor form of government. The mayor identifies a problem then puts the people, process and resources in place to address it, in this case working with the housing authority. Challenges that remain include pushing through the bureaucratic application process, assisting tenants in finding alternative housing and finding the estimated $600,000 to cover relocation expenses.

There is near unanimous agreement that the high-rise projects that sprouted up across urban centers in the country in the 1960s proved, over the long term, to be a failed social experiment. Warehousing the poor in high-rise apartments, often disconnected from the general community, invited crime and decay. The high-rise apartments on Crystal Avenue have the added problem of being geographically isolated in an area more suited for industrial uses.

Credit goes also to New London attorney Robert Reardon and his law firm. Acting without compensation, Reardon pursued a class-action lawsuit and in 2014 obtained a stipulated judgment mandating relocation of the residents or rehabilitation of the buildings.

The housing authority has not established a timeline to begin moving tenants, but must act expeditiously.

[NY] Red Tape Leaves Gowanus Community Center Closed Despite Funds to Renovate (DNAinfo New York, NY)

(10/6/2017 10:30 AM, Caroline Spivack)
GOWANUS — The Gowanus Houses community center has nearly half a million dollars dedicated to its reopening, but it's still stalled, thanks to city rules mandating adequate funds for services before work can even begin.

In 2014, locals voted to allocate $475,000 in funds to renovate the center, which has been closed for more than a decade, through Councilman Stephen Levin's participatory budgeting process.

The projects on the participatory budgeting ballot included programs and classes for the space, but because capital funds can only be used on physical infrastructure, those dollars could not go toward funding those services, according to Levin's director of communication Edward Paulino.

It is only until the Department of Youth and Community Development secures a sponsor organization to run and help fund the center's programs that the New York Housing Authority can move forward with construction, according to the authority's spokeswoman Jasmine Blake.

[NY] Why the City isn't building public housing (The Real Deal, NY)
The Real Deal
(10/6/2017 10:47 AM, Kathryn Brenzel)
Administration focuses on preservation due to what it says are changes to federal law

Much of Mayor Bill de Blasio's affordable housing initiative goes unseen because it largely focuses on preservation rather than creation.

Part of the reason for that, according to the city, is a change to federal housing law that set the amount of public housing eligible for subsidies based on existing stock, the New York Times reported.

"When all these advocates run around and say, 'Why isn't the city of New York building housing?' It doesn't exist. There's no such thing," Alicia Glen, the deputy mayor for housing and development, told the Times. "It's all about, to what extent can you use the resources of the private sector, and the resources the public sector has, to put together the best deals you can possibly do."

In July, the mayor announced that 77,651 units had been financed so far as part of his goal to preserve or create 200,000 affordable housing units by 2024. At least 7,500 units have been preserved so far, which can include something as simple as a new agreement to keep rent at an apartment below market-rate.

The city, however, doesn't keep track of the number of existing units that they regulate for the first time, the Times reported.

[NY] Amid concern of spreading problem, Ogdensburg Housing Authority director will give bedbug presentation Tuesday at city hall (North Country This Week, NY)

(10/8/2017 4:04 PM, Jimmy Lawt)
OGDENSBURG – Housing Authority Executive Director William Seymour and chairwoman Patricia Redden-Sargent will give a presentation to council Tuesday regarding the ongoing bedbug infestation.

The presentation is listed as the first item on the agenda for Tuesday's city council meeting.

City Manager Sarah Purdy said the senior towers are under jurisdiction of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, which limits the council's ability to intervene on the issue. However, city councilors expressed public health concerns at recent meeting because of the potential spreading of bedbugs throughout the city.

Purdy said representatives of Congresswoman Elise Stefanik-R (NY-21), were also contacted. She said staff members from her office told the city they would reach out to HUD officials on their behalf.

The bedbug outbreak was reported at Centennial and Riverview towers.

The outbreak prompted councilor Daniel Skamperle to question whether St. Lawrence County Public Health Department could get involved, but Purdy noted that the department is currently without a director.

[NY] Build bigger, Bill and create housing for New Yorkers (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News
(10/9/2017 5:31 AM, New York Daily News Editorial)
Metro-IAF comes to the table with immense credibility, having built thousands of affordable Nehemiah Homes in the Bronx and Brooklyn starting in the 1980s.

Now its members propose a very smart scheme to build 15,000 new apartments for senior citizens on a resource hiding in plain sight: surplus land within New York City Housing Authority developments. Metro-IAF member East Brooklyn Congregations, with the group Breaking Ground, already built one model adjoining NYCHA's Linden Houses.

Members want the mayor to hear the case that scaling up the concept could free up multi-bedroom NYCHA apartments occupied by lone elderly tenants for new families hungry for housing.

He must listen.

[NY] Editorial: Heavy use of sick time is more evidence of trouble at the BMHA (Buffalo News, NY)
Buffalo News
(10/8/2017 5:44 AM, News Editorial Board)
More evidence - not that any was needed - of the need for substantive change at the Buffalo Municipal Housing Authority arrived in the form of a Buffalo News analysis showing that workers used an alarming number of sick days.

That particular problem can be solved by negotiating better terms with employees. It should be on the agenda for the recently reformulated BMHA board.

Mayor Byron W. Brown has proven himself a good negotiator with city unions, agreeing only to what the city can afford. While he has no direct control over the BMHA, he should encourage the board, which is made up mostly of his appointees, to get tougher. The mayor shook up the board over the summer, replacing members who had presided over the decline of the BMHA with what appear to be solid choices.

While getting tougher with sick time abusers will help, the multiple shortcomings of the BMHA point to a culture in need of serious overhaul. That can't happen without a change at the top, something the old board was unaccountably reluctant to do. The board should replace Executive Director Dawn Sanders-Garrett and undertake a major re-examination of the agency.

It has hundreds of rundown and vacant apartments at the Commodore Perry development and vacant, dilapidated units creating blight in the neighborhood encircling the A.D. Price Courts. Complaints about broken elevators, burned-out lights and rundown apartments in buildings that are occupied add to the story. Tenants have to wait, sometimes for days, before what's broken gets fixed.

Now it turns out part of the reason for those delays is the number of employees who seem to be treating sick days as additional personal days to be taken as needed. According to a recent analysis by News staff reporter Susan Schulman, sick day spikes occurred on Fridays and Mondays, especially the Monday after a Sunday Bills football game.

[NY] New Yorkers rallying for de Blasio to take action on affordable housing plan (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News
(10/6/2017 6:54 PM, Jillian Jorgensen)
The Metro Industrial Area Foundation plans to turn out 5,000 people Monday to call on the mayor to adopt its affordable housing plan.

The community group found more than 20 NYCHA-owned vacant lots where they believe 15,000 units of affordable senior housing could be built.

NYCHA seniors in neighboring developments could move in, freeing up their apartments for new people.

The group also wants NYCHA cleaned up, slumlords arrested and higher housing subsidies.

"There's just got to be a moral choice by the city whether some people deserve to live like second-class citizens or not," said Metro IAF lead organizer Grant Lindsay. "It's easy to dump on Trump when he goes to Puerto Rico and throws paper towels at people, but it's no different in public housing."

[NY] Oneida council renews agreement with housing authority (Rome Sentinel, NY)
Rome Sentinel
(10/9/2017 4:05 PM, Rome Sentinel)
ONEIDA — The Oneida Common Council approved renewal of its agreement with the Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) on Oct. 3.

The new agreement will allow the OHA to receive federal funding from a secondary source that will make the money immediately available. This new source will allow the authority to better plan their yearly budgets.

"We will be receiving the same funding under a new name," OHA Executive Director Bob Walters told the council. "Every year when I make a budget I'm not sure what will be available. This new funding gives us peace of mind."

The OHA provides housing to income-eligible residents in Oneida, including the elderly and disabled.

[PA] Bartolotta, Democratic senators back bill helping victims of domestic and sexual violence living in public housing (Beaver County Times, PA)

(10/9/2017 4:41 AM, J.D. Prose)
With October being Domestic Violence Awareness Month, state Sen. Camera Bartolotta and two Democratic colleagues have introduced bipartisan legislation to help victims of domestic and sexual violence who live in public housing.

Senate Bill 919 was introduced Thursday and referred to the Senate Urban Affairs and Housing Committee. In a memo to fellow senators last month, the three lawmakers called domestic and sexual violence "an ongoing plague in our communities," noting that 60 community centers in Pennsylvania helped nearly 90,000 domestic and sexual violence victims in 2016.

Bartolotta, R-46, Carroll Township, Washington County, joined with state Sen. Judith Schwank, D-Berks County, and Art Haywood, D-Montgomery County, to offer the legislation. They said it was developed with input from Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape and the Pennsylvania Housing Alliance.

Previously, Bartolotta and Schwank partnered on legislation to expand services for mothers and babies affected by post-partum depression.

The new bill, according to the memo, would allow tenants in county housing authorities who are domestic or sexual violence victims to be relocated to other residences under an authority or receive help and referrals for housing assistance from victim advocacy groups.

State Sen. Camera Bartolotta, R-Carroll Township, and two other senators have introduced legislation designed to expedite the relocation of victims of domestic or sexual violence who are tenants of a county housing authority. Senate Bill 919, introduced Wednesday by Bartolotta, Sen. Art Haywood, D-Cheltenham Township, and Sen. Judith L. Schwank, D-Fleetwood, would amend the Housing Authorities Law to give county housing authorities five days to approve a tenant's request for relocation upon submitting certification that they are the victim of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault. County housing authorities would then have 30 days to relocate the individual and other members of their household, give the tenant a Housing Choice Voucher or refer the tenant to victim assistance organizations. The county housing authority would be prohibited, absent a court order, from releasing the new address of the tenant or other information about their relocation.

The Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape, and the Housing Alliance of Pennsylvania had input on the language of the bill, Bartolotta said. Per the bill, tenants may request emergency relocation if they experienced domestic or sexual violence on the premises within 90 days of the request or reasonably believe that they or someone else is threatened with imminent harm if they remain on the premises. Tenants may establish sufficient proof of domestic or sexual violence through orders of protection, police reports, medical records, court documents or other certification of abuse, according to the bill. Bartolotta noted that October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, adding that the 60 community centers providing services throughout the state assisted nearly 90,000 victims of domestic and sexual violence annually, according to the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

[PA] Focus on Race: Johnstown a tale of two cities, leaders say (Johnstown Tribune-Democrat, PA)
Johnstown Tribune-Democrat
(10/8/2017 7:12 AM, Dave Sutor)
A dozen crosses burned on the hillsides surrounding Johnstown the night of Sept. 7, 1923.Ku Klux Klansmen lit the symbols of intimidation and hate after Mayor Joseph Cauffiel called for expelling every black and Mexican who had not resided in the city for at least seven years.

He made the announcement after a black man was involved in a fatal shootout with police officers in the Rosedale neighborhood.

The Johnstown Democrat newspaper wrote about the display in an almost romanticized way, describing how the flaming crosses "Blazed forth" and "Pierced a foggy sky" in a "Spectacular demonstration."

Move forward nearly a century, to Martin Luther King Jr. Day of this year.

A red pickup truck - adorned with a sign carrying the message "In Loving Memory of James Earl Ray," assassin of the civil rights icon, and black doll slumped over the tailgate - was spotted around town.

The incident occurred at a time when race relations issues have been at the forefront nationally and locally, including the Black Lives Matter/Blue Lives Matter discussion, the presidencies of Barack Obama and Donald Trump, National Football League quarterback Colin Kaepernick kneeling during pre-game playings of the national anthem and a white supremacist march that turned violent in Virginia.

The contrasting reactions between 1923 and 2017 show the evolution of race relations in the Johnstown area, where many community leaders agree strides have been made, but much work remains to be done.

Johnstown Housing Authority properties provide some of the most racially mixed living arrangements in the area. About 570 heads of households are black, while nearly 900 are white.

Joe Taranto, chairman of the authority's board, thinks there are overall "good relationships" within the properties and city, although issues do arise that occasionally lead to some people looking to find a "scapegoat" for their own problems.

"I think we need to learn to live with one another a little bit better," Taranto said. "And, by that, also not blaming others for our problems.

"That is going to cause the biggest chasm between different groups. When one feels that they're being put out and they blame it on another group, it's an easy scapegoat, but it's not the right way to go. That type of mentality will cause problems in our community."

Taranto sees the ability of the different races to live in the housing authority properties as an example of how the city "has always been such a melting pot of people," going back to the days when Germans, Slovaks, Italians, Poles, and other immigrants came to Johnstown to work in the steel mills.

PHILADELPHIA - The Philadelphia Housing Authority is looking for investors to take more than 50 rundown properties off its hands.

The properties, part of PHA's scattered sites inventory, are mostly boarded up shells or empty lots.

President and CEO Kelvin Jeremiah says they still have value if you're willing to invest and rebuild.

"The expectation would be that within three years of purchasing the property you would have it restored its youth and the city can start collecting tax revenues on it," he said.

The auction will take place on Thursday at 2501 East Ontario Street.

"Because it's an auction I think you have properties starting at about a thousand dollars and it could up to as high as $100,000-$200,000," he said.

[VA] Lynchburg residents gets update on city's poverty initiative (Lynchburg News & Advance, VA)
Lynchburg News & Advance
(10/5/2017 7:20 AM, Alissa Smith)
At a community meeting Thursday night, scores of Lynchburg residents received an update on the city's From Poverty to Progress initiative that is geared toward decreasing the city's 24.6 percent poverty rate. Mayor Joan Foster detailed at the meeting the overall goals of the initiatives to attendees, primarily to move 50 "willing, able, hopeful and motivated" households out of poverty annually from fiscal year 2018 to fiscal year 2022."Secondary goal is this: to decrease the poverty rate in Lynchburg and to raise the median income," she said. "Ultimately, then we'll have a poverty rate that's less than the national and state average. It's a lofty goal, but we can do it, folks."

Members from the initiative's nine committees - child care, education, food disparity, health and mental health, housing, legal system, Poverty 101, transportation and workforce development - offered community members snapshots of their progress. The Housing Committee is aiming to establish a housing navigation position at the Lynchburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority, committee member Denise Crews said. That position will assist with understanding available housing resources and would provide outreach to the community, landlords and other property owners, she added. That position should be filled by December of this year. Crews said the committee also is going to conduct a study to identify the specific housing needs in the community.

[MD] Pantelides nominates Corey Johnson for Housing Authority of the City of Annapolis board (Capital Gazette, MD)
CapitalGazette.com
(10/7/2017 5:57 PM, E.B. Furgurson III)
Annapolis Mayor Mike Pantelides on Friday nominated Corey Johnson to fill a vacancy on the Housing Authority of the City of Annapolis Board of Commissioners.

Johnson, of Annapolis, is the current lead security officer for the town of Highland Beach.

Johnson also oversees the security team at The Westin Georgetown in Washington, D.C. maintaining a close working relationship with law enforcement and emergency agencies and the hiring, firing and training of the security team.

Johnson has 15 years of public safety and security management experience, having been manager of security at the Gaylord National Resort and UniverSoul Circus, among other work.

"I have chosen each nominee for the board very carefully, intending that they represent the needs of the community," Pantelides said. "This nomination will put in place the much-needed public safety component that will work with Annapolis police officers to continue creating a trusting environment between residents and law enforcement."

If approved by the City Council on Monday, Johnson will fill the opening created when Deborah Johnson's term expired in July.

A suspected drug-related shooting and beat-down at a Morristown Housing Authority apartment Friday night that resembled a scene from a gangster movie is a grievous reminder that life frequently does not imitate motion pictures.

Antonio Dewayne Yarbrough, a 25-year-old Morristown man who was shot three times in the upper thigh, died from his wounds.

One of the two men allegedly responsible for Yarbrough's death, Russellville resident Nicholas Matthew Roberts, 29, didn't fade into the criminal netherworld, and then migrate to a comfortable niche in a cold-case file. He's charged with second-degree murder and remains in the Hamblen County Jail without bond.

Roberts, who lives on Fall Creek Dock Road, was taken into custody around 3:30 a.m. Sunday at a residence on Glades Lane in Mohawk following a constant 28-hour manhunt that involved Morristown Police Department detectives, top command staff, the MPD Criminal Apprehension Unit and four other law enforcement agencies, according to Morristown Police Chief Roger Overholt.

(10/7/2017 10:54 AM, Staff)
If there's any doubt about how the Fayetteville City Council feels about the Fayetteville Housing Authority, just look at the aggressive move council members made in appointing the latest commissioner for the public housing group. The relationship between the Housing Authority and the city of Fayetteville is an arms-length types of governmental connection. Most of the time, the authority's board vets nominees and makes a selection, which is then given the blessing of the Fayetteville City Council. Recent moves between the Fayetteville City Council and the Fayetteville Housing Authority reflect tensions between the groups. This time around, the Housing Authority board nominated one person, but the City Council selected a different person. A state statute says once 45 days of a vacancy goes by, the City Council can choose its own person to fill a slot. Whether 45 days went by in this case is debatable and depends entirely on when one starts counting, but without question, the City Council's Nominating Committee appeared motivated to make a point to the Housing Authority's other board members.

The City Council ultimately appointed Melissa Terry to the board, another hint at its unusually aggressive approach. Terry has been one of the Housing Authority's most vocal critics in recent months as she resisted the organization's efforts to build 58 new apartment units at Morgan Manor, one of its public housing complexes. The Housing Authority's plan also included the sale of Willow Heights, another of its public housing locations. Its residents would be moved to the new Morgan Manor units. The Morgan Manor project suffered a funding setback earlier when its push to receive tax credits from the state foundered. The tax credits could have been sold to raise money for the new apartments. The Housing Authority continues to look for options to move its plan forward.

[TN] Housing authority awarded $607K grant (Shelbyville Times-Gazette, TN)

(10/6/2017 4:03 PM, Jason M Reynolds)
Shelbyville Public Housing Authority received a grant of $607,637 capital improvement grant for the federal fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The Capital Fund Program grant amount should continue for each of the next five years, said deputy director Ronald Tillman. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development is the source of the funds. The total includes $150,000 for operational expenses, $60,760 for administration, $210,000 for dwelling structures, and other expenses, according to the grant paperwork. Specific work will include $10,000 for drainage, landscaping and sidewalks; $85,000 for painting and patching; $40,000 for furnaces and HVAC replacement; and $85,000 for roofs and accessories. The authority will replace some kitchen appliances as well, Tillman said, as well as continue with security camera maintenance and repairing the masonry of rental units. The authority's board of directors last week approved an estimated Fiscal Year 2018 income of nearly $3.5 million. That includes $930,000 from a HUD operating subsidy, the Capital Fund Program amount of $607,637 and rental income of $888,000.

BIRMINGHAM, AL (WBRC) - The head of public safety for the Housing Authority Birmingham District called Saturday's shooting of a 13-year-old boy in the Marks Village community "outrageous."

"I'm making a plea to the community to reach out to the police department with information," Public Safety Director Jeff Gorley told WBRC.

Police said the 13-year-old boy was injured when someone shot him in the stomach in the HABD community Saturday night around 9 p.m.

David Warren, a former football coach for the boy who has not yet been identified publicly, told WBRC, the teen underwent surgery and was responsive to his family.

Young Deberianah Begley was laughing and dancing on her porch on a warm Middle Tennessee fall night when the barrage of bullets rang out.

It would be the last time the 16-year-old girl would ever do so.

Begley, described by loved ones as a sweet, energetic girl, died Sunday in a hail of gunfire that broke out between two parties outside her home in the James Cayce public housing development.

As of Monday her unidentified killers remained at large and Metro police continued to hunt them down. A motive in the shooting remains unknown.

"There are kids outside everywhere here all the time," Begley's close friend Alex Haney, 18, said Monday as she sat on the porch where the girl was shot, tears streaming down her face. "Why did they do this? She was a good person."

VIDEO. As a large crowd crammed onto Eighth Street and the sidewalks beside Cayce Homes, Treysean Island stepped up and asked for the mic.

Amplified by a portable speaker system, the soft-spoken 10-year-old sounded beyond his years as he shared aloud feelings of disbelief at how his 16-year-old second cousin was gunned down yards away the night before.

"Y'all are just killing people," Treysean said. "It don't make no sense. All these young kids shooting at people, shooting at their own sisters and brothers. We are all sisters and brothers in Christ."

The crowd that gathered in the dark assembled to remember the life of Deberianah "Nu Nu" Begley, the teenage resident of the James Cayce public housing development who was fatally shot Sunday night while trying to run from the gunshots that rang out.

Couple pitch in together to help a multitude of charities

DANBURY - To see him now, you'd never know Bill Coder grew up in financially difficult circumstances. He was raised by his mother and two older sisters, and they spent four years of his childhood living in a camp house. In 1940, his mother built a home in Monclova, but it didn't include indoor plumbing.

Bill walked away from those experiences with two things: a passion for fair housing and a deep respect for hardworking women. He spent years working with the Lucas Metropolitan Housing Authority helping to ensure Toledo residents have access to affordable housing, and he helped many women wind their way through a man's world.

"I grew up very poor, but my mother was such a hardworking woman," Bill said. "For that reason, I guess, I've always helped and hired women to be in executive positions in the not-for-profits I worked with."

Bill said his wife, Sharon Coder, is one of those hardworking women he respects so much. They have been married for 63 years, and together, they have accomplished much in the Monclova area, where they reside in winter, and in Danbury, where they keep a summer cottage on the water.

Housing authority properties going smoke-free

Public housing must be smoke-free soon, and the Decatur Housing Authority is preparing to implement federal requirements.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development approved the policy, which began with public comments in 2012, last November. HUD has had more than 900 local housing authorities voluntarily begin smoke-free policies since 2009. Now, local housing authorities must devise plans that will prohibit tobacco use throughout their properties.

Staff writer Claire Hettinger looks at rules the Decatur Housing Authority is preparing and how they will be enforced.

[IN] Apartment Residents: We Want Mold Complaints Investigated (WIBC-AM, Indianapolis, IN)

(10/6/2017 4:27 PM, Ashley Fowler)
Some senior citizens in Columbus are worried that something black-and toxic-is growing in their apartment buildings. Residents at Central Park Place Apartments want federal housing officials to inspect the complex for mold. The Miller-Valentine Group, which owns the complex, says a previous mold issue was resolved and that the complex is mold-free. Resident Lora Stiles told

The Republic newspaper in Columbus that "black stuff" is growing in some top-floor apartments, around bathroom registers, and on a wall near the third-floor garbage chute. Most people thought the black stains were mildew, Sites told the paper, but residents are now concerned that it's actually mold. "The management team at Central Park Place was made aware of a patch of mold in the trash chute closet and immediately and properly cleaned the area. A certified HVAC contractor was brought in to find and repair the leak, thus eliminating the potential for this situation to reoccur. The Housing Authority of the City of Columbus, as well as the Bartholomew County Health Department inspected and approved the repair."

[TX] Houston Housing Authority Again Asks Residents to Move Because of Flooding (Houston Press, TX)
Houston Press
(10/6/2017 4:11 PM, Meagan Flynn)
One month in a shelter was enough for Brid'gell Rice.

She had been a resident at Clayton Homes, a Houston Housing Authority public housing complex right behind Buffalo Bayou - but she knew after she left for the George R. Brown Convention Center with her tote bag and her dog that there would be no point in returning. The water was up to her chest when she evacuated on foot, after water poured through the baseboards, through the walls in the bathroom, the kitchen, the living room. Still, even though she was sleeping on a cot after the flood while her unit was entirely uninhabitable, Rice said the rent was still due. "They told us we still had to pay," Rice said, "And that's why I went and got an attorney." The move had put the HHA in hot water with residents - but on Thursday, it appeared the agency had been forgiven, even as it was announcing that people in 112 units would have to find a new place to live.

By now, everyone who paid rent has been refunded for last month and HHA is not accepting rent for this month either. By Wednesday, residents of the 112 units that were extensively flooded - like Rice's - and those that are still contaminated with mold will have vouchers in their hands to find a new home, wherever the voucher is accepted by private landlords. As HHA President Tory Gunsolley announced the news to a packed community center at Clayton Homes, residents erupted in applause and cheers. The response from Clayton Homes residents to the mandatory move-outs starkly differs from the reactions from 188 seniors at an HHA senior-living facility who received notices to vacate last month. When HHA told the seniors there that, because of flooding damage in the basement, they would need to be moved out in five days, they responded with a lawsuit, saying their apartments themselves were fine and HHA had no right to kick them out on short notice. At Clayton Homes, Gunsolley told the Houston Press he went through a different process to get the emergency transfer vouchers - namely, by filing a demolition application with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

VIDEO. A recent inspection found mold and E. Coli growing in the apartments of the Clayton Homes. It was the rear apartments that were flood by Hurricane Harvey, they are now deemed uninhabitable. Harvey flood waters penetrated 14 buildings at the Clayton Homes. Residents without a home were left in limbo for the last couple of weeks, but received the good news that Section 8 vouchers will be issued along with a one-time payment of $1,200 for moving expenses. A permanent solution since all of the units at the Clayton homes are due to be demolished in a few years for the expansion of I-45.

"We'll be building new units and they're welcome back to new units, or they're welcome to keep their Section 8 and stay at the places they find," says Tory Gunsolley, President/CEO of the Houston Housing Authority. A deadline has not been set for when all the affected residents have to be out.

[ND] Policing properties, providing low-rent housing a delicate balance (Grand Forks Herald, ND)
Grand Forks Herald
(10/8/2017 7:57 AM, Sam Easter)
One block north of Grand Forks City Hall is the nondescript intersection of Fourth Avenue North and North Fourth street. Some residents call it "Fourth and Fourth"—and it has a reputation.

A neighborhood child whispered it to family when a reporter asked about trouble spots. Another resident, concerned about crime, singled out a white apartment building on the corner. Others can rattle off its address without a second's hesitation.

That building is 321 N. Fourth St., an 18-unit set of apartments that has racked up 49 police responses and actions between mid-January and late August, according to police records, meaning police have either responded to a call or visited there more than four dozen times in less than eight months.

Police records show the visits are for a range of incidents, from a loud party to a potential overdose to 11 labeled "Domestic" or "Disturbance" matters. When police arrived, they couldn't find a gun on the man, near the building or in his apartment. "We call it the 'ghetto building.'" said Mike Lee, a downtown resident with friends in the neighborhood.

The building is owned in part by Kenton McGregor, a local accountant who also manages the Ambassador Motel, 2021 S. Washington St., on behalf of its owner. The Ambassador had 55 police visits during the same time period, which also include a mix of causes-though 18 of those were also labeled "Domestic" or "Disturbance."

"I'm from Chicago," said Philip Green, a tenant at 321 N. Fourth St. who's been living there for three years. "Seeing the police doesn't bother me. When you're raised in environments like that, you kind of get used to seeing them. As long as it's got nothing to do with me, I ain't bothered by it."

The police attention at both properties invites questions about a landlord's responsibility to their neighbors. McGregor said the building at Fourth and Fourth is a low-income rental unit both by location and layout. The building is divided into 18 apartments, 10 of which are furnished, utilities-paid efficiency units that cost $260 per month. With units that cater to low-income tenants, he said, police calls are unavoidable. "To be honest with you, unless I just want to close it down and lose what we have, there's no way you can really make that into a good rental unit, especially in that particular neighborhood," McGregor said. McGregor also said his building is part of the larger market, one experiencing a recent surge in apartment units.

People with criminal histories often have nowhere else to go but low-rent housing. Others, like those who struggle with addiction or mental health problems, are in a similar predicament, City Council member Bret Weber said. They're caught within an increasingly frayed social safety net, unraveled over decades by low funding, and drug policies that created criminal records for petty offenses.

What's more, Weber said, poor families often feel the impacts of petty crime much more sharply than affluent ones. And once those people are in the criminal justice system, the likelihood of another offense is higher.

Weber, who is a social work professor at UND, hesitates to condemn McGregor.

"It's a balancing act on this one. I think that we do have some negligent landlords in town, but in the case of Mr. Mcgregor-is he a negligent landlord, or is he providing a necessary social service?" Weber asked, pointing out that the Grand Forks Housing Authority runs background checks before it offers tenants a room.

[WA] HOPE Program: 10 Years Later (DSNews)
DSNews
(10/10/2017 5:43 AM, Brianna Gilpin)
The neighborhood of High Point, which lies on the southeast edge of West Seattle, looks to be a quaint, well-designed neighborhood at first glance, but 10 years ago, it was the product of the Clinton administrations HOPE IV program, aimed to remove the stigma associated with public housing projects.

After the community's development in World War II, the neighborhood was converted into low-income housing. By the 1970s, it had attracted enough gang activity that gunfire was considered normal. By 2000, the federal government pledged $35 million in HOPE VI program dollars to redevelop, demolishing all 716 units to rebuild to what it is today.

High Point's residents include everything from seniors living on Social Security to upper-middle-class homeowners, with approximately half of the 1,500 units devoted to low-income and a half for rent or sale at standard market rates. With the experiment being labeled as a success, High Point Master Planner Brian Sullivan said their new development, Yesler Terrace, will reflect many of the same principals as High Point.

"The new Yesler Terrace, which is being built under a HOPE VI successor program called Choice Neighborhoods, will be denser than High Point, include about 3,500 units of market-rate housing (compared to High Point's 800), and have 88,000 square feet of retail space and 900,000 square feet of office space when redevelopment is completed in about a decade," the Seattle Magazine report said.

Initially, the concern at High Point was whether the homes would keep their value, but according to Zillow data, High Point's home values have risen, with some homes priced at $575,000.

"Instead of putting all the low-income people over there and all the people buying houses over here, we consciously mixed them up," Sullivan said to Seattle Magazine. "When you have people in different stages of their life and at different income levels living side by side, that helps toward a better understanding, rather than having this prejudice about low-income people."

Gridley >> When Jonathan Sanchez, 13, moved to Gridley he couldn't speak English.

Sanchez had lost much of his language skills after his family moved from the United States back to Mexico. The Sycamore Middle School eighth-grader is now completely fluent, something he attributes to the tutors who helped him at MiCASA, an after-school program housed at the Farm Labor Housing Development that serves the students who live there.

"I would struggle through it," Sanchez said. "The tutors would help me — they would spell things out and teach me different words."

Stories of help and success like Sanchez's are common among students who went through the program. There are students like Grecia Ponce, who was behind in school when she started in MiCASA, but graduated Gridley High last year as the valedictorian, and others who attribute their success in school and admission into college to the help they received at MiCASA. The program has had an impact in the lives of children and their families, staff at the Butte County Housing Authority say.

[CA] Old SLO orphanage, plagued by fire and ghost stories, to become home for adults with mental illness (San Luis Obispo County Tribune, CA)
San Luis Obispo County Tribune
(10/8/2017 8:41 AM, Monica Vaughan)
Efforts to transform the long-abandoned Sunny Acres orphanage and juvenile detention center in San Luis Obispo into homes for adults suffering from mental illness will finally get underway in March - with hopes to open in September 2019.

Transitions-Mental Health Association, which signed an option to buy the 1.3-acre property and old brick building from the county in 2014, recently cleared the last hurdle when it received more than $4.5 million in tax credit financing.

The project, called Bishop Street Studios, will restore the deteriorating structure and add three new buildings to house 33 mental-health clients and an on-site manager. It's estimated to cost about $12 million, with most of the money coming from a combination of state and federal funds along with $1.5 million from local donors. Organizers are still hoping to raise $500,000 in local donations. "The reason this project was ever contemplated is we have a tremendous problem finding housing for the clients we serve, who tend to be low-income," said Jill Bolster-White, executive director of Transitions-Mental Health. "We've found permanent, stable housing is elemental in even starting recovering from persistent mental illness."

Residents of Bishop Street Studios will be clients of both the county Behavioral Health Department and Transitions-ng to be many times what the availability will be," she said.

Many of the adult clients who could live at Bishop Street Studios lack adequate housing - they're couch-surfing at friends' apartments, for example, or living with family because they can't afford to rent on their own, Bolster-White said.

Housing clients makes a monumental difference and may lessen the strain on other community services, she said. The 50Now program, designed to house San Luis Obispo's most vulnerable residents, reduced those individuals' stays at the psychiatric hospital and emergency rooms between 60 and 90 percent, Bolster-White.

Affordability is key, officials said. Rent is capped by the state, and subsidies will be available for those who can't afford it, said Scott Smith, executive director of Housing Authority of San Luis Obispo, a partner in the project.

Congress Has a Great Way to Create New Housing After Hurricane Disasters (The Atlantic CityLab)
The Atlantic CityLab
(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Kriston Capps)
After Katrina, expanding tax credits helped the Gulf Coast rebuild affordable rental housing. It can work in Texas, Florida, and Puerto Rico, too.

In the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, Congress passed one disaster recovery package with a special mission in mind. The bill was designed specifically to encourage developers to rebuild or create new affordable rental housing in the Gulf Coast. The plan worked: The 2005 act spurred millions of dollars in new investment in the recovery, creating or restoring tens of thousands of housing units for low-income families.

Congress hasn't passed another similar disaster recovery bill since. Despite the damage wrought by Superstorm Sandy, efforts to put together the right grab-bag of tax incentives and community grants to rebuild affordably failed to materialize.

Now, twelve years after Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma—and much deeper into a coast-to-coast affordability crisis—the nation has once again been smacked by three back-to-back hurricanes. Vulnerable families in Texas, Florida, and the U.S. territories face enormous housing needs. Congress has an imperative to act to make sure aid reaches them. Fortunately, there is a template to follow.

The Gulf Opportunity Zone Act of 2005 leveraged housing tax credits to draw the private sector into the recovery. The bill established three "Gulf Opportunity Zones" for the areas struck by Katrina, Rita, and Wilma, offering different categories of tax incentive for each. Housing needs in New Orleans in particular pushed Congress to work specifically on behalf of low-income renters.

The Energy 202: Trump's energy policies have endeared him to establishment Republicans (Washington Post)
Washington Post

Fast-forward to now: President Trump nominated Wheeler on Thursday to be deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

In an interview on Friday, Wheeler explained to me how he went from critic of Trump to a volunteer for the eventual GOP nominee to, ultimately, Trump's choice for the No. 2 EPA position -- a nomination that has engendered some of the harshest condemnation of the administration from environmentalists to date.

"I was just looking at the debates and what I saw on the news, and I hadn't focused on what he was saying," Wheeler said this week of Trump, "and when I started looking into what he was saying and what his campaign and what his candidacy was about, I was fully on board."

With buildings consuming the bulk of the city's energy and emitting most of its greenhouse gases, it's common sense that cutting inefficiencies here would be a primary focus in fighting climate change. Following President Donald Trump's decision to pull the country out of the Paris Climate Agreement, Mayor Bill de Blasio announced a pioneering initiative that would force thousands of aging buildings to become more energy efficient by 2030 or face stiff penalties. If approved by the City Council, the executive order would make the city the first in the nation to agree to a Paris Agreement-compatible action plan that would effectively make the Big Apple a leader in reducing greenhouse-gas emissions.

About Passive House

Over the last decade, an elite group of developers, builders, and owners in the city have taken it upon themselves to dramatically improve the energy efficiency of their structures. Stirred by the incredible energy savings and environmental benefits possible, several dozen projects have enlisted in the German-born Passive House certification process. The rigorous standard, which includes airtightness and solar shading, results in quiet interiors, ultra-efficient heating and cooling systems, and highly-insulated building envelopes with the ultimate prospect of requiring little energy for space heating or cooling - meaning more money saved on your energy bills. And if you wanna talk numbers, according to the official website of New York Passive House Inc., this type of construction "delivers up to approximately a 90% reduction in heating and cooling demand and up to a 75% reduction in overall primary energy demand" compared to most existing buildings.

Marianne Hyde, a partner at leading Passive House firm, Zakrzewski + Hyde Architects tells us going for Passive House certification can result in very little additional cost to major renovations or new construction endeavors— especially as more contractors become familiar with the standard and compliant products become more widely available.

[NH] Realtor doubts new zoning will create housing in Portsmouth (Seacoast Online, NH)
Seacoast Online
(10/6/2017 5:58 PM, Jeff McMenemy)
Local real estate agent David Choate told the city's Economic Development Commission that he does not believe the proposed gateway mixed-use district zoning amendment will lead to new housing. "I'm going to ask the council to table this because I think the areas they've identified are not realistic for redevelopment for housing with maybe the exception of Exit 7", Choate said at the EDCs meeting Friday morning. "The other areas are just pie in the sky and they've specifically excluded areas that could be redeveloped, such as the New England Marine property." Choate, executive vice president of Colliers International in Portsmouth, said the proposed gateway zoning district is "not going to create a project. There's several that could be in play but all that area around Mirona Road that's preposterous to include that, it's just not going to happen, Choate said Friday. The Kmart plaza it's just nonsense and its falling on deaf ears. Let's evaluate properties that need to be included and are not included."

[NY] Mayor David Kicks Off North Side Blight Removal Efforts (City of Binghamton, NY)
City of Binghamton
(10/6/2017 9:51 AM, Press Release)
(BINGHAMTON, N.Y.) — Mayor Richard C. David today announced a series of blight removal and neighborhood revitalization efforts on the City's North Side.

Mayor David announced the plans in front of 31 Virgil St. shortly before the property was demolished. It joins three other blighted property demolitions and one home rehabilitation project.

"Blighted properties bring down property values, attract criminal activity and cause frustration for nearby residents," said Mayor David. "Demolition is the first step in redevelopment. City officials will work with neighbors on a long term vision forthese areas and where other strategic investments can be made."

Two of the blight demolitions — 96 Liberty St. and 31 Virgil St. — are within a few hundred feet of the City's Lee Barta Community Center at 108 Liberty St., set to be renovated and expanded this fall.

[NY] Editorial: City making efforts to rebuild East Side (Buffalo News, NY)
Buffalo News
(10/9/2017 6:01 AM, News Editorial Board)
Sometimes life is not fair, and the criticism Mayor Byron W. Brown receives for not doing enough on the East Side may be an example of that saying.

It is true that his administration has devoted considerable resources to the largely poor, African-American area of the City of Buffalo. It is also true that the need there is great and that much more remains to be done.

The mayor made the point – and it is a valid one – in a recent News article, stating, "Hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent on the East Side." But that has yet to make up for the decades of disinvestment there.

It is because of that long-standing neglect that so many people look around at the still-broken parts and ask why. Brown's opponents in the September primary picked up on something – the frustration of residents still waiting for the rejuvenation that they see downtown and in some pockets of the East Side to arrive in their neighborhoods.

HARLEM — Churches are losing members but gaining profits from gentrification.

Nearly two dozen churches have either closed or been sold to developers for more than $50 million over the last decade, according to a review by DNAinfo New York and Harlem historian Michael Henry Adams.

The churches often sell because of a combination of factors including dwindling memberships, high maintenance costs and the lure of millions of dollars from developers ready to buy in Harlem.

More than half of the $53.1 million came from a single church — LaGree Baptist Church which sold for $28.5 million in 2016, records show.

[NJ] FamiCare founder tries to address loss of grant funding (Irvington Herald, NJ)
Irvington Herald
(10/9/2017 10:24 AM, Chris Sykes)
IRVINGTON, NJ — FamiCare founder Thecy Faustin is upset she did not receive the Community Development Block Grant funding from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development through the township of Irvington that she was accustomed to receiving during former Mayor Wayne Smith's administration, but she is still determined to provide the organization's services to Irvington's Creole-speaking population.

"We moved from Central Avenue to Union Avenue. We visited Haiti with Ras Baraka after Hurricane Matthew," said Faustin on Tuesday, Sept. 26. She is currently collecting items for children to send to Haiti, Puerto Rico and other Caribbean islands hit hard by recent hurricanes, and for the victims of the recent earthquakes in Mexico. "We do have a Haitian Relief Fund. It's at Wells Fargo and it's been there for 20 years. Using donations, we do make trips over there to help out whenever we can."

FamiCare was originally founded to serve the local Haitian and Creole-speaking immigrant population and community, however Faustin said that has become much harder since her nonprofit organization has not been getting the kind of funding from grants and other sources administered by the township that it once did.

"It turns out that we did not get the CDBG money last year or this year. In 2016-2017, we applied and the council granted us $19,000," Faustin said. "This year, John Sowell and Musa Malik decided not to give it to us. With the prior administration, they would give you the money, then you do the work, but with this administration, they ask you to do the work first, then pay you. But they haven't paid us. We did the work and spent money, but they decided not to pay."

[PA] Carbondale upgrading Russell Park (Scranton Times & Tribune, PA)
Scranton Times & Tribune
(10/9/2017 4:59 AM, Kyle Wind)
CARBONDALE — A new walking track, light fixtures and fences at Russell Park will be the latest additions to the city's park offerings.

The $100,000 project, funded by the federal Community Development Block Grant program, will provide a new amenity to the park where youths play and practice football, basketball, cheerleading and soccer while boosting security at the park, Mayor Justin Taylor said.

The stone trail will run around the perimeter of the field, with the city planning to install a dozen 25-foot poles with light fixtures so people can walk at night — with the park possibly closing at 8 or 9 p.m.

City officials said they hope the well-lit area will deter vandalism. The city added about $55,000 worth of playground equipment to the park several years ago and saw much of it damaged.

[VA] City council to consider First Piedmont request (Martinsville Bulletin, VA)
Martinsville Bulletin
(10/8/2017 11:33 PM, Mickey Powell)
MARTINSVILLE – The City Council on Tuesday will consider scheduling two joint public hearings with the Martinsville Planning Commission on Oct. 24.

One concerns a request from the city and the Martinsville Redevelopment and Housing Authority for a special-use permit necessary for a vehicle terminal to be developed at 1 Progress Drive in the Clearview Business Park. The site is near the intersection of Clearview, Progress and Royal drives.

According to local officials, the terminal would be a garage where First Piedmont Corp., a regional waste management company, would store and repair vehicles. No garbage would be deposited there.

The terminal would replace one already operating in Henry County. First Piedmont wants to relocate the facility to Clearview to be closer to the solid waste transfer station that the company operates at the city's former landfill on Arden Circle, which is off Clearview Drive about a mile away, officials have said.

The Redevelopment and Housing Authority is City Council seated as another panel to handle public housing matters and redevelopment issues.

ROANOKE, Va. (WDBJ7) A 5-block stretch of Melrose Avenue could have a new look in a few years.

Roanoke City leaders are considering revitalizing the area from 21st street to 25th street of Melrose Avenue.

The Roanoke Department of Planning, Building & Development held an open public forum Thursday evening to present a neighborhood development concept plan.

The plan was created by the Emerging Leaders in Architecture (ELA), according to city leaders.

"The purpose of the revitalization to create a community identity," said Community Resources Administrator Keith Holland.

Holland says the Melrose-Orange Target Area is a community that they've already been working on.

City leaders have chosen it to allocate U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development annual entitlement funding to rehab existing house, eliminate blight, and develop single family homes for low-income families.

The 18 structures slated for demolition are on the Unsafe Building Commission list. Eleven are located in the West End while the remaining seven are located in the Fairfield and Beverly Hills neighborhoods.

Thirteen of the properties will be demolished by Danny Sullivan Excavating LLC of Coal Grove, Ohio, for a total cost of $81,899. Those properties are located at 2111 5th Ave. West, 1738 Jefferson Ave., 1821 5th Ave. West, 839 Washington Ave., 1218 Monroe Ave., 805 24th St., 919 22nd St., 1243 5th Ave. West, 975 Madison Ave., 1057 19th St. Rear, 214 Davis St., 806 24th St. and 545 Roby Road.

The remaining structures will be handled by JT Hatfield Excavating of Cross Lanes, West Virginia, at a cost of $27,616. The structures are located at 2930 Hollywood Place, 334 5th Ave. West, 1307 5th Ave. West, 1809 5th Ave. West and 1660 Monroe Ave.

The cost to demolish each structure varies for each building and ranges from about $3,000 to roughly $16,000.

The total cost for demolition is $109,515 and will be paid for out of the city's Community Development Block Grant funds, which come from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Atlanta Journal-Constitution
(10/10/2017 1:40 AM, Carolyn Cunningham)
Marietta officials will hold three Citizen Listening Sessions in October and November on how to spend funding from the federal government.

The city's Community Development Division uses the Community Development Block Grant funds to support activities which stabilize and strengthen neighborhoods.

Suggestions are encouraged by city officials on how the city can use the funding to improve eligible Marietta neighborhoods.

All sessions will begin at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m., the sessions will be held Oct. 11 and 25 and Nov. 16 at the city's Community Development Office, 268 Lawrence St., Suite 200, Marietta.

Poll tests Cloud Hill versus park-only concept at Greer Stadium

Pivoting from MLS, the poll dives into the controversial issue of redeveloping Greer Stadium with a mixed-use proposal called Cloud Hill — a plan backed by Barry that has been slammed by historic preservationists.

The poll tests support for the Cloud Hill project against the backdrop of alternative parks-only concept put forth by opponents.

"There's a redevelopment that's privately funded and it's called Cloud Hill," the poll says of the city-owned Greer Stadium site. "Some may say this project would create more green space and active park space and affordable housing for the community.

"Also, some say this stadium sits on historically significantly land and the city should develop this property back into a park as it was originally intended. Do you strongly favor, somewhat favor, oppose or strongly oppose this redevelopment?"

When Barbara Spradlin talks about her 40-year career at Independent Living Services in Conway, she is likely to do two things — laugh and cry.

“Haven’t I been blessed?” she asked.

She said U.S. Rep. French Hill, R-Ark., toured the facility on Robins Street recently after a Rotary board meeting took place on-site. Spradlin said Douglas makes a point to invite people to tour the facility to learn about its programs.

She remembered when the organization had to write grant proposals for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to build the two Independent Living Services apartments and a group home.

“Each of these projects required a grant 3 inches thick, and they wanted 12 copies. Back in the day — this was in the ‘80s — it was a huge task for this little team. The day we got approval of our HUD projects was also the day of the fair parade. We were all celebrating and thinking the parade was for us,” she said, laughing. “We were able to provide housing — first-rate housing — for all our people.”

Before then, consumers were in a home on Independence Street. Spradlin helped renovate it, including hanging wallpaper. They were happy to have it, she said, but in the winter, the pipes would freeze, and it wasn’t handicapped-accessible. Spradlin said she and other staff members would look out the kitchen window and watch the construction of two group homes that met all their needs.

[KY] Forum will focus on west Louisville’s economic development (The Lane Report, KY)
The Lane Report
(10/6/2017 10:57 AM, Staff)
A Nov. 2 economic development forum focused on west Louisville will examine strategies and available resources to help rebuild and sustain communities. The University of Louisville’s College of Arts and Sciences is offering the public event, "The Future of Our Community: West Louisville Economic and Community Development Forum," at the Kentucky Center for African American Heritage, 1701 W. Muhammad Ali Blvd. The program runs from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Forum breakout sessions will focus on creative financing for individual and large construction projects, economic opportunities for minority-owned firms, successful neighborhood planning and access to lending opportunities. Panelists will include residents, developers, financiers, entrepreneurs and government and community group representatives.

[MO] City Must Spend $4 Million Grant Before April (KSFX/KOLR-TV FOX 27 Ozarks First, MO)
KSFX/KOLR-TV FOX 27 Ozarks First
(10/6/2017 9:19 AM, Lauren Barnas)
VIDEO. SPRINGFIELD, Mo. -- The city of Springfield has a big federal grant it needs to spend on a short deadline; more than $4 million by the end of March 2018.

Because the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development changed the way it defines timeliness, the city now has less than six months to spend it on low-to-moderate income areas. Not only must the projects be slated by the end of March, construction needs to be completed, bills need to be paid and receipts turned in.

Mary Lilly Smith, the director of Planning and Development for the City of Springfield, says it’s not a question of "if." "We will spend the money," Smith said. Instead, it’s a question of "how." And to that, everyone has their own idea.

Katherine Payne, a member of Cruse Dog Park, joked with KOLR10. "They could send me some," Payne said. She will most likely benefit from the grant, as the city plans to connect the trail near the dog park southwest to Ewing Park. "Ewing Park is really busy in the summer, so I think that’d be a good idea," Payne said.

The city has divided plans to spend the grant into two categories, Tier I being top priority. Smith says preliminary engineering already determined that the $1.5 million project on the list can’t possibly be done by March 31. "We will be removing Jordan Creek daylighting from Tier I and then moving some Tier II projects up," Smith said.

Winter weather is also a concern. Smith says, to deal with that, she’s asking for a little luck and a lot of planning. "Because we’re going into the winter months, we're going to have to use concrete instead of asphalt on streetscape projects and trail projects and that has increased our cost some," Smith said.

The city already has the money, so if it doesn't meet the March 31 deadline, it wouldn't have to give any money back. It could, however, negatively affect future grants through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

[MI] George Will: Detroit serious about recovering (Saratoga Springs Saratogian, NY)
Saratoga Springs Saratogian
(10/7/2017 12:05 PM, George Will)
With biblical succinctness, and foreshadowing a resurrection, Mike Duggan said, "Let there be light!" and 65,000 LED streetlights replaced the 40 percent of the city's streetlights that were broken when he took office in 2014. They are among the many reasons that on Nov. 7 he, the first white mayor here in 40 years, will win a landslide re-election in a city that is 83 percent black. Identity politics is frivolous; Detroit, after a bruising rendezvous with reality, is serious about recovering from its near-death experience.

In Duggan, Detroit has found its Fiorello La Guardia -- a short, stocky, cheerful, plainspoken incarnation of his city. In 1983, when Duggan returned, fresh from the University of Michigan Law School, "there was nobody my age on the streets." The Houston Chronicle was being sold at a busy intersection to unemployed autoworkers scanning the classifieds for Texas jobs. In 1950, Detroit was comparable to, and perhaps richer (by per capita income) than, Chicago. Soon, however, it was bleeding population, heading for bankruptcy as Greece on the Great Lakes, a dystopia plagued by de-industrialization, soaring crime, packs of feral dogs and a political class featuring incompetents leavened by felons.

Duggan, a Democrat in a city with nonpartisan elections, won in 2013 as a write-in candidate, telling voters, "You invite me to your home, I show up." Hundreds of house parties later, he was custodian of a prostrate city that had shed 260,000 residents in 13 years. Its 143 square miles could hold San Francisco, Boston and Manhattan with room to spare. By 2000, cattle could have been grazed in vast post-urban swaths. In 1950, the city had been home to 1.8 million; by 2013, it held two-thirds fewer. In the stampede away, many people abandoned their houses to the Midwestern elements. Most mayors brag about building; Duggan does, too, but also about demolishing -- 12,000 abandoned structures since 2014. His "board-up brigades" -- this is distinctively Detroit -- will seal off 11,000 and demolish 9,000 within two years. Says Duggan: "Tear down the burned-out houses, people will buy the others."

Police and EMS response times have been drastically reduced; 275 parks are fully maintained, up from 25 four years ago, when the grass was sometimes taller than the 8-year-olds. Such granular attention to the small stuff is having a huge payoff: Residential utility hookups are increasing. For the first time in his 59 years, the city is expected to grow. "We can't build office space fast enough" for firms moving here because "millennials don't want to move to the suburbs and drive a minivan." However, a successful city requires a large middle class, which cannot exist without good schools to anchor young families. Detroit's future hinges on this.

And on candor about Detroit's past. In this 50th anniversary of the 1967 riots (43 killed, 342 injured), Duggan in a recent speech recalled the 1943 riot (34 killed, 700 injured) ignited by housing grievances among the 200,000 Southern blacks in congested wartime Detroit, the "arsenal of democracy."

[TX] McCullough Avenue Consortium Organizes to Be Light, Not Blight (Rivard Report, TX)
Rivard Report
(10/9/2017 2:20 AM, Shari Biediger)
Hundreds of people every month turn to Christian Assistance Ministry (CAM) for help paying their utility bills and keeping the lights on another day. It's just one of the many services CAM provides its 50,000 clients a year. Since April, the 40-year-old nonprofit has been working to bring a different kind of light to its corner of downtown by forming the McCullough Avenue Consortium.

Made up of CAM and McCullough Avenue neighboring organizations – among them CPS Energy, DPT Laboratories, several area churches and a hospital, KLRN, the Tobin Center for the Performing Arts, and GrayStreet Partners – the consortium also includes representation from District 1 City Councilman Roberto Treviño's office. Most of the group's stakeholders reside in District 1.

The consortium has been meeting monthly since the spring and has collaborated on a shared vision to improve the neighborhood, starting with a set of guiding principles. But it began with CAM, located on McCullough Avenue just west of Interstate 37, and the nonprofit's Executive Director Dawn White-Fosdick.

CAM got its start in 1977 as a joint venture among nine downtown churches that shared the goal of wanting to help the homeless, working poor, and others in crisis. The "emergency room of social services," as the organization is often referred to, operates out of a century-old home and buildings donated by Grace Lutheran Church. Today, it receives support from about 100 churches, as well as local businesses, individual donors, foundations, and 200 regular volunteers. CAM receives no government funding.

[TX] 4 Harvey-hit neighborhoods that need the most help rebuilding (National Mortgage News)
National Mortgage News
(10/6/2017 4:11 PM, Elina Tarkazikis)
Of the 39 counties included in the Hurricane Harvey presidential-declared disaster areas, property damage varied across the different neighborhoods, with some experiencing much heavier destruction. Significant property damage, where the majority of buildings were destroyed or showed signs of major damage, was concentrated to 2% of neighborhoods, or 26 tracts, according to research conducted by SP Group. Bryants Marsh, Plum Grove, Sheldon-Channelview and Wharton-Hungerford were among the Texas neighborhoods hit hardest by Harvey, and represent the areas in most need of federal, state and local assistance for property repair and rehabilitation costs, such as the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Grant Assistance Disaster Recovery. Harvey flooded low-, middle- and high-income areas, so communities with better resources, such as Houston, will likely recover more quickly overall. The same can't be said for lower-income families.

"The storm will have a long-lasting impact on low-income families, particularly new homeowners who were just beginning to build home equity or those who were not protected with flood insurance and won't have the financial means to rebuild or repair. Homeowners face rebuilding costs and, in many instances, the cost of temporary relocation," according to the Urban Institute. Flood insurance may also strengthen the burden on lower-income households, as properties not previously listed in the floodplain are deemed high-risk, adding more to monthly bills and paving the way for possible mortgage delinquencies. Since Harvey didn't just affect low-income areas, its neighborhoods in most need of assistance are not confined to a specific region.

[TX] In Harvey recovery, some fear Houston will get it all (Galveston County Daily News, TX)
Galveston County Daily News
(10/8/2017 6:12 AM, John Wayne Ferguson)
Julie Masters is worried about being forgotten.

Although the city of which she has been mayor for 13 years has been frequently cited as one of the most widely devastated by Hurricane Harvey, she fears Dickinson might be forgotten when federal recovery money is doled out over the coming months and years.

She said as much to the Texas House of Representatives Urban Affairs committee Monday, telling legislators that small communities near Houston fear getting a "Crumb at best" of the billions of dollars in disaster recovery money that's set to be allocated to the area. "I'm worried the big dog at the table would get the attention and the majority of the funding," Masters said, referring to Houston and Harris County.

Houston officials are, of course, worried about funding issues of their own. Just last week, Texas Gov. Greg Abbott delivered a $50 million check to the city, after Mayor Sylvester Turner admonished the governor for not tapping the state's Rainy Day Fund to send more money to Houston. No other city has so publicly received funding from the state. Houston and Harris County leaders were also front and center during three committee hearings held by the Texas House of Representatives in Houston this week.

Masters was the only Galveston County official to testify at the hearings. She was a last-minute addition to the Urban Affairs Committee agenda. Masters told the committee she feared recovery money being funneled through the Houston-Galveston Area Council would lead to her city getting the short end of the recovery dollars sent to this part of Texas. The Houston-Galveston Area Council is the "Council of government" that presides over 13 counties and 107 cities in the Greater Houston area, including Galveston County.

State officials are still waiting for federal guidance on how exactly federal disaster recovery money will be allocated.

It's expected that the Texas General Land Office, which has already been designated the manager of disaster relief funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, will work with councils of government in flood-damaged areas to allocate relief money.

[TX] Texas requests another $18 billion for Harvey relief (Galveston County Daily News, TX)
Galveston County Daily News
(10/7/2017 6:13 AM, John Wayne Ferguson)
Texas is asking for another $18 billion in Hurricane Harvey relief from Congress before an expected vote next week on a second round of federal aid.

In a letter to leaders of appropriations committees of both the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate, Texas' congressional delegation said the money would go toward U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects, disaster recovery block grants and education agencies, among other things.

"In light of the unprecedented damage from Hurricane Harvey and the historically epochal flooding of Houston, Beaumont and the surrounding regions, we all recognize that the funding already appropriated is a small fraction of the federal resources needed to help rebuild Texas and reinvigorate the American economy," the letter states.

Congress already made one $15 billion appropriation to Texas in September, in what leaders called a "Down payment" that was meant to address immediate needs in the aftermath of the storm. The new request begins to look at longer term needs.

The largest request is for $10 billion to be directed to the Army corps, to be used to rehabilitate and repair damage to completed corps projects already begun, and to begin construction projects that have been authorized but not started. Among corps projects that are authorized but not started is a $278 million flood control plan for Clear Creek, which runs through Friendswood and League City.

The letter also requests $7 billion for Community Development Block Grant Disaster Recovery funds, which can be used for rebuilding and repair projects.

The letter also asks for $800 million for school districts damaged by Harvey; $450 million more for Small Business Administration loans; $300 million for economic development grants; and $150 million in Department of Transportation funds to repair highways and transit systems.

Congress is expected to vote on another relief package as soon as next week. Unlike the first round, the next appropriation is expected to include relief money for Florida and Puerto Rico. Texas had officially received $280 million in advance payments from the Federal Emergency Management Agency as of Sept. 29. Another $1.85 billion in individual assistance had been given through FEMA grants, National Flood Insurance Program claims and Small Business Administration disaster loans, officials said.

[TX] What Do Houston's Pro-Growth Boosters Think Now? (The Atlantic CityLab)
The Atlantic CityLab
(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Laura Bliss)
Despite the historic flooding, Hurricane Harvey hasn't changed their tune on zoning.

Hurricane Harvey inflicted an estimated $100 billion in damage on the Houston area in August and September, a catastrophe that some urban-planning pundits interpreted as a kind of cosmic comeuppance for the city's decades of untrammeled sprawl. Since 2010, 7,000 units were built in Harris County's 100-year floodplain. Like a diner at some bottomless barbecue, Houston likes to loosen its belt as it goes: There's no growth boundary around the metro area, and Houston proper is the largest city in the U.S. without zoning codes. In the suburbs, developer-created utility districts proliferate.

In other words, many critics pointed out, Houston was asking for it by refusing to plan—and if the city doesn't start growing up, rather than out, it'll doom itself for good.

But the Center for Opportunity Urbanism says that's unfair. The Houston-based policy think tank, run principally by urban contrarian/suburban champion Joel Kotkin, has long promoted Houston-style growth as a model for the rest of the country.

Because it's easy for developers to build, its leaders say, housing stock is far more affordable than most other cities, and quality of life remains high. The devastation wrought by Hurricane Harvey hasn't changed that basic narrative (though rents and home prices are likely to rise in high-and-dry neighborhoods). To rebuild Houston, don't rethink Houston, they say—double down on what they see as its success.

In a new white paper, authors Wendell Cox and Tory Gattis, both founding senior fellows at COU, say that the "region's systems worked remarkably well" in the face of Harvey. Despite the widespread street flooding, for example, less than five percent of homes were damaged. "In context, Houston has shown remarkable resilience in the face of widespread devastation from an unprecedented flooding event," the paper states.

The authors are particularly intent on making sure that post-Harvey recovery doesn't involve changing the area's pro-growth mindset. "In our attempts to find practicable solutions to Houston's problem, it is critical not to throw out our successful development model with the stormwater," they write. "Fundamentally, there was virtually no connection between the storm and its damage and the area's successful land use regulation."

[IA] Wetland improves flood control, water quality (Iowa Farmer Today, IA)
Iowa Farmer Today
(10/8/2017 6:12 AM, Jean Caspers-Simmet)
COWELL, Iowa — The wetland and CRP grasses and flowers on farmland owned by Doug Bohlen's father, Randy, are reducing flooding, removing nitrates from tile water and creating wildlife habitat.

"I'm proud of this area," said Doug Bohlen, who is in charge of planning for his 89-year-old father's farm, which sits at the headwaters of Beaver Creek. "It's finally starting to develop the way I wanted. There is all kinds of wildlife. Hopefully what we've done here will take off and go into other watersheds."

The wetland is part the Beaver Creek Watershed Project, which includes five other wetland structures north and east of Colwell on the Floyd/Chickasaw County line. These wetlands coupled with two existing Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program wetlands and a farm pond in the upper Beaver Creek Watershed are making a difference in holding water and soil on the land and improving water quality, said Dennis Sande, district NRCS conservationist in Floyd and Chickasaw counties.

The $1.5 million Beaver Creek project, part of the Upper Cedar Watershed Management Improvement Authority, was an Iowa Watersheds Project along with Otter Creek in the Turkey River Watershed in northeast Iowa and South Chequest Creek in the Soap/Chequest Watershed in southeast Iowa, said Sande.

In 2010, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded the Iowa Flood Center $8.8 million for the Iowa Watersheds Project. The goals were to maximize soil water holding capacity, minimize severe erosion, manage water runoff and reduce and mitigate flood damages, Sande said.

As the Iowa Watersheds Project ended in the fall of 2016, Iowa was awarded $96.9 million for a new watershed project, the Iowa Watershed Approach. The IWA is working in nine new watersheds across the state and is built off the framework developed by the IWP.

Larry Weber, cofounder of the Iowa Flood Center and executive associate dean of the University of Iowa Engineering College, likens the watershed effort to Johnny Appleseed, strengthening flood protection infrastructure one watershed at a time.

"We're taking what works in these first watersheds and applying it to others," he said.

[CO] Wheat Ridge will not challenge judge s crackdown on urban renewal limits (Denver Post, CO)
Denver Post
(10/10/2017 1:19 AM, John Aguilar)
Court: City overstepped its authority in requiring voter approval of financing of large projects

The Wheat Ridge City Council late Monday decided not to challenge a recent court ruling that invalidated restrictions the city had placed on the use of urban renewal tactics, intensifying a debate over an issue that has proven divisive in Colorado's economic development circles.

The council voted 5-3 to not appeal last month's Jefferson County District Court ruling, with the majority saying an appeal could take a year to work its way through the court and would slow development in the city.

"It's a risk and a cost that would impact our city and our citizens," said Councilwoman Kristi Davis.

But Councilwoman Monica Duran countered that Wheat Ridge's urban renewal restrictions had been put in place by a November 2015 vote of the people.

"I will be voting to appeal because supporting the will of our citizens is our responsibility and our duty," she said.

[PR] Puerto Rico Gov. Seeks $4.6B in Recovery 'Down Payment' (NBC New York, NY)
NBC New York
(10/8/2017 4:23 PM, Asher Klein)
It's in addition to the $29 billion in disaster aid for U.S. hurricane relief the Trump administration requested last week

The governor of Puerto Rico is requesting more federal funding for the hobbled island as it struggles to return to normalcy nearly three weeks after Hurricane Maria hit.

About 40 percent of Puerto Rico is still without water, and more than four in five residents don't have power. Gov. Ricardo Rossello said in a letter to Congress Monday that, "in addition to the immediate humanitarian crisis, Puerto Rico is on the brink of a massive liquidity crisis," meaning that the government may soon be dealing with a shortfall of cash.

Rossello said the island is grateful for the help it's gotten so far — the Trump administration last week asked for $29 billion in disaster aid for U.S. hurricane relief — but needs about $4.6 billion more money in an emergency "down payment on hurricane recovery efforts."

Puerto Rico was devastated by Hurricanes Irma and Maria. The latter killed 38 people and knocked out the island's already-crippled power system. The clean-up is continuing, albeit slowly, especially outside of San Juan, but it will likely be months before the island gets back to normal.

Adding to the situation's complexity is the island's long-standing debt. One damage estimate cited by Rossello, from credit rating firm Moody's, puts the cost of Hurricane Maria at $95 billion, which is one-and-a-half times the island's gross national product.

The rebuilding effort will make it harder to pay back the more than $70 billion Puerto Rico owes its creditors.

The island is most in need of more housing and development funds called community development block grants, according to Rossello's request for $3.2 billion of it.

[PR] Puerto Rico governor asks Congress for more federal aid after hurricane (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/8/2017 2:40 PM, Cristina Marcos)
Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rosselló is asking Congress to consider providing about $1.4 billion in funding beyond the Trump administration's request last week to help the U.S. territory recover from Hurricane Maria.

In a letter made public on Monday to House and Senate leaders, Rosselló requested funding for federal grant and loan programs "to meet the immediate emergency needs of Puerto Rico."

Rosselló's request includes $3.2 million for Community Development Block Grants, $500 million for the Community Disaster Loan Program, $500 million for the Social Services Block Grant, $149 million for the Emergency Relief Program, $90 million for the Disaster Loan Program, $83 million for the Commodity Assistance Program and $78 million for the State Educational Agencies and Hurricane Education Recovery.

"Puerto Rico has experienced a natural disaster of a magnitude not seen in over a century, and we are doing everything possible to address the needs of the American citizens of Puerto Rico during this time of crisis," Rosselló wrote.

[PR] FEMA Still Planning Additional Influx of Federal Personnel in Puerto Rico (Government Executive)
Government Executive
(10/6/2017 8:22 AM, Eric Katz)
The Trump administration on Thursday promised a large increase in the number of federal personnel on the ground in Puerto Rico, noting it still has a significant amount of short and long-term work ahead of it to help the hurricane-ravaged island. Federal agencies have already deployed 14,000 personnel to the island and the U.S. Virgin Islands to deal with the aftermath of Hurricane Maria, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, but it plans to expand those numbers going forward. Congress last month approved $15 billion in emergency funding after Harvey, which was split between FEMA's disaster fund and Housing and Urban Development Community Block Development Grants. The disaster fund saw an additional $6.7 billion deposit on Oct.1 due to a scheduled increase for the new fiscal year. Federal responders in Puerto Rico are currently focusing on providing food and commodities, reopening hospitals and providing generator support. Boosting communications is also a priority, Hernandez said, but presents a much longer-term problem because antennas in the island's mountain ranges were destroyed.

[PR] Puerto Rico Governor Requests $4.6 Billion More In Aid (Newsweek)

(10/9/2017 5:31 PM, Jessica Kwong)
PPuerto Rico Governor Ricardo Rossello has requested that Congress allocate $4.6 billion "to meet the immediate emergency needs" of the hurricane-ravaged island and to help soften the blow to its economy.

In letters to congressional leaders and President Donald Trump dated Saturday and shared on Twitter Monday, Rossello asked that Congress "strongly consider" offering funding beyond the Federal Emergency Management Agency Disaster Relief Fund.

Other requests include $3.2 billion in community development block grants from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, $500 million in community disaster loan program funding from the Department of Homeland Security and $500 million in social services block grants from the Department of Health and Human Services.

Rossello also requested smaller amounts of money from the Department of Transportation, the Small Business Administration, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Education.

America's Child-Poverty Rate Has Hit a Record Low (The Atlantic)
The Atlantic
(10/6/2017 5:15 AM, Annie Lowrey)
It fell thanks to government policies, not the expansion of the economy, researchers found.

The economy is nearing full employment. The stock market is at record highs. The expansion keeps continuing. Add to that one more very good piece of economic news: The child-poverty rate fell to a record low in 2016.

That finding comes from a new analysis of government and academic data by Isaac Shapiro and Danilo Trisi, both researchers at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a nonpartisan, Washington-based think tank. The child-poverty rate declined to 15.6 percent in 2016, the researchers found, down from a post-recession high of 18.1 percent in 2012 and from 28.4 percent in 1967. That means that roughly 11.5 million kids were living in households below the poverty threshold last year. "The figures were actually a little surprising to us, and might be surprising to those who are following the poverty debate," said Shapiro. "The argument, at least on the conservative side, is that we have poured a lot of money into safety-net programs and poverty hasn't gone down. But it has."

The most recent drop in the child-poverty rate is due to a tighter labor market, the researchers found. More parents are back at work, with competition among employers starting to drive wages up even for very low-income workers. That has helped to push the overall poverty rate down to 12.7 percent. That said, the near-halving of the child-poverty rate over the past half-century is not primarily due to improvements in the economy. In fact, stagnating wages, reduced bargaining power, automation, and offshoring have held down the earnings of families in the bottom of the income spectrum, and spiraling income inequality has meant that most of the gains of economic growth have gone to families at the top. Instead, it is the expansion of the safety net—in particular through the food-stamp program and provisions like the Earned Income Tax Credit and the Child Tax Credit—that has been most responsible for moving millions of kids above the poverty line over time, the researchers found.

The economy needs Trump's tax cut, but don't expect too much (MarketWatch)
MarketWatch
(10/9/2017 6:16 AM, Peter Morici)
Tax plan could boost GDP by 0.2 or 0.3 percentage points — not bad!

President Donald Trump has proposed a major tax cut and some simplification to the tax code — those are sorely needed but we shouldn't expect too much.

The U.S. economy is experiencing what many observers in the 1980s called Eurosclerosis— sluggish growth and high unemployment instigated by high taxes that curb investment and an expansive welfare state that dampens incentives to train and relocate to find work.

The United States is not Europe in the 1980s or 1990s. We have a fair amount of investment in path-breaking technologies — consider the influence of Alphabet , Facebook, Twitter and Microsoft, the pharmaceutical and biotechnology sectors, and American innovations in petroleum extraction that have halved the global price of oil.

However, the low headline unemployment rate is deceiving. Labor-force participation by prime working age males is depressed in part because of pervasive access to Social Security disability, food stamps, Section 8 housing and Medicaid, and in two-income married households, the earned income tax credit.

The Finance 202: The GOP's tax plan just cleared a major hurdle. Here are three major ones that remain. (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/6/2017 8:09 AM, Tory Newmyer)
The Republican drive to overhaul the tax code took a major leap forward Thursday. It still has a long, long way to go.

But House passage of a budget resolution — matched by the Senate Budget Committee's approval of its own version — clears an early hurdle for the top GOP priority. A final budget agreement, once it's worked out between the chambers, will unlock special budget instructions enabling Republicans to approve a tax package without Democratic support. And Republicans badly need the win or it could lead to a "wipeout in next year's midterm elections," as The New York Times's Jonathan Martin and Alex Burns reported yesterday.

Just weeks ago, the fate of a House budget measure remained in doubt. The colicky hard-liners in the House Freedom Caucus threatened to withhold their support over demands for deeper spending cuts and more guarantees about the tax plan itself. They mostly fell in line Thursday, as the chamber voted 219 to 206 to approve the spending blueprint.

It would help if Republicans could bottle that unity, because the hardest work lies ahead.

The Finance 202: Trump is his own tax plan's worst enemy (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/9/2017 8:46 AM, Tory Newmyer)
If you didn't know better, it would be tempting to conclude President Trump hates his own agenda. His attack Sunday on Sen. Bob Corker (R-Tenn.) is just the latest case in point.

With a tax code overhaul balanced on a knife's edge, thanks to an even-weaker-than-it-looks 52-seat Senate majority, the president can ill afford to antagonize anyone in the party he could soon need to buttonhole on taxes.

But Corker calls for especially careful treatment. The Tennessee Republican had signaled he'd be a hard case for any tax package that relies too much on deficit spending. Then, two weeks ago, the senator announced he will retire at the end of next year. The typically restrained Chattanoogan — who made his own fortune in real estate before entering politics, although the similarities with Trump end about there — has acted uncharacteristically unbound since.

The clearest sign yet that Corker isn't playing by his old rules came Sunday morning, after Trump dialed up the tension with this string of provocative and credulity-straining tweets about him.

Bank earnings: 'lower for longer' means buybacks will continue (MarketWatch)
MarketWatch
(10/6/2017 12:04 PM, Andrea Riquier)
Is it just plain harder for banks to make money now — or is there nowhere to go but up?

When big banks kick off the third-quarter earnings season next week, a familiar theme is likely to dominate: it's hard to make money in a lower-for-longer world.

Analysts expect banks to report tepid growth in nearly all their business lines, from mortgage originations to investment banking to lending, and most of the good news story is likely to come from a practice that's often considered a sign that companies are out of ideas: issuing debt to buy back stock.

J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. kicks off earnings season Thursday, followed that day by Citigroup Inc. On Friday, Bank of America Corp. reports, followed by Wells Fargo & Co.

"Results are likely to be tepid due to very weak loan growth, modest increase in net interest margins, and weak capital markets related trends," somewhat offset by lower expenses and better-performing loans, wrote J.P. Morgan analyst Vivek Juneja in a note Friday.

Treasury Answers Trump's Call on Looser Regs, Floats Ideas for MBS and ABS Markets (Inside Mortgage Finance)
Inside Mortgage Finance
(10/6/2017 12:32 PM, Brandon Ivey)
The Treasury Department on Friday released a new report calling for looser regulations on MBS and ABS markets. The recommendations were part of a response to an executive order issued by President Trump calling for government agencies to align financial regulations with "core principles" established by his administration.

The report on capital markets includes recommendations liberalizing securitization rules, including requirements that govern capital, liquidity, risk-retention and disclosures.

The Treasury said federal regulators should "rationalize" various capital and liquidity requirements that apply to MBS and ABS. "Capital requirements should be set such that they neither encourage nor discourage funding through securitization, thereby allowing the economics of securitization relative to other funding sources to drive decision making," the Treasury said.

The capital and liquidity requirements targeted by Treasury were largely established by the Basel III accords and the Dodd-Frank Act. Treasury was also critical of risk-retention requirements established by the DFA.

Bipartisan push begins in Congress to change part of CFPBs TRID rule (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(10/6/2017 6:44 PM, Ben Lane)
In an increasingly rare moment of bipartisanship, two Congressmen from opposite sides of the political aisle are partnering to push for a change to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's Know Before You Owe mortgage disclosure rule, also called the TILA-RESPA Integrated Disclosures rule, or TRID. On the Republican side, the effort is being led by Rep. French Hill, R-Arkansas, who has been very vocal about his issues with the CFPB and the TRID rule in the past.

A few years ago, Hill authored a bill in the House of Representatives that called for an official grace period on TRID enforcement.

More recently, Hill wrote a commentary for his local publication, the Arkansas Democrat Gazette, on the need for the CFPB to be reined in. In the article, Hill wrote that the CFPB's actions "Are actually harming consumers."

Now, Hill is working with Rep. Ruben Kihuen, D-Nevada, to change part of the CFPB's TRID rule because the bureau is "Unwilling to fix this problem on its own." The bill was first discussed in a meeting of the Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit Subcommittee of the House Financial Services Committee last month.

At the time, the Republican arm of the House Financial Services Committee said that the bill, the TRID Improvement Act of 2017, would amend the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act and the Truth in Lending Act to expand the time period granted to a creditor to cure a good-faith violation on a loan estimate or closing disclosure from 60 to 210 days.

Now, the bill is being officially introduced, although Hill's office makes no mention of extending the time period to cure a good-faith violation.

The issue at hand in the TRID Improvement Act of 2017 is related to title insurance and how its fees are presented on both the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure.

Hurricane history favours U.S. building suppliers (Reuters)
Reuters
(10/9/2017 6:40 AM, Arunima Banerjee and Ankit Ajmera)
(Reuters) - There are 600,000 homes in Texas and Florida alone that need re-roofed or repaired and results over the next month will give some sign of how much the resulting squeeze on building materials will benefit suppliers over the next year.

Shares in firms like USG Corp, Owens Corning, Eagle Materials Inc, Beacon Roofing Supply Inc and GMS Inc have jumped about 10-20 percent since Hurricane Harvey and Irma struck the region a month ago.

But data and industry estimates suggest there may be more to come as sector firms unveil their results for the third quarter and give clearer guidance on the impact on the prices they pay and charge for materials now in high demand.

As the attached graphic shows, the impact of past storms has taken months to work through in the value of suppliers and will typically boost the shares by far more.

Ever-mobile Millennial housing demand unchecked by rising mortgage rates (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(10/6/2017 4:41 PM, Kelsey Ramírez)
The housing demand among the ever-mobile Millennial generation went unchecked in August despite rising mortgage rates, according to the Ellie Mae Millennial Tracker.

Despite Millennials' average 30-year note increasing to 4.211%, up from 3.706% last year, their loan amounts also increased in August to $185,919. Further, the generation is showing a growing willingness to shun the big cities and settle down in once-sleepy towns.

"Average loan amounts in August of this year were slightly higher than last year, despite higher interest rates," said Joe Tyrrell, Ellie Mae executive vice president of corporate strategy. "As tends to happen with tight inventories, this is a seller's market, and many of today's homebuyers may be faced with paying a premium for the same home they might have bought for less last year." "For those who are committed to buying a home slight increases in competition, costs or interest rates will likely not deter them," Tyrrell said.

Conventional loans held steady at 64%, and the share of FHA mortgages stayed at 32%, the same market shares they have held since June. So what exactly did the average Millennial homebuyer look like in August? Ellie Mae shows us they were just over 29 years old, and took out a conventional loan of $185,919 on a home with an appraised value of $223,882. Their FICO score was 724, and, as seen above, their 30-year mortgage note rate was 4.2%. These borrowers, of whom 52% were married, typically closed out their home-buying process in 44 days.

[NY] Ramapo evicting longtime Torne Valley families (Journal News, NY)
NY Journal News

(10/6/2017 7:37 AM, Steve Lieberman)
VIDEO. RAMAPO - Tucked away off Torne Brook Road on the town's western frontier, the narrow road is home to a community of residents who have lived in small 1850s-era houses for decades — some for nearly their entire lives.

The 15 families are facing eviction by the Town of Ramapo.

Town officials contend the houses are not worth the cost of repairs and maintenance, based on the rents paid. Under financial duress from mismanagement, partially from the construction of a baseball stadium, officials want the tenants out and plan to sell off the land for potential warehousing or another commercial business in the Torne Valley.

For the families, the idea of moving is heartbreaking and potentially beyond their means. The tight-knit, secluded community along Lake Street — known as the Hamlets of Ramapo — has been their lives.

RAMAPO, N.Y. (CBSNewYork) — Fifteen families in Rockland County, New York are being evicted from their historic longtime homes.

Their landlord isn't some heartless real estate company, it's the town of Ramapo — their own local government.

"My girls come here with their children," evicted tenant Sharon Cuomo told CBS2's Brian Conybeare. "They spend the night every Christmas Eve and it's gonna change."

Cuomo and her husband, Bill, have lived in a tiny cottage on Lake Street for 35 years. Now, they're being evicted by the town, which owns the property.

[NJ] Are NJ rent and house prices so high because we have too many school districts? (NJ101.5, NJ)
NJ101.5
(10/9/2017 1:17 AM, Michael Symons)
When people gripe about New Jersey having so many school districts, with more educational systems than municipalities, it's generally to complain about paying for too many administrators.

But one land-use expert says it's also contributes to why there's an undersupply of homes.

Tim Evans, the research director for New Jersey Future, said that fragmentation encourages the 'ratable chase' in which cities and towns crave commercial properties but try to avoid residential development, in many cases regardless of whether it contains an 'affordable housing' component.

"What happens is every place wants a mall and an office park, and nobody wants housing because they don't want the school kids that they're going to have to raise taxes to pay for," Evans said.

Without new homes added to the supply, the cost for existing homes is driven up. Statewide, the average sales price for a home this year is $394,426, as of last week, according to the state Treasury Department. The average is over $500,000 in 123 municipalities, nearly 22 percent of the state's towns.

[DC] Housing market in Washington region dominated by low inventory, high prices (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(10/6/2017 4:24 PM, Michele Lerner)
Low inventory and high home prices continue to plague the Washington region this fall.

While conditions in Montgomery and Prince George's counties are different, both have seen a tightening of the market with most homes selling within one to 10 days, says Jonathan Hill, vice president of marketing and communications for multiple-listing service Bright MLS in Rockville.

"The housing market in Montgomery County was slower than Prince George's County, with sales more sluggish there in 2016 and earlier this year," said Nela Richardson, chief economist of Redfin brokerage in Washington.

"But now the two counties are balancing out a little in activity. Bethesda, Rockville and Silver Spring are all getting more active with buyers in Montgomery County, while in Prince George's County there's a lot of construction that sellers have to compete with. Builders are offering more concessions, which means the number of buyers in Prince George's may be easing up a bit."

Sales have been flat in Montgomery for the first eight months of 2017, said Hill, virtually the same as in 2016.

"The median sales price in Montgomery County rose by 3.7 percent to $425,000 year-to-date at the end of August," Hill said. The most listings for single-family houses in the county in August were in the $600,000 to $800,000 range, while the most townhouse listings were in the $300,000 to $400,000 range. The majority of condo listings in Montgomery were priced between $200,000 and $300,000.

In Prince George's, the median sales price rose by 10 percent to $275,000, far below the median sales price in surrounding counties and the District. "Prince George's is by far the most affordable county for homes, especially for areas in close proximity to the city," Hill said. "The county also has the most new construction in the region and the most affordable newly built houses."

[SC] Report: Local economies among nation's fastest growing (Charleston Post & Courier, SC)
Charleston Post & Courier
(10/9/2017 3:03 AM, David Wren)
Charleston, North Charleston and Mount Pleasant have some of the fastest-growing economies in the United States, according to a new WalletHub report that compares 515 cities nationwide across 15 metrics including population, employment, housing data and poverty levels.

Charleston's economy ranked No. 20 among mid-size cities with populations of between 100,000 and 300,000 people, according to the study. North Charleston was at No. 28 in the mid-sized city category. Mount Pleasant has the 15th-fastest growing economy for a small city, which includes those with populations of less than 100,000 people.

WalletHub used statistics from 2010 to 2016 to generate its report. WalletHub said using multiple years of data helps the group identify locations with "a lasting cycle of growth."

While economic growth is good, local communities are facing some of the biggest ancillary issues that high-growth areas across the nation are grappling with.

Care Pregnancy Center saving lives, fighting for healthy culture

Augusta's CPC has helped more than 1,000 girls and women through life-changing, often life-threatening problems with unplanned pregnancy, sexual and physical abuse, drug and alcohol issues, financial desperation and more in the past year.

This is some of society's heaviest lifting. Augusta's CPC does it on a shoestring.

That's why so many come together each year to help the nonprofit – most notably in an annual banquet that CPC Director Susan Swanson has turned into the event of the season. In recent years her speakers have included syndicated columnists Star Parker and Cal Thomas; former Alabama Supreme Court justice and Senate nominee Roy Moore; current Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Dr. Ben Carson; and, this Tuesday night, Michael Reagan, adopted son of Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman. Close to 700 attendees are expected.

A radio host, commentator and author, Reagan talks of being "twice adopted" – the second time by God – after an early childhood that found him unwanted and abused.

[FL] IN DEPTH: In upscale Wellington, being poor is expensive price to pay (Palm Beach Post, FL)
Palm Beach Post
(10/6/2017 8:17 AM, Matt Morgan)
WELLINGTON — Tucked amid Wellington's well-groomed equestrian venues, mansions so luxe they sport private airstrips in the back yard and tidy middle class neighborhoods, there is another nearly invisible contingent in this community — those who live paycheck to paycheck.

Despite the village's swanky reputation , the families of nearly one third of Wellington's elementary-age children can't afford school lunch, and the Neil S. Hirsch Family Boys and Girls Club hosts more kids after school than any other chapter in the county — and most of those children are poor.

As the economy continues a decade-long rebound from a recession, these families that are barely scraping together their monthly rent to put their kids in top-rated schools and safer neighborhoods could soon be forced out of the village entirely.

If housing prices continue to rise and no one carves out room for these working-class families, parents say the children will be the ones who lose. Some parents say that they are on the brink of being priced out their dreams and fear having to move to cheaper homes, surrounded by poverty and the problems it can bring.

[FL] Florida's risky real-estate game is protected by a billion-dollar insurance industry — but that could soon change (The Real Deal, NY)
The Real Deal
(10/9/2017 6:21 AM, Business Insider)
The limits of the insurance-linked securities market are untested

After dodging the worst of Hurricane Irma, Florida's coastal real estate boom shows no signs of slowing.

In Miami and nearby waterfront cities, a survey of local records show that more than 90 luxury high-rise apartment blocks are under construction or have been completed since 2015, increasingly financed by overseas investors looking for "safe" opportunities in a turbulent global economy.

Yet, since 1886, the Sunshine State has been hit with almost twice as many hurricanes as the next two states, Texas and Louisiana. Currently, 2.4 million people and 1.3 million homes sit just 1.2 meters above the high tide line and sea levels are expected to rise up to two meters by the end of the century.

What enables Florida's staggering growth against environmental odds? The answer, in part, comes down to how property insurance protects the state's real estate against disasters. In 2015, Floridians spent $10.8 billion on homeowners' insurance to protect more than 6 million properties. The total insured value protected by the state's homeowners' market is a soaring $2.1 trillion, roughly equal to the annual economic output of India. But can it really sustain Florida's real estate boom in the long run?

I know that most of you are feeling the same way I am, now that Hurricane Irma has passed… a great deal of relief and gratitude! We are blessed that Irma did not hit us directly, that our area is up and running so successfully, and that most people were able to restore their properties quickly. But as we count our blessings, we should also remember that the 2017 hurricane season does not technically end until Nov. 30, and we should remain on guard for future storms.

I have been selling homes in Miami for more than 40 years, and I am proud of the active role that my colleagues in real estate take in preparing the people we know for hurricane season in general, and for individual storms as they approach and depart. While the safety of our family and friends always comes first in these moments, the security of our homes usually comes next on our list of concerns.

At the beginning of every hurricane season, my team and I send our customers hurricane check lists, reminding them to have water, medications, non-perishable foods, insect repellents, suntan lotion and other essentials; along with suggestions to trim trees, remove coconuts and other flying items.

Tornadoes are the worst. Neighborhoods reduced to a lone chimney or toilet. People searching for any shred of proof — a photograph, a vase — that their homes existed.

Hail storms leave houses pocked “as if they’ve been attacked with a shotgun,” explained Jordan Wilson, who has examined the aftermath of many. In his Indiana accent, Eric Kline pronounces “hail” as “hell,” and that’s exactly where he’s been, and back.

Then there are hurricanes.

While Sandy “really got me emotional,” the damage wrought by Irma in the Keys “is probably the toughest I’ve seen,” Kline said. “Thirty-foot trees sucked out of the ground like popsicle sticks. Walls disappeared. Folks living in tents and pushing grocery carts.”

[MS] Nate downgraded to tropical storm, 100k without power in Mississippi and Alabama (ABC News)
ABC News
(10/8/2017 6:47 AM, David Caplan)
Gulf Coast residents are waking up to a wet, windy - and in some cases, powerless - Sunday morning, but it’s still not as devastating as they expected: Hurricane Nate was downgraded to a tropical storm around 4:30 a.m. ET. The storm, moving north-northeast at 23 mph with maximum winds of 70 mph, is moving farther inland over Mississippi and Alabama.

"Even though Nate has made landfall and will weaken today, we are still forecast heavy rain from Nate to spread well inland towards the Tennessee Valley and Appalachian mountains," ABC News meteorologist Daniel Manzo said Sunday morning.

Around 2:30 a.m. ET, a tornado watch covering most of southern Alabama and part of the Florida Panhandle was issued. It is in effect until 11 a.m. Nate had made its second landfall as a Category 1 storm around 1:30 a.m. ET Sunday along the Gulf Coast near Biloxi, Mississippi with maximum winds of 85 mph, slamming some Mississippi and Alabama communities with a storm surge of between four to five feet.

Nate made its first landfall Saturday night as a Category 1 storm near the mouth of the Mississippi River on the southeastern Louisiana coast. Officials in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida were well-prepared for Nate’s arrival with its governors declaring states of emergency and mandatory or voluntary evacuation orders. Even though Nate’s wrath was not as terrible as expected, more than 100,000 customers across Alabama and Mississippi were without power as of 6 a.m. ET. In Alabama, 56,250 customers were without power, while 46,487 customers in Mississippi were without power.

[TX] When buying your kid a house is cheaper than paying for a dorm (CNBC)

Brian and Laurie Chubb have three sons, all of whom always wanted to attend Texas A&M University. So in 2015, when the Chubbs’ oldest son, Garrett, was a junior and their middle child, Ben, was a freshman at the school, they decided it was time to cut their housing costs.

"We realized it would be smarter to invest in a property instead of paying rent for all those years," said Brian Chubb, who works in pharmaceutical sales and lives in Spring Branch, Texas, with Laurie and their youngest son, Brady.

The Chubbs purchased a four-bedroom house in College Station, Texas, in December 2015, and their two older sons moved in the following school year, along with renters. Brady, 18, has been accepted to Texas A&M for next year, and will move into the house after completing a freshman-year stint in a dorm room.

Affordability favors buyers in the Texas A&M area, according to a study by Pro Teck Valuation Services, a real estate valuation firm. The study estimated that a mortgage on a 1,200-square-foot condo in College Station costs about $6,696 per year, comparing favorably with on-campus housing costs that Pro Teck estimated at $6,221 per year.

The inventory of available houses in Las Vegas kept tumbling last month as prices climbed above last year's levels.

The median sale price of single-family homes in Southern Nevada in September was $265,000, up 1.9 percent from August and 13.5 percent from September 2016, according to a new report from the Greater Las Vegas Association of Realtors.

Buyers picked up 2,914 single-family homes last month, down 11.3 percent from August and down 0.4 percent – essentially flat – from a year ago.

Meanwhile, 4,969 single-family homes were listed for sale without offers at the end of September, down 3.6 percent from August and 33.1 percent year-over-year, according to the GLVAR.

[PR] Puerto Rico debt plan must be equal parts inspiring, realistic (The Hill)
The Hill
(10/8/2017 5:13 PM, Brad Setser)
President Trump quipped — or complained? — that the devastation in Puerto Rico had blown a hole in the United States' budget. The real fiscal hole, though, is likely to be in Puerto Rico's own budget.

To have a fighting chance to recover and avoid a new downward spiral, Puerto Rico will need more than short-term disaster aid and protection from its creditors while it restructures its debt. It will need emergency budget funding to cover a pending cash shortfall, generous long-term help as it rebuilds and equal access to federal Medicaid funding.

In the short run and likely in the medium run, Puerto Rico cannot make any payment on its debt. In the long run, its debts will need to be significantly reduced. Fortunately, thanks to bipartisan legislation — The Puerto Rico Oversight, Management and Economic Stability Act (PROMESA) — passed in 2016, all Puerto Rican public entities now have access to bankruptcy protection.

With the approval of the PROMESA oversight board, Puerto Rico can zero out all near-term debt service while remaining under court protection.

[PR] Opinion: Puerto Rico, a Deal Not Even Trump Can Refuse (NBC News)
NBC News
(10/6/2017 8:56 AM, Gretchen Sierra-Zorita)
Not a week had passed since Hurricane Maria demolished Puerto Rico when President Trump tweeted about the U.S. territory's debt, saying that Texas and Florida were doing great but Puerto Rico was in "deep trouble." He tweeted about Puerto Rico's old electrical grid which was in "terrible shape" and the billions it owes Wall Street. It is clear from Trump's comments during this devastating humanitarian crisis that money is the main thing on his mind. It is also clear that Trump wants to walk away from his Puerto Rico problem in the same way he walked away from his bankrupt casinos. If the United States walks away from Puerto Rico the Island will be depopulated. If Puerto Rico's infrastructure is not restored and its commercial and industrial base not reestablished, if its small business owners are not supported and its health care is not accessible, Puerto Ricans will stampede out of the Island and join the almost half a million who left before them because of the fiscal crisis.

Politically speaking, not investing in Puerto Rico could hurt the GOP. New Puerto Rican arrivals could turn states like Florida blue, as they will never forget that the head of the Republican Party turned his back on them. So it appears that Trump cannot walk away from this particular deal without making matters worse. The smartest to thing for Trump to do is to tackle the Puerto Rico problem before it grows out of control. First, he should ensure that Puerto Rico has the military and civilian personnel and the assets needed to restore transportation, telecommunications and electricity; to ensure relief supplies are delivered; and, to preserve law and order. Second, he should waive funding caps, eliminate local match requirements, and give Puerto Rico greater access to federal assistance programs in FEMA and Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Housing and Urban Development, Labor, Transportation and others. Third, he should extend the Jones Act waiver for Puerto Rico beyond the 10 days approved initially.

[PR] Central Floridians urge Puerto Rico rebuilding (Orlando Sentinel, FL)
Orlando Sentinel
(10/6/2017 2:07 PM, Paul Brinkmann)
Like thousands of Central Florida residents, Javier Torres Centeno is worried his mother may have to leave Puerto Rico soon.

The organic farm where Torres' mother works is in coastal Arecibo, which was hit hard by Hurricane Maria. Efforts to rebuild the farm are hampered by roadblocks and power outages. "Puerto Ricans can take care of themselves, but unless they rebuild soon, my mom will have to move here," Torres said.

That sums up the message a growing number of Puerto Ricans in the U.S. are trying to send to Washington: Rebuild Puerto Rico, as fast as possible, or you will see a flood of citizens arriving from the island. They will struggle to find work and permanent housing on the mainland. There are 3.5 million people in the U.S. territory.

Torres, who speaks passionately about the island, joined a group called Vamos4PR to lobby and raise awareness for fast infrastructure spending on the island. Vamos4PR is also seeking a comprehensive and fair restructuring of Puerto Rico's debt, including a moratorium on debt payments until the economy recovers, and a thorough audit of the debt, expansion of workers' rights and an increase in minimum wage on the island. The group is made up of labor unions, human rights groups and nonprofits. They also want new investment in Puerto Rico in renewable energy, tourism and agriculture, along with a boost in education budgets there.

State Rep. Amy Mercado, D-Orlando, is part of the effort.

She recently visited the town of Ponce on Puerto Rico's southern coast to see the damage. "Puerto Ricans want to be in Puerto Rico, unless they can't work or have quality of life," Mercado said. "How we help the island will affect the amount of people that come here. Debt is important."

Activists were briefly encouraged when Gov. Rick Scott declared a state of emergency in Florida related to Puerto Rican recovery and when President Donald Trump said the nation would have to "Wipe out" Puerto Rican debt.

The White House almost instantly walked back on that statement, after Wall Street panicked and the value of Puerto Rican bonds dropped.

[PR] What delays in immediate disaster relief mean for Puerto Rico's long-term recovery (Urban Institute)
Urban Institute
(10/10/2017 5:15 AM, Carlos Martin)
The speed and quality of the federal response to Hurricane Maria's devastating toll on Puerto Rico and the US Virgin Islands continues to draw scrutiny. Two weeks after the storm's landfall on US soil, wide swaths of the islands are still without electricity, telecommunication lines, medical care, fuel, clean water, cash currency, and other necessities. Many rural communities remain physically inaccessible. Only 13,832 households in Puerto Rico have applied for Federal Emergency Management Agency assistance, a number much lower than after other disasters of similar intensity and damage.

Because of the increasing frequency of natural disasters, we know the quality and robustness of response and relief will have deep repercussions for recovery of the island's people, homes, and communities.

People's recovery

The most immediate consequence of disasters is their toll on human life. Death counts rise after the event largely because of search and rescue findings. Other people do not survive the wounds and pain inflicted during the disaster. But a more insidious cause is people's inability to access medical care for disaster-induced emergencies and for prior medical conditions. Sustained gaps in medical access in Maria's wake are likely to extend the counting process and increase the overall death count.

September 20, 2017

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
Freedom of Information Act Office
451 7th Street, SW, Room 10139
Washington, DC 20410-3000

Dear FOIA Officer:

On August 22, 2017, New York magazine reported on three apparent actions that people in leadership positions at the Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") have taken to reduce the Department's role in providing equal housing access for transgender people. It is of great public interest that records of those actions, if they did in fact take place, be promptly made public.

New York magazine reported that HUD's leadership under the direction of Secretary Ben Carson:

"… ordered the removal of online training materials meant, in part, to help homeless shelters make sure they were providing equal access to transgender people. It also pulled back a survey regarding projects in Cincinnati and Houston to reduce LGBT homelessness. And it forced its Policy Development and Research division to dissociate itself from a major study it had funded on housing discrimination against gay, lesbian, and transgender people — the study ended up being released in late June under the aegis of the Urban Institute instead."

Accordingly, we request copies of the following from January 1, 2017, to present:

1. Any records relating to or consisting of any directive to HUD personnel involving "the removal of online training materials meant, in part, to help homeless shelters make sure they were providing equal access to transgender people."
2. Any records relating to or consisting of any directive to HUD personnel involving the Department's participation in "a survey regarding projects in Cincinnati and Houston to reduce LGBT homelessness."
3. Any records relating to or consisting of any directive to HUD's Policy Development and Research division "to dissociate itself from a major study it had funded on housing discrimination against gay, lesbian, and transgender people."

As a representative of the news media, Right Wing Watch specifically seeks an exemption from any search or copying fees. Right Wing Watch is an entity that gathers information of potential interest to the public and segments thereof, uses its editorial skills to turn the raw material into distinct works, and distributes those works to public audiences. Disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute substantially to public understanding of government activities and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester. Such an exemption has recently been granted to Right Wing Watch by the Department of Education.

We also request expedited handling of this request because, in accordance with the enclosed certified statement, it is needed to inform the public concerning federal government activity by Right Wing Watch, which is primarily engaged in disseminating information to the public. It is especially important that we receive these materials promptly because HUD's stance on the issue of housing equality for transgender people remains unclear. The page titled "HUD LGBTQ Resources" on HUD's website states that "Part of HUD's mission is to give every person and family access to a safe, secure and affordable home including ensuring fair and equal access to housing for all Americans, regardless of their sexual orientation, gender identity or marital status." However, this recent news report calls into question the extent to which HUD is committed to ensuring "fair and equal access" based on gender identity.

We look forward to hearing from you as to our request for expedited processing within ten working days, and to receiving the documents requested as soon as possible. If you have any questions or need further information, I can be reached directly at 202-467-2335 or mblue@pfaw.org.

Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Miranda Blue Keating

Certification Statement

Pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) and implementing regulations, I hereby state the following:

1. I, Miranda Blue Keating, am research editor of Right Wing Watch, an entity that is a project of People For the American Way. I make this statement in connection with a FOIA request submitted today to the Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD").
2. The pending Right Wing Watch request is for any records relating to or consisting of any directive to HUD personnel involving "the removal of online training materials meant, in part, to help homeless shelters make sure they were providing equal access to transgender people," any directive to HUD personnel involving the Department's participation in "a survey regarding projects in Cincinnati and Houston to reduce LGBT homelessness," and any directive to HUD's Policy Development and Research division "to dissociate itself from a major study it had funded on housing discrimination against gay, lesbian, and transgender people."
3. We request expedited handling of this request because it is needed to inform the public concerning federal government activity by Right Wing Watch, which is primarily engaged in disseminating information to the public. It is especially important that we receive these materials promptly because HUD's stance on the issue of housing equality for transgender people remains unclear. The page titled "HUD LGBTQ Resources" on HUD's website states that "Part of HUD's mission is to give every person and family access to a safe, secure and affordable home including ensuring fair and equal access to housing for all Americans, regardless of their sexual orientation, gender identity or marital status." However, this recent report calls into question the extent to which HUD is committed to ensuring "fair and equal access" based on gender identity.

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct,

To our call on the 19th, we promised the attached.

As we explained on the phone, this is the "standard" list of submission requirements for an assignment of a Section 8 HAP Contract. We are in the process of updating the list, which will be part of a handbook chapter to be issued in the future. So the final published version may change. We are comfortable sharing this with the Congressional staff as we have been providing this to applicants and HUD staff.

The other issue related to this is that once these items are submitted to HUD, their releaseablity will be governed by FOIA.

  - POC: Mike Dendas, Senior Advisor for Legislative Affairs; michael.w.dendas@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: Meetings are currently underway.

- Streamlining Administrative Regulations for Public Housing, Housing Choice Voucher, Multifamily Housing, and Community Planning and Development Programs
  - Description: The 2014 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to ease administrative burdens on public housing agencies (PHAs) and certain multifamily owners. HUD issued a proposed rule on January 6, 2015, to implement these statutory changes and to make additional regulatory changes arising out of stakeholder input asking for additional flexibilities in many HUD programs. In addition, the 2015 HUD Appropriations Act made statutory changes to how PHAs determine flat rents in public housing. HUD issued a September 8, 2015, interim rule to implement these changes. This final rule makes changes to the regulatory text as presented in the January 2015, proposed rule, and finalizes the regulatory changes contained in the September 2015 interim final rule.
  - POC: Danielle Bastarache, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policies, Programs and Legislative Initiatives, Office of Public and Indian Housing; danielle.l.bastarache@hud.gov
  - Anticipated Date of Action: The rule was cleared by the Office of Management and Budget on August 31, 2017. The rule is circulating within HUD for final approvals. The next step will be submission to HUD's Congressional authorizing committees for pre-publication review. Publication is anticipated in late September.
  - Anticipated Process: Federal Register publication.

- Rule to Amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards
  - Description: This proposed rule would amend the Federal Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards (the Construction and Safety Standards) by adopting recommendations made to HUD by the Manufactured Housing Consensus Committee (MHCC). The National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974 (the Act) requires HUD to publish in the Federal Register any proposed revised Construction and Safety Standard submitted by the MHCC. The MHCC has prepared and submitted to HUD its third group of recommendations to improve various aspects of the Construction and Safety Standards. HUD has reviewed those proposals and has made editorial revisions to several of the proposals. (b) (5)

    As agreed upon, these recommendations are being published here to provide notice of the proposed revisions and an opportunity for public comment.

Pam Patenaude sworn in as HUD deputy secretary (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Brena Swanson)
Welcome aboard to the second-in-command at HUD

Vice President Mike Pence administered the oath of office to Pam Patenaude Tuesday night, officially locking her in as the new deputy secretary at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

According to HUD's announcement on Patenaude, "As HUD's second-ranking official, Deputy Secretary Patenaude will lead the Department's Disaster Management Group and will play a primary leadership and operational role in coordinating the long-term recovery efforts following Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria."

In her position, she will direct 16 programs and support offices within HUD to help state and local governments design and execute their recovery plans to rebuild damaged housing, businesses and critical infrastructure.

The picture below is of Pence and Pam Patenaude, along with her daughter, Meghan Patenaude, holding the bible.

Sitting under the leadership of HUD Secretary Ben Carson, Patenaude will take over the true position of power at HUD, as Carson, like many other Cabinet positions, will handle the public facing obligations of the department, which includes conducting meetings with housing leaders around the country, listening to local concerns, and celebrating milestones.

"At this moment when so many of our citizens are suffering, Pam will bring strong leadership when we need her most," HUD Secretary Ben Carson said in a statement on her confirmation. "Pam's extensive housing and community development experience will be invaluable as we embark upon the long road to recovery for communities hard-hit by disaster and I'm grateful the Senate confirmed her nomination."

While she was sworn in on Tuesday, Senate voted to confirm Patenaude on Sept. 14 to serve as the next deputy secretary of HUD.

As was the case throughout her nomination process, the housing industry was quick to praise the Senate confirmation of Patenaude.

DSNews
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Nicole Casperson)
Pamela Hughes Patenaude has been announced as the new Deputy Secretary at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Following her confirmation by the U.S. Senate on September 14th, Vice President Mike Pence administered the oath of office to Patenaude Tuesday evening.

In her role as Deputy Secretary, HUD's second-ranking official behind Secretary Ben Carson, Patenaude will lead the Department's Disaster Management Group and play a primary leadership and operational role in coordinating recovery efforts following the recent hurricanes, according to the release.

Patenaude will direct 16 program and support offices within HUD in order to assist state and local governments design and execute their recovery plans to rebuild damaged housing, business, and infrastructure.

Patenaude's role as Deputy Secretary will be the second time she's served a pivotal role in the agency's work. Under the administration of George W. Bush, she held the title of Assistant Secretary of Field Policy Management, where she oversaw the long-term goals of HUD, as well as managed relief efforts in the wake of both Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita.

"At this moment when so many of our citizens are suffering, Pam will bring strong leadership when we need her most," said U.S. Secretary Dr. Ben Carson after Patenaude's confirmation earlier this month. "Pam's extensive housing and community development experience will be invaluable as we embark upon the long road to recovery for communities hard-hit by disaster and I'm grateful the Senate confirmed her nomination."

Reverse Mortgage Daily
(9/27/2017 7:13 PM, Alex Spanko)
Pamela Patenaude was sworn in as deputy secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development on Wednesday, ending an extended vacancy at the position and filling out the department's senior ranks.

Vice President Mike Pence presided over the ceremony in Washington, with Patenaude's daughter Meghan holding the bible.

Patenaude had previously served as the assistant secretary for community planning and development in George W. Bush's HUD, and most recently worked as the president of the J. Ronald Terwilliger Foundation for Housing America's Families, a nonprofit that focuses on affordable rental housing.

The Senate confirmed Patenaude's nomination on September 14, nearly five months after President Trump announced his intention to nominate her for the position.

The newly-minted deputy secretary will focus on coordinating relief efforts in the wakes of hurricanes Harvey, Irma, and Maria, HUD said in a release announcing Patenaude's swearing-in; while working in the second Bush administration, Patenaude helped lead recovery efforts after hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma, according to HUD.

The executive team at HUD is slowly filling up after an extended period with just secretary Ben Carson in charge: In addition to Patenaude taking her post in the deputy's chair, the Trump administration earlier this month announced its intention to nominate former FHA commissioner Brian Montgomery for a second tour of duty at the position. That position also comes with the title of assistant secretary of housing and urban development.

Making Trump's Government Reforms Stick (Government Executive)
Government Executive
(9/27/2017 1:59 PM, Fred Panzer & Anna Weldon)
Under President Trump's Executive Order on a Comprehensive Plan for Reorganizing the Executive Branch, all agencies are to submit reform plans by the end of this week. The administration's aim is to make agencies more efficient, effective and accountable. Unfortunately, many government employees have little experience with the level of reform the president mandated.

In early August, The Center for Organizational Excellence held a reform summit designed to help agencies prepare for the initiative. Three of the panelists — Bridgette Garchek Stone, deputy director of program analysis and evaluation in Office of the Chief Financial Officer at Homeland Security; David Eagles, chief operating officer at Housing and Urban Development; and Joseph Loddo, chief operating officer at the Small Business Administration — commented on a key concern for reform: Now is the time for agencies to think about long-term systemic reform, and to accomplish this, agencies must consider how plans will be enforced and sustained.

Sustainability of reform will encompass a variety of factors, they noted: clarity of vision, execution skills, and support from employees and lawmakers, among others. According to Stone, agency leaders are taking the long view with comprehensive plans, and the panelists agreed that leaders appear committed and decisive, which will bode well for ensuring the right attention is placed on the initiatives over time.

[PA] Q&A with Joe DeFelice, the HUD regional administrator from Mayfair (Plan Philly, PA)
Plan Philly
(9/27/2017 5:58 AM, Jake Blumgart)
When former Philadelphia Republican Party chair Joe DeFelice became the HUD regional administrator for the Mid-Atlantic region, it raised some eyebrows among skeptics. What does Trump's "hype man" in Philadelphia know about housing?

But political operatives like DeFelice, as opposed to policy experts, are standard appointees for these local leadership positions. HUD regional administrators are the liaisons between Washington headquarters and the local politicians who are trying to wrangle regulations and funding from D.C. The regional administration are among the most political jobs in the agency, after the Secretary and Deputy Secretary at headquarters, so former politicians are often tapped for the role. Mayors, county executives, state legislators, or city council members are all usual candidates.

DeFelice never held elected office, but he's held top jobs at the Mayfair Civic Association and the Mayfair Community Development Corporation,in addition to lengthy tenure in the leadership of the Philadelphia Republican Party. Like most CDCs, DeFelice's organization made use of Community Development Block Grants (CDBG) and other funding streams from HUD to improve storefronts and develop housing in Mayfair.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the head of one big city housing authority outside DeFelice's Region III said he seems like a standard choice for the position. By all accounts, the 250 rank-and-file HUD employees in Philadelphia met his appointment with equanimity. That's in contrast to the reaction to Ben Carson's appointment as secretary of the entire agency, or to their counterparts in Fort Worth — where the Region VI administration made her name fretting about Sharia law — or New York, where Eric Trump's wedding planner took over the Region II offices.

District III includes West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Washington D.C., and all of Pennsylvania. Since taking over as Region III administrator, DeFelice has spent a lot of time on the road meeting with mayors in his expansive jurisdiction. PlanPhilly caught up with him after Secretary Ben Carson's visit to Philadelphia and before he embarked upon a counterclockwise tour through Pennsylvania to tour the housing authorities he hadn't yet visited.

[MD] Kushner apartments charge improper fees, tenants allege in lawsuit (Baltimore Sun, MD)
Baltimore Sun
(9/27/2017 11:40 AM, Doug Donovan)
VIDEO. Baltimore-area tenants of the apartment company owned by Jared Kushner, son-in-law and adviser to President Donald J. Trump, filed a lawsuit Wednesday alleging the firm has been charging improper fees and threatening eviction to force payment.

The two tenants who filed the lawsuit in Baltimore Circuit Court Wednesday morning are Tenae Smith, who lives in the Dutch Village apartments in Northeast Baltimore, and Howard Smith, who lives in the Carroll Park apartments in Middle River.

The tenants are asking the court to certify the lawsuit as a class action on behalf of all tenants living in the 17 apartment complexes in Maryland owned by the Kushner Cos. and managed by its affiliate, Westminster Management.

Units owned by the Kushner Cos. generate at least $90 million in revenue annually, according to offering circulars from mortgage giant Freddie Mac obtained by The Sun, and at least $30 million in profit, according to financing documents provided to investors who hold the mortgages.

Three of the portfolio's apartment complexes — Dutch Village in Northeast Baltimore, Carriage Hill in Randallstown and Highland Village in Lansdowne — have received $6.1 million in federal rental subsidies since Jan. 1, 2015, according to records obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request. That's money from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that helps the poor pay rent.

The Housing Choice vouchers from HUD have helped 268 tenants pay rent at the Kushner properties, finance records show.

Congressional Democrats from Maryland asked Westminster Management last month for thousands of pages of documents to review.

In a letter to the company, Sens. Ben Cardin and Chris Van Hollen and Reps. Elijah E. Cummings, C.A. Dutch Ruppersberger, John Sarbanes and Anthony Brown told Kushner's firm that it must abide by U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development regulations because its tenants receive federal rental subsidies through the Housing Choice voucher program.

The real estate company run by the family of Jared Kushner is being sued by two tenants in Maryland for allegedly adding excessive and illegal fees to their rent.

The lawsuit filed Wednesday in the Circuit Court of Baltimore alleges that businesses owned by the Kushner Cos. have been charging 5 percent late payments, not just for what they claim to be late rent, but also to larger amounts that include "agent fees" and "court fees" in violation of Maryland law. The lawsuit describes the charges as part of a "fee churning scheme" that keeps renters under constant fear of eviction, and guessing as to what they owe.

The lawsuit is seeking class action status.

The Kushner Cos. did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

The suit was filed on behalf of Tenae Smith, a mother of two living in Dutch Village apartments, and Howard Smith, who lives in Carroll Park Apartments in Baltimore County. The complexes are managed by Westminster Management, a subsidiary of Kushner Cos., which is also an owner under various other names.

[MD] Baltimore's 'Kushnerville' Tenants File Class Action Against Landlord (ProPublica)

Tenants allege that a property management firm controlled by Trump son-in-law Jared Kushner's real-estate company has unjustly charged them fees and threatened eviction to make them pay up.

Tenants of the Baltimore-area apartment complexes owned by Jared Kushner's real-estate company have brought a class-action lawsuit against the firm's property management arm over its aggressive pursuit of tenants for allegedly unpaid rent.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday in Circuit Court for Baltimore City, alleges that the management company and related corporate entities have been improperly inflating payments owed by tenants by charging them late fees that are often unfounded and court fees that are not actually approved by any court. This, the lawsuit charges, sets in motion a vicious cycle in which tenants' rent payments are partly assessed toward the fees instead of the actual rent owed, thus deeming the tenant once again "late" on his or her rent payment, leading to yet more late fees and court fees. Making matters worse, the 5 percent late fees are frequently assessed on principal that includes allegedly unpaid fees, not just the rent itself. Tenants are pressured to pay the snowballing bills with immediate threat of eviction, the suit alleges.

"The routine practice of charging tenants illegal fees combined with filing eviction proceedings against tenants who have paid their rent on time is predatory and destructive to hard-working Marylanders and their families. This is yet another example of corporations profiting from deceptive policies," said Chelsea Ortega of Santoni, Vocci & Ortega, a Baltimore-area firm that has also brought class-action suits for similar “fee-churning” practices against two other large property management companies in the area. In this case, the firm is working with Brown Goldstein & Levy, a Baltimore firm specializing in civil rights cases, and the Public Justice Center, a civil legal aid office based in Baltimore that has also brought cases against area landlords over similar practices.

A spokesman for the Kushner Companies declined to comment on the particulars of the lawsuit. “We will respond to the complaint at the appropriate time in the legal proceedings,” he said.

A rental apartment management firm run by presidential adviser Jared Kushner’s family has been sued by two Baltimore tenants claiming it’s charging illegal fees on top of the monthly rent, then threatening to evict them if they don’t pay.

Their lawsuit against Westminster Management LLC was filed Wednesday morning at a Baltimore city court. Kushner, who is the president’s son-in-law and a senior White House adviser, isn’t a named defendant in the proposed class action. Westminster Management is a unit of the Kushner Cos., a family-run New York-based business that owns, manages and develops properties nationwide.

Before joining the administration, Jared Kushner was chief executive officer of the Kushner Cos. Kushner, who is married to Trump’s daughter, Ivanka, divested his interest in his family’s business when he joined the administration. He has been a central figure in the ongoing probes of whether the president’s election campaign colluded with the Russian government to influence the outcome of last year’s election.

"Westminster charges each tenant who it claims paid rent late a 5% late fee as well as an ‘agent fee’ and ‘court fee’ before the court has even heard the eviction action," according to a statement issued by the attorneys who filed the suit, on behalf of tenants Tenae Smith and Howard Smith. “Contrary to Maryland law, Westminster claims that these fees are ‘rent’ and thus collectible under threat of eviction.”

VIDEO. BALTIMORE — Two Baltimore-area tenants have filed a class-action lawsuit against companies owned by the president’s son-in-law.

Jared Kushner’s companies own thousands of apartments in the Baltimore area. The lawsuit was filed against Westminster Management, JK2 Westminster, Dutch Village and Carroll Park Holdings.

The complaint alleges that the company charges illegal and excessive fees when a tenant is late with the rent.

Tenae Smith is a tenant at the Dutch Village Apartments in northeast Baltimore, where she has lived since 2009. She’s now a plaintiff in a lawsuit filed against the landlord, a company owned by Kushner.

"Ten (dollars) to $30 may not seem like a whole lot, but when you are living paycheck to paycheck and trying to raise a family, that’s the difference between putting gas in my car or buying a meal for my family," Smith said.

The lawsuit alleges that it starts with a 5 percent late fee, which is standard and permitted, but then tenants get slapped with a $10 agent fee and a $30 summons or court fee.

[IL] Opinion | Voice of The Southern: Cairo’s crisis isn’t just Cairo’s problem (The Southern, IL)
The Southern
(9/27/2017 7:00 AM, Editorial Board)
On Saturday, The Southern is going to host a public conversation about its ongoing coverage of the public housing crisis in Cairo.

The program will be at 3 p.m. at The Varsity Center in Carbondale. The Phonics, a Cairo-based band, will take the stage afterward at 7:30 p.m.

So, why are we hosting this discussion now? And why is it in Carbondale, and not in Cairo?

First, our mission here is to be an advocate for positive change in the communities we serve. Holding this event at a great, historic venue like The Varsity Center helps with that — it's centralized in a large community, and it can accommodate a large crowd.

We may at some point host a similar public forum in Cairo — we were in the planning stages for such an event in April, when the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced it would be razing the troubled Elmwood and McBride apartment buildings. That announcement put the entirety of Cairo into a lurch, and we (like everyone in Cairo) had to adjust accordingly.

The housing and economic crisis in Cairo doesn't just affect Cairo. It affects Southern Illinois as a whole.

CAIRO, IL – A call to help a local community comes from Illinois Senators Tammy Duckworth and Dick Durbin. The pair sent a letter to President Donald Trump over the housing and economic crisis in Cairo, Illinois.

In April, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development announced it would tear down the Elmwood and McBride housing complexes and with them, the homes of roughly 200 families. Some residents worry the senators' call to action may be too late.

It's quiet these days outside Elmwood and McBride in Cairo. Since HUD's announcement in April, there are fewer people around.

Cooking up burgers and fries from his kitchen, Timothy Brown Jr. said it's still a shock that his home here will be demolished.

"Kind of makes you feel kind of disturbed, but it's like you're helpless. Nothing else you can do, what can you do except try to move on, try to hustle before they break it down?" he said. Brown said maintenance at the complexes has gone from bad to worse since the HUD announcement was made.

"It's like these apartments haven't been fixed in I don't know how long. Yeah, they just paint over the holes, keep it going," he said.

When Elmwood and McBride are torn down, there will be little to no public housing in town for residents displaced by the demolition. Many will move out of the area, even out of state, to find new places to live. HUD has said it will provide vouchers and moving assistance to help them, but the process has been slow. Many said they don't want to leave the community at all.

In response to the housing crisis, both Illinois senators are calling on Trump to create a cabinet-level task force, saying in their letter that, because the federal government helped create the economic issues in Cairo, the federal government should help rebuild the community.

With 38 families already gone and more set to leave with HUD vouchers, Brown said it's a little late now. They should have been there sooner.

"I feel like the federal government should have been helping people out here. I feel like everywhere else gets help. Why is Cairo missing?" he said. With public housing in decent shape up the road in Tamms, Illinois, and down in Wickliffe, Kentucky, Brown questions why Cairo housing fell into rough shape and why no one has been willing to improve it.

While many of his neighbors want to stay in Cairo, Brown said he and his family will move to Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

"Yeah, we planning on getting up out of here. If people are staying, they're moving to houses around here. But you ain't going to be out here. Where you gonna' stay? You know, when they knock the buildings down, where you going to live?" he said.

With the town's housing and future uncertain, he said there's one thing he's sure of: It can't get any worse.

HUD spokesperson Jereon Brown said the department took over for the Alexander County Housing Authority after years of mismanagement and a lack of maintenance. He said they should have taken over sooner, but added that housing alone will not change the economic environment in Cairo. He said development typically comes from the state or the community.

AUDIO. It's a cold and cloudy day in Dayton, and ominous skies overhead are showing signs of looming rain. That didn't stop the approximately two dozen developers, contractors and local leaders from breaking ground on the area's newest affordable housing development: The Gold Canyon Estates. The project is set to add 125 housing units to the area over the next three years, consisting of single-family homes, townhouses and apartments. "This is a step, but a small step, but a first step for Lyon County. We already provide some programs here, but this is one, this development will help people buy homes," says Gary Longaker, executive director of the Nevada Rural Housing Authority. His organization provides financial support to potential buyers through down payment assistance and mortgage reductions. According to real estate website Zillow, the median home price in Dayton is more than $241,000. The market value of a new home at Gold Canyon Estates is estimated at $280,000. Tony Ramirez is the Reno director of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. He says while this project is beneficial to home buyers, the overall housing situation remains challenging for developers.

One of the ways this project is cutting these development costs is by building with structural insulated panels, or SIP. That means homes are constructed offsite with panels made from insulated foam core and essentially plywood, rather than being built on-site with two-by-fours and fiberglass insulation. Residential Architect magazine says the SIP method takes less time to build and provides more energy efficiency. But industry adoption is slow, and there are questions about the panels' long-term durability. David Adame is the President and CEO of Chicanos Por La Causa, one of the nation's largest Hispanic nonprofits, and the developer behind this project. "At the end of the day, it's about a house that looks like any other house. And by saving the money, you're providing the opportunity for people to be able to afford to buy these houses," he says. Eddie Hult is the Nevada development director for the organization. Hult says for more affordable housing developments to take place, especially in rural Nevada, builders need to be willing to take a little less, more lenders need to get involved and prices for water rights, permit fees and other entitlements need to go down.

The White Mountain Apache Housing Authority is back on good footing with the Office of the Inspector General.

Three years after the OIG found that it misspent millions of federal dollars on entertainment, gift certificates and other improper items that placed its finances in such bad shape that it was considered for receivership, WMAHA has returned to compliance and is no longer under an enforcement action by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"WMAHA can once again focus its energy completely on providing and maintaining affordable housing for low-income tribal members," said Anthony Lee, general counsel for WMAHA. "We've really got a good program going. This is a huge deal for us and we're really proud of the accomplishments made. The board supports what we are doing and is happy with where we're at right now."

The tribal housing authority also received notice Sept. 18 that it will receive a $2.5 million Indian Community Development Block Grant, which Lee said will be used to rehabilitate homes in the Whiteriver area.

"Receiving these funds was due, in part, to WMAHA being current on its financial audits," he said.

U.S. Housing and Urban Development today announced it will speed federal disaster assistance to the U.S. Virgin Islands and provide support to homeowners and low-income renters forced from their homes due to Hurricane Maria.

Today, President Trump issued a major disaster declaration for St. Croix Island. Trump's declaration allows HUD to offer foreclosure relief and other assistance to certain families living on the island.

HUD is:

> Granting immediate foreclosure relief: HUD granted a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures and forbearance on foreclosures of Federal
>
> Housing Administration (FHA): insured home mortgages. There are approximately 593 FHA-insured U.S. Virgin Islands homeowners living in these impacted islands.
>
> Making mortgage insurance available: HUD's Section 203(h) program provides FHA insurance to disaster victims who have lost their homes and are facing the daunting task of rebuilding or buying another home. Borrowers from participating FHA-approved lenders are eligible for 100 percent financing, including closing costs;
>
> Making insurance available for both mortgages and home rehabilitation: HUD's Section 203(k) loan program enables those who have lost their homes to finance the purchase or refinance of a house along with its repair through a single mortgage. It also allows homeowners who have damaged houses to finance the rehabilitation of their existing single-family home;

This one-story brick structure along the banks of the Navesink River is the future home of the Monmouth Marine and Environmental Field Station, a joint project by Monmouth University and Rumson.

The field station will be a place not only for university students to study marsh and brackish environments up close and have access to New Jersey's varies waterways, but will be a facility that furthers research to help the entire community.

"While Monmouth University is first and foremost an educational institution, it also has a critical public service mission," university president Grey J. Dimenna said Tuesday evening during a gathering of school officials and local dignitaries.

[NJ] Highland Park starts microgrid feasibility study (MyCentralJersey.com, NJ)

The borough kicked off a microgrid feasibility study Wednesday. The proposed microgrid, titled Being Resilient in Temporary Emergencies, would connect eight critical facilities making them more resilient to major storms and allowing them to remain operational during widespread power outages. The board established the microgrid feasibility study program to fund 13 applications at a total cost of $2,052,480, the statement said. The program was developed to provide incentives for local and state government agencies to study the feasibility of Town Center DER microgrids. Microgrids are mini grids powered by on-site distributed generation that provide electric, heat and cooling to critical facilities such as a hospital, public safety headquarters, town halls, schools and other buildings that can serve as emergency shelters during a crisis that are located in a small geographic area. These smaller grids, operating on their own, "islanded" from the main power grid, can separate and protect themselves from any problems with the main grid and keep vital services in place.

State Board of Public Utilities (BPU) President Richard S. Mroz spoke about the impact of superstorm Sandy on communities. He said New Jersey has to prepare for such weather-related events. The feasibility study "Will explore how locally we can ensure resilience by having a microgrid up and running if there is that larger outage of the grid," Mroz said, adding that he looks forward to working with the borough. Mayor Gayle Brill Mittler recalled the power outages experienced as a result of Sandy and a fire in the Edison PSE&G substation. She said she is "thrilled" that New Jersey is studying ways for communities to be prepared in case of emergencies. Highland Park's application examines the potential of connecting Borough Hall to such offices as the police and fire stations, the senior center, the senior housing building, the Housing Authority, Bartle School and Board of Education offices.

Startup CEO Thinks Sale-Leaseback Could Take Bite Out of Reverse Mortgages (Reverse Mortgage Daily)
Reverse Mortgage Daily
(9/27/2017 7:13 PM, Alex Spanko)
Just in time for the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage industry to grapple with a new set of government regulations, a startup promises to allow seniors to release more of their home equity with none of the red tape.

EasyKnock, founded in the summer of 2016, launched its residential sale-leaseback program this week, providing a platform that matches potential real-estate investors with homeowners looking to cash out.

The idea takes a cue from the world of commercial real estate, where such transactions are common: A management company that runs office buildings or nursing homes sells its properties to an investor, such as a real estate investment trust, but continues to run the day-to-day operations while paying the new owners rent.

The concept is less common among homeowners, but EasyKnock CEO Jarred Kessler thinks it's uniquely positioned to take over some market share from the more common reverse mortgage.

"For us, it's just much simpler. We don't have to create regulation around it. It's not a home equity product. We're essentially selling someone's home, and then we're finding an investor to be their landlord," Kessler told RMD. Kessler pointed to the rise of single-family rentals, or SFRs, as a key type of investment property, noting the recent mega-merger between top players Invitation Homes, Inc. and Starwood Waypoint - which together control about 82,000 rental-home properties, according to MarketWatch.

"There's a huge push in the marketplace of people looking for income-producing properties," Kessler said.

EasyKnock works as a sort of clearinghouse, allowing investors to search for people looking for a sale-leaseback arrangement and vice versa. As compared to the HECM, which only allows homeowners to tap into a portion of their home equity, the New York City-based company's arrangements allow consumers to convert all of their equity to cash immediately, minus a 1.5% commission. As for a potential situation in which a newfound tenant finds himself priced out of a property he once owned after a couple of years, Kessler said investors and their new tenants are encouraged to sign long-term leases, with a minimum of at least one year. "For both sides, the longer the better," Kessler said.

Mortgage Firms Churning Refinance Loans to Veterans (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(9/27/2017 9:08 AM, Christina Rexrode)
Ginnie Mae and the VA are targeting some lenders for pushing loans that rack up thousands in fees

A government agency is targeting lenders who aggressively push military veterans to refinance their home loans, leading the borrowers in some cases to rack up thousands of dollars in unnecessary fees.

Ginnie Mae, the government-owned corporation that guarantees certain mortgage securities, said it is planning to discuss with at least half a dozen lenders their refinance practices. It is also contemplating civil legal action against some lenders, and recently has formed a "Lender Abuse Task Force" with the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Michael Bright, Ginnie Mae's acting president, said in an interview that the consequences of refinance "churning"—where loans are refinanced more often than normal, usually at no benefit to the borrower—have rippled across the mortgage ecosystem. This creates uncertainty for investors and higher prices for many borrowers, he added.

Ginnie Mae this year instituted new rules to curb rapid refinancing, including telling lenders that in some cases they would have to wait until a loan was at least six months old before refinancing it. But Mr. Bright said in a recent letter to Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D, Ma.) that some lenders are intentionally trying to evade efforts meant to curb churning.

Ginnie Mae pledged to vet issuers more thoroughly after a government watchdog criticized its exposure to risks posed by nonbanks.

A report by the Department of Housing and Urban Development's inspector general took Ginnie to task for inadequate management of the growing number of nonbanks among its issuers. But banks and nonbanks alike will be watched more closely, said Michael Bright, the acting president of Ginnie.

"We want more information from the issuers who are our counterparties," Bright said.

Nonbanks, unlike banks, tend to operate monoline mortgage business and rely more on third-party financing because they lack balance sheets and deposits, and could in some cases "see liquidity dry up faster than a diversified bank," Bright said.

But "banks can go under, too," he said.

HUD OIG Report Criticizes Ginnie Mae's Oversight of Non-Depository Issuers (Lexology)
Lexology
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Mayer Brown LLP)
You get what you pay for.

Ginnie Mae's continual requests for increased funding to hire more staff have fallen on deaf ears for years. To add insult to injury, the HUD Office of Inspector General released an Audit Report this week that criticizes Ginnie Mae for insufficient supervision of its non-depository issuers. The Report concludes that, among other findings, Ginnie Mae did not adequately respond to changes in its issuer base because it did not implement policies and procedures in a timely manner to manage non-depository issuers. The Report also asserts that Ginnie Mae did not develop a written strategy to plan for all potential issuer default scenarios and, in particular, whether the agency and its contractors could absorb a large issuer default.

With fewer than 150 employees to supervise over 300 issuers, it is little wonder that Ginnie Mae is stretched, which may have hampered its response to the shifting issuer base and the different oversight approach required. In fact, the Report notes that Ginnie Mae's small staff did not have sufficient secondary mortgage market experience to properly address the risks of its growing and shifting issuer base, as its "entire model had been built around the idea that the predominant issuers were regulated banking institutions."

While the Report is critical of the speed with which Ginnie Mae responded to the changes , the Report acknowledges that Ginnie Mae recently has begun to address the shortcoming. For example, the Report notes several programs Ginnie Mae has implemented to increase its oversight efforts of non-depository issuers, including operational and desktop reviews and a Spotlight program that identifies issuers that warrant more intense levels of scrutiny. The Report also notes that, as of July 2017, Ginnie Mae was finalizing and implementing a more robust default strategy that includes plans for default, termination, and master subservicer portfolio seizure and requires master subservicers to submit semiannual plans on how they would absorb a large issuer default.

OIG Criticizes Ginnie Mae Oversight of Nonbanks (Mortgage News Daily)
Mortgage News Daily
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Jann Swanson)
Ginnie Mae, is a wholly owned U.S. government corporation that guarantees and securitizes pools of mortgages originated through FHA, Veterans Administration, and Rural Housing Administration programs. Since the housing crisis Gennie Mae has experienced a shift in is lender (issuer) base; the share of non-banks originating the loans underlying its mortgages-backed securities (MBS) has increased significantly. Now the Office of Inspector General (OIG) for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), has published the results of an audit which claims Ginnie Mae, in its oversight role, has not adequately responded to that shift.

While Ginnie Mae guarantees and securitizes the above types of loans, it depends on its issuers to take full responsibility for servicing, remitting, and reporting activities for the mortgages in every pool. If the borrower fails to make a timely payment on its mortgage, the issuer must use its own funds to ensure that the investors in the MBS receive timely payment. If it cannot do so, Ginnie Mae, in accordance with its guaranty, defaults the issuer, acquires the servicing of the loans, and uses its own funds to manage the portfolio and make any necessary advances to investors. OIG says the corporation's risk for loss is a counterparty one, and occurs almost entirely at the point of issuer default.

Following the financial crisis, the demand for government-insured loans increased. This created a larger demand for Ginnie Mae's product and the corporation's outstanding principal balanced increased 300 percent, from $427.6 billion in 2007 to $1.7 trillion in 2016.

As the housing crisis developed, many banks, defined by OIG as an institution licensed to receive deposits and make loans, retreated from mortgage lending. This tipped the balance of Ginnie Mae's issuer base to non-banks, that is, institutions that offer only mortgage related services. In 2014, Ginnie Mae reported that six of its top 10 issuers were nonbanks and they accounted for more than $392 billion in unpaid principle. Nonbanks overall accounted for 73 percent of Ginnie Mae's single-family issuances. The corporation had not seen such large nonbanks in its previous history nor had them make up such a large portion of its issuer base.

Homeowner tax relief looks vulnerable as industry breaks ranks (Politico)
Politico
(9/27/2017 6:48 PM, Lorraine Woellert)
While most housing stakeholders publicly criticized the White House tax plan released Wednesday, many quietly admit they're playing defense.

The National Association of Home Builders split with industry allies to endorse a White House plan that reduces tax breaks for homeowners, increasing the vulnerability of a write-off that was once considered untouchable. The rift is a first for the industry, where real estate agents, builders, bankers and others in the home buying pipeline typically lock arms to defend the mortgage-interest tax deduction as a building block to homeownership and wealth creation. "We think it's time for creative thinking," NAHB Chief Executive Officer Jerry Howard told POLITICO. "We applaud the Gang of Six for going down this path." It's not just builders breaking ranks while most housing stakeholders publicly criticized the White House plan released Wednesday, many quietly admit they're playing defense. Others privately find common ground with low-income housing advocates and others who criticize the tax break as regressive. Some trade groups, while presenting a united front, find their members increasingly divided.

"The mortgage-interest deduction is more at risk of substantial change now than it has been at any point over the past 30 years," said Isaac Boltansky of Compass Point Research & Trading. "Whether it's direct or indirect, the benefit of homeownership is likely to be altered."
Playbook Power Briefing

The tax framework preserves the mortgage interest break but raises the standard deduction. That makes the mortgage write-off less valuable, which has the potential to discourage homeownership and depress housing prices. The National Association of Realtors this week launched ads saying the tax plan could cause home prices to fall as much as 10 percent and could raise taxes for most middle-income homeowners. "We're trying not to overreact to a press release that they throw out at the very beginning of a very long process," NAR Vice President Jamie Gregory said of the NAHB. "They're making a strategic play here to be on the positive side of the table, whereas I think we're going to make a strategic decision that it's time to start speaking out."

Just months ago, Howard was aligned with NAR, calling the tax plan an "assault." But other provisions, including lower tax rates on his homebuilder members and the promise of faster economic growth, make the framework a good one, he said. And as the nitty-gritty of tax reform gets underway, lawmakers might find new avenues to carve out benefits for homebuyers, Howard said. He raised the prospect of a mortgage tax credit, a benefit that wouldn't require taxpayers to itemize. "Thirty years ago, even with the leadership of Ronald Reagan and Tip O'Neill, they never even thought of looking at ways to improve the effectiveness of the mortgage-interest deduction," Howard said. "This is historic."

David Stevens, president and chief executive officer of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said he was waiting for more details on the proposal. Ken Gear, chief executive officer of the Leading Builders of America, a group of large homebuilders, called the framework worrisome, especially with the rate of U.S. homeownership near a record low.

Home Builders Applaud Trump Tax Plan Even After Prior Concerns (Bloomberg Politics)
Bloomberg Politics
(9/27/2017 12:30 PM, Ben Brody)
The National Association of Home Builders is "enthusiastically backing" President Donald Trump's tax overhaul plan, just weeks after saying many of the proposals raised "red flags."

One the group's main concerns had been over the White House and congressional leaders' push to double the standard deduction -- a move the NAHB said would reduce the value of the mortgage deduction for individual filers. The framework released Wednesday still calls for almost doubling the standard deduction. But it offers other provisions that assuaged the NAHB, such as preserving incentives for home mortgage interest and cutting the rate for pass-through businesses to 25 percent from as high as 39.6 percent.

"By lowering the pass-through rate, the plan will reduce the tax bill of thousands of small businesses and help to spur job and economic growth," NAHB Chairman Granger MacDonald, a homebuilder from Texas, said in a statement. MacDonald also cited the framework's retention of the low income housing tax credit and interest deductions for small businesses as being beneficial to the industry.

Jerry Howard, NAHB's president, had previously said the group was "at DEFCON One" over speculation that Trump's tax plan would modify deductions for mortgage interest. The framework says tax incentives for home mortgage interest and charitable contributions will be preserved. On the standard deduction: "We intend to sit at the table and work with them," Howard said.

Framework for Tax Reform 'Misses Goal' to Protect Homeowners: NAR (RISMedia)
RISMedia
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, RISMedia)
Certain components of the tax reform plan, developed and issued in a framework by six Republicans from the House, Senate and Trump Administration, could harm homeownership, the real estate industry warns. Both the doubling of the standard deduction and the elimination of local and state deductions effectively challenge or erase incentives for homeowners, and inhibit, potentially, the homeownership rate.

"We have always said that tax reform—a worthy endeavor—should first do no harm to homeowners," said Bill Brown, president of the National Association of REALTORS® (NAR), in a statement. "The tax framework released by the 'Big Six' [on Wednesday] missed that goal."

The fate of the mortgage interest deduction remains uncertain. The Administration communicated an intent to "protect" homeownership in its initial proposal and again on Wednesday, but without more information, it left open the possibility for changes to the provision. Critics of the deduction maintain it helps only wealthy homeowners; NAR offered up evidence to the contrary in a recent testimony, reporting 7 million taxpayers took advantage of the deduction in 2015.

"This proposal recommends a backdoor elimination of the mortgage interest deduction for all but the top 5 percent who would still itemize their deductions," Brown said. "When combined with the elimination of the state and local tax deduction, these efforts represent a tax increase on millions of middle-class homeowners. That tax increase flies in the face of a reform effort ostensibly aimed at lowering the tax burden for Americans. At the same time, the lost incentive to purchase a home could cause home values to fall."

Recent Census data illustrate that median incomes went up and poverty rates decreased in 2016. This seems like great news, but we know that achieving and maintaining financial security depends on more than just income alone. Savings, along with wealth-building assets like a home and tools like insurance that protect families' hard-earned income, are all critical determinants of how well a family can weather life's ups and downs.

Unfortunately, we also know that very few families have the savings, assets, and protections in place needed to set out on a path to long-term financial stability. For households of color in particular, this may be an understatement: as our colleagues wrote in our recent report, Black and Latino households with median levels of wealth are on track to see their assets and savings reach zero within our lifetime. Indeed, if the trends of the past 30 years continue, median wealth for these households of color will reach $0.

The so-called road to zero wealth for many families of color has been paved by policies that lock them out of wealth-building opportunities and keep them in a perpetual state of financial peril. This is especially true in the context of homeownership; as The Road to Zero Wealth notes, homeownership has been one of the most significant contributors to the ever-accelerating racial wealth divide because homeownership has been one of the most significant sources of wealth for the families of color who could afford it.

These findings beg an important question: If expanding access to homeownership can reverse the trends of growing racial wealth inequality, why are we seeing so many states roll back the supports that make homeownership possible?

Beyond bleach: Mold a long-term problem after flooding and disasters (WTOP-AM 1500 Washington, DC)
WTOP-AM 1500 Washington
(9/27/2017 11:39 PM, The Conversation)
One of the biggest issues surrounding flooding after natural disasters is mold, a problem that can stay with a structure long after floodwaters have receded. Considering that over 17 percent of homes already have some physical condition that contributes to leaks and that mold grows in temperatures between 40 degrees Fahrenheit and 100°F, there is no wonder that we see mold and mildew problems after a disaster that brings flooding in homes and buildings.

For areas that are less than 10 square feet, the National Center for Healthy Housing recommends that homeowners or renters clean it up themselves. For larger areas, consider using a professional. Hire a mold inspection or remediation professional affiliated with or certified by the National Environmental Health Association, the American Industrial Hygiene Association , the Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration Certification or the American Council for Accredited Certification to inspect, repair and restore the damaged parts of your home.

If you do the work yourself, keep children away while work is being done. For bigger jobs or for more protection, use a P100, which blocks 99.9 percent of all particulates, or a P95 respirator. Wear eye protection that does not have open vent holes. Use gloves that are nonlatex, vinyl, nitrile or rubber and coveralls to protect clothing.

Change into "work" clothes before entering the work area and remove when leaving.

You may need to contain the area to prevent the spread of the spores. (Check out HUD's Rebuild Healthy Homes publication for more great information, including on how to create a containment area.)

To date, Delta volunteers have helped rebuild some 247 homes across the city.

"This is for the less fortunate if we are able to put a little piece of our time for somebody else to be blessed, I think it's priceless," said Delta employee, Ernie Perez.

The house is just one of 20 homes in the borough that Habitat for Humanity is rehabilitating, providing affordable housing for low and moderate income families.

The dilapidated homes were purchased from the New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) for a dollar each.

The goal is to preserve affordable housing for hardworking families.

[NJ] Trump tax plan would end key break for N.J. residents battered by high property taxes (NJ.com, NJ)
NJ.com
(9/27/2017 6:23 PM, Jonathan D Salant)
President Donald Trump and congressional Republican leaders rolled out a proposal Wednesday to overhaul the U.S. tax code and cut taxes while eliminating a key deduction for New Jersey taxpayers. Their proposal would end the ability of taxpayers to deduct the income and property taxes they pay to state and local governments, a blow to New Jersey with the nation's highest property taxes. "Our view is the elimination of the state and local tax deduction is a $1.2 trillion federal revenue grab," said Matthew Chase, executive director of the National Association of Counties. That revenue would help offset the costs of reducing the top tax bracket for those making more than $415,050 from 39.6 percent to 35 percent and shrinking seven tax brackets to three; increasing the standard deduction to $12,000 from $6,300 for individuals and to $24,000 from $12,600 for married couples filing jointly; and eliminating the tax on estates worth more than $5.4 million for individuals and $10.8 million for couples. The Republican tax plan also would eliminate several other deductions and exemptions while keeping the tax breaks for mortgage interest and charitable contributions.

[OH] Springfield Local Schools residents ask school board to drop property tax complaints (Toledo Blade, OH)
Toledo Blade
(9/27/2017 5:38 PM, Sarah Elms)
Residents of the Springfield Local Schools district implored school board members to stop contesting property values in an effort to collect more tax dollars.

They argued the practice isn't fair, targets new homeowners, and stands to erode public support for the district.

Springfield schools routinely contests the values of homes that sold for $50,000 or more above their appraised value. Complaints jumped to 101 filed in 2016 from 22 in 2015, Lucas County Auditor's records show, likely because of market growth.

New homeowners repeatedly told board members at their Wednesday afternoon meeting that they were caught off guard when they received letters from the Lucas County Board of Revision notifying them that their property taxes would go up.

ROCK ISLAND -- A new life-preserver was tossed Wednesday to homeowners who are "underwater" on their mortgages.

The Regional Housing and Education Center at 114 19th St., Rock Island, created by the Rock Island's Economic Growth Corp., opened its doors with a ribbon-cutting ceremony..

Growth president and CEO Brian Hollenbeck said the center's roll-out provides people with underwater mortgages a beacon so they don't feel trapped.

The center's mission is to provide fair and equal access to critical housing resources for underserved populations in an effort to promote wealth-building opportunities, corporation chairman Jan Masamoto said to open the ceremony.

It was a chance to celebrate a new investment into downtown Rock Island, provide new homeowner education, financial literacy, counseling and foreclosure prevention programs, among other new services, according to news release information.

"Anytime you're creating new resources for homeowners, you know you're having a good day," according to Audra Hamernik, Illinois Housing Development of Housing and Urban Development's executive director said, on behalf of Illinois Gov. Bruce Rauner. "We're super excited by the success in Rock Island."

Partnership could make homeownership more attainable for veterans and dependents

Gateway Mortgage Group, a privately held mortgage company offering originations, servicing and correspondent lending, is excited to announce its partnership with the Texas Veterans Land Board as the administrator over loan originations in the Veterans Housing Assistance Program (VHAP). Texas VLB loans are available to Texas residents who served in any branch of the U.S. Armed Forces or National Guard on active or reserve duty. This program is designed to assist eligible veterans in purchasing a home by offering a low-interest rate loan and reduced down payment requirements on houses located within the state of Texas. Disabled veterans and surviving spouses may also qualify for a further interest rate reduction of 50 basis points, or one half of 1% of the available Texas VLB Rate.

"As Gateway continues to expand, it is imperative that we maintain focus on our core values of strengthening communities through homeownership," said Jared Edmonds, vp of national correspondent production. "We believe that this partnership with the Texas Veterans Land Board not only falls in line with our core values, but allows us the opportunity to serve our veterans who have served our country."

Gateway's Correspondent Lending Division, an arm of one of the largest privately held mortgage companies in the country, offers a wide array of programs, competitive pricing and a unique alternative to the correspondent channel for both financial institutions as well as independent mortgage companies. [TX] Lawsuit says Army Corps should compensate homeowners for flooding their property with reservoir pools (Houston Chronicle, TX)
Houston Chronicle
(9/27/2017 11:13 PM, Lise Olsen)
Lawsuit: Residents never were warned about risks nor told to buy insurance

Government officials knew for years that water impounded behind Addicks and Barker dams would flood thousands of suburban homes during an extreme storm - and yet did nothing to warn or compensate property owners, according to a civil lawsuit that seeks monetary damages for affected homeowners.

The lawsuit was filed against the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on behalf of Christina Micu, 37, a real estate investor who bought her own home in the Canyon Gate neighborhood of Cinco Ranch in February 2012. During Hurricane Harvey, the house was swamped by about 2 feet of water, she said. She said she didn't have flood insurance and was advised she didn't need it because her home was not in the 100-year flood plain.

Canyon Gate, with 721 homes, was one of the neighborhoods most heavily damaged when the Army Corps allowed the land area submerged behind the dams, called the "flood pool," to reach record size as more than 50 inches of rain fell between Aug. 25 and 29. Many residents of the gated community had to be evacuated by boat from deep floodwaters.

The suit was filed in the U.S. Court of Federal Claims in Washington, D.C., as a class action on behalf of everyone who owns property that flooded behind the two dams.

[CA] Fee and Tax Relief Offered to Mobile home/Manufactured Home Owners Who Have Never Obtained Title and Registration (MarketWatch)
MarketWatch
(9/27/2017 1:15 PM, Business Wire)
People who purchased a mobile home or manufactured home but didn't receive the necessary title to the property now have a chance to properly register their homes with the new Fee and Tax Waiver Program – and avoid paying hundreds or even thousands of dollars in state and local taxes, fees and penalties.

The California Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) is administering the program to get the homes properly registered – and to help homeowners avoid problems that can occur when the owner doesn't have the title and registration. As many as 160,000 people could be eligible for the program.

The Fee and Tax Waiver Program, passed as Assembly Bill 587 and signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown last year, took effect this year.

"This program gives people who acquired a home but didn't get the proper documentation a one-time opportunity to correct their situation and not have to pay many back taxes, fees and penalties often incurred by prior owners," said HCD Director Ben Metcalf. "With the proper title and registration, homeowners can have the security and peace of mind that comes from having a stable and secure home. "

Mobile home and manufactured home owners who have never applied for registration and don't have a title are eligible. In many cases, these are owners who never realized the property was supposed to be titled and registered, while others wanted a title but couldn't afford the back state and local taxes and fees.

[CA] Why Rancho Cucamonga could be loaning one future homeowner as much as $95,000 (Ontario Inland Valley Bulletin, CA)
Ontario Inland Valley Bulletin
(9/28/2017 4:41 AM, Liset Marquez)
RANCHO CUCAMONGA >> When the housing market began to collapse nearly a decade ago, officials in this city – and across the county – began to notice more and more foreclosures.

In many cases, those homes sat empty for months and years, creating blight in residential neighborhoods.

In response, the federal government set up the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, which allowed cities to purchase foreclosed homes. Utilizing that funding, Rancho Cucamonga has slowly been rehabbing foreclosed homes and selling them to low to moderate income buyers.

The 1,556-square-foot residence in the 6900 block of Spinel Avenue is the last one the city purchased using those funds.

The 1970s tract home needed new roofing, the interior needed to be gutted and electrical replaced.

"When you have one property that's distressed, it'll lower the property values in the community. The goal is to improve it so that it revitalizes the community," said Victor Ramirez, vice president of strategic advancement and communications at Neighborhood Partnership Housing Services, a nonprofit organization.

Affordable Housing

The Great Urban Myth: "Cities Can't Build Their Way To Affordable Housing" (Forbes)
Forbes
(9/28/2017 12:23 AM, Scott Beyer)
The Sightline Institute, a Seattle-based urban affairs think tank, has published a long and badly-needed essay. In September, Alan Durning, the institute's executive director, wrote a piece called "Yes, You Can Build Your Way To Affordable Housing," profiling some of the different cities worldwide that have done this. It was a timely message at a moment when urban residents -- and even some urban commentators -- question whether increased housing supply will really reduce prices. The numbers, both from Durning and elsewhere, suggest that it will.

Durning analyzes seven cities that differ wildly -- by location, governing model, and built history. But he finds that their common denominator is that, despite high demand, they have managed to stabilize housing prices by increasing unit supply.

He begins with the obvious case study of Houston. While not completely unregulated, Houston has lighter regulations than other major U.S. metros, and builds much more housing than any of them. Although Houston receives many of the stereotypical scapegoats thought to increase housing prices -- millionaires, immigrants, corporate relocations, and luxury condos--median home prices in Harris County remain $141,000. But Houston, he writes, comes with a caveat. It maintained this affordability by sprawling out. Can the same be accomplished in dense, land-constrained cities?

Next he covers Tokyo, a dense city where the answer seems to be "yes". The city built 142,000 units in 2014, well over double any U.S. metro that year, and 58,000 more than in California, which has triple Tokyo's population. As a result, single-family homes in centrally-located Tokyo neighborhoods sell for $300,000 -- obscenely low compared to similarly-situated homes in major coastal U.S. cities. Between 2007 and 2014, condo prices in Tokyo actually dropped, despite rapid densification.

Tax Reform Framework Proposes to Retain the Low-Income Housing Tax Credit (Enterprise Community Partners)
Enterprise Community
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Emily Cadik)
Today the Trump Administration, House Ways and Means Committee and Senate Finance Committee leadership issued a "Unified Framework for Fixing Our Broken Tax Code" that seeks to lower tax rates, simplify the tax code, bring business back into the US, broaden the tax base and encourage economic growth.

The framework proposes to lower the top corporate tax rate to 20 percent, consistent with the House's tax reform blueprint released in 2016, and eliminate "numerous" corporate tax expenditures in order to help achieve the lower rate.

The Low-Income Housing Tax Credit is one of only two corporate tax expenditures that the framework explicitly preserves, noting that it is a tax incentive that has "proven to be effective in promoting policy goals important in the American economy." Its inclusion in the plan is a testament to the proven track record of the program, the need for resources to address our nation's vast and growing shortage of affordable housing, and the strong bipartisan support that the ACTION Campaign and its more than 2,000 members have built over many years. The framework also notes that tax rules affecting specific industries will be modernized "to ensure that the tax code better reflects economic reality," providing an opportunity to strengthen the Housing Credit.

The only other tax expenditure the framework proposes to retain is the Research and Development Credit, which was the sole corporate tax expenditure explicitly retained in the House's tax reform blueprint. The framework is silent on the tax exemption for private activity bonds, which provide critical financing to more than 40 percent of Housing Credit developments in the form of multifamily Housing Bonds. It is also silent on the New Markets Tax Credit, which is essential for attracting private capital and jobs to some of our nation's most distressed communities. However, it does indicate that "while the framework envisions repeal of other business credits, the committees may decide to retain some other business credits to the extent budgetary limitations allow."

[CT] West Side blaze in Stamford begins in tiny illegal apartment (Connecticut Post, CT)
Connecticut Post
(9/27/2017 12:41 PM, John Nickerson)
STAMFORD-City fire investigators say that a blaze that scorched one home and destroyed another late Monday afternoon while displacing 32 residents was ignited by an electric overload in a tiny illegal dwelling unit.

Chief Fire Marshal Charles Spaulding said his investigators as well as state fire marshals found a five-toot by seven-foot illegal dwelling on the first floor rear porch of 50 Alden Street, where the fire began.

In the tiny room made of plywood and two by fours was a mattress, microwave, air conditioner, space heater and other appliances plugged into power strips that were led to overburdened electrical outlets by extension cords.

Spaulding said that state fire marshals agreed that the fire started in the illegal dwelling unit and was probably ignited by the overloaded electrical circuits in the heavily Hispanic neighborhood.

A Sept. 27 forum at the John Curtis Free Library will feature discussion of all the town's housing needs, from affordable homes for young families to retirement residences.

HANOVER – The town is holding a housing forum Wednesday night, but it will be a look to the future, rather than a search for ways to deal with any immediate problems of affordability for retirees or young families.

"It will be a little bit of this and a little bit of that," town planner Peter Matchak said. "We'll have a conversation on the outlook for what Hanover needs."

The session will be at 6:30 p.m. in the large meeting room at the John Curtis Free Library, 534 Hanover St. (Route 139).

Town officials will be joined by representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Massachusetts Housing Partnership and Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

The forum comes a week after the Chamber released its "Housing 2017" report, which says the South Shore's shortage of affordable housing is making it harder for the area to attract young professionals, young families and jobs.

Next month, Housing Assistance Corporation (HAC) and Community Development Partnership (CDP) will launch the Cape Housing Institute, a collaborative effort between the two nonprofits to provide municipal officials with the resources needed to boost the production of affordable housing throughout the region.

"We want to expand the capacity of the region so that town municipal leaders have the tools and language they need to be able to create housing for the workforce and all residents of their community at all income levels," HAC CEO Alisa Galazzi said.

The institute will begin on Wednesday, October 11, taking place over the course of six weekly sessions, ending on Thursday, November 16. The sessions are free and open to elected and appointed officials throughout Cape Cod and the Islands as well as town housing and planning staff.

[NY] Planning Board OKs pair of low-income housing projects (Buffalo News, NY)

(9/27/2017 11:28 AM, Jonathan D. Epstein)
The Buffalo Planning Board Monday night renewed its assent for a pair of housing projects aimed at least partially at low-income residents – two years after the projects were first reviewed and approved.

David Pawlik's CSS Construction plans to construct a three-story, 40-unit senior housing facility at 240 Kensington Ave., on a cleaned-up former brownfield site that formerly housed a manufacturing plant. The wood-framed building, to be built on 2.5 acres of the 6.16-acre property, would feature a stone veneer facade with fiber cement panels and composite wood lap siding.

The $8 million Kensington Apartments project includes eight one-bedroom units with 825 square feet and 30 two-bedroom apartments with 950 square feet, with one elevator and no basement. Some would be market-rate, while others would be for low-income residents. There also would be 47 parking spaces, plus in-unit bicycle storage in the 48,561-square-foot building.

It was originally approved in 2015 as a $5.3 million project, with Pawlik and Nick Sinatra as the city's designated developers for the site, but the approval expired. Construction is expected to last 12 months

[NY] Bronx Point to See 1000+ Units of Housing (Norwood News, NY)

(9/27/2017 4:13 PM, Aaron Mayorga)
One of the largest city-owned lots in the Bronx is slated to be home to 1,045 new housing units and country's first hip-hop museum, officials announced.

The $200 million project, named "Bronx Point," is poised to bring a wave of transformation to a previously underutilized stretch of land abutting the Harlem River and just minutes away from Hostos Community College in Mott Haven.

Along with the thousand units of market rate and affordable housing, Bronx Point will include a state-of-the-art multiplex theatre, a dedicated programming space for the community organization BronxWorks, and a new waterfront esplanade that will join with the nearby Mill Pond Park. Bronx Point will also be home to the Universal Hip-Hop Museum, the nation's first-ever hip-hop museum.

In a statement, James Patchet, president of the New York City Economic Development Corporation, the city's real estate arm, said the project was a result of a two-year long effort to address the South Bronx's need for more affordable housing and greater waterfront access.

Bronx Point is anticipated to be developed in two phases – with the first phase expected to be completed by 2022 and deliver 600 units of affordable housing "that targets households with incomes ranging from extremely low to moderate."

[NY] Mayor continues push for affordable housing in Buffalo (Time Warner Cable News - Buffalo NY, NY)
TWC News - Buffalo NY
(9/27/2017 4:45 PM, Mike Arena)
BUFFALO, N.Y. -- The affordable housing crisis is an issue that continues to plague New York State.

"Nearly half the renters in our state are paying too much for rent. I think it's a third of people are paying half their income on rent which means they can't afford food, or transportation, or clothes for their children," said NYSAFAH CEO Jolie Milstein.

Buffalo Mayor Byron Brown talked about the city's ongoing efforts to reverse that trend Wednesday at the Upstate New York Affordable Housing Conference.

"The city has spent over $34 million on affordable housing, leveraging over $330 million of spending, creating more than 1,600 units of affordable housing in the city of Buffalo," Brown (D) said.

(9/27/2017 4:01 PM, Ryan Deffenbaugh)
At the board meeting, Ferrara said any new owner would have to follow the plan for the site set by the zoning change.

"The zoning that was done on this site is very detailed and essentially the vision that's been presented will be the vision that is embedded in the zoning," he said. "And I don't think anyone will buy that with an idea of coming forward with anything different. It would trigger a re-review."

The updated zoning maintains the previously allowed floor area ratio for the property, but allows bonus density to build beyond it. In exchange for the bonus density, the developer would have to pay a $3 million fee that the village can use for community planning, rehabilitation and affordable housing.

The statement of environmental findings for the proposal approved by the board recommends the development replace workforce housing formerly on the site with 36 units of affordable housing set aside for people making 80 percent of area median income. Those units would represent about 5 percent of the residential units proposed in the project.

[NY] Mayor Brown hints of forthcoming mixed-income housing plan at conference (WBFO-FM, NY)

(9/27/2017 6:28 PM, Michael Mroziak)
AUDIO. Buffalo played host Wednesday to a conference on affordable housing at the Hotel Henry. During welcoming remarks, the mayor hinted of an upcoming plan to create such housing throughout his city. The 14th annual New York State Association for Affordable Housing Upstate Conference featured a panel discussion and small group sessions exploring how to create and maximize affordable housing. The conference began with the Association's president and chief executive officer, Jolie Milstein, telling an audience that New York State's budget includes a five-year, $2.5 billion fund to combat homelessness and build more affordable housing. Buffalo Mayor Byron Brown followed by announcing that the city will soon roll out an affordable housing development plan. Following his remarks, he told WBFO that the plan has been in development since last year and that more details will be revealed in the near future. "The city, through its Housing Opportunities Strategy, will be initiating a variety of new programs and initiatives to focus on affordable housing and building mixed-income neighborhoods throughout the City of Buffalo," Brown said.

Milstein supports the idea of mixed-income housing development, saying it rebuilds neighborhoods without pushing away those who have lived in them. "When you put the capital into preserving or creating affordable housing units, those rents are stable, unlike market rents which can rise uncontrolled," Milstein said. "When you invest in affordable housing, the rents are intentionally kept at a place where people from the community can continue to live there." Milstein added that affordable housing projects often times bring with them the additional commercial development sought for those neighborhoods. "When you invest the capital in affordable housing, you're often bringing with it community services, retail opportunities, day cares, businesses that might not be able to locate in those neighborhoods if it were not for not for this investment in the housing projects."

"Nearly half the renters in our state are paying too much for rent, I think it's a third of people are paying half their income," says Jolie Milstein, President and CEO of the New York State Association for Affordable Housing.

More and more, New Yorkers are struggling to pay for a basic necessity: a roof over their head. That's why leaders from the state and local level, as well as advocate for affordable housing initiatives met for the largest conference of its kind in Upstate New York. The New York State Association for Affordable Housing hosted a gathering at the newly remodeled Hotel Henry to discuss plans for developing housing within the reach of neighbors in the state.

The conference featured a panel discussion, focusing on Buffalo's inclusionary zoning initiative.

Buffalo is seeing a massive revitalization, with new developments and millions of dollars coming from the state in the form of the Buffalo Billion. This revitalization means some neighbors are no longer able to afford rent in the homes they've lived their entire lives as neighborhoods are improved.

Buffalo Mayor Byron Brown says the city of Buffalo is trying to combat this problem by creating mixed-income neighborhoods, keeping longtime residents from being forced out of their homes while still drawing in new residents. Brown says this will partly be accomplished by allocating Buffalo Billion funds into the revitalization of key neighborhoods, like the East Side.

[NJ] Montvale tables deal with Mercedes site developer (North Jersey.com, NJ)

(9/27/2017 10:17 AM, Sarah Nolan)
VIDEO. MONTVALE — A settlement agreement that would have allowed a developer to build 350 units of multifamily housing on the Mercedes-Benz USA property was tabled by the Borough Council on Tuesday, despite advice from legal counsel that the decision will undoubtedly lead the town to potentially lengthy and expensive litigation.

The borough has been negotiating with the S. Hekemian Group, LLC, owner of the soon-to-be-vacant 37-acre site on Mercedes Drive, for 18 months to agree on a plan for the site. The settlement would have helped the borough to partially resolve its affordable-housing litigation, according to the resolution.

Council members Doug Arendacs, Elizabeth Gloeggler and Mike Weaver voted to table the resolution to approve the agreement, hoping to have further discussions with Hekemian that might result in a less dense plan. Council members Rose Curry, Tim Lane and Dieter Koelling voted against tabling the vote, and Mayor Mike Ghassali broke the tie in favor of tabling the issue.

The decision was met with cheers from the audience after dozens of residents spoke, saying they felt the plan was not suitable for Montvale and that a better deal could be reached.

But Jeff Surenian, special counsel hired by the governing body for its affordable-housing litigation, said the town essentially has a gun to its head — the developer will go before the court tomorrow ask for a trial date in the matter, he said.

[NJ] Judge Rejects South Brunswick's Affordable Housing Appeal (New Brunswick Patch, NJ)

South Brunswick lost an important court battle Friday in the ongoing war over affordable housing in the Township.

SOUTH BRUNSWICK, NJ — South Brunswick just lost an important appeal Friday in the ongoing battle over affordable housing in the Township.

South Brunswick's effort to overturn a 2016 affordable housing mandate was rejected by the state appellate court late Friday afternoon, Sept. 22. Appeals Court judge Marie Simonelli denied South Brunswick's attempts to show a conflict of interest occurred when last year Superior Court judge Howard Wolfson ordered South Brunswick to build a certain number of affordable housing. Simonelli did not give a reason why she denied South Brunswick's appeal.

A lawyer hired by South Brunswick, Jeffrey Surenian, tried to argue that Wolfson had a conflict of interest when he ordered South Brunswick to build 1,553 affordable housing units. South Brunswick says it only should be required to build 927 affordable housing units. Many residents in South Brunswick think more units will clog roads and schools, and destroy remaining open space.

Wolfson has since retired from the bench and now works as general counsel for a major New Jersey developer, Jack Morris, at his firm Edgewood Properties. According to Surenian, Morris or his companies paid for, at least partially, up to 32 vacations for Judge Wolfson and his wife, including trips on a private jet to Boca Raton, the Bahamas and Sag Harbor. Nineteen of those trips occurred while he was a sitting judge and seven of them while he presided over the South Brunswick case, Surenian said. He argued that the judge should have recused himself from making any development decisions in South Brunswick while enjoying a personal friendship with the developer.

[NJ] Franklin Council, developer reach settlement (New Jersey Herald, NJ)

(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Bruce A. Scruton)
FRANKLIN -- Late Tuesday night, the Borough Council unanimously approved a settlement with a developer under which the council will make zoning changes that would allow a 300-unit apartment complex to be built on vacant land off Munsonhurst Road.

Silk City, a subsidiary of JCM Investors, had threatened to sue the borough because its proposal had been denied by the Planning Board and cited previous court settlements and the Planning Board's own recommendations from 2016, which, the developer's attorney Kevin Kelly argued in a letter last week, actually favored Silk City's proposed Milly's Court development on 71 acres.

There were a few impassioned pleas to the council during a discussion period on the issue, the council retired to an executive session to speak with Borough Attorney Thomas Prol. Councilman Gilbert Snyder was absent from the meeting,

About 30 minutes later, the council returned and Prol began reading the proposed settlement, with changes, which had been offered by Kelly last week.

The concept plans put before the Planning Board earlier call for 10, four-story buildings each holding 30 apartments. Parking garages would occupy much of the first floors, and the developer has already agreed that one of the 10 buildings would be devoted to age-restricted apartments, while the affordable housing units, which are required by state law, would be spread over the other nine buildings.

RALEIGH - A campaign flier from a challenger in next month's mayoral election criticizes incumbent Mayor Nancy McFarlane for supporting a plan to build a $165 million city government complex.

The flier from candidate Charles Francis suggests the money could be better spent on the city's affordable housing programs.

"There are 165 million reasons NOT to build a new City Hall," the flier reads. "Charles Francis says those funds should be used to preserve affordable housing and increase access to housing for working and middle-class families."

Francis, McFarlane and candidate Paul Fitts will face off in the Oct. 10 election, when voters will also choose seven City Council members.

[FL] Irma's destruction of trailers challenges Keys' lifestyle (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/27/2017 11:00 AM, Jennifer Kay, Associated Press)
KEY WEST, Fla. — Architect Kobi Karp has a vision for affordable housing in the Florida Keys: residences set at coconut-tree height to keep them dry, atop concrete columns holding them in place.

Key West clients sought out his designs before Hurricane Irma struck the island chain this month, and he thinks the two projects will continue despite Irma's damage and debris. "It's a more cost-efficient way of life," the Miami-based architect said.

Such modern, planned development hasn't always appealed to the independent spirits living in the Keys — but Irma may force the laid-back landscape to change.

Mobile homes and recreational vehicles didn't survive the storm's 130 mph winds and storm surge. The losses hit people crucial to Keys tourism: service industry and blue collar workers priced out of expensive Key West homes or newer structures meeting Florida's stringent building codes.

Since news broke that the city was not going to pay more than $5,000, some people have offered to donate to Midtown. However, Norman said that because Midtown is a privately owned company and not a nonprofit, the staff does not consider taking donations to be the right thing to do.

"We really appreciate the responses we've gotten from citizens of Fort Smith, and a lot of people have asked about donations," she said. "And that is such a kind thing to do, but we would rather they take care of nonprofit organizations in the city."

The apartment complex, a Housing and Urban Development (HUD) property, also houses one of Sebastian County's senior centers, which is a nonprofit that takes part in the Meals on Wheels program, serving about 200 meals a day. The senior center is not designated for only Midtown residents — any senior can take part. The senior center was closed for about five or six weeks after the leak and the Meals on Wheels program was suspended for about a week, Norman said.

“We are having to cut back on different areas of our budget,” Norman said. “We will do what we have to do without it affecting our tenants.”

[MN] Last-minute change possible for Ford-site plan: low-cost housing for the very poor (St. Paul Pioneer Press , MN)
St. Paul Pioneer Press
(9/27/2017 6:32 AM, Frederick Melo)
St. Paul council members are rethinking a key aspect of the elaborate master plan that will govern future real estate development at the Ford site in Highland Park, and it has nothing to do with traffic, building heights or density.

Instead, several council members would like to add more affordable housing for the very poor.

Neighborhood advocates have raised alarm for months about the potential impact of medium-to-high density construction at the site of the former Ford truck plant in Highland Park, which has been cleared of factory buildings.

They’ve distributed fliers and lawn signs saying that zoning allowing up to 4,000 new housing units will overwhelm the surrounding street approaches with traffic, block river views and overburden schools and parks.

Council members said the project foreshadows future development in the suburb.

The Minnetonka City Council has approved plans for a 49-unit affordable housing complex, a project that council members called a peek at the future of housing in the suburb.

The apartment complex, tentatively named Shady Oak Crossings, would be built on a parcel of city-owned commercial land near Shady Oak Road and Mainstreet in Hopkins. The council authorized the site and building review, parcel rezoning and sale of the land to developer Ron Clark Construction on a 6-1 vote.

“Minnetonka is a fully developed community, and the expectation is that there is going to be a need for greater density housing as we look forward,” Council Member Brad Wiersum said. “We’re going to be looking at apartment opportunities on small properties again and again and again.”

The building plan underwent what Mayor Terry Schneider called a “substantial redesign” since concept plans were first presented in February. Many of those changes were a response to neighbors critical of the building’s size.

A new residential neighborhood will emerge on St. Paul’s Highland Park river bluff over the course of the next 20 years, and its map was laid Wednesday evening.

After a lengthy public hearing, the St. Paul City Council voted 5-2 to approve a sweeping master plan and zoning layout for the 135-acre site that was once home to Ford Motor Co.’s Twin Cities Assembly Plant on Ford Parkway.

The documents, a decade in the making, have drawn both tough opposition and strong support from residents throughout Highland Park and the city. The city plans envision up to 4,000 new housing units, 20 percent of which will be designated affordable housing, as well as office and commercial structures.

Council member Chris Tolbert, who represents Highland Park and Macalester-Groveland, said he grew up playing baseball on the Ford site ball fields and visited redevelopment sites across the country for perspective

BASALT, Colo. — More affordable housing is in the works in the western Colorado town of Basalt, including units that would go to teachers.

The Aspen Times reports that officials backed moving ahead with two developments on Tuesday night.

One is a joint effort by Habitat for Humanity, the Roaring Fork School District and Pitkin County. They plan to build 27 units on school land and sell 15 to teachers. The rest would be sold to qualified employees of Pitkin County.

The second would have as many 25 deed-restricted units and 88 homes that would be sold at market prices. The market-prices homes will be small so the developer hopes some will be relatively affordable, selling for about $500,000.

[CO] Loveland council considers changes to affordable housing incentive code (Loveland Reporter-Herald, CO)

City staff says current single-family housing code is 'somewhat meaningless,' ineffective

LOVELAND -- The current code for city-sponsored incentives to developers building affordable single-family housing is in need of an overhaul, per a discussion at the Loveland City Council study session Tuesday evening.

Alison Hade, administrator of the Community Partnership Office, said that the current single-family housing incentive structure in the Community Housing Development Code is "somewhat meaningless" and "hasn't incentivized anything."

In her presentation to the council, Hade said the proposed changes to the code have developed out of meetings between the Community Partnership Office, the Affordable Housing Commission, the Planning Commission, developers, builders and the Loveland Housing Authority.

"After all of these meetings, what we're looking at really doing is trying to simplify the code, stop how we're doing it right now, and make it so that any projects that come our way have to be well-vetted," Hade said.

The current code offers non-profit and for-profit builders of affordable housing greater fee waivers if the housing they plan to build will serve families whose annual income falls into lower percentage brackets of the area median income. It also lays out the minimum percentage requirements for units in a development set aside for affordable housing, with greater minimums corresponding to higher AMI percentages to be served.

A first of its kind affordable housing development is coming to the Central Coast. The new development on E. Rossi and E. Lake Street in Salinas, will replace 14 deteriorating public housing units and an office building with 50 multi-family, energy efficient affordable housing units. The Monterey County Housing Authority Development Corporation is working with Gurdon Modular Buildings and Zumwalt Construction to crane the first modular units into place. According to the HDC, the modular units were constructed off-site and were transported to Salinas over the last several weeks. The units are the final phase of the four-phase Haciendas affordable housing development.

[CA] A solution to California's housing crisis — reinstate redevelopment (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)
San Francisco Chronicle
(9/28/2017 4:57 AM, Antonio Villaraigosa)
California's affordable housing crisis didn't just happen. Our affordable housing shortage was created by flawed public policy that turned a crisis into a catastrophe. The good news is that a problem created by public policy can be fixed, in due time, with better public policy.

The first step should be to fully restore the ability of local governments to use redevelopment authorities to fund workforce and affordable housing for teachers, nurses, firefighters, seniors, low-income families and the homeless. For generations, redevelopment was a powerful public policy tool to make investments in economic development and housing. These agencies had the power to fund strategic local investments by capturing the increased tax revenues generated by new projects.

Yes, there were problems and some abuses. That is a fact. But when the Legislature ended the redevelopment agency network in 2012, it took away a powerful financing tool and, more importantly, hamstrung local communities in their efforts to build affordable housing in a way that made sense for them.

The redevelopment network gives local agencies the power to adopt solutions that make sense in its market. This is important because there is no such thing as a California housing market — the challenges in Fresno are different than the challenges in San Francisco. A "one-size-fits-all" solution does not acknowledge these important regional differences.

[CA] County Planning Commission Approves Changes to Golden Inn & Village in Santa Ynez (Noozhawk, CA)
Noozhawk
(9/27/2017 10:09 PM, April Charlton)
A unanimous Santa Barbara County Planning Commission approved retroactive changes Wednesday to what has become a fairly contentious affordable-housing project at Highway 246 and Refugio Road in Santa Ynez, leaving at least one nearby neighbor vowing he'll fight the decision.

Mark Brooks, who lives on Lucky Lane behind the Golden Inn & Village project that opened last year, said he plans to appeal the commission's ruling to the Board of Supervisors.

"The only way we don't appeal today is (if you) let them put in the lights and let us decide," Brooks told the commissioners.

The supervisors approved the Golden Inn & Village project in 2014, which was built in partnership with the Housing Authority of Santa Barbara County.

Development includes low-income apartments for seniors and low-income family apartments. It will eventually include a senior care and assisted living facility.

[CA] S.F. Project Puts Families at the Center of Affordable Housing (Next City)
Next City
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Oscar Perry Abello)
Like a bull's-eye, San Francisco's poorest neighborhood is surrounded by some of its wealthiest. In the Tenderloin, as it's known, median household income is $22,000. Many residents are among San Francisco's youngest; at least 3,000 children live in the Tenderloin. In large part, their families moved there to secure more affordable housing: Some 80 percent of 15,800 total apartments are either rent-controlled or locked-in at below-market rates, according to the San Francisco Business Times. But that housing supply doesn't quite meet residents' needs.

Don Falk, CEO of the Tenderloin Neighborhood Development Corporation (TNDC), estimates that 95 percent of Tenderloin homes are studios or single-room occupancies (SROs), a legacy of earlier times when the neighborhood served a different population. "There is a lot of overcrowding," Falk says.

Nonprofits like TNDC and Mercy Housing started buying up buildings in the Tenderloin in the 1980s, and preserving their affordability. The city of San Francisco, too, worked with investors using Low Income Housing Tax Credits to acquire buildings in the Tenderloin and maintain them as affordable housing.

Today, TNDC owns and manages about 3,500 units of housing, mostly in the Tenderloin but also in some other San Francisco neighborhoods. Ninety percent of their tenants make less than 30 percent of San Francisco's area median income (AMI), currently $34,600 for a family of four.

Fair Housing

Part 2: The fallout of the Bank of America vs. City of Miami decision (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(9/27/2017 2:17 PM, Debbie Hoffman & Alexandria Decatur)
Potential future implications of the decision

With its decision on May 1, 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court essentially strengthened the Fair Housing Act by broadening the definition of the "aggrieved party," however the court declined to issue a ruling on causation and whether the predatory lending of the banks was sufficiently related to the cause of the financial injury claimed by the City of Miami. Several potential implications await the lending industry pending decisions on these issues that the Supreme Court sent back to the District Court for rehearing.

Primarily, the Supreme Court decision opens the door for cities across the country to sue lending companies for diminished property tax revenue and increased municipal expenses associated with foreclosures on properties within their minority communities due to predatory lending practices. As a result, mortgage lenders could be held liable as the direct cause for such financial burdens to government municipalities.

Since 2014, large mortgage lenders like Bank of America and Wells Fargo have seen decreased annual profit due to the increased legal costs associated with mortgage litigation. However, the Supreme Court's recent admittance of suits brought against banks by large municipalities has increased that burden.

With increased litigation costs from suits brought by municipalities, it is also likely that banks will alter their budget to allow for an increase in litigation and settlement costs in the coming years. For instance, due to their increased vulnerability to lawsuits in March 2015, Wells Fargo increased its litigation budget from $1.1 billion in December 2014 to $1.2 billion in March 2015. Bank of America could take similar action in increasing its litigation budget to account for increased litigation

Large lending banks may be able to handle this increase in litigation fees, but smaller banks will likely struggle under the burden of this additional cost. It is possible that some smaller banks may even be forced to shut their doors or at least, discontinue their residential lending programs.

[NY] Court rules LI village engaged in housing discrimination (WABC-TV 7online.com, NY)
WABC-TV 7online.com
(9/27/2017 6:50 AM, Kristin Thorne)
GARDEN CITY, Long Island (WABC) -- A federal court has ruled that a 2004 zoning decision by the Village of Garden City discriminated against African-Americans and Latinos.

"The Fair Housing Act enshrined the promise of open communities in federal law," said Joe Rich, co-director of the Fair Housing & Community Development Project at the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, who represented the plaintiffs in the case. "The court's decision reiterates that the Village of Garden City's exclusionary practices are unacceptable in American society."

The lawsuit, brought forth by MHANY Management and New York Communities for Change, was filed against the village in 2005. It accused the village of discrimination by approving a zoning classification that would have prevented multi-family housing from being built on a 25-acre parcel of property at the intersection of Washington Avenue and 11th Street. Opponents of the ordinance said it was a way for the village to block minorities from moving in to the predominantly white area.

"It's time for Garden City to stop supporting its past bias, its past discrimination and realize that it has done wrong and change their ways," attorney Frederick Brewington said. "It's really not about that piece of land. It's about the bigger issue. It's about affordable housing in a place that has basically locked and chained the borders."

[NY] Garden City accused of using zoning laws to discriminate against minorities (News 12, NY)
News 12
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, News 12)
GARDEN CITY - The Village of Garden City is accused of using its zoning laws to discriminate against minorities.

Diane Goins and Mary Crosson are the faces behind a housing discrimination lawsuit that's been going on for more than a decade. Crosson says she vividly remembers house hunting in the 1990s and being told not to even look at Garden City.

"I got a job and I worked, and if I wanted to put my kids in a nice neighborhood, why couldn't I do that?" she asked.

When the lawsuit was first filed back in 2005, a piece of land at the corner of Washington Avenue and 11th Street in Garden City was at the center of the case. The plot was planned to be an affordable housing development.

The village then rezoned the land, which blocked multifamily dwellings. It was a move housing advocates claimed was done deliberately to prevent minorities from moving in.

Since then, there have been several court rulings against the village, including one last week. There have also been several appeals by the village.

Attorney Fred Brewington says it's time to stop fighting and start doing what's right.

"What [the village has] done here is you've locked and chained the doors of Garden City for people who simply want to have a good place to live," said Brewington. "You've encouraged discrimination. You've encouraged hate. You've encouraged segregation and that should not be what's happening in the year 2017."

Palm Beach Post

Neighborhood leaders and the real-estate company have been working to evict the residents for the last several weeks, Sponito said Tuesday. Sponito stressed that the neighborhood association did not know about — much less approve — the residents in that townhome.

"We thought we were renting to a nice woman," Sponito said. She interviewed the renter, a single woman who claimed she would be living alone in the three-story, coral-colored house just west of the St. Louis Cardinals practice fields at Roger Dean Stadium, the baseball team's spring-training home.

It was unclear Tuesday whether their efforts would prevail. The Americans with Disabilities Act protects addicts in recovery. The federal Fair Housing Act bars housing discrimination against the disabled, essentially trumping local zoning laws that would bar businesses such as sober homes from neighborhoods.

That lease started in July. By early September, neighborhood leaders knew something was off, and that the renter had apparently allowed the sober-home group to use the house.

[MS] National Fair Housing Alliance settles race discrimination case with Mississippi real estate agents (HousingWire)

Accused Jackson agents of discriminating against minorities

The National Fair Housing Alliance announced this week that it reached a settlement with a group of Jackson, Mississippi real estate agents over allegations that the agents discriminated against both whites and blacks.

According to the NFHA, an investigation found differences in the way that Lorgroup, DBA RE/MAX Alliance, and The Lee Garland and Rita Jensen Team treated races with discrimination when they inquired about purchasing a home.

Specifically, the NFHA said that its investigation found that when "Potential White homebuyers sought housing in integrated and predominantly African American neighborhoods, they were steered away."

According to the investigation, white buyers were provided with a "Plethora of information and assistance to help them buy a home in a predominantly white area," while African American buyers "Often never even received a call back from an agent after leaving messages about purchasing a specific home in Jackson."

After conducting its investigation, NFHA filed a federal housing discrimination complaint with the Department of Housing and Urban Development against the agents and companies, which led to this settlement.

Under the terms of the settlement, Lorgroup will pay $46,000 to NFHA, participate in fair housing trainings, and display fair housing signs in its offices.

Lorgroup agreed to promote fair housing in the communities where it does business and agreed to expand equal housing opportunities for all consumers, NFHA said in a release.

"The differences in treatment uncovered in NFHA's investigation are examples of how Whites and Blacks are steered to different housing opportunities based on the racial composition of a neighborhood," NFHA's president and CEO, Shanna Smith, said in a statement.

"Steering intentionally perpetuates residential segregation and is illegal under the Fair Housing Act," Smith said. "This is why it is imperative that real estate companies work to expand equal housing opportunities for everyone. When people choose where they want to live without artificial and illegal barriers, our communities and neighborhoods are stronger."

MILLVILLE - Residents discussed local crime trends and local responses to crime at a public meeting Tuesday night called by City Commissioner David Ennis, whose final months in office has him in charge of the Public Safety Department.

The roughly two-hour meeting was at In His Presence Worship Center at East Broad and North 3rd Streets in Center City, an area that keeps police busy with a range of bad behaviors and a particular area for reports of gunfire.

Ennis, who used to be the church's pastor, said the gathering's sole purpose was to "Collectively think of alternatives to make the city a better place."

Ennis also criticized the state prison system for ineffectiveness when an audience member suggested released inmates are a factor in local crime.

He said the federal government's Section 8 housing voucher program was a problem because, in his experience, released inmates who haven't changed their ways often stay or live with someone in the program.

(9/27/2017 7:39 AM, Mid-Hudson News)
WASHINGTON – The US Department of Health and Human Services has granted Green Chimneys Children's Services $136,814 for the shelter's transitional living program for homeless youth.

Green Chimneys in Brewster serves 200 children, the majority of whom are runaway, homeless, and street youth in Putnam County.

Through their community-based services, the organization offers programs that promote positive development, healthy choices, and effective family communication. Support programs dedicated to LGBTQ youths who are homeless include residential services and career training to provide resources and develop vital skills to help them enter adulthood as healthy, responsible members of their communities.

Ultimately, the organization's goal is to reunite the child with their family and avoid juvenile detention, foster care, or mental health facilities.
The grant was announced by Congressman Sean Patrick Maloney (D, NY-18).

Nearly two years after Mayor de Blasio announced a plan to create 15,000 units of supportive housing to deal with the homelessness crisis, just 48 units are ready and occupied, The Post has learned.

Top city officials had initially said at least 250 units would be operating in 2016 — the first year of the initiative — but didn't manage to sign the first contracts with providers until December 2016.

Since then, only 48 of the 550 units promised under those contracts have come to fruition, a delay that advocates say stems from the administration's inability to find enough landlords willing to participate.

"There's a real challenge in New York City right now — which is too many rental vouchers chasing too few affordable apartments," said JoAnne Page, CEO of The Fortune Society, a nonprofit serving the formerly incarcerated.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (WROC-TV) - Homeless service advocates and providers gathered Wednesday to discuss the notion of housing as a human right.

The Housing First Symposium took place at RIT, offering a day-long workshop with training on the Housing First concept.

As the name suggests, Housing First provides a stable shelter first then addresses the issues that may have led someone to become homeless in the first place such as drug addiction.

"What is the most important thing that people need -- it's shelter, it's safety, and then they can take care of things like lifestyle choice and then they can think of higher needs on the pyramid like being a productive member of society," Amy D'Amico, co-chair of the Housing Fire Symposium said.

The event was sponsored by the Homeless Services Network, a collective of over 80 providers in Rochester who serve and house the homeless in our area.

Eighteen people spoke at a Sept. 18 public hearing in Liverpool about the proposed Meyer Manor apartment complex at 1225

Tulip St., just north of the Thruway. The wide majority opposed the development, and just three of the 18 speakers favored it. More than 95 people attended the hearing.

Because the eight-acre property is within the village, the Liverpool Board of Trustees is considering a zone-change request from R-1 to R-3 for the development's entryway. Some 90 percent of the property owned by Marvin Meyer is already zoned R-3, allowing for multiple-family dwellings.

Local developer Cosimo Zavaglia plans to purchase Meyer's property to construct a 108-apartment complex called Meyer Manor Apartments just south of the Johnson Tract neighborhood.

Before the public hearing began, village engineer Greg Sgromo reported on a recent traffic study, which suggested that the complex's estimated 162 vehicles would have no significant impact along Tulip Street. Trustee Bradley Young disagreed, saying, "I foresee accidents happening."

[NJ] Family Promise offers resources, hope to homeless (New Jersey Herald, NJ)

NEWTON --In Sussex County, homelessness remains a growing and prevalent concern. With the winter months fast approaching, organizations like Family Promise are working to ensure that local residents have access to the resources and information they need they need to stay safe and protected.

"I think that homelessness is not as visible in this area as it may be in some others," said Chris Butto, executive director of Family Promise of Sussex County, "but that doesn't mean that we are not all affected by it. We have people right here in this county who are sleeping in parks or in their cars, or wondering how they are going to keep their families off the streets. Our job is to make sure that anyone who is facing homelessness knows that they do not have to face this alone and that help is available."

According to a point-in-time study done in January by Monarch Housing Associates -- a census-style collection of data that looks at the number of homeless residents in a given area at the same time each year -- homelessness in Sussex County is up almost 24 percent from 2016.

The data indicates that 99 local persons from 52 households were experiencing homelessness at the time of the study.

HPRP's new Rockville office was donated by Miles & Stockbridge, a leading Maryland firm. The organization also provides a legal clinic nearby at the Homebuilders Care Assessment Center, a homeless men's shelter, where lawyers conduct intake of homeless residents every other month and take on their legal cases.

Montgomery County, while the wealthiest jurisdiction in the state, also has the second highest homeless population after Baltimore city, according to Maryland's Interagency Council on Homelessness' 2016 Annual Report. Because of this elevated number, HPRP chose to locate its second office in Rockville. According to Point In Time, a study conducted by the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, Montgomery County had roughly 894 homeless people as of January 2017.

Montgomery County sees an elevated number of homelessness due to the high cost of housing, the same reason for an elevated homeless population in Baltimore city, according to Fasanelli.

"If people cannot earn or receive income that is sufficient to pay the market rent, that's when [communities] see homelessness," she said.

The county government has partnered with HPRP to expand resources for the homeless population of Montgomery. Amanda Harris, the county's Department of Health and Human Services Chief of Services to End and Prevent Homelessness, said Montgomery faces a specific challenge of chronic homelessness. According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, a chronically homeless individual has a diagnosable disability, lives on the streets, in a safe haven, or in an emergency shelter, and has been homeless continuously for at least 12 months or on at least four separate occasions in the last three years that total at least 12 months.

The friend, businessman Philip Antonino, 57, of Hollywood, ran Phil and Lou's Muffler Exchange in West Park with his brother. He died Friday morning when investigators say he intervened with a homeless man who was mowing grass and being "berated" by another man.

"It was heart-wrenching, seeing him there, said Royo," president of Shoreline Foundation Inc., a marine construction business next door to the auto shop. "It's just so senseless."

The Broward Sheriff's Office said Tuesday that investigators had no further information to release about the fatal shooting. No arrests have been announced in the killing.

An apartment building in Joplin is credited with changing lives. Magnolia Heights marked its tenth anniversary today. The housing is helping people with chronic mental illness. Paul Welton shared how he went from homelessness to living at Magnolia Heights. He told guests at a celebration how his case worker suggested he apply and interview for the housing. There are twenty-three units and twenty-three residents at Magnolia Heights. It's regularly full as residents pay thirty percent of their income to live there whether it's social security, disability, or work monies. Here they are safe and supported while they work on their mental illness. Some move out but they aren't forced to ever leave. Lisa Francis, the adult community services director said, "Some of them feel they want to stay cause they don't have any friends or family. This becomes a community all unto itself." While residents said they feel like they're part of a family, it's important that the specialized help is nearby. Magnolia Heights was built with Department of Housing and Urban Development grant dollars. It's one of three complexes for adults with mental illness.

[IN] Will this finally reduce panhandling Downtown? (Indianapolis Star, IN) Indianapolis Star
(9/27/2017 8:15 AM, Amy Bartner)
A new campaign to curb panhandling and help homeless people in Downtown began Tuesday — and this time, it will create noticeable change, city leaders say.

Street Reach Indy will raise money via 20 bright blue parking meters and six cash donation boxes around Downtown. Two of the meters accept credit cards. Nine of the meters and all six boxes have already been installed for use.

The idea is that, if Downtown visitors donate to a meter or cash box instead of directly to a person asking for money, the funds will be better distributed among resources to prevent homelessness.

"There have been a lot of initiatives we have had in the past, but this is different," Alan Witchey, executive director of the Coalition for Homelessness Intervention and Prevention, or CHIP, said at a press conference at Monument Circle. "It really is a collaborative effort that hasn't been done before."

Wisconsin needs a serious plan to fight homelessness across the state. And to her credit, Lt. Gov. Rebecca Kleefisch has agreed to lead a panel to take on this important task.

Just one problem: The Legislature still hasn't created the Interagency Council on Homelessness for Kleefisch to chair.

The state Assembly unanimously voted last spring for Assembly Bill 234, which would establish the council. The secretaries of eight state agencies and other officials would serve as members. They would draft a plan to prevent and end homelessness, coordinate state efforts, and hold agencies and service providers accountable for results.

A Senate committee quickly held a public hearing on AB 234 in May, with lots of people testifying for the bill — and nobody against.

[TX] Beaumont man indicted in connection with homeless woman's death (Beaumont Enterprise, TX)

(9/27/2017 3:39 PM, Morgan Gstalter)
A Jefferson County grand jury indicted a Beaumont man today on a capital murder charge in connection with of a homeless woman in June, according to court reports.

Brandon Julian Coleman, 26, is charged with killing 54-year-old Catherine Dungan and leaving her body in Collier's Ferry Park on the night of June 24.

Surveillance videos from nearby stores allegedly show Dungan, who was homeless, getting into a silver 2005 Ford Focus registered to Coleman's mother. Eyewitnesses place Coleman in the driver's seat, according to a probable cause affidavit from the Beaumont Police Department.

Around 6:20 p.m., officers were sent to the park on Pine Street and discovered Dungan's partially nude body with her hands bound behind her back. There were signs of sexual assault, according to the affidavit.

Originally, in times of war, exhausted combat units requiring time to rest and recover were removed from the battlefields to a place of relative security and safety. The order was to stand down.

Today, Stand Down refers to a community-based intervention program designed to help the nation's homeless veterans combat life on the streets.

Pueblo's 19th Annual Homeless Veteran Stand Down is set for Friday.

The event, put on by the Pueblo County Homeless Veterans Coalition, is scheduled to be held at First Presbyterian Church, 220 W. 10th Street, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

[CO] Hepatitis A cases surge in Colorado, El Paso County (Colorado Springs Gazette, CO)
Colorado Springs Gazette
(9/27/2017 8:04 PM, Jakob Rodgers)
Hepatitis A infections are surging this year across Colorado - with dozens of people most recently exposed at a Colorado Springs homeless shelter.

Across the state, one person has died and at least 57 people have tested positive for the liver disease this year - more than double Colorado's typical annual caseload, said Dr. Rachel Herlihy, the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment's state epidemiologist.

El Paso County ranks as the hardest hit, with 12 cases so far this year, said Shannon Rowe, a county epidemiologist. Half of those people infected needed to be hospitalized, and all are recovering.

The surge comes as several other states deal with outbreaks of the virus, which is found in fecal matter and is spread through sex or through contaminated food or water. Poor hand washing is often to blame.

The Bridgeview Education and Employment Resource Center will take about 10 months to complete, so it'll be done next summer. The center is in the middle of Vancouver Housing Authority's Skyline Crest housing complex and will share a wall with the Boys & Girls Clubs of Southwest Washington's Heights O.K. 2 Clubhouse. The resource center aims to be a one-stop shop for services and supports that low-income households may otherwise have to zigzag across the county to access.

(9/27/2017 3:56 PM, Jim Holt)
Bridge to Home is one step closer to opening its homeless shelter all year.

At the city council meeting Tuesday, council members voted unanimously to turn over ownership of the property to the nonprofit and issue them a temporary use permit.

The organization can now move forward with plans to keep the shelter open every day of the year instead of only during the winter months. Bridge to Home owning the property will make more Measure H funds available than if the city maintained ownership, allowing for added funds to go toward extending the shelter.

"We need to act and to take advantage of Measure H funding," said City Council member Bill Miranda. "And, it seems to me that this is the right place to have it."

[CA] City Controller: LA should step up enforcement to stop growth of homeless encampments (Los Angeles Daily News, CA)
Los Angeles Daily News
(9/28/2017 4:41 AM, Elizabeth Chou)
With homeless encampments becoming a ubiquitous sight throughout Los Angeles, the city's current approach to tackling the problem has come up short, Los Angeles City Controller Ron Galperin concluded in a report released Wednesday.

Galperin's report examines the way the city handles encampments and lays out a series of recommendations for how the city could improve its methods.

Galperin urged fellow city leaders to take more immediate steps to address a rise in people living on Los Angeles's sidewalks and streets, saying that existing laws could be better used to address health and safety risks associated with homeless encampments.

Despite the recent approval of Proposition HHH, a bond measure aimed at constructing more homeless housing, and Measure H, a sales tax hike to raise funds for services, those steps are expected to take several years to yield results.

[CA] Hepatitis A outbreak is San Diego's Katrina as urgency underscores a slow initial response (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/28/2017 4:46 AM, San Diego Union-Tribune Editorial Board)
This may wind up as San Diego Mayor Kevin Faulconer's Katrina, but it's clear all five San Diego County supervisors were asleep at the switch, too.

This month, after lacking it for months, city and county officials finally showed a sense of urgency — ramping up vaccination, sanitation and education — to fight the nation's worst hepatitis A outbreak since a vaccine was rolled out in 1995. Now, San Diego officials have expanded sidewalk power-washing far beyond its downtown core — as cases crop up in Orange, Los Angeles and Santa Cruz counties as well as across San Diego County, from El Cajon to Chula Vista to Oceanside. One-third of our county's 461 cases are neither homeless nor illicit drug users.

Faulconer has mobilized and is now sharing frequent social media updates. But the problem is so bad that firefighters in Spring Valley may have been exposed to the virus while battling a vegetation fire in a homeless camp, Ocean Beach residents are cleaning out coastal encampments, and county officials have heard urgent pleas to help clean up feces and filth along the San Diego River for weeks.

Cooperation at the highest levels of government is essential to keep this from spiraling even more out of control. City-county emails dating to May show repeated slow activity. But at least the city responded quickly to a request for those emails. The county has yet to release its own emails about hepatitis A.

VIDEO. San Diego is expanding its efforts to curb a hepatitis A outbreak that has killed 17 people by beginning washing sidewalks with a bleach solution in beach communities, the Midway area, Uptown and Mid-City.

Cleaning began Wednesday in parts of the Midway area, Ocean Beach and Pacific Beach, and crews will work in Uptown and Mid-City on Friday.

Sidewalk sanitizing is one of the key actions the city is taking to assist the County of San Diego's efforts to eradicate the virus that has spread among the homeless population.

The city began power-washing sidewalks with a bleach solution in different areas downtown three times a week Sept. 11, following guidelines set by the County Public Health Officer to effectively kill the hepatitis A virus.

San Fernando Valley Business Journal
(9/28/2017 4:58 AM, Helen Floersh)
The Conrad N. Hilton Foundation in Agoura Hills has awarded $8.5 million in grants to combat homelessness in Los Angeles County.

The foundation's board disclosed Monday that it approved 14 grants totaling $26 million during the third quarter of 2017. In addition to funds for a reproductive health program for New York City foster youth and substance use research at the Seattle Children's Hospital, the Hilton Foundation will award $8.5 million over the next three years to the Home for Good initiative of the United Way of Greater Los Angeles.

"We are proud to continue our partnership with the United Way of Greater Los Angeles in support of the Home for Good initiative," Peter Laugharn, chief executive of the Hilton Foundation, said in a statement. "The foundation's investment alone is not enough to bring solutions to scale, and public-private partnerships such as Home for Good will allow the foundation's investment in our communities to be amplified."

Home for Good is a program that seeks to curtail chronic homelessness and homelessness among veterans. It was launched in Los Angeles in 2010 through the Business Leader's Task Force on Homelessness, a collaboration between United Way of Greater Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce, and has since expanded its efforts countywide. Its core component is a four-point action plan that includes cooperation between policy-makers and community advocates; a list of best practices for housing the homeless; a "Funders Collaborative" that makes funds from private foundations available to public agencies; and the implementation of the Coordinated Entry System, which coordinates the efforts of all homeless service providers to help individuals find the most appropriate resources for their needs.

[CA] San Diego mayor agreed to homeless hub, then delayed, advocates say (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/28/2017 4:43 AM, Jeff McDonald)
Homeless advocates say San Diego Mayor Kevin Faulconer agreed to a deal last year to push a comprehensive shelter for homeless people on city-owned property east of Interstate 5, but the plan was delayed by months for reasons that are not clear.

The agreement was to create a full-service facility to house, detoxify and counsel hundreds of people at the city corporation yard at 20th and B streets in Golden Hill.

Under the deal, the normal red tape involved in selecting a provider and site would be cleared away. The effort was to be managed by the Alpha Project charity and introduced at the mayor's State of the City address, two people involved in discussions told The San Diego Union-Tribune.

But when he made his speech in January, Faulconer didn't specify a site or a service provider.

"Finally, we are going to streamline services by creating San Diego's first integrated assessment system," the mayor told the crowd at the Balboa Theatre. "And next month I'm going to formally ask homeless service providers for their proposals to make it a reality. It's about creating a central hub."

The calendar may say autumn, but that sweat running down your neck says summer.

While it's common for the Bay Area to enjoy balmy weather in September and October, when the summer fog lifts and the sun finally emerges, a string of near-90-degree days in San Francisco is not the norm.

This week's scorcher, which follows a warm spell three weeks ago that pushed temperatures in the city to an unprecedented 106 degrees, puts the month on track to be the hottest September ever recorded in some spots across the region.

And in many places, the unusual heat, which climate scientists chalk up to a long-term warming trend, is triggering unusual responses.

[CA] L.A. controller says city should open emergency homeless campgrounds and shelters (Los Angeles Times)
Los Angeles Times
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Gale Holland)
The Los Angeles city controller recommended Wednesday using city land for emergency campgrounds and shelters to curtail the ragged shantytowns that have plagued neighborhoods from Boyle Heights to Wilmington in the current homelessness crisis.

In a 37-page report, City Controller Ron Galperin also recommended tougher policing, streamlined cleanup protocols, showers and bathrooms for homeless people and expanded storage, including mobile bins, for their belongings.

He said the city should investigate whether a 10-year-old court agreement allowing homeless people to stay overnight in public spaces is still in force, with an aim of finding more flexibility in controlling homeless tents and piles of property.

"Without creative solutions to address homeless encampments … the city will merely transfer the issue from one constituency to the next without finding a way to mitigate public health and safety risks for everyone," Galperin's report said.

[HI] Honolulu auditor criticizes city's homelessness initiatives (McClatchy Washington Bureau, DC)
McClatchy Washington Bureau
(9/28/2017 3:00 AM, Associated Press)
HONOLULU - A report by city Auditor Edwin Young criticized Honolulu's initiatives to combat homelessness, saying Mayor Kirk Caldwell and his administration are lacking benchmarks and mismanaging programs aimed at sheltering people.

The Honolulu Star-Advertiser reports that the 75-page audit submitted to the City Council on Tuesday also pointed to "a disconnect between the homelessness priority for city leaders and the resources allocated" to the Department of Community Services, which oversees housing programs.

The audit did praise the city's investment of more than $7.5 million in general fund dollars to support three programs, but questioned whether that can continue using general funds.

Councilman Ernie Martin said he was disappointed by the findings of the report because the administration and Council have made homelessness a priority.

[CT] Judge encouraged by update of Thames River progress (New London Day -theday.com, CT)
New London Day
(9/27/2017 8:16 PM, Greg Smith)
New London — A judge who in 2014 signed an agreement to end a class-action lawsuit and ensure new homes for the tenants at the troubled Thames River Apartments said he is so far satisfied with the recent progress the city and its housing authority have made in trying to provide new homes for families at the high-rises.

"The process languished for a while," Judge David M. Sheridan said. "At present, I'm satisfied from everything I've heard that the process is on track. The momentum is still there."

Sheridan joined a teleconference at the offices of The Reardon Law Firm on Wednesday for a status report from Mayor Michael Passero, Housing Authority Executive Director Roy Boling, Housing Authority board of commissioners Chairwoman Betsy Gibson and several attorneys. Robert Reardon, who has represented tenants pro bono for more than a decade, assembled the group after threatening to reopen the case because of what he said were further deteriorating conditions at the Crystal Avenue high-rises.

His original lawsuit focused on unsanitary and unsafe conditions there.

Reardon has continued to push for progress because the Housing Authority had failed to adhere to the timeline in the 2014 stipulated judgment ordering updated homes for tenants of the federally subsidized and outdated apartment complex.

The authority, beset by setbacks that included stalled plans for a replacement housing complex, decided to pursue mobile Section 8 vouchers and abandon the high-rises.

The Housing Authority found out on Wednesday that the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development is expected to approve the authority's application for a disposition of the Thames River complex and issue the vouchers. Boling said he expects an approval letter by Monday.

On Oct. 12 there will be a meeting with Thames River tenants to discuss the voucher distribution process with HUD officials and representatives of the Glendower Group, the organization hired to handle the relocation process.

On Tuesday, September 19, Bishop Mitchell Taylor, Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney, Assemblywoman Catherine Nolan, NYC Majority Leader Jimmy Van Bramer, Tenants Association President April Simpson, Peoples United Bank Assistant Vice President Amy Flores, and Urban Upbound joined to announce the launch of the new employment and financial empowerment office space in the Queensbridge Houses. Urban Upbound will continue its work aimed at increasing the financial stability of public housing residents who find themselves in crisis.

With the assistance of Urban Upbound, residents will be able to access financial counseling and education services, ranging from short-term financial crisis counseling and financial education workshops, to longer-term one-on-one financial counseling focused on asset building and debt reduction. Financial counselors address strategies to repair credit, access work supports such as food stamps, health benefits, Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) and Earned Income Disregard (EID). Urban Upbound also works to connect un-banked and under-banked residents to the Urban Upbound Federal Credit Union for banking services to help them avoid high-priced check cashing companies and predatory lenders. The credit union offers affordable savings accounts, credit builder loans, and free NYCHA rent payment processing.

Urban Upbound also announced the launch of two new initiatives: The Building Wealth Club, which will provide residents with tools and resources necessary to excel in entrepreneurial business development and home ownership; and a Digital Intelligence program that will teach individuals coding and information technology, helping them to secure jobs in the technology sector.

[NY] Bed bugs becoming big problem in Ogdensburg (WWTI-TV ABC 50, Watertown, NY)

Bed bugs have reportedly been an issue for some time in Watertown, and now the creepy crawlies are apparently affecting people in St. Lawrence County.

Residents of two apartment complexes in Ogdensburg said there has been an infestation over the last year. It's apparently so bad, the mayor called it a "major catastrophe."

The director of Ogdensburg Housing Authority indicated 21 apartments in total between the two separate buildings have had cases of bed bugs.

People living there are complaining that not enough is being done to get rid of the insects, but the Housing Authority indicated it is working with public health and will continue with its current extermination process.

[NY] NYCHA Responds to Our Article About Crime Victims Seeking New Apartments (City Limits, New York, NY)
City Limits
(9/27/2017 10:18 AM, City Limits)
On September 20, City Limits published the story "NYCHA Crime Witnesses Face Obstacles When They Seek Safety." This week NYCHA submitted a letter to the editor reacting to that article.

NYCHA writes: We are writing to correct the record regarding the emergency transfer process at the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA Crime Witnesses Face Obstacles When They Seek Safety," September 20, 2017). NYCHA is improving our emergency transfer policies and the results are tangible: the average time to process an emergency transfer decreased 31 percent from 2015 to 2017. We digitized emergency transfer forms and records to make it faster and easier to process and manage cases, provided new training on VAWA regulations and residents can now apply for an emergency transfer online through our online resident portal.

The article fundamentally misunderstands the process and challenges with emergency transfers and grossly misstates the vacant apartment tracking system. For example, the article conflates numerous emergency transfer categories and policies, removing nuance that is critical to understanding the issue. The simple fact is that NYCHA is at 99 percent occupancy. The housing affordability crisis in the city means families are simply not moving. If emergency transfer applicants have additional needs (a particular neighborhood, number of bedrooms or medical needs) relocation becomes even more challenging. Today, NYCHA has only 958 open apartments throughout all 5 boroughs. We have 398 VAWA emergency transfer requests, in addition to 809 medical transfer requests, and 9,920 transfer requests for other critical needs.

Furthermore, the article relies on incorrect crime data, falsely reinforcing a negative stereotype of life in public housing; NYPD data shows that crime is down 7.2 percent throughout NYCHA in 2017.

We strive to be as transparent and accessible as possible, which is why we'll continue to communicate to residents, advocates and all New Yorkers as we improve our emergency transfer policies.

City Limits responds: It is unclear how our article "fundamentally misunderstood" the process or "grossly misstated" the system for tracking vacant apartments. In the story in question, author Ese Olumhense acknowledged many of the points made in this letter: that changes to the system had occurred, that some measures of performance had improved, that NYCHA's low vacancy rate was a real obstacle and that "families that stay on the waiting list a long time are likely hard to place because they are very large or very small family sizes, which don't fit the majority of the vacant apartments." A NYCHA spokesperson did speak with Olumhense, but declined to be interviewed for attribution.

[NY] Developer accuses Newburgh of reneging on deal, seeks new vote on letter (Middletown Times Herald-Record, NY)
Middletown Times Herald-Record
(9/27/2017 7:43 PM, Leonard Sparks)
CITY OF NEWBURGH — A developer Newburgh selected five years ago to build 91 units of affordable apartments and a street-level grocery store on Broadway is again accusing city officials of defaulting on its agreement for the $31 million project.

Mill Street Partners LLC attorney David Cooper cited the City Council's vote against a letter supporting the lifting of a recently discovered deed restriction on one of the city-owned properties slated for the project. The complaint was in a letter sent last week to Mayor Judy Kennedy and Council members.

The restriction, discovered by longtime project opponent Stuart Sachs, limited the use of 18 Johnston St. to "municipal purposes" when the Housing Authority transferred ownership to the city in 1956.

The Housing Authority, which now counts Sachs as a board member, has refused to vote on lifting the restriction without a support letter from the Council even though Newburgh's elected officials have already issued support letters for the project.

[NJ] Hoboken's Carmelo Garcia appointed acting director of housing agency in Newark (Hudson Reporter, NJ)

Carmelo Garcia, Hoboken resident and former executive director of the Hoboken Housing Authority, has been appointed acting director of the Newark Department of Economic Development, according to reports. Garcia has replaced Baye Adofo-Wilson, who according to reports handed in his letter of resignation a few weeks ago. Garcia has been serving as the chief real estate officer and executive vice president of the Newark Community Economic Development Corporation and joined the NCEDC in 2015. He previously served as a New Jersey State Assemblyman before recently stepping down. Garcia was terminated as the executive director of Hoboken's federally funded Hoboken Housing Authority in 2014 after a vote by the HHA's board of commissioners and Hoboken City Council. The HHA sued Garcia in the Hudson County Superior Court, alleging that Garcia violated U.S Department of Housing and Urban Development regulations and broke "good faith and faith dealing" by allegedly approving or rejecting procurement contracts without the board's consent in April 2016. Garcia has filed a lawsuit that claimed that Zimmer, her husband Stan Grossbard, and members of the HHA conspired to have him removed from his position because he did not support the mayor's agenda.

[NJ] New homes to rise where Montgomery Gardens was demolished (NJ.com, NJ)

(9/27/2017 7:37 AM, Kirsten Kelelr)
Where three buildings were once leveled with the flip of a switch, a new building will rise. And it started the old-fashioned way -- with a few shovels in the ground.

Jersey City officials, along state and federal officials and the developer, broke ground last week on a mixed-income apartment complex at the site of the former Montgomery Gardens public housing complex.

The Montgomery Gardens Family Phase 1 project, being developed by Michaels Development Company, is being funded by a combination of sources, including $13.9 million in federal Community Development Block Grant Disaster Recovery assistance.

The building will have 126 units one- to four-bedroom units, including seven for homeless families. There will be 26 units available as public housing replacement units, 52 available as project-based Section 8 units, 43 available to individuals who do not exceed 60 percent of the median income in Hudson County, and five units available at market rate.

"We are grateful to once again be partnering with the Jersey City Housing Authority to bring beautiful, high-quality affordable housing to families of all income levels," Gary Buechler, president of The Michaels Development Company, said in a statement.

How It Will Work

Enrollment begins Monday, but a special early enrollment period will be available Thursday and Friday at the Metro Transit Service Center at 719 Marquette Ave. in Minneapolis, which is open 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The Transit Assistance Program is open to individuals and families who make up to 50 percent of the median area income, according to Metro Transit. Applicants should bring proof of acceptance to other assistance programs such as free/reduced lunch, WIC or Section 8 along with valid photo identification or a utility bill to the Metro Transit service stations in Minneapolis or St. Paul (in the Skyway level of U.S. Bank Center, 101 E. Fifth St.).

Some organizations such as Project for Pride in Living and Minneapolis Public Housing also will process applications.

WHO WILL BENEFIT

The program will help families such as those with several teenagers who have to pay adult transit fares but haven't yet entered the job market, said Kayona Adams, community engagement specialist for the Minneapolis Public Housing Authority

[AZ] Eloy gives back land to housing authority (Pinal Central, AZ)
Pinal Central
(9/27/2017 4:16 PM, Caela Fox)
Officials are sorting out confusion over addresses and land ownership for some public housing that has been in existence since the 1960s. The Eloy Housing Authority started doing title searches when it identified that four properties that were developed in the 1960s were still owned by the City of Eloy rather then by the Eloy Housing Authority like was thought. Under a Declaration of Trust and an Annual Contributions Contract with the part of Housing and Urban Development the properties were required to be in the name of the "Eloy Housing Authority" in order to receive the operation subsidy for each unit. As a result, the management agent is requesting that the council authorize the city to transfer the ownership of all four units over to the Eloy Housing Authority. One of the biggest reasons that the Eloy Housing Authority wants ownership transferred is that the houses on the parcels need to be renovated desperately. All the houses on the four parcels were built by the Public Housing Department back in the 1960s. Because of the Declaration of Trust, HUB indicated that the parcels needed to be transferred to the Housing Authority because they are under this trust and the parcels have also been receiving HUD operating subsidy for the past 48 years.

KPAX-TV 8 Missoula
(9/27/2017 11:56 PM, Augusta McDonnell)
VIDEO. MISSOULA - New models for veterans living with chronic homelessness that provide housing and care are being implemented in Missoula County.

The U.S. Department of Veteran's Affairs mandated earlier this year that organizations that support housing homeless veterans with per diem grant funding must reapply using new applications.

Per diem grants award funding based on the number of beds filled per-day at an organization providing supportive housing.

This came as a surprise for two Missoula organizations: the Valor House, which operates in conjunction with the Missoula Housing Authority, and the Housing Montana Heroes program through the Poverello Center.

After they received notice that their current grants would expire at the end of September 2017, they jumped to the task of securing funding.

According to Missoula Housing Authority director Laurie Davidson, the Valor House is very happy to be able to continue their services.

[CA] American Indian Health Poised to Take Over Army Reserve (Santa Barbara Independent, CA)
Santa Barbara Independent
(9/28/2017 4:49 AM, Nick Welsh)
American Indian Health & Services, perhaps Santa Barbara's least-known health clinic, is hoping to take over the Army Reserve Center adjoining MacKenzie Park. When the Department of Defense declared the long-unused building surplus property in May, the Department of Health & Human Services announced it wanted to acquire the 2.5 acres for the clinic, which has operated since 1994 out of a sprawling network of offices in El Mercado shopping center on the 4100 block of State Street.

The health center currently serves 7,000 patients annually, of which about 15 percent are Native Americans, and it meets the federal standards for a qualified health center that the government is obligated to provide for urban-dwelling Native Americans. It offers primary, dental, behavioral wellness, and pediatric care to clients who make 200 percent or less of the federal poverty level.

Brent Baldwin, attorney for the center, said the new digs would allow for the creation of a special pediatric area with its own waiting room and more space for its large dental program. Each department has at least one Native American on staff to ensure culturally competent care. There is no connection, however, with the Chumash tribe that operates a clinic in the Santa Ynez Valley.

The old Army Reserve Center was once part of a medical campus built on the eve of World War II. "As far as land-use issues in Santa Barbara, I can imagine few better than bringing a health-care clinic back to the site of a former hospital," said Baldwin, who also noted that one of every five patients using the American Indian offices is a drop-in customer. "I know we keep people from Cottage's ER," he said.

Other possible contenders for the property are the City of Santa Barbara, to expand MacKenzie Park, and the Housing Authority, for affordable housing. Before any decision can be made, however, the federal General Services Administration has to determine a sale price. Then negotiations can begin.

[VI] Tutu Hi-Rise residents surviving day by day (Virgin Islands Daily News, VI)
Virgin Islands Daily News
(9/27/2017 6:14 AM, Suzanne Carlson)
Nearly three weeks after Hurricane Irma hit, some residents on St. Thomas are still living in the blown-out wreckage of apartments at Tutu Hi-Rise without food, water, or power.

"I am fed up and tired," Leonise Greig-Powell, 75, said Monday at her apartment in Building 14. "No one look on me you know because I am a ghetto, I live in the ghettos. Nobody want to talk to people that live in the ghettos. But people that live in the ghettos is human."

Born and raised in Trinidad, Greig-Powell said she's a U.S. citizen who has been on St. Thomas for 40 years. She's lived in Tutu Hi-Rise for more than seven years, despite having requested and been approved for a transfer to a different community to escape the area's gun violence. Her husband, Vincent Powell, died three years ago and she lives alone.

Her two sons were shot and killed on St. Thomas – Henry Greig, 19 and Akil Greig Sr., 33 – and while her grandson, Akil Greig Jr., 18, had been helping her, he was shot and killed in April.

Given her long history with gun violence, Greig-Powell's doctor wrote letters to the V.I. Housing Authority in 2013 and again in 2015, asking that she be moved to a safer unit. Being in an area where she's not "constantly exposed to the sound of gunshots near her apartment" would improve her mental and physical health, her doctor wrote.

The Housing Authority wrote her a letter on Feb. 29, 2016, saying her transfer request had been approved, and she would be placed on a waiting list.

The Suburb of the Future, Almost Here (Save Marinwood-Lucas Valley, CA)
Save Marinwood-Lucas Valley
(9/27/2017 4:13 PM, Save Marinwood-Lucas Valley)
Housing affordability is a major driver of the appeal of suburbia, which has historically been, and still is, more affordable, especially for first-time home buyers.

Yet millennial suburbanites want a new kind of landscape. They want breathing room but disdain the energy wastefulness, visual monotony and social conformity of postwar manufactured neighborhoods. If new suburbs can hit the sweet spot that accommodates the priorities of that generation, millennial habitats will redefine everyday life for all suburbanites, which is 70 percent of Americans.

How can technology, revolutionary design and planning transform suburban living?

Climate will determine how environmental goals can be achieved in a given place: solar in the Sunbelt, say, or advanced water management in the rainy regions like the Pacific Northwest. Suburbs of the same age or size don't share the same potential benefits or needs. Here are some ideas to shape future suburbs into smart, efficient and more sustainable places to live.

FBI, SEC looking into PACE lender Renovate America (HousingWire)

WSJ reports on inquiries, company responds

The Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Securities and Exchange Commission are looking into the business of the nation's largest green lenders.

On Tuesday, the Wall Street Journal reported that the FBI and SEC are probing the business of Renovate America, which provides loans as part of the Property Assessed Clean Energy program.

The loans, also called PACE loans, allow homeowners to obtain financing to make improvements to their homes to increase the home's energy efficiency. PACE loans are often used to add solar panels to a home.

But the program is shrouded in controversy because in some states, PACE liens are given super priority status above the home's mortgage, which many in the mortgage business take serious issue with.

[TX] Houston may not have an exodus, but it does face 'moment of truth' (Houston Chronicle, TX)
Houston Chronicle
(9/27/2017 4:16 PM, Matt Dulin)
In the months to come, flood-fatigued residents and businesses may be reconsidering their options, and city leaders will need to take steps to restore confidence to prevent population loss or slowed growth, experts in housing and demographics say.

"This is a moment of truth for Houston," said Stephen Klineberg, who has been studying Houston for 36 years and was founding director of the Kinder Institute for Urban Research at Rice University.

While observers agree that Houston won't experience a massive population decline like New Orleans post-Katrina, the challenges posed by Harvey could knock Houston's economy down a notch in the long run.

"Houston has to show it is taking steps as it rebuilds itself in a more resilient way. If it doesn't do that, it does really run the risk of losing people," Klineberg said. "The source of wealth in the 21st century will have less to do with our location and more to do with our ability to attract the best and the brightest."

America's Most and Least Distressed Cities (The Atlantic CityLab)

A new analysis puts data to the sentiment that there's increasing inequality between cities.

We know there's a widening geographic economic gap in the United States, most vividly described in the months leading up to the 2016 election as a battle between the "left behind" and the "coastal elites." Now we have new detail on how that breaks down by locality. One in six Americans are living in ZIP codes that are considered economically "distressed," according to the Economic Innovation Group's 2017 Distressed Communities Index. More than 84 million others—one in four—live in communities that are considered prosperous.

"You have at the top a really strong, booming, disproportionate amount of growth happening in elite communities," explains John Lettieri, EIG's senior director for policy and strategy. "And at the bottom it's not just that the gap is getting bigger between top and bottom—it's that they're pulling in opposite directions."

By tracking data from over 26,000 ZIP codes, the Distressed Community Index sorted cities, counties, and congressional districts into tiers based on their economic well-being: prosperous, comfortable, mid-tier, at risk, and distressed.

Cities are ranked based on seven criteria: housing vacancy rate, adults not working, the poverty rate, median income ratio, change in employment, and change in business establishments. The higher the rank on each of these metrics, the more distressed they are. Note that by other measures, even cities deemed "prosperous" suffer from other problems of affordability and intracity inequality.

Senators Susan Collins and Angus King announced that the Aroostook Band of Micmacs and the Penobscot Indian Nation have each received $600,000 through the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Indian Community Development Block Grant Program (ICDBG). "Indian Community Development Block Grants provide important assistance to tribal communities working to maintain and improve safe living environments," said Senators Collins and King in a joint statement. "We welcome these investments in Maine's tribal communities, which will help provide affordable housing for members of Maine's tribes." The ICDBG program helps grant recipients to obtain decent housing, a suitable living environment, and economic opportunities.

VIDEO. LONG BRANCH - What does the general public stand to gain from the ongoing makeover of Pier Village and its expanding footprint of multimillion-dollar luxury condos?

The mayor and City Council members have sought to answer that question, after approving $20 million in taxpayer-backed bonds for the final phase of the Pier Village redevelopment. Their answer: hundreds of construction jobs; hundreds of permanent jobs; new shopping and entertainment amenities; new business opportunities for locals; and more boardwalk.

The $20 million will be used to finance the public amenities that are part of a $283 million addition that will bring more luxury condos and retail to the beach. The council voted 5-0 Tuesday in favor of putting up the funds.

"This will help the economy and the local workforce,'" said Councilwoman Mary Jane Celli.

Residents of Elizabeth looked back at 40 years of accomplishments thanks tot he Elizabeth Development Company on Wednesday evening. The EDC is a public non-profit that works with the city and mayor to promote economic revitalization and to revitalize the city's neighborhoods.

"We enjoy linkage between the city and the city and the business community, and we do programs that benefit citizens like job training," said Bill O'Dea, Executive Director of the Elizabeth Development Company.

Among the group's achievements including bringing Elizabeth the Jersey Gardens Mall, the #1 tourist attraction in the state, drawing almost 20 million visitors in 2016.

The non-profit honored several neighborhood leaders, including State Senator Raymond Lesniak, who received the lifetime achievement award.

"He was instrumental in many of the economic development state legislation that enabled projects like the Jersey Gardens Mall to happen," O'Dea said.

Other honorees included Mayor Chris Bollwage, the Housing Authority of the City of Elizabeth, and Investors Bank, who won the community partner award.

Alexander said County Mayor Richard Stewart also pushed hard to get the ball rolling toward getting Huntland a sewer system.

"Everyone began to do their part – they got the grant written, they got the information gathered and then we began to monitor it at the state level," Alexander said.

Community Development Block Grants are awarded once a year to communities that qualify for them, and Alexander said it is his goal and desire that Franklin County's leadership will come together each year and qualify for the funds until Huntland's sewage system is successfully in place.

"All CDBG grants have to go through the governor's office, nothing happens unless Gov. Haslam signs off on them," he said.

[LA] Council voting on Broome's revised plan to shake up three city-parish agencies (Baton Rouge Business Report, LA)
Baton Rouge Business Report
(9/27/2017 5:11 PM, Sam Karlin)
Ahead of today's Metro Council vote, Mayor Sharon Weston Broome's administration has tweaked its plan to shake up three major City Hall departments handling blight, redevelopment and housing programs with federal money. Broome's transition team had initially recommended merging the Office of Community Development-which is under the mayor's control-with the East Baton Rouge Redevelopment Authority and East Baton Rouge Housing Authority. After announcing a more tempered plan to "realign" two of those-the OCD and RDA-Broome last month added the Housing Authority back into her plan. The realignment would shake up staffing and funding at the agencies, but stops short of merging them. Changes to the somewhat obscure agencies would significantly shift the way the city-parish spends millions of federal dollars that are earmarked for public housing programs, flood remediation and anti-poverty measures, among other things. If the council votes to approve the measures, HOME and CDBG funds will be funneled to the RDA.

The Housing Authority will handle section 8 programs, and two other programs will go to the Division of Human Development Services. All the programs are funded by the federal government, which dictates specific rules for how its monies can be spent. While some council members have voiced concern about the move, Rowdy Gaudet, Broome's assistant chief administrative officer who has been handling the realignment, says he feels confident going into the vote after days of meetings with council members. He plans to pitch the move as a way for the city-parish to become more efficient. Others, like councilmembers Chauna Banks and Tara Wicker, say concern over those expected efficiencies have already caused some employees to take early retirement and others to take pay cuts. If the mayor's office doesn't do anything, some worry the federal government will withhold millions of dollars in much needed programs. Last year the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development found that the city-parish OCD misspent $1.3 million in federal money.

The Michigan Economic Development Corp. is distributing $23.2 million in grants under an initiative established last year, the Infrastructure Capacity Enhancement grant program. It's intended to boost economic growth and help low- and moderate-income communities upgrade public infrastructure.

The City of Amarillo's Community Development department offers a special program designed to assist in the demolition and clearance of slum and blight in low-to-moderate income neighborhoods. The program – funded by U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and administered through the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) – is a high priority of the department ensuring the stabilization of neighborhoods through improving appearance, public safety, and redevelopment.

The Demolition and Clearance Program offers financial assistance to qualified property owners for the demolition and clearance of substandard structures or accumulations of junk and debris. Property owners must qualify as low-to-moderate income to receive assistance and may obtain applications in the Community Development office located in the Simms Municipal Building, 808 S. Buchanan St.

[TX] Preserving Westside Homes in the 'Decade of the Neighborhood' (The Rivard Report, TX)
The Rivard Report
(9/28/2017 1:22 AM, Jeffrey Sullivan)
This year the City has $9 million to spend on owner-occupied rehabilitation programs in San Antonio. Of that, $6.5 million came from the federal Community Development Block Grants and HOME Investment Partnerships Program, and $2.5 million from City funding for the Under 1 Roof Program, which finances the repair or replacement of damaged and aging roofs.

"It's an effort to address the issue that I see happening in my district and districts all over the city where homes are being demolished at an alarming rate," said Councilman Roberto Treviño (D1), who created the program.

He credits COPS/Metro and their Owner Occupied advocacy for the $2.5 million that was allocated to the program this year. Linda Ortega, the organization's housing co-chair, says the funding fulfilled a commitment from the city.

"We've always been working in housing," said Linda Ortega, COPS/Metro's housing co-chair. "City Council committed and we were able to get more than $9 million … for owner-occupied housing rehab."

In addition to the efforts of COPS/Metro, the Avenida Guadalupe Association, a community development corporation engaged in neighborhood revitalization, sees assisting homeowners as a way to make sure that their assets don't turn into burdens.

"We know that owning the house is a part of your pathway to family economic success," said Gabriel Velasquez, the group's executive director. "But if your house is deteriorating it becomes a burden."

Funding the Under 1 Roof program is one way the City is investing in its current affordable housing stock. Mayor Ron Nirenberg's recently formed housing task force is tasked with simultaneously creating new housing to meet rising demands and mitigating some impacts of development in older neighborhoods. The initiative comes at a time when the future of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) funding for similar programs is uncertain: President Donald Trump's 2018 budget may cut as much as $6 million from the department.

[TX] Final decision on NELCDC coming Thursday (Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, TX)

(9/27/2017 8:24 PM, Matt Dotray)
The city council will make its final decision on whether or not to continue funding the North and East Lubbock Community Development Corp. at its meeting Thursday.

The alternative, which the Lubbock City Council voted to have details crafted at the last meeting, is to fund more home owner rehabilitation programs in the area. The city predicts the community development department could help renovate a minimum of 20 homes a year in East Lubbock.

According to the city, home rehabilitations would include ramp installations, roof repairs, replacing doors and windows, heating and cooling repairs and sewer line replacements.

The city council voted 5-2 at the last meeting to have City Manager Jarrett Atkinson craft a plan detailing exactly how this program will be implemented, what reporting requirements will be required and defining the exact boundaries of eligible homes.

[MN] St. Paul City Council expected to vote Wednesday on divisive Ford site plan (Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune, MN)
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune
(9/27/2017 12:02 PM, Jessie Van Berkel)
The council will hold a second public hearing on the divisive zoning and public realm master plan at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday. City officials continued last week's lengthy hearing because it coincided with Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year celebration.

The plan would divide the 122-acre site in Highland Park into six districts, with the least dense development closest to the Mississippi River. The tallest buildings would be six stories, but developers could build up to 10 stories if they add parkland elsewhere on the property, under an amendment by Council Member Chris Tolbert.

Opponents say the plan's inclusion of housing for 4,320 to 7,200 people at the site would overwhelm the surrounding neighborhood and clog the streets. But supporters say the plan appropriately prepares for the future growth of St. Paul.

The Council is expected to vote after the public hearing Wednesday, but their final adoption of the plan would likely occur the following week. They could decide this week to alter the plan's affordable housing requirements, after Council Member Dai Thao called for a larger percentage of the housing to serve low-income residents.

Councilmember Roger Aceves was the only one willing to vote for the new proposal — bolstered by the 15 people who spoke in its favor, many employed or living at Westar — saying, "I love Option B." He thought elevators were needed for the elderly as well as the disabled and reminded that the two-story project was preferable to the original three-story live/work buildings.

Mayor Paula Perotte was one of the council who said she used the Winchester alternative and had been the sole vote against Westar back in 2012. She added her "no" vote to the 4:1 majority against, as did councilmembers Kyle Richards, Stuart Kasdin, and Michael Bennett, agreeing with the 40 or so who'd written in protest of the project and the 11 who spoke in person during the three-hour session. If the developer wanted to try again, Richards suggested, Westar could try to find benefits the city needed, like affordable housing or more studio apartments, and try to avoid the density problem.

Bennett took the long view, stating he'd just returned from the League of Cities meeting in Sacramento and warning of more loss of local control to come from two bills in the Legislature. He also reminded that the Regional Housing Need Allocation (RHNA) would not go away, a state mandate to increase housing statewide incorporated into Goleta's General Plan. The Housing Element of the 2014 General Plan showed a total of 546 units remained to be built. Of those, 42 percent were designated low or very low income.

The GOP tax plan, explained in simplest possible terms (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/27/2017 12:33 PM, Heather Long)
The big tax code makeover President Trump and Republicans have been promising for months is finally out.

It's nine pages long. That may sound like a lengthy document, but the final bill in Congress will be hundreds of pages. What the White House released today is a framework. It's a summary of what top Trump officials and congressional Republican leaders have agreed to so far. The Trump administration says it's the job of Congress to flesh out the specifics.

What's in there for the rich?

The wealthy get a tax cut. They will pay only 35 percent on their income taxes (down from 39.6 percent). At the moment, this rate applies to any income above about $418,000. It's unclear if Congress will tinker with the income level that rate kicks in at. Trump says he would be fine with Congress raising taxes on the rich in the final plan, but he isn't requiring that they do that.

The bigger tax break for the rich is the elimination of the estate tax, sometimes called the "death tax." It's the tax families currently pay when an asset like a house or ranch worth over $5.49 million is passed down to a heir after someone dies. Trump's plan scraps this tax entirely.

Six Takeaways From The New GOP Tax Plan: First Off, It's Not A Plan (Forbes)
Forbes
(9/27/2017 4:58 PM, Howard Gleckman)
President Trump and the congressional Republican leadership released their newest highly-promoted tax plan Wednesday. Although the president promised Tuesday it would be a "very comprehensive report," it is in fact only a broad outline that is silent on key details. It sketches out big tax cuts for businesses and high-income households, modest tax cuts for middle-income taxpayers, and simplification of the individual tax code—all of which would reduce federal revenues by trillions of dollars over the next decade.

Here are six key takeaways from the framework:

It is not a plan. Much like the White House effort last April, it is little more than a rough outline. Trump is approaching tax reform very differently than President Reagan, who kicked off the debate over what would become the Tax Reform Act of 1986 with a comprehensive opening bid. Wednesday's document leaves out many crucial details. It even fails to identify individual tax brackets (it describes the rates but not the income levels to which they'd apply). Oddly, it describes three individual income tax rates—12-25-35--then says a fourth higher bracket "may apply."

It isn't tax reform. It is a tax cut. There is no plausible way Congress can fully fund all of the tax cuts in this outline while complying with its constraints on revenue-raisers. Businesses would receive the biggest tax cuts, which would ultimately benefit the highest income households.

Trump, Republicans Unveil Tax Reform Blueprint (U.S. News & World Report)
U.S. News & World Report
(9/27/2017 11:34 AM, Andrew Soergel)
President Donald Trump and GOP lawmakers on Wednesday are unveiling a long-awaited tax reform blueprint designed to lower corporate tax burdens, reduce the number of income tax brackets from seven to three and double the size of Americans' standard deductions in a bid to bolster take-home pay for those in the middle class.

Senior administration officials this week teased details of the plan during a conference call with reporters, though they noted much of the fine print would have to be worked out within congressional tax-writing committees.

They had not, for example, ironed out exactly how much workers would have to make to be placed in one of the plan's new personal income tax brackets. But they did confirm that the Trump-backed plan targets taxing individuals and families at either a 12 percent, 25 percent or 35 percent rate, depending on how much they earn in a given year.

The officials also said the Trump administration and senior GOP officials had left room for lawmakers to introduce a fourth tax bracket for the country's ultra-wealthy, should they deem such a category necessary during committee deliberations.

Trump Proposes the Most Sweeping Tax Overhaul in Decades (New York Times)
New York Times
(9/27/2017 3:43 PM, Julie Hirschfeld Davis and Alan Rappeport)
VIDEO. INDIANAPOLIS — President Trump on Wednesday began a full-throttle push to slash taxes and salvage what is left of his foundering legislative agenda in Congress, proposing a politically challenging array of tax cuts for individuals and businesses that would constitute the most sweeping changes to the federal tax code in decades.

Mr. Trump, smarting from the latest defeat this week of his efforts to dismantle the Affordable Care Act, cast his tax plan as an economic imperative and the fulfillment of a promise to his coalition of working-class supporters to deliver benefits in the form of lower taxes, better jobs and higher wages. But the president offered few details about how working people might benefit from a plan that has explicit and substantial rewards for wealthy people and corporations, including the elimination of taxes on large inheritances and deep reductions in the rates paid by businesses large and small.

"This is a revolutionary change, and the biggest winners will be middle class workers as jobs start pouring into our country, as companies start competing for American labor, and as wages continue to grow," Mr. Trump told hundreds of supporters in a nondescript building at the Indiana State Fair Grounds. "This will be the lowest top marginal income tax rate for small and midsize businesses in more than 80 years."

Whatever the economic effects, the political stakes of the plan were unmistakable for a president who is desperate to score a legislative win before his first year in office draws to a close. In an apparent nod to the harsh political realities the tax plan faces and festering divisions among Republicans that have derailed the rest of his agenda, Mr. Trump made an explicit bid to Democrats to support the plan. However, Republican congressional leaders and senior White House officials have said privately they expect to use special budget rules that would allow them to get the bill through Congress without Democratic support.

GOP tax plan short on details (Politico)
Politico
(9/27/2017 4:52 PM, Theodoric Meyer)
Republicans' tax "proposal released Wednesday morning by the so-called Big Six is heavy on the GOP's tax cut desires and light when it comes to explaining whose taxes will have to go up to help control costs," POLITICO's Brian Faler and Rachael Bade report. There's a reason for that: "The negotiators opted to leave out the deductions they wanted to eliminate because they could not agree on the final list and did not want to provoke D.C.'s well-paid army of tax lobbyists, according to two people familiar with the negotiations," POLITICO's Nancy Cook and Ben White report. "'K Street lives and gets paid to kill tax reform,' said Douglas Holtz-Eakin, president of the conservative think tank, American Action Forum, and a former director of the Congressional Budget Office. 'That is the generic issue with tax reform. It is routinely blown up by the business community.'"

— Still, the details released this morning were enough for one powerful trade group to announce they'd endorse the plan, POLITICO's Lorraine Woellert reports. "'It's a winning combination,' NAHB Chief Executive Officer Jerry Howard told POLITICO. 'We think the Gang of Six hit a home run here.' He cited the tax cuts for businesses and the middle class, as well as the plan's 'clearly stated commitment to homeownership.' The endorsement is a major shift for the group, which had vowed to challenge an increase in the standard deduction. Raising the deduction, they argued, would devalue the mortgage interest deduction."

GOP proposes deep tax cuts, provides few details on how to pay for them (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/27/2017 7:51 PM, Damian Paletta, Mike DeBonis and Carolyn Y. Johnson)
Republican leaders on Wednesday proposed slashing tax rates for the wealthy, the middle class and businesses while preserving popular tax deductions that encourage buying homes and giving to charity, hoping to unify the party behind a proposal to revamp the U.S. tax code.

But the nine-page framework they released to kick off negotiations left many key questions unanswered, including how they plan to avoid adding trillions of dollars to the government's debt. The framework leaned heavily on limiting taxes paid by the wealthiest Americans, such as the alternative-minimum tax, and opposition to these changes from Democrats suggest it will be a battleground as negotiations intensify.

Republicans were also careful not to identify numerous tax breaks they might remove, focusing instead on promises to lower rates so much that President Trump estimated the effort would amount to the biggest tax cut of all time.

The "unified framework" was meant to serve as a starting point for negotiations on a tax deal, which lawmakers hope to complete by the end of the year. Republican leaders are now tasked with resolving controversial questions to unite their party — and possibly some Democrats — behind tax legislation, such as what corporate tax breaks to protect and how much revenue they are willing to lose in pursuit of new economic growth.

GOP Tax Framework: 20 Percent Corporate, 35 Percent Top Individual Rates (Roll Call)
Roll Call
(9/27/2017 8:18 PM, Lindsey McPherson)
Nine-page document provides few new details

The Republican tax overhaul framework calls for cutting tax rates to 20 percent for corporations, 25 percent for small businesses and 35 percent for high-income individuals.

The nine-page document provides only a few other new details about GOP plans for rewriting the tax code. Many of the policies outlined in the framework are ones included in the House Republicans' "A Better Way" plan released last year.

This framework is a product of the so-called Big Six tax negotiators: House Speaker Paul D. Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, House Ways and Means Chairman Kevin Brady, Senate Finance Chairman Orrin G. Hatch, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and White House chief economic adviser Gary Cohn.

The 20 percent corporate rate and 25 percent small-business rate were part of the House plan; President Donald Trump had been pushing for a 15 percent corporate rate.

On the individual side, the framework calls for collapsing the existing seven tax brackets into three with rates of 12, 25, and 35 percent. The document does not specify the income thresholds at which the brackets will be set.

GOP Tax Overhaul Aims for Corporate Cuts, Simpler Code (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal

Plan would lower corporate tax rate to 20%, end state and local tax deductions for individuals

WASHINGTON—President Donald Trump and GOP leaders proposed sharply reducing tax rates on businesses and many individuals, kicking off a major legislative push to overhaul the nation's tax code this year.

The ambitious framework released Wednesday by party leaders sketched out a range of tax changes—including lower taxes on corporate profits, incentives for business investment, fewer and lower individual income tax brackets and the end of estate taxes—that Republicans said will boost economic growth and benefit middle-income families.

Under the Republicans' plan, the corporate tax rate would fall to 20% from 35%. And the top rate on individuals could drop to 35% from 39.6%.

Manufacturers, large-company executives, retailers and conservative groups issued supportive statements, showing a breadth of support for the GOP ideas, particularly in the business community. Real-estate agents, local governments and charities, who all stand to lose, voiced concerns, offering a preview of some potentially powerful opposition.

Trump Tax Plan Benefits Wealthy, Including Trump (New York Times)
New York Times
(9/27/2017 8:16 PM, Binyamin Appelbaum)
WASHINGTON — The tax plan that the Trump administration outlined on Wednesday is a potentially huge windfall for the wealthiest Americans. It would not directly benefit the bottom third of the population. As for the middle class, the benefits appear to be modest.

The administration and its congressional allies are proposing to sharply reduce taxation of business income, primarily benefiting the small share of the population that owns the vast majority of corporate equity. President Trump said on Wednesday that the cuts would increase investment and spur growth, creating broader prosperity. But experts say the upside is limited, not least because the economy is already expanding.

The plan would also benefit Mr. Trump and other affluent Americans by eliminating the estate tax, which affects just a few thousand uber-wealthy families each year, and the alternative minimum tax, a safety net designed to prevent tax avoidance.

The precise impact on Mr. Trump cannot be ascertained because the president refuses to release his tax returns, but the few snippets of returns that have become public show one thing clearly: The alternative minimum tax has been unkind to Mr. Trump. In 2005, it forced him to pay $31 million in additional taxes.

VIDEO. Working poor people could owe no income tax, filing a return could get much simpler, and there would even be a new credit for caring for elderly relatives under a tax "framework" being proposed Wednesday by President Trump and Republican leaders in Congress.

The plan cuts the top corporate tax rate dramatically and creates a new top rate for small businesses that is lower than the top rate for individuals.

It also eliminates two taxes paid entirely by the rich, while taking away a deduction for state and local taxes that is used most heavily in some of the most wealthy, and Democrat-dominated, states.

Exactly how many other deductions and credits disappear to help pay for it all, and how much gets added to the deficit or must be offset with other budget cuts, may not be worked out for a while — even though Republicans are eager to move taxes to the front burner after another defeat this week on revamping health insurance.

Quick reaction: Trump officially rolls out Republican tax plan (HousingWire)
HousingWire

Here's everything you need to know

President Donald Trump and what is being referred to as the "Big Six" group of Republicans officially announced their new tax plan.

However, even after 10 months of waiting, the plan is still sparse on the details. As expected, the plan outlines its plan for new tax brackets, and a lower corporate tax rate.

The team of six includes National Economic Council director Gary Cohn, U.S. Department of the Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, Senate majority leader Mitch McConnell, Senate Finance Committee chairman Orrin Hatch, House speaker Paul Ryan and House Ways and Means Committee chairman Kevin Brady.

"Too many in our country are shut out of the dynamism of the US economy, which has led to the justifiable feeling that the system is rigged against hardworking Americans," according to the nine-page report. "With significant and meaningful tax reform and relief, we will create a fairer system that levels the playing field and extends economic opportunities to American workers, small businesses, and middle-income families."

The new tax plan changes individual tax rates to 12%, 25% and 35% with the possibility for another higher bracket. It also lays out a 20% corporate tax, down from the current level of 35%. And while the plan mentions eliminating some business deductions and industry-specific incentives, however it did not include many details.

President Donald Trump and the Republican tax reform group known as the "Big Six" debuted their latest outline for what the president has promised would be the "biggest tax cut in history."

The outline revealed new goals, including a corporate tax rate of 20%, a pass-through rate at 25%, and the individual tax rates.

But it also omits some key details that will have to be fleshed out as the tax-writing committees work to craft actual legislation from the principles.

Given that the tax code is thousands of pages and the initial framework is only nine, some of the omitted details are most likely intentional to guard against initial blowback from interest groups.

Trump pitches tax cut as 'middle class miracle' (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/27/2017 3:41 PM, Ken Thomas, Associated Press)
INDIANAPOLIS — Promising a "middle class miracle," President Donald Trump on Wednesday was in full salesman mode as he tried to build momentum behind his plan to overhaul the nation's tax code and revive his moribund legislative agenda.

Hours after the White House and congressional Republicans released a framework for sweeping changes to the tax system, the president told hundreds of supporters at the Indiana State Fairgrounds the plan was "a once-in-a-generation opportunity."

"This is a revolutionary change and the biggest winners will be the everyday American workers as jobs start pouring into our country, as companies start competing for American labor, and as wages start going up at levels that you haven't seen in many years," he said.

Passing the tax plan has become critical for a president desperate for a win.

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - President Donald Trump on Wednesday proposed the biggest U.S. tax overhaul in three decades, offering to cut taxes for most Americans but prompting criticism that the plan favors the rich and companies and could add trillions of dollars to the deficit.

The proposal, which the Republican president said was aimed at helping working people, creating jobs and making the tax code more simple and fair, faces an uphill battle in Congress with Trump's own party divided and Democrats hostile.

The plan would lower corporate income tax rates, cut taxes for small businesses, reduce the top income tax rate for individuals and scrap some widely used tax breaks including one that benefits people in high-tax states dominated by Democrats.

Forged during months of talks among Trump's aides and top Republicans in Congress, the plan contained scant details about how to pay for the cuts without fueling deficits. It must be turned into detailed legislation by the Republican-led congressional tax-writing committees.

The outline of a tax reform proposal being unveiled today by President Donald Trump and Republican leaders is already being panned by Michigan Democrats in Congress.

Even as the outline was being publicly released this morning, U.S. Rep. Sander Levin, D-Royal Oak, who is a former chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, called it “too much help for the wealthy and an enormous deficit tax for everyone else.”

House Speaker Paul Ryan and Republican leaders unveiled the outline — titled “Unified Framework for Fixing Our Broken Tax Code” — online around 11 a.m. today.

What it showed was a move to nearly double the standard deduction — from $6,350 to $12,000 for single filers and from $12,700 to $24,000 for joint filers — while collapsing the current seven tax brackets into just three, repealing personal exemptions for dependents and increasing the child care credit.

It also calls for keeping certain itemized deductions — like the mortgage interest deduction and charitable deduction — in place while eliminating most others, which could include those for local and state taxes. Among other items, the proposal calls for reducing the top corporate tax rate to 20% from 39% and reduces the top tax rate on businesses which pay taxes through the income tax.

This is the most important point in the GOP tax-reform plan (CNBC)

VIDEO. The Trump/GOP tax reform plan is out. And it includes what could be the most significant tax relief in modern U.S. history for Americans who really need it.

That would be the plan to double the standard deduction for federal tax filers to$12,000 for individuals and $24,000 for married couples.

This is about as far as you can get from tax plans that supposedly only favor the"1 percent" or rely on "trickle down" theories to boost the overall economy.

Now just to be clear, this doubling of the standard deduction would not really amount to a 100-percent increase in deductions for everyone. Personal exemptions are being eliminated and consolidated into that bigger standard deduction. For someone taking the current standard deduction of$6,350 and one personal exemption of $4,050, this plan offers as "little" as 15 percent net increase in the deduction. But here’s a news flash: that’s still a massive tax break. What would you do with 15 percent more money?

But while 15 percent is nothing to sneeze at, how is this such a major game-changer overall?

First off, it’s important to remember that about 70 percent of federal tax filers don’t itemize according to the Tax Policy Center. That may sound crazy to homeowners and people who live in highly-taxed blue states, but it’s true.

Trump’s new tax plan shows how unserious Republicans are about governing (Washington Post)

“I will give you everything,” Donald Trump promised as a presidential candidate, and as president, not only has he continued to make that promise, but also the entire Republican Party has followed suit. Of course, they can’t actually deliver everything.

But this has become their guiding principle: that governing does not actually require making difficult choices, or when it does, one should just pretend that it doesn’t.

That’s one key message from the nine-page document that the Trump administration released today outlining the tax cuts it wants Congress to pass. The message in the plan itself and in the arguments they are using to justify it is that there are no choices to be made. We can have it all — cut taxes for corporations and the wealthy, which will shower great jobs on the rabble, which will not only not increase the deficit, it will cut it because so much new revenue will pour in.

If all that were actually true, it certainly would be terrific. But it isn't.

Tax Reform, If You Can Keep It (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Wall Street Journal Editorial)
Republicans finally unveiled the party's blueprint for tax reform on Wednesday, and Americans who want a faster-growing economy should be pleased. The GOP has offered an outline that will enhance U.S. competitiveness and simplify the code—if the final product isn't diluted by the class-warfare brigades and K Street lobbyists.

The nine-page framework offers the contours worked out by GOP leaders and tax writers in Congress and the Trump Administration, and the goal is to lower rates and streamline preferences. The danger is that the opening offer is near the lower limits of what is needed to lift the economy to a higher growth plane, and Republicans don't have room for concessions to this or that interest group.

The most important news is that the plan would make U.S. businesses more competitive around the globe. The corporate rate will fall to 20% from 35%, which is the highest in the developed world. This is not as low as President Trump's floated 15% or Ireland's 12.5% but would bring the U.S. below the industrialized-world's 22.5% average. This would improve U.S. corporate tax competitiveness from a depressing 35th out of 35 nations in the Tax Foundation's annual index, which is below even France. (See nearby.)

The framework also moves to a territorial model that allows companies to pay taxes where income is earned, which is the global norm. The punishing U.S. system has left $2.5 trillion parked overseas, and that money will be invited back at a discount with illiquid assets paying a lower rate than cash. The changes will be permanent, which is important as corporations invest with a long tail, and they will be immediate, which means investors won't have to wait to see the benefit of lower rates.

Home-contract signings tumble to near 2-year low (MarketWatch)

Housing market 'has essentially stalled,' say the Realtors, who cut their 2017 outlook

Americans signed fewer contracts to buy homes in August, the fifth month of declines in the last six, prompting the Realtor industry group to slash its forecast for sales in 2017.

The National Association of Realtors' pending home sales index fell 2.6% to 106.3, the group said Wednesday. That was the lowest reading since January 2016 and put the index 2.6% lower than its level a year ago.

Economists surveyed by Econoday had forecast a 0.2% dip in the index in August, which forecasts future sales by tracking real estate transactions in which a contract has been signed but the deal has not yet closed.

The extreme supply-demand imbalance in the housing market has ground sales to a standstill, the Realtors believe. "This summer's terribly low supply levels have officially drained all of the housing market's momentum over the past year," the group said in a statement.

Mortgage interest rates inch higher

Mortgage applications barely moved, falling a slight 0.5% from one week earlier, according to the latest data from the Mortgage Bankers Association's Weekly Mortgage Applications Survey for the week ending Sept. 22.

Broken up, the Refinance Index decreased 4% from the previous week, while the seasonally adjusted Purchase Index increased 3% from one week earlier.

The refinance share of mortgage activity stayed at about half of all applications, slipping to 50.8% of total applications from 52.1% the previous week.

The adjustable-rate mortgage share of activity decreased to 6.5% of total applications.

The Federal Housing Administration's share of total applications fell to 9.6% from 9.9% the week prior, as the Department of Veterans Affairs' share of total applications decreased to 10.0% from 10.1% the week prior.

NAR: Persistent, slow home sales mean housing market is now "essentially stalled" (HousingWire)

Sales drop for fifth time in six months

Pending home sales decreased in August for the fifth time in six months, and was especially slow in areas hit by hurricanes Harvey and Irma, according to the latest report from the National Association of Realtors.

In fact, this slow down even caused NAR to downgrade is overall forecast for the year, the report explained. Existing home sales may now see a decrease from 2016 to 2017, instead of the previously forecasted increase.

NAR Chief Economist Lawrence Yun said the low levels of housing supply over the summer now officially drained all the housing market's momentum. He now forecasts existing home sales to close the year at 5.44 million, down 0.2% from 5.45 million in 2016. Last month, Yun predicted home sales would close out 2017 at 5.49 million.

VIDEO. It is no longer a blip, but a trend. Home sales are weakening, and they are not expected to improve anytime soon.

A monthly index measuring signed contracts to buy existing homes fell 2.6 percent in August compared to July. That is the fifth drop in the past six months and below expectations. The National Association of Realtors' so-called pending home sales index is now down the same amount compared to August of 2016, hitting the lowest level since January of that year.

"August was another month of declining contract activity because of the one-two punch of limited listings and home prices rising far above incomes," said Lawrence Yun, chief economist for the Realtors in a release. "Demand continues to overwhelm supply in most of the country, and as a result, many would-be buyers from earlier in the year are still in the market for a home, while others have perhaps decided to temporarily postpone their search."

Yun said he believes the housing market has "essentially stalled." He lowered his forecast for full-year existing home sales to 5.44 million, which is 0.2 percent below 2016's pace. The original prediction last January for 2017 was 5.57 million, an increase of 2.2 percent compared to 2016. A consistent drop in supply and spike in home prices are largely to blame for the change, but two devastating hurricanes only added to the weakness.

Pending home sales slipped in August to the lowest level in 19 months as a mixture of low supply and severe weather weighed heavily on the housing market.

Sales, which are based on contract signings, dropped 2.6 percent to 106.3 in August from 109.1 in July, the fifth decline in six months, and the lowest reading since January 2016, the National Association of Realtors said on Wednesday.

Slower activity in states such as Texas and Florida that were battered by Hurricanes Harvey and Irma may hold existing home sales below the pace set in 2016, NAR said.

Also, the housing market's growth also has been hampered by low levels of homes for sale, which have sapped some momentum over the past year.

"August was another month of declining contract activity because of the one-two punch of limited listings and home prices rising far above incomes," said Lawrence Yun, NAR chief economist.

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Contracts to buy previously owned homes fell more than expected in August to their lowest level in about 1-1/2 years as the housing market continues to be sapped by a shortage of inventory that is also pushing up home prices.

The National Association of Realtors said on Wednesday its Pending Home Sales Index, based on contracts signed last month, dropped 2.6 percent to a reading of 106.3. July's index was unrevised.

Economists polled by Reuters had forecast pending home sales declining 0.5 percent last month. It was the fifth time in six months that pending home sales have retreated.

Pending home contracts are viewed as a forward-looking indicator for the state of the housing market because they become sales one or two months later.

National Association of Realtors pending home sales index declined 2.6% from July to 106.3

A gauge of future U.S. home sales fell in August to its lowest reading in more than a year, as low supply levels and recent hurricanes continue to hinder home closings.

The National Association of Realtors on Wednesday said its pending home sales index, which tracks contract signings for previously owned homes, declined 2.6% from July to 106.3 in August. Economists surveyed by The Wall Street Journal had expected a smaller decrease of 0.5% from July.

The index was down 2.6% in August from a year earlier.

Lawrence Yun, NAR chief economist, said the limited number of homes for sale and rising price tags have continued to plague the housing market, draining the momentum gained in the past year.

"Demand continues to overwhelm supply in most of the country, and as a result, many would-be buyers from earlier in the year are still in the market for a home, while others have perhaps decided to temporarily postpone their search," he said.

Contract signings for the purchase of previously owned U.S. homes fell in August by the most in seven months, reflecting limited inventory, the National Association of Realtors said Wednesday. The Realtors group's revised forecast for the year calls for sales to weaken from 2016 in the wake of two hurricanes.

Key Takeaways

A limited number of properties for sale fueled declines in contract signings for the fifth time in six months, a trend that will be made worse in the aftermath of hurricanes Harvey and Irma, the Realtors group said. Lean inventory is keeping prices climbing more than wages, creating a more challenging purchasing climate for first-time homebuyers.

The Realtors group projects 5.44 million homes will be sold this year, down from last month's estimate of 5.49 million and lower than the 5.45 million sold in 2016. The NAR sees the median selling price increasing 6 percent this year, compared with the 5.1 percent gain in 2016.

U.S. Families' Wealth, Incomes Rose, Fed Survey Says (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(9/28/2017 5:00 AM, Harriet Torry)
U.S. families' wealth and incomes rose across the board as the economic recovery continued in recent years, a shift after they stagnated for all but the most well-off in the aftermath of the recession, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday.

Minority households and families with less education had larger proportional gains in income than others between 2013 and 2016, suggesting the fruits of the recovery spread to a wider swath of society, the Fed said.

"The breadth of what we see at the bottom means those strata are starting to catch up after years of lagging," said Diane Swonk, founder of DS Economics, attributing much of the gains to minimum wage increases during the survey period.

Nonetheless, the gap between the wealthy and the rest of society continued to widen. The top 1% of households took home nearly a quarter of total income last year, 23.8%, up from 20.3% in 2013. The share of wealth held by the top 1% rose to 39% in 2016, up from 30% in 1989.

Americans who were left behind as the country pulled out of the Great Recession — African Americans, Hispanics and people without college degrees — saw large gains in net worth over the past three years, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday.

But the improvements failed to narrow the inequality gap: The share of America's income held by the top 1 percent of households reached 24 percent in 2016, a record high, and the median net worth of white households, at $171,000, was nearly 10 times larger than for black households.

The findings suggest that while a robust economy has benefited all economic groups, the wealthiest and most educated have been in a position to benefit even more because they began with such a significant advantage.

"The gap between the haves and have-nots hasn't closed in recent years. It still remains a gulf," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. "These groups have a lot of financial catch-up to do."

U.S. Growth Starts to Help More People, But Wealthiest Win Most (Bloomberg Markets)

(9/27/2017 1:30 PM, Craig Torres & Jordan Yadoo)
The long-running U.S. economic expansion is starting to reach down and deliver gains to lower-income Americans, while causing already-wide disparities in earning power and wealth to get even bigger, according to a triennial Federal Reserve survey.

"Families throughout the income distribution experienced gains in average real incomes between 2013 and 2016, reversing the trend from 2010 to 2013, when real incomes fell or remained stagnant for all but the top of the income distribution," the Fed said in its Survey of Consumer Finances released Wednesday in Washington.

The survey also found that the shares of income and wealth held by the most affluent families reached the highest levels in records back to 1989. The share of income received by the top 1 percent of families rose to 23.8 percent in 2016, up from 20.3 percent in 2013. The share of the bottom 90 percent of the distribution fell to 49.7 percent, the lowest on record in the survey's history.

While the jobless rate is near a 16-year low and the economy is growing for a ninth year, rising inequality is a risk to capitalist institutions and social cohesion as market-based systems distribute more gains to those at the top. President Donald Trump rode a wave of anti-establishment anger to the presidency, and trust in the Fed waned after it bailed out failing financial institutions such as Bear Stearns Cos. in 2008. Economists now warn that rising disparities in wealth and incomes could also affect patterns of consumption and the labor market.

“Persistently high levels of income and wealth inequality may also have implications for the robustness of consumer spending” because the wealthy have a higher propensity to save, Fed Governor Lael Brainard said in a speech Tuesday, where she previewed the survey’s results.

Editorial: Equifax breach shows need for consumer protections (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)
San Francisco Chronicle
(9/28/2017 4:49 AM, Chronicle Editorial Board)
A disastrous data breach at credit-rating giant Equifax is going to the next stage. The company’s chief executive is departing, San Francisco is first among likely many to sue, and a top Washington consumer regulator is promising a crackdown to prevent a repeat.

Maybe these steps are predictable and necessary. But consumers — in this case some 143 million Americans possibly “Equifaxed” in the hack — want serious results. Meaningful repairs should follow, not just court damages and promises.

Equifax’s own actions to date aren’t encouraging. It bottled up word of the data breach for weeks. When worried consumers sought answers, the company’s computers stalled. It even considered charging a fee for freezing accounts.

That performance is inviting huge trouble for the firm. It’s in the gunsights of congressional panels. It also has led City Attorney Dennis Herrera to file a lawsuit claiming Equifax failed to maintain security safeguards and delayed announcing the bad news. Millions in damages are possible.

One of Washington’s top consumer watchdogs warned on Wednesday that credit rating agencies should prepare for tougher supervision in the wake of a massive hack at Equifax that exposed sensitive data on 143 million people.

“We’re going to have monitoring in place that’s preventive,” Richard Cordray, the head of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, said in an interview with CNBC. “It’s going to be a different regime than we’re used to. In the past they dealt with these problems on their own. … That’s not good enough.”

The big three credit bureaus — Equifax, TransUnion and Experian — collect information on 200 million consumers but have traditionally only been federally regulated by the Federal Trade Commission. In 2010’s financial reform legislation, the Dodd-Frank Act, the CFPB gained the power to supervise the companies on a day-to-day basis.

In the interview, Cordray indicated that the agency would be accelerating that effort following the Equifax hack, which has also sparked investigations by the FBI and other regulators.

Consumer Financial Protection Bureau Director Richard Cordray said Equifax, TransUnion and Experian are getting embedded regulators to ensure that similar breaches of private information don’t happen again.

Companies "should welcome" the heightened level of scrutiny, Cordray told CNBC in a live interview on "Squawk on the Street."

"If they’re going to restore public confidence in this marketplace, and if they’re going to create the kind of reforms necessary, they’re going to have to recognize the old days of just doing what they want, being subject to lawsuits now and then, are over," he said. "There has to be a scheme of preventive monitoring in place. They’re going to have to accept that, they’re going to welcome that, they’re going to have to be very forthcoming."

Republican leaders are reportedly mulling whether to bring to the Senate floor a bill that would nullify an Obama-era consumer protection regulation aimed curtailing a practice used by many corporations to keep potential class action lawsuits out of court.

The debate comes three weeks after a public outcry compelled the Atlanta-based Equifax to quickly drop so-called forced arbitration language from the terms of service of the free credit monitoring service it was offering its customers after its massive data breach.

Democrats and consumer action groups are mobilizing to try and quash the effort.

Multiple news outlets reported that a vote could come as soon as this week, although a spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said Tuesday afternoon that nothing has been scheduled on the floor.

The CFPB is working with the Federal Trade Commission and the New York Department of Financial Services (DFS) on a new regulatory framework that includes onsite monitors at the three big credit-reporting firms, Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion, Director Richard Cordray told CNBC.

“The old days of just doing what they want and being subject to lawsuits now and then are over,” Cordray said.

Your most personal information — home address, Social Security number, etc. — has likely been hacked as one of the 143 million American consumers whose Equifax credit files were breached. Equifax CEO Richard Smith resignation, potential illegal stock trades of senior executives, has drawn the attention of Congress with a Senate hearing scheduled.

Policy makers need to resist the headlines and focus on the real problem that directly harms millions of Americans: the astounding number of errors in the credit reports that are the result of misaligned economic and legal incentives.

More than one in five consumers have a "potentially material error" in their credit file that makes them look riskier than they are. Lenders respond to this incorrect data by offering you higher interest rates, less favorable terms, or denying credit if the error makes you look too risky.

With money on the line, you might assume that the credit reporting system would fix the problem. In reality, it is the opposite. Speed and volume are favored over accuracy. Large-scale inaccuracies are tolerated. The costs of correcting the data outweigh benefits — for the credit bureaus, though, not the consumers.

U.S. credit reporting firms need tougher oversight: watchdog (Reuters)

(Reuters) - Equifax Inc promised to make it easier for consumers to control access to their credit records in the wake of the company’s massive breach after the top U.S. consumer financial watchdog called on the industry to introduce such a system.

Equifax’s interim chief executive officer, Paulino do Rego Barros Jr., vowed to introduce a free service by Jan. 31 that will let consumers control access to their own credit records.

Barros, who was named interim CEO on Tuesday as Richard Smith stepped down from the post amid mounting criticism over the handling of the cyber attack, also apologized for providing inadequate support to consumers seeking information after the breach was disclosed on Sept. 7. He promised to add call-center representatives and bolster a breach-response website. “I have heard the frustration and fear. I know we have to do a better job of helping you,” Barros said in a statement published in The Wall Street Journal.

Equifax announced the free credit freeze service after the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau’s (CFPB) director, Richard Cordray, told CNBC earlier in the day that the agency would beef up oversight of Equifax and its rivals. “The old days of just doing what they want and being subject to lawsuits now and then are over,” Cordray said. He also called for implementing a scheme of preventive credit monitoring. “They are going to have to accept that. They are going to have to welcome it. They are going to have to be very forthcoming,” Cordray said.

Dems wield Equifax, Wells Fargo in fight over arbitration (Charlotte Observer, NC)

Democrats determined to stop Republicans from overturning a consumer-oriented rule are using the scandals roiling both companies to hammer the GOP’s efforts. A hack of Equifax’s computer system exposed the sensitive personal information of 143 million Americans. Wells Fargo was fined $100 million by federal regulators for its illegal sales practices in which employees trying to reach unrealistic sales goals opened accounts without customers’ permission.

In July, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau decided to ban most types of mandatory arbitration clauses. The clauses require credit card or bank customers to use an arbitrator when they have a dispute rather than sue in court, and the clauses were commonly used by both companies.

The House has since voted to block the consumer bureau’s rule. Now the clock is ticking on action by Senate Republicans.

"These companies did terrible, terrible wrong and they want to prevent consumers from having rights to sue them. That is outrageous," Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said at a news conference Wednesday in the Capitol. "Put simply, we’re urging our Republican colleagues to say no to immunity for Equifax, Wells Fargo or anyone else who does such horrible financial misdeeds."

Democrats argued that, without the new rule, companies will be able to keep private those disputes pursued through mandatory arbitration.

"They allow corporate America to take advantage of a shadow justice system," Sen. Al Franken, D-Minn., said of the arbitration clauses.

Schumer: Forced arbitration is ‘get out of jail free card’ for corporations

Democrats warned Republicans Wednesday against a move to promote forced arbitration between customers and their companies, saying that Americans deserve the right to sue companies such as Equifax that lose their data.

Senate Minority Leader Charles E. Schumer and his troops said Congress should be cheering rules that make it easier for mistreated consumers to file class-action suits. As it stands, many customers are being forced to plead their case, one by one, through an arbitrator.

“It’s a green light to Wall Street to be free to hose consumers without any consequences,” Mr. Schumer said.

Directing consumers to resolve disputes through arbitration has been a flashpoint of late, particularly since the requirements are often buried in the fine print of routine things like car loans, mortgages and bank accounts.

Democrats said arbitration proceedings are typically secret and require a prohibitive filing fee, further weakening consumers.

Fannie-Freddie Overhaul Near Do-or-Die as Corker Steps Away (Washington Post)

(Bloomberg) -- For nearly a decade, "wait 'til next year" has been the refrain for proponents of overhauling mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. For U.S. Senator Bob Corker, arguably the biggest advocate of that push, it will either be next year or never.

Corker said Tuesday that he won't seek re-election for a third term, leaving him roughly 15 months in office. Analysts and others in the housing-finance industry said the announcement could lead to a final aggressive drive for reform. But since housing-finance legislation would still a long shot, his departure could leave a leadership vacuum in addressing one of the last vestiges of the 2008 financial crisis.

The Tennessee Republican's impending retirement "will surely lead to him pushing aggressively for GSE reform before he leaves the chamber," according to Compass Point Research & Trading analyst Isaac Boltansky, who said he expects the effort to fail.

Fannie and Freddie don't make mortgages but buy them from lenders, wrap them into securities and make guarantees to investors if the loans default. The government took over the companies in 2008, eventually injecting them with about $187.5 billion in bailout money.

Still optimistic about short-term future

Consumer confidence fell slightly in September, and the labor market is getting worse across the U.S., according to the Consumer Confidence Survey conducted by The Conference Board by Nielsen, a provider of information and analytics around what consumers buy and watch.

The Consumer Confidence Index decreased to 119.8 in September, down from 120,4 in August. The Present Situation Index decreased slightly from 148.4 to 146.1, but was partially offset by an increase in the Expectations Index, which from 101.7 to 102.2 during the same time period.

In 1985, the index was set to 100, representing the index's benchmark. This value is adjusted monthly based on results of a household survey of consumers' opinions on current conditions and future economic expectations. Opinions on current conditions make up 40% of the index, while expectations of future conditions make up 60%.

"Consumer confidence decreased slightly in September after a marginal improvement in August," said Lynn Franco, The Conference Board director of economic indicators. "Confidence in Texas and Florida, however, decreased considerably, as these two states were the most severely impacted by Hurricanes Harvey and Irma."

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau reports it fined real estate settlement services provider Meridian Title Corp. over violations of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, ordering the company to pay up to $1.25 million to harmed consumers.

The CFPB stated that the South Bend, Indiana-based company routinely steered consumers to Arsenal Insurance Corporation, a title insurer company owned in part by three of Meridian's own executives.

As a title insurance agent, Meridian receives orders for title insurance policies from lenders and real estate agents, and in some cases directly from consumers, and assigns those orders to title insurance underwriters, the CFPB explained.

By steering consumers to Arsenal Insurance and not disclosing its relationship with the title insurer, Meridian Title illegally benefitted from the referrals for title insurance, the CFPB claims.

One-third of American households can't afford food, shelter or medical care (MarketWatch)

A new survey shows how many families are on the edge financially

Nearly half of Americans have a tough time paying their bills, and over one-third have faced hardships such as running out of food, not being able to afford a place to live, or not having enough money to pay for medical treatment.

Those are some of the grim findings from the federal Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's first-ever survey of financial well-being, released Tuesday.

The numbers parallel MarketWatch's own State of the American Wallet dashboard, which tracks how Americans are faring financially with data that updates in real time.

The State of the American Wallet shows how Americans are saddled with mounting car loan and credit card debt and not saving enough money — even enough to cover emergency expenses. Meanwhile, people in the top 1% control a growing share of the nation's wealth.

Similarly, the CFPB survey found a wide range in how respondents felt about their financial well-being. Respondents were assigned scores on a scale of 1 to 100 after answering 10 questions. A score of 50 or lower meant the respondent was likely to be struggling to make ends meet. The average score was 54, but there was a 35-point spread between the top 10% and bottom 10% of participants.

[PA] Midstate rent prices outpacing home values (Central Penn Business Journal, PA)
Central Penn Business Journal
(9/27/2017 8:03 AM, Jason Scott)
While midstate home values have been on the rise during the housing market upswing, rents have been growing faster, according to data from the U.S. Census Bureau.

Between 2011 and 2016, median gross rents rose between 10 percent and 15 percent in Central Pennsylvania, which includes Cumberland, Dauphin, Lancaster, Lebanon and York counties. The numbers come from American Community Survey estimates.

The median rental rate in Dauphin County last year was $900, according to the Census. In 2011, it was $819. At 9.9 percent, that was the smallest increase of the five counties .

In Lancaster and Lebanon counties, median rents shot up even more.

[PA] 5 takeaways on the GOP's tax reform plan (Allentown Morning Call, PA)
Allentown Morning Call

(9/27/2017 3:38 PM, Laura Olson)
VIDEO. Republicans in Washington have unveiled a nine-page framework on the legislation they're crafting to overhaul the federal tax code. Here's five key points of what is known and unknown at this point, and what Pennsylvania Sen. Pat Toomey — a key member involved in drafting the eventual bill — had to say about what GOP lawmakers are proposing.

1. What would the plan do? The framework calls for reducing the corporate tax rate and collapsing the seven current tax brackets into three, among other changes. It would reduce government revenues by $5 trillion over 10 years, according to budget experts. Some $3.5 trillion of that is expected to be offset through changes to current tax breaks.

Toomey, who is best known for his interest in fiscal policy, touted the proposal as one that will result in a tax cut for lower- and middle-income Americans and praised its business tax changes as likely to lower the cost of capital.

"The biggest thing that people are going to see is a tax reduction for themselves, a simplification in terms of their filing, and I think they're going to see a stronger economy," Toomey told reporters Wednesday. "They're going to see more job opportunities, upward pressure on wages, bigger job gains, fewer unemployed people. I think those are the things that the average family in Allentown is going to see."

[FL] Commissioner: Could Miami-Dade have done more for residents after Hurricane Irma? In my opinion, yes (Miami Herald, FL)
Miami Herald
(9/27/2017 9:11 AM, Audrey M. Edmondson)
When it comes to disasters, there is no economic discrimination. Storms, fires, floods or earthquakes have no particular zip codes in mind when ravishing areas where people live, work and play. Even with the best preparations or plans, when disasters occur, it is the unforeseeable issues that arise that need to be addressed as swiftly and expediently as humanly possible.

Hurricane Irma affected all areas of Miami-Dade County, especially due to widespread power outages. For almost a week after the storm, there were areas left without electricity or the ability to live with some level of normalcy. Some areas of power outages were exasperated by the critical needs of its residents.

Our most vulnerable populations, our seniors and those with meager means, were left to fend for themselves for at least three days until the community was able to help each other. Government is part of that community.

We cleared main roadways so that those with recovery efforts, including fuel for generators, could get in and out of our streets. We placed public transportation back on the roads to get people to grocery stores.

[TX] Harvey, Irma expected to slow 2017 home sales (Houston Chronicle, TX)
Houston Chronicle
(9/27/2017 11:45 AM, Katherine Feser)
Fewer home closings in areas impacted by hurricanes Harvey and Irma will likely pull the nation's tally of homes sales in 2017 below last year's level, a new report showed.

Annual and monthly pending home sales sank by 2.6 percent in August from the same period a year earlier, according to a National Association of Realtors report released Wednesday. The trend reflects an index measuring existing home sales contracts that have been signed but not yet closed. The index reached its lowest level since January 2016.

Lawrence Yun, NAR chief economist, projects existing-home sales to total 5.44 million in 2017, down 0.2 percent from last year's pace of 5.45 million. The median price is anticipated to rise by 6 percent, on top of a 5.1 percent gain last year.

"The supply and affordability headwinds would have likely held sales growth just a tad above last year, but coupled with the temporary effects from Hurricanes Harvey and Irma, sales in 2017 now appear will fall slightly below last year," Yun said in an announcement.

(9/27/2017 11:17 AM, Matt Ott, Associated Press)

WASHINGTON - Fewer people signed contracts to buy homes in August, marking the fifth decline in the past six months.

The 2.6 percent fall continues to reflect the worsening shortage nationwide of homes being listed for sale.

The National Association of Realtors said that its pending home sales index fell to 106.3 in August from 109.1 in July.

It's the index's lowest point since a 106.1 reading in January of 2016 and 2.6 percent lower than a year ago.

Pending sales contracts are a barometer of future purchases.

HousingWire
(9/27/2017 5:41 PM, Ben Lane)
Becomes first city to sue credit reporting agency

Add the city of San Francisco to the list of those going after Equifax in the wake of the credit reporting agency's massive data breach, which exposed the personal information of 143 million U.S. consumers to hackers.

The company is currently facing inquiries from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, the Federal Trade Commission, the House Financial Services Committee, the Senate Finance Committee, the office of New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman, the New York Department of Financial Services, and a lawsuit from the state of Massachusetts over the breach.

The breach also cost three Equifax executives their jobs, already. Earlier this week, Equifax CEO and Chairman of the Board, Richard Smith, "retired," just two weeks after two of the executives charged with the security of Equifax's credit data also "retired."

Now, two weeks after Massachusetts became the first state to take action against Equifax, San Francisco City Attorney Dennis Herrera announced that the city is suing Equifax too, making San Francisco the first city to pursue legal action against Equifax.

"Equifax's incompetence would be comical if the subject matter weren't so serious," Herrera said in a statement. "This company fell asleep at the switch and upended the lives of millions of people. The information that Equifax failed to safeguard is what people need to open a bank account, buy a home or rent an apartment. Now Californians have been put at risk of identity theft for years to come."

[CA] Trump, GOP tax plan has a lot for businesses to like, but Californians could take a big hit (Los Angeles Times)
Los Angeles Times
(9/27/2017 2:00 PM, Jim Puzzanghera and Lisa Mascaro)
The Republican tax overhaul has a lot for businesses to like — and a lot of unanswered questions for everyone else.

According to the plan, which Republican officials outlined Wednesday, many businesses would see a huge reduction in their tax bills and many middle-class Americans would see tax relief. The plan would reduce the number of individual tax brackets to three from seven and nearly double the standard deduction.

President Trump is scheduled to pitch the plan during a speech in Indianapolis on Wednesday. The release of the framework kicks off a scramble by lawmakers to hammer out the details, craft legislation and, if all goes according to plan, pass legislation by the end of the year.

"My plan is for the working people and my plan is for jobs," he said. "I think there's very little benefit for people of wealth."

While that may be true, one particular group could be hit hard — upper-middle-income wage earners in states that have significant income taxes, such as California and New York.

The plan calls for eliminating the current deduction for payment of state and local taxes, which would hit hard at taxpayers in those states who itemize their deductions.

[CA] Businesses to benefit more than individuals from Republican tax plan (San Francisco Chronicle, CA)
San Francisco Chronicle
(9/28/2017 4:55 AM, Kathleen Pender)
The tax plan released Wednesday by Republican leaders would help businesses more than individuals, but it lacks crucial details needed to say how much it would cost or affect specific people or companies.

"The big winners will be corporations and business owners," said Joe Rosenberg, a senior researcher with the Tax Policy Center, a joint think tank of the Urban Institute and Brookings Institution.

The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget reached a similar conclusion in its analysis. It roughly estimated that the plan would generate $5.8 trillion of tax cuts, offset by $3.6 trillion of new tax revenues, resulting in about $2.2 trillion of net tax cuts over a decade, excluding interest.

About $2.8 trillion of the tax cuts would come from reducing the top corporate rate to 20 percent from 35 percent and from other business tax breaks. Of the new revenues, nearly all — $3.3 trillion — would come from individuals, primarily from killing most itemized deductions, including the one for state and local taxes, which is highly prized in California

McClatchy Washington Bureau
(9/27/2017 7:44 PM, Emily Cadei)
The tagline for Republicans' new tax code rewrite, unveiled Wednesday at the Capitol, should be "hashtag keep yo money," South Carolina Sen. Tim Scott joked.

It may not work out that way for millions of California taxpayers, however.

Working in concert with President Donald Trump and his administration, Republican lawmakers pitched a tax "framework" that would dramatically simplify the tax code and slash corporate and income tax rates, all pillars of Republican orthodoxy. To pay for the across-the-board cuts, Republicans want to ax numerous federal income tax deductions – including some that disproportionately benefit residents of California and other high-tax, high-income states.

Many of the details still need to be hashed out by members of Congress, who are hoping to introduce corresponding legislation later this year. That's an ambitious target, and many in Washington are deeply skeptical that Republicans' many factions can agree on such a contentious issue. If they succeed in enacting their proposal, it would amount to the biggest change to the country's tax system in more than three decades.

[PR] Trump administration rushes military assets to Puerto Rico amid growing crisis (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/27/2017 8:16 PM, Arelis R. Hernández, Dan Lamothe, Ed O'Keefe and Joel Achenbach)
SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO — The Trump administration is rushing military hardware and personnel to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands as it becomes increasingly clear that the U.S. government response to Hurricane Maria so far has been inadequate and overmatched by the scale of the disaster.

In the first six days after the hurricane made landfall here, the Navy had deployed just two ships, citing concerns that Puerto Rico's ports were too damaged to accommodate numerous large vessels. But harrowing reports of isolated U.S. citizens struggling in the heat without electricity and running low on food and water have now spurred the Pentagon to throw resources into the relief effort even though they haven't been specifically requested by territorial officials.

The more robust approach includes the deployment of the USNS Comfort, a hospital ship that has responded to other natural disasters. The Pentagon also has assigned an Army general as point person for the humanitarian crisis: Brig. Gen. Richard C. Kim, the deputy commanding general of U.S. Army North. He will coordinate operations and assess what other resources are needed, defense officials said.

"Obviously, what we asked for and what they sent was not enough for a storm that impacted every town in Puerto Rico from north to south and east to west," Ramón Rosario, Gov. Ricardo Rosselló's secretary of public affairs and public policy, said Wednesday in the San Juan convention center, the headquarters for the intergovernmental recovery effort.

[VI] In the Virgin Islands, Hurricane Maria Drowned What Irma Didn't Destroy (New York Times)
New York Times
(9/27/2017 6:00 PM, Jeremy W. Peters)
As islanders wait for doctors, medicine, fuel and manpower to rebuild, the economic toll from the storms is only starting to come to light.

CRUZ BAY, V.I. — Even before two Category 5 hurricanes struck the United States Virgin Islands with punishing fury this month, the notion of paradise here was already about as brittle as a sand dollar.

The local treasury had barely enough cash to keep the government funded for three days. Its debt had grown so large that Wall Street stopped lending it money. The unemployment rate was more than twice the national average.

The one-two punch of Hurricane Irma and Hurricane Maria 14 days later was especially cruel. In many places across the three major islands of this American territory, the second storm drowned what the first couldn't destroy, ravaging what was once one of the Caribbean's most idyllic landscapes.

"Maria broke our spirit," said Ian Samuel of St. John, who lost parts of the upstairs of his house to Irma's wind and his downstairs to two and a half feet of water from Maria. "I was in a pretty bad car wreck. And it's like that — when you get out of the car and you're trying to figure out what's happening."

SITUATION REPORT
27 September 2017, 2:00 PM EDT

Puerto Rico and U.S. Virgin Islands

Overview. On Sunday, 10 Sept 2017, Hurricane Irma slammed into the Eastern Caribbean as a Category 4 storm, devastating many of the tiny islands in its path before barreling into Florida.

Less than two weeks later Hurricane Maria hit many of the same Caribbean islands recently damaged by Hurricane Irma, to include St. Croix, St. Thomas, and the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico. Early morning, on 20 Sept, Maria rammed directly into Puerto Rico as a powerful Category 4 storm with 140 mph winds. It is the strongest storm to hit the island in 80 years.

Situation. At 5:00 AM EDT, Hurricane Maria was 210 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, NC. Maximum sustained winds were 75 mph; this broad system is moving north at 7 mph and, as she weakens in the next 36 hours she will move rapidly away from east coast at end of week. Tropical storm force winds may begin impacting eastern North Carolina late today, and eastern Virginia and the Delmarva Tuesday into Wednesday. A Tropical Storm Warning continues for the North Carolina Coast from Bogue Inlet to the North Carolina/Virginia border, including the Albemarle and Pamlico Sounds. A Storm Surge Watch is in effect for Cape Lookout to Duck (2 to 4 feet at the time of high astronomical tides (12-2 am/pm Tue-Wed)). Rainfall is expected to be 1 to 2 inches are forecast over eastern North Carolina. Amounts may be higher if Maria drifts closer to the coast

Declaration Activity

FEMA-4335-DR-VI (U.S. Virgin Islands)
- Incident Period: September 06, 2017 - October 01, 2017
- Major Disaster Declaration declared on September 07, 2017
- Provides: Individual Assistance for 2 (County-equivalent) / Public Assistance for 3 County-equivalent
- Federal Coordinating Officer: (TBD)
- Designated counties: St. Croix Island / St. John Island / St. Thomas Island

FEMA-4336-DR-PR (Puerto Rico)
- Expedited Major Disaster Declaration approved on September 10, 2017
- Hurricane Irma beginning on September 5, 2017 and continuing
- Provides: Individual Assistance for 2 Municipalities / Public Assistance for 2 Municipalities Federal Coordinating Officer is Alejandro De La Campa
- Designated counties: Culebra (Municipal) and Vieques (Municipal)

PRIORITIES FOR HUD

- Protect the health and safety of HUD employees. HUD regional offices are closely monitoring the storm and guidance provided by state and local officials to protect the health and safety of HUD personnel. HUD offices will make decisions on office closures based on local information. Office of Field Policy and Management (FPM) is tracking and reporting office closures.

- Many HUD employees in Puerto Rico are still unaccounted for due to catastrophic destruction of cell phone towers and power grids. HUD managers, supported by HUD OIG personnel, continue to search for the unaccounted HUD employees.

- Assess potential impacts to HUD programs and clients:

Multifamily Housing	Properties	Units	Assisted Units	Properties w/ Moderate or Major Damage	Residents Displaced/ Evacuated	Residents Returned

Total	220	22,487	21,327	7	3	0

Current as of 21 Sept. These numbers are based on all HUD properties; they will be updated as the data is collected

Public Housing	Impacted Properties	Total Number of Assisted Units	Displaced Households	Returned Households
Puerto Rico		53,649
Virgin Islands	191	3,014	106	0

HCV	Total Number of Assisted Households	Displaced Households	Returned Households
Puerto Rico	29,474
Virgin Islands	1,619	10	0
Total	31,093	10	0

- Coordination of long-term recovery efforts

Actions Taken

- 1.57 million households remain without power in Puerto Rico. 47,000 (90%+) households without power in USVI.
- 172 (+4) disaster shelters are open in Puerto Rico housing 11,253 people (-106). 7 (+1) disaster shelters are open in USVI housing 621 people (+230). American Red Cross is building capacity to support 20,000 people in disaster shelters if needed and requested.
- FEMA is working on a plan to establish alternative registration processes in areas affected by communications and power outages. People are unable to register for assistance by phone or online.
- FOD Maldonado is in discussions with the FEMA Federal Coordinating Officer (FCO) to establish HUD work stations at the FEMA Joint Field Office (JFO) in San Juan. The HUD FOD and program directors would use these work stations to begin damage assessments and coordinate needs with FEMA. This would be ahead of any mission assignments issued by FEMA.
- FEMA staff reported that Joint Field Offices may be set up in San Juan, St. Thomas and St. Croix, with some number of HUD staff potentially staffing each location under a Mission Assignment.

- Starting this week, work under the Housing Recovery Support Function (RSF) will begin through remote planning sessions at FEMA HQ in Washington, DC for Puerto Rico and USVI. HUD staff slated to lead the Housing RSF in Puerto Rico / USVI (Ileana Colon) will attend.

Next Steps

- Displaced public housing families receiving tenant protection vouchers from VIHA will need to be able to work with housing authority staff for in-person program briefings. Given the current conditions, it may make more sense to relocate these families to shelters in San Juan. The state voucher agency in Puerto Rico is willing to help. Can there be any kind of transportation for this available? Will there be shelter space in PR for the displaced families? PIH staff will continue to discuss this options with Puerto Rico state housing officials and VIHA.

Issues/Challenges

- VIHA has not reached the approximately 1,300 existing voucher families in their program, but will continue their efforts. Given funding restrictions, VIHA cannot use public housing funds to assist existing voucher holders with relocation if these families need to move either on or off the island.
- PIH remains concerned that current families with vouchers will not find suitable private rentals, and will not have a way to leave the island in the near term if they want to use their voucher on the mainland. Also, it would be helpful if private landlords participating in the voucher program could access to funds to repair their rental units.

AVAILABLE HUD DISASTER ASSISTANCE

- Assist the state and local governments in re-allocating existing federal resources toward disaster relief. HUD's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME programs give the state and local communities the flexibility to redirect millions of dollars in annual formula funding to address critical needs, including housing and services for disaster victims. HUD is currently contacting State and local officials to explore streamlining the Department's CDBG and HOME programs to expedite the repair and replacement of damaged housing.
- Grant immediate foreclosure relief. HUD has granting a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures and forbearance on foreclosures of Federal Housing Administration (FHA)-insured home mortgages.
- Make mortgage insurance available. HUD's Section 203(h) program provides FHA insurance to disaster victims who have lost their homes and are facing the daunting task of rebuilding or buying another home. Borrowers from participating FHA-approved lenders may be eligible for 100 percent financing.
- Make insurance available for both mortgages and home rehabilitation. HUD's Section 203(k) loan program enables those who have lost their homes to finance the purchase or refinance of a house along with its repair through a single mortgage. It also allows homeowners who have damaged houses to finance the rehabilitation of their existing single-family home.
- Offer Section 108 loan guarantee assistance. HUD will offer state and local governments federally guaranteed loans for housing rehabilitation, economic development and repair of public infrastructure.
- Provide information on housing providers and HUD programs. HUD will share information with FEMA and the state on housing providers that may have available units in the impacted counties. This includes Public Housing Agencies and Multi-Family owners. HUD will also connect FEMA and the state to SMEs to provide information on HUD programs and providers.

- Coordination of long-term recovery efforts

Actions Taken

- 1.6 million people (+200k) are registered with FEMA in Florida. Eligible applicants received $587 million (+$85 million) in FEMA housing and other needs assistance. Only 14% (+3%) of all inspections are completed.
- Governor Rick Scott directed the Florida Division of Emergency Management (DEM) to expedite the delivery of more than 10,000 tarps to communities across the state so that homeowners can patch roofs damaged by Hurricane Irma. To date, more than 100,000 tarps have been distributed throughout Florida.
- The Governor also activated 400 members of the Florida National Guard and 40 trucks to help families remove debris and clean out flood damage from residential areas in the Florida Keys.
- FEMA expects to complete Public Assistance (PA) preliminary damage assessments by 9/29/17.
- There are 4 HUD staff working under FEMA Mission Assignments for Florida including staff deployed to the FEMA Joint Field Office (JFO) in Orlando. A mission assignment is in process for HUD to deploy additional staff to Florida to work in American Red Cross Shelters and FEMA Disaster Recovery Centers.
- 11 (-3) disaster shelters are open housing 876 people (-91)
    - FEMA is requesting HUD assistance in American Red Cross Shelters. This assistance is pending execution of a Mission Assignment from FEMA for HUD to support shelter depopulation.
- 9 (+1) Disaster Recovery Centers are open.

HUD-17-0235-B-000675

    - The highest volume Disaster Recovery Centers are in Palm Beach, Lee and Collier Counties.
- 6,999 (+558) households are checked in to hotel units under FEMAs Temporary Sheltering Assistance (TSA) program.
- 2 HUD staff are coordinating the Housing Recovery Support Function (RSF).
    - Housing solutions are currently most pressing in Lee, Collier, and Hendry Counties (Ft. Myers, Naples, Immokalee, etc.). A task force was established to identify options for these highly-impacted areas.
    - HUD staff are working with FEMA recovery team to identify areas with the greatest long-term housing recovery challenges in Southwestern Florida. One of FEMA's priorities is getting HUD damage assessment information from across the state, but especially in the most impacted counties.
- HUD public affairs staff are coordinating with FEMA External Affairs.
- The Regional Public Affairs Officer in Miami coordinated with FEMA External Affairs at the Joint Field Office in Orlando on joint messaging about HUD rental assistance programs and re-housing efforts at Civic Towers.

- The Regional Public Affairs Officer in Miami coordinated with FEMA External Affairs at the Joint Field Office in Orlando on joint messaging about HUD rental assistance programs and re-housing efforts at Civic Towers.

Next Steps

- FPM regional staff are standing up logistics for larger staff deployments including landing sites where teams can in-bound in Atlanta, Jacksonville and Miami.
- Numerous requests are being received across Florida from FEMA on available HUD resources, potential impacted HUD buildings, and displaced HUD clients. HUD staff in the state are responding and providing information. After HUD JFO team is set up, questions will be routed through that structure.

Issues/Challenges

AVAILABLE HUD DISASTER ASSISTANCE

- Assist the state and local governments in re-allocating existing federal resources toward disaster relief. HUD's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME programs give the state and local communities the flexibility to redirect millions of dollars in annual formula funding to address critical needs, including housing and services for disaster victims. HUD is currently contacting State and local officials to explore streamlining the Department's CDBG and HOME programs to expedite the repair and replacement of damaged housing.
- Grant immediate foreclosure relief. HUD has granting a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures and forbearance on foreclosures of Federal Housing Administration (FHA)-insured home mortgages.
- Make mortgage insurance available. HUD's Section 203(h) program provides FHA insurance to disaster victims who have lost their homes and are facing the daunting task of rebuilding or buying another home. Borrowers from participating FHA-approved lenders may be eligible for 100 percent financing.

- Make insurance available for both mortgages and home rehabilitation. HUD's Section 203(k) loan program enables those who have lost their homes to finance the purchase or refinance of a house along with its repair through a single mortgage. It also allows homeowners who have damaged houses to finance the rehabilitation of their existing single-family home.
- Offer Section 108 loan guarantee assistance. HUD will offer state and local governments federally guaranteed loans for housing rehabilitation, economic development and repair of public infrastructure.
- Provide information on housing providers and HUD programs. HUD will share information with FEMA and the state on housing providers that may have available units in the impacted counties. This includes Public Housing Agencies and Multi-Family owners. HUD will also connect FEMA and the state to SMEs to provide information on HUD programs and providers.

Sheila, per WH Counsel – "The Federal Records Act delegates responsibility to each Department head, individually. As such, it is not the role of the White House to advise on this particularly, where a blanket (or holistic) response would not be responsive."

So -- each agency needs to develop its own response.

The Honorable Benjamin S. Carson
Secretary
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Congress passed the Federal Records Act of 1950 to provide the framework for records management for federal government agencies. Many emails from federal employees are considered records under the Act and therefore subject to certain recordkeeping requirements. This Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Records Act, as well as the Presidential Records Act and Freedom of Information Act.[1] As technology has changed and the use of email and other modern forms of electronic communication have become ubiquitous, the Committee has been active in updating portions of these laws. These updates include the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[2]

As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch employees deliberately trying to circumvent these laws by using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on yesterday's Politico reporting regarding private email use for official government business by a senior member of the President's staff,[5] today we write towards a similar end.

As a follow-up to the Committee's request to your agency on March 8, 2017, please provide the following documents and information by October 9, 2017:

1. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used a personal email account to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual and the account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

2. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used an alias email account to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual and the account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

3. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual, cellular number and account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

4. Please identify any changes to the agency's policies or directives for any of the following areas since January 1, 2017:

    a. Policies referring or relating to the use of non-official electronic messaging accounts, including email, text message, messaging applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures;

    b. Policies referring or relating to the use of official text message or other messaging or communications applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures; and

    c. Policies and procedures to ensure all communications related to the creation or transmission of federal records on official electronic messaging accounts other than email, including social networking platforms, internal agency instant messaging systems and other communications applications, are properly captured and preserved as federal records.

An attachment to this letter provides additional instructions about responding to this request. Thank you in advance for responding fully and in a timely manner. If you have any questions about this request, please contact Drew Baney of the Majority staff on the Committee at (202) 225-5074 and Krista Boyd of the Minority staff on the Committee (202) 225-9493.

Sincerely,

Trey Gowdy

Enclosures

Responding to Committee Document Requests

1. In complying with this request, you are required to produce all responsive documents that are in your possession, custody, or control, whether held by you or your past or present agents, employees, and representatives acting on your behalf. You should also produce documents that you have a legal right to obtain, that you have a right to copy or to which you have access, as well as documents that you have placed in the temporary possession, custody, or control of any third party. Requested records, documents, data or information should not be destroyed, modified, removed, transferred or otherwise made inaccessible to the Committee.

2. In the event that any entity, organization or individual denoted in this request has been, or is also known by any other name than that herein denoted, the request shall be read also to include that alternative identification.

3. The Committee's preference is to receive documents in electronic form (i.e., CD, memory stick, or thumb drive) in lieu of paper productions.

4. Documents produced in electronic format should also be organized, identified, and indexed electronically.

5. Electronic document productions should be prepared according to the following standards:

   (b) Document numbers in the load file should match document Bates numbers and TIF file names.

   (c) If the production is completed through a series of multiple partial productions, field names and file order in all load files should match.

   (d) All electronic documents produced to the Committee should include the following fields of metadata specific to each document;

   BEGDOC, ENDDOC, TEXT, BEGATTACH, ENDATTACH, PAGECOUNT,CUSTODIAN, RECORDTYPE, DATE, TIME, SENTDATE, SENTTIME, BEGINDATE, BEGINTIME, ENDDATE, ENDTIME, AUTHOR, FROM, CC, TO, BCC, SUBJECT, TITLE, FILENAME, FILEEXT, FILESIZE, DATECREATED, TIMECREATED, DATELASTMOD, TIMELASTMOD, INTMSGID, INTMSGHEADER, NATIVELINK, INTFILPATH, EXCEPTION, BEGATTACH.

6. Documents produced to the Committee should include an index describing the contents of the production. To the extent more than one CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder is produced, each CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder should contain an index describing its contents.

7. Documents produced in response to this request shall be produced together with copies of file labels, dividers or identifying markers with which they were associated when the request was served.

8. When you produce documents, you should identify the paragraph in the Committee's schedule to which the documents respond.

9. It shall not be a basis for refusal to produce documents that any other person or entity also possesses non-identical or identical copies of the same documents.

10. If any of the requested information is only reasonably available in machine-readable form (such as on a computer server, hard drive, or computer backup tape), you should consult with the Committee staff to determine the appropriate format in which to produce the information.

11. If compliance with the request cannot be made in full by the specified return date, compliance shall be made to the extent possible by that date. An explanation of why full compliance is not possible shall be provided along with any partial production.

12. In the event that a document is withheld on the basis of privilege, provide a privilege log containing the following information concerning any such document: (a) the privilege asserted; (b) the type of document; (c) the general subject matter; (d) the date, author and addressee; and (e) the relationship of the author and addressee to each other.

13. If any document responsive to this request was, but no longer is, in your possession, custody, or control, identify the document (stating its date, author, subject and recipients) and explain the circumstances under which the document ceased to be in your possession, custody, or control.

14. If a date or other descriptive detail set forth in this request referring to a document is inaccurate, but the actual date or other descriptive detail is known to you or is otherwise apparent from the context of the request, you are required to produce all documents which would be responsive as if the date or other descriptive detail were correct.

15. Unless otherwise specified, the time period covered by this request is from January 1, 2009 to the present.

16. This request is continuing in nature and applies to any newly-discovered information. Any record, document, compilation of data or information, not produced because it has not been located or discovered by the return date, shall be produced immediately upon subsequent location or discovery.

17. All documents shall be Bates-stamped sequentially and produced sequentially.

18. Two sets of documents shall be delivered, one set to the Majority Staff and one set to the Minority Staff. When documents are produced to the Committee, production sets shall be delivered to the Majority Staff in Room 2157 of the Rayburn House Office Building and the Minority Staff in Room 2471 of the Rayburn House Office Building.

19. Upon completion of the document production, you should submit a written certification, signed by you or your counsel, stating that: (1) a diligent search has been completed of all documents in your possession, custody, or control which reasonably could contain responsive documents; and (2) all documents located during the search that are responsive have been produced to the Committee.

Definitions

1. The term "document" means any written, recorded, or graphic matter of any nature whatsoever, regardless of how recorded, and whether original or copy, including, but not limited to, the following: memoranda, reports, expense reports, books, manuals, instructions, financial reports, working papers, records, notes, letters, notices, confirmations, telegrams, receipts, appraisals, pamphlets, magazines, newspapers, prospectuses, inter-office and intra-office communications, electronic mail (e-mail), contracts, cables, notations of any type of conversation, telephone call, meeting or other communication, bulletins, printed matter, computer printouts, teletypes, invoices, transcripts, diaries, analyses, returns, summaries, minutes, bills, accounts, estimates, projections, comparisons, messages, correspondence, press releases, circulars, financial statements, reviews, opinions, offers, studies and investigations, questionnaires and surveys, and work sheets (and all drafts, preliminary versions, alterations, modifications, revisions, changes, and amendments of any of the foregoing, as well as any attachments or appendices thereto), and graphic or oral records or representations of any kind (including without limitation, photographs, charts, graphs, microfiche, microfilm, videotape, recordings and motion pictures), and electronic, mechanical, and electric records or representations of any kind (including, without limitation, tapes, cassettes, disks, and recordings) and other written, printed, typed, or other graphic or recorded matter of any kind or nature, however produced or reproduced, and whether preserved in writing, film, tape, disk, videotape or otherwise. A document bearing any notation not a part of the original text is to be considered a separate document. A draft or non-identical copy is a separate document within the meaning of this term.

2. The term "communication" means each manner or means of disclosure or exchange of information, regardless of means utilized, whether oral, electronic, by document or otherwise, and whether in a meeting, by telephone, facsimile, email (desktop or mobile device), text message, instant message, MMS or SMS message, regular mail, telexes, releases, or otherwise.

3. The terms "and" and "or" shall be construed broadly and either conjunctively or disjunctively to bring within the scope of this request any information which might otherwise be construed to be outside its scope. The singular includes plural number, and vice versa. The masculine includes the feminine and neuter genders.

4. The terms "person" or "persons" mean natural persons, firms, partnerships, associations, corporations, subsidiaries, divisions, departments, joint ventures, proprietorships, syndicates, or other legal, business or government entities, and all subsidiaries, affiliates, divisions, departments, branches, or other units thereof.

5. The term “identify,” when used in a question about individuals, means to provide the following information: (a) the individual's complete name and title; and (b) the individual's business address and phone number.

6. The term “referring or relating,” with respect to any given subject, means anything that constitutes, contains, embodies, reflects, identifies, states, refers to, deals with or is pertinent to that subject in any manner whatsoever.

7. The term “employee” means agent, borrowed employee, casual employee, consultant, contractor, de facto employee, independent contractor, joint adventurer, loaned employee, part-time employee, permanent employee, provisional employee, subcontractor, or any other type of service provider.
